Rochester Shows Return to Form

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rochester Americans, struggling along all season in the basement of the Western Division of the American Hockey League, suddenly have come to life.

The defending AHL champions won their fourth game in five starts Sunday night by downing Springfield Kings 9-2. The victory followed a 4-2 triumph over Buffalo Sabres Saturday and left Rochester four points behind third-place Quebec Aces.

Veteran Bronco Horvath, a former National Hockey League star, scored two goals for Rochester Sunday. Player-coach Dick Gamble, Tom McCarthy and Barry Watson added one each.

Scoring for Springfield were Brian Murphy and Marc Dufour.

Saturday, Rochester goals went to Watson, Gamble, Horvath, and Guy Labrosse. Derek Kanaan and Guy Trottier scored for Buffalo.

Elsewhere Saturday, Baltimore Clippers ran their unbeaten streak to seven games by toppling Hershey Bears 3-2, Cleveland BLANKED Quebec 1-0 and Providence trounced Springfield 5-1.

Parliament Clearing Agenda To Deal With Criminal Code

OTTAWA (CP)—Parliament returns today to the task of clearing away legislative underbrush before getting to big timber—possibly Criminal Code reforms—later in the week.

Up for Commons second reading and reference to committee for detailed study are a string of relatively-innocuous bills dealing mainly with administrative changes in existing statutes.

Thursday, the Commons is scheduled to open general debate on Bill C-150, the so-called omnibus Criminal Code amendments bill that seeks in one sweep to ease legal sanctions against abortion, homosexuality and lotteries and tighten up gun control laws.

Justice Minister John Turner has resisted persistent opposition efforts to have the Code reform measures presented and dealt with separately rather than as an all-or-none package.

Working under new procedural rules approved just before the 34-day Christmas recess, the Commons pushed seven bills forward on their legislative journey in the first four days of the post-holiday session last week.

Second-reading referral to committees was given four farm bills, a measure to establish a fresh-water fish marketing corporation, ratifying legislation for establishment of a new form of international credit and a bill governing the labelling of certain precious metals.

Left over from Friday is general debate on a consumer affairs measure designed to provide greater competition and protection for users in the medicinal drugs industry.

Administrative amendments to the Historic Sites and Monuments Act, the Veterans Land Act and the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act are on the top of the order paper. The first would arrange for pay in historic sites board members and permit the government to set rates of interest for veterans land and fisheries loans.

The Commons is also scheduled to debate three bills already passed in the Senate, including amendments to the aeronautics and navigable waters protection laws and a third—most controversial—to revise the Criminal Code prohibition against the sale and advertising of birth-control devices, leaving the government the power of regulation.

Vanier City Unveiled

VANIER CITY, Ont. (CP) — Mme. Georges Vanier, widow of the late governor-general, was presented with a bouquet of red roses and unveiled a new sign saying "Bienvenu—Welcome" to mark the renaming of the Ottawa suburb of Eastview after her distinguished husband.

The change of name, approved by the Ontario legislature, became effective Jan. 1 and was marked Sunday by church and state dignitaries.

Representing Premier John Robarts, D'Arcy McGeough, provincial minister of municipal affairs, said General Vanier was a man who made other men "proud to say, I too am a Canadian."

Enterprise Toll 26

PEARL HARBOR (AP) — The death toll in the Enterprise disaster rose to 28 Saturday as the United States Navy announced that it will cost an estimated $6 million to repair the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier.

The latest victim of last Tuesday's explosions and fire aboard the carrier was a crew member who died of injuries in a Honolulu hospital.

Eighty-five crew members were injured. One man is still listed as missing.

Strictly Personal

Society Defines Crime

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

We must not forget that "crime" is a society is anything that the society cares to call "crime." A community can arrest women for wearing skirts too short or children for playing at all, and too late, if these are defined as offences.

And much, if not most, of what we call crime in our society is the result of such arbitrary definitions.

Gambling, narcotics and prostitution have been, in the past, the three main sources of income for organized crime in the U.S. None of them, in my view, should be defined as a "crime" — for all three are emotional and medical problems that we have not even tried to cope with.

Narcotics are responsible for much prostitution and for many robberies. Girls go on the street because they need the large sums of money they get, and they need large sums of money because dope is illegal and therefore expensive to obtain.

And many men commit robberies because they need $50 a day or more to satisfy the dope habit. If addiction were defined as a sickness and we spent what we spend as much for treating and rehabilitating such people as we are for jailing them, over and over again, we might beat this problem inside of a decade.

Gambling, of course, would not be classified as a crime even in a rational society, because (like narcotics and prostitution) it hurts no one except the person who inflicts it upon himself. Moderate gambling is harmless, and immoderate gambling is a form of emotional sickness.

But our hypocritical laws against gambling are what keep the crime syndicate rich and flourishing, make the police corrupt, and feed the kitty of many a political campaign.

"Respectable" citizens do not care to know about such things. It closes its eyes to the absurdities of legislation, and then screams for "crime cleanups" every four years — even though the very system it supports tends to perpetuate the evils it deplores.

Slum dwellers see all this much more clearly than the bourgeoisie, for they live in the middle of prostitution, addiction, illicit gambling, cops on the take, politicians in the fix, the juice racket, and all the rest of that nightmare economic jungle. And then is observe "law and order" in the midst of affluent corruption is just a sour joke.

Those who live in the lower depths see the true workings of the social organism, just as those who work in the bowels of a ship know much more than the passenger strolling on the "A" deck. The machinery does its dirty work beneath the surface, and it is hot down and repair it, it matters not how gleamingly we scrub and polish the brass.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For Jan 21st.

Your birthday today: This year other people make possible much more activity than you can cope with. You will have to become very selective and dramatic. Many creative projects are strongly favored early in the year but must be settled by summer as to direction and ieli-motif. Today's natives tend to go their own way, taking advice from nobody. The women are generally sociable, the men less kind and not overly fond of family life or of her intimate arrangements.

ARIES (Mar. 22 — Apr. 19): What starts as a pleasant day tends to decay into chaos: opportunities for solidarity both by people who feel left out. Unless the responsibility is yours, calmly sit this one out.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): The temptation is to impulsive actions. For some the storm comes from the creative, for others the threatened loss. Expect cranky behavior from loved ones.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You may have difficulty dividing your time between home and business. Suggestions are better saved for a smoother day when you at least have a chance.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Mind the subtle nuances of your inner life, your relations with those you care for, and the rest of the day's turmoil falls into place. It is rather difficult to keep quiet about confidential matters, but you must.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Today is not a favorable pace if you want to make the whole day in apple-pie order. Give younger people a chance even if it means quite a chore. Don't become impatient over slow progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Your tolerance today will certainly make for more peace and happiness in your life later. our placid surface spoils the drive of a violent tantrum and leaves you feeling a bit let down.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Personal life is more on your mind than business. Loved ones are up to all kinds of mischief. If there is a sweetheart, make known your feelings, again. If there's a mate, expect unusual confidence.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Today can be emotionally satisfying, but opposition has initiative, too, and has set up some fun. Work can be facilitated by re-arrangement of tools and resources. Relax with light entertainment or sentimental music this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Any contact between the young and old comes out about even. Ambitious friends bring you interesting propositions. Personal problems might push business spoil everybody's judgment. Expect letdowns.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Please yourself first, and if anybody is displeased, let him speak up. Harsh decisions lead inevitably to bickering. Take your time, avoid needless squabbles.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your people are agreeable except where it comes to spending money for the things you want. Make no changes, but do become a bit more thrifty.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Shyness wears off with surprising results; you'll have something to talk about for a long time. Follow an energetic approach to friendly social doings. Make a proper job of it while awaiting your freedom to play; otherwise, you limit your future.

Loose Chain Can Ruin Timing

By RAY STAPLEY

"I drive a 57 Falcon and the odometer reads 68,000 miles. After a recent tuneup there was loads of pep, when adding the engine became sluggish and hard to start when cold. I returned to the garage where it was discovered that for some unexplainable reason the ignition timing had slipped. All agreed well after it was reset, but soon it slipped again and required another adjustment. It was done driven about 100 miles and now it's worse than ever and the engine will barely run. Obviously advancing the timing is not a permanent cure for this problem. What would cause the timing to slip after it has been accurately adjusted with a timing light?"

If the engine is to deliver maximum performance, it is essential that the valves open and close with split-second precision, and also that each spark plug fires instantly at a predetermined point. Both these critical functions are controlled by the camshaft which is rotated by a timing chain, which in turn is driven by a gear on the front of the crankshaft. Once worn beyond a certain point, the timing chain stretches and jumps intermittently over the top of the gear teeth, resulting in late ignition and valve timing. A loose timing chain cannot be adjusted and should be replaced immediately to avoid further engine damage.

After the chain slips for the first time it will continue to do so and to advance the ignition timing by moving the distributor gives only temporary relief.

While a loose chain is the most likely cause of mysterious ignition timing slippage, don't overlook the chain there are other areas that should be checked. A gear is pressed onto the end of the distributor shaft and held in place by a locking pin. Occasionally this pin will loosen slightly, gradually creep on the shaft and late timing results. Though extremely unlikely the distributor shaft can partially seize to the distributor housing and force the whole unit to a retarded position. After the ignition timing has been set to manufacturers' specifications, it is vitally important that the distributor locking device be thoroughly tightened.

But remember when all the components that syncronize the timing cycle are in good condition and properly adjusted, the timing cannot suddenly slip for no apparent reason.

A reader writes: "I have been driving for 12 years and while I've had the odd flat tire at low speeds I have yet to experience my first high speed blowout. I am quite concerned about the effects of high speed tire failure and would like to clear up a few notions. Is it true that a front tire blowout is more dangerous and likely to be centred than a rear tire failure? Also, should the tires showing less tread wear be placed on the front wheels?"

It seems that most motorists regard front tire blowouts as the most difficult to handle, but the Ontario Safety League recently reported the following facts on tire failures. "A study by Northwestern University of 1,600 fatal motor auto accidents on the Illinois Tollway, September 1966 to August 1967, shows that no more than 36 (2.42 per cent) and possibly as few as 13 (0.88 per cent) followed flat tires. No fatalities were involved in accidents which definitely followed a tire disablement. (The range of percentages arose from incomplete evidence in some instances).

"Despite the full fencing of the Tollway, stray deer and cows contributed to twice as many accidents as flat tires. Blowouts were no more likely to cause accidents than flats. When an accident followed a flat tire, the position of the disabled tire on the car seemed to make no difference as to the direction the cars veered afterwards.

"At least 90.94 per cent of drivers during the 12 month test period coped successfully with an estimated 60,000 flats on the expressway. But, who is at the wheel seems to make a big difference. Female drivers under 30 years of age are 22 times as likely as a male of age driver to have an accident after a tire goes flat. Men generally argue to have about 4 times the average likelihood of accidents following flat tires".

This pretty well shoots down the popular myth that a front end blowout is the most hazardous.

Regarding the position of the best tires, to minimize the danger of aqua-planing when the roads are wet, the tires with the deepest tread pattern should definitely be mounted on the front wheels. However, with the exception of front wheel drive vehicles, keep in mind the rear driven wheels depend on a deep tread for adequate traction. Regardless, safety experts tell us to discard any tires with less than one-sixteenth of tread depth.

NOTE: Letters from readers with hard to pin-point car problems are most welcome, but please include: year and model, number of cylinders, mileage, standard or automatic transmission, power equipment, brief outline of previous repairs and a self-addressed stamped envelope.

Student Unrest

In Moncton Police End Campus Occupation

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — There was criticism of the University of Moncton administration from both students and professors here today as classes remained disrupted after weekend intervention by police to end student occupation of a campus building.

University officials issued a statement late Sunday which said no classes were scheduled today but normal activity would resume Tuesday. Students had announced earlier they would boycott classes.

The professors, who Saturday disagreed with the administration decision to call in police, were scheduled to hold a "general assembly" at which their stand on all aspects of the campus unrest would be ironed out.

Assembly chairman Pierre Bion said the professors had not lost sight of their "main goal of attracting more monetary aid for the university" but they would discuss the administration's rejection of a last-ditch proposal for an acceptable settlement.

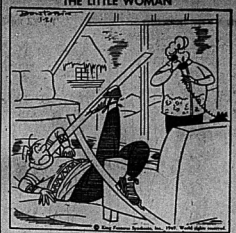
Mr. Bion said students and professors had agreed that the occupation could have been ended if an arbitration committee had been formed. "But this was rejected by the administration."

Demonstrating students, threatened by police with criminal action, filed out of the university's science and administrative building Saturday after a week-long protest to back demands for increased government aid to the institution.

The student federation subsequently denounced the administration's action as a double-cross, demanded the resignation of the board of governors executive committee and called a boycott of all classes.

M. Adelard Savoie, university president, said the students' occupation "went against the very principles they purported to pursue."

Objectives of the 125 students who began the occupation Jan. 11 were backed by the federation although no stand was taken on the method.



The professors association voiced disagreement with the method but also approved the students objectives.

Federation officials said the university's joint committee, composed of students, professors and administrative officials was "nearing a breakthrough" when police were called.

Paul Eugene Leblanc, secretary-general of the federation, said administrative officials doublecrossed other joint committee members and went "behind our backs" to call police.

Mr. Savoie said Saturday no action was contemplated against the demonstrators but a final decision would be in the hands of the board of governors.

In London, the 'Monks' Rebel

LONDON (AP) — Britain's theological students revolted during the weekend, saying that they are being trained like monks for their future work in a modern world.

"We feel isolated from almost all aspects of modern society," they said in a manifesto drawn up by delegates from six denominations at a meeting called by the Student Christian Movement.

The protest went to the heads of more than 100 theological colleges and similar institutions throughout the country. It also landed on the desk of every Anglican and Roman Catholic bishop who has responsibility for training in his church.

All want radical changes in the way they are trained for the ministry.

They want instruction to be ecumenical, with students from different churches working together. They want specialized ministries and new techniques encouraged. And they want to be less cut off from parish life.

This latest evidence of student ferment has been simmering for some time. Last October, Church of England students sent a 15-point series of reform proposals to the archbishops of Canterbury and York. The archbishops set up a joint planning group to study them.

The students told the bishops and college principals that there had been considerable inertia by those in authority to carry out the many recommendations made in the last 20 years regarding ministerial training.

One of the main complaints of many students is that they feel their training has little relation to such issues as race, poverty, injustice and political turmoil.

A HOME OF YOUR OWN — By ROLLINS

Charlie and Ethel were looking for a home of their own. Every night they faithfully went through the ads, searching for the house they wanted that was within their budget. Charlie has a good job but every house they liked seemed to be out of reach price-wise.

THEN THEY SAW A ROLLINS LUMBER AD

. . . which said to call George Mills for information on 'Self Help' homes. Charlie called and then he and Ethel went out to Foxboro to talk to Mr. Mills. George told them how, by doing some of the work themselves, they could have a Home of their own. And they wouldn't need a lot of money for a Down Payment.

SO THEY PICKED OUT A PLAN

. . . and Rollins Lumber helped them choose a lot, built the foundation, erected the shell home that they picked and supplied them with the materials they needed to finish the interior.

In Prague - - - A Human Torch

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Truck-loads of police guarded Russian installations today amid mounting fears of violence after the death of a student protester who turned himself into a human torch.

Police were outside Soviet Army headquarters and the Russian Embassy Sunday night while angry students clambered over the statue of King Wenceslas in the centre of Prague and called for a wave of industrial strikes.

Thousands of persons filed into Wenceslas Square where 21-year-old Jan Palach poured gasoline over himself Thursday and set it ablaze.

Prague television reported that Palach told doctors Sunday, before he died from burns over 85 per cent of his body, that he hoped there would be no similar acts of self-immolation.

But he warned in a note found after his suicide attempt Thursday that another student—the first of 15 — was ready to burn himself to death Tuesday if demands for an end to censorship and a ban on the distribution of Soviet propaganda were not met.

Seven more students joined two already on a hunger strike in Wenceslas Square.

Other students appealed for support from factory workers and read out a proclamation warning there was a danger of public reconciliation to reform restrictions demanded by the Soviet Union.

Some of the big trade unions already have signed solidarity pacts with the students, who are expected to meet reformist workers leaders this week to map out a possible common protest policy.

Prominent Czechoslovak reformers went on television Sunday night in appeal for calm. One of them, Cestmir Cisar, chairman of the Czech National Council, warned that anarchy and chaos would only mean the end of democracy in Czechoslovakia.

The interior ministry also warned against any further attacks on Soviet troops. Several incidents involving Russian soldiers and Czechoslovak youths were reported during the weekend as anger spread over Palach's suicide.

National Unity

Radicalism Loses in Student Vote

PORT HOPE, Ont., (CP) — Anti-Americanism is "one thing on which everybody is agreed" in Canada, Dalton Camp said Saturday.

The former national president of the Progressive Conservative Association was leading a seminar on national unity at Trinity College School's invitational debating tournament.

He told about 150 secondary school students and guests there is "a revolt against the melting-pot concept" by minority groups who may feel that a universal Canadian culture means an Anglo-Saxon one.

In response to a comment from the floor that Canada needs some binding force to unite "Canadians as Canadians" he said anti-Americanism is one area of agreement.

Mr. Camp gave no formal address and met most questions by asking for opinions from the students. The discussion jumped from one topic to another on what he called Canadian "hang-ups" such as redistribution of wealth, education and the problem of retaining ethnicity cultures while achieving national unity.

When a student said the United States has its own art and literature and Canada also should have a unique and non-European culture, Mr. Camp replied:

"There was an American myth; there was an American dream: there was an American constitution that all men were instructed in, that said all men were created equal. But it left the American Negro out.

". . . . To me, now that the American Negro has constitutional rights, what he wants is separatism."

Radicalism was the theme of the day-long debaters' conference for 12 teams from Ontario and Quebec and a handful of students observers from Winnipeg, Edmonton, Hanover and St. Johns, Nfld. But radicalism lost in the final vote of 116-69 against the resolution, "that moderates cannot solve Canada's major problems."

Tom Thomson, 18, of Ottawa's Ridgemont High School, said the reason for controversy over the French language is that the average English speaker is "lazy and afraid of looking like a fool."

"If you take three little French kids and one little English kid and put them together for two weeks and little Englis kid will have those little French kids speaking English," he said.

Toronto Parents Seek French High School

TORONTO (CP) — Spokesmen for Ontario's three political parties Sunday gave their support to a demand by a group of parents for establishment of a public French-language secondary school in Metropolitan Toronto.

The Metropolitan Toronto school board recently turned down a proposal for such a school.

A protest rally organized Sunday was attended by about 800 parents and students as well as teachers, representatives of French-Canadian associations and members of the Ontario legislature.

Donald Macdonald, Ontario leader of the New Democratic Party, told the rally the French-speaking residents of Ontario were only requesting what English-speaking Quebecers have always had.

Tim Reid, Liberal member of the legislature for Scarborough East, said the demand for a French-language secondary school in Toronto "is necessary to my concept of Canada."

Fernand Guindon, provincial secretary, also sympathized with the request for a French-language school to serve French-speaking pupils within a 40-mile radius of Toronto.

Youth, Resigns Post Over 'Police Hostility'

OAKVILLE (CP) — A weekend community conference on youth was shocked Sunday when its chairman resigned because of what he termed as police hostility at a dance for conference delegates Saturday night.

John How, 20, told about 200 delegates he was resigning because of a police attempt to arrest four persons for possession of marijuana at the dance.

"They found something they call grass," he said. "We know it was Oregano.

"I'm resigning . . . because I don't think I'm qualified to deal with all the hostility we are finding with the cops."

Norman Carter, a official of the Oakville recreation committee co-sponsoring the conference with the youth and recreation branch of the Ontario education department, said that someone at the dance had rolled cigarettes with oregano as a joke.

Police officials said no arrests were attempted. They said the drug incident had been a "put on" to embarrass them.

"Two officers found this and became excited," one policeman said. "I came over and we all got unexcited. That's all there was to it."

During Sunday's session, Wilfred Clement, a psychologist with the Ontario Hospital in Toronto, said a distrust of Oakville doctors had brought 107 youths to the Toronto hospital to be referred to trustworthy physicians.

He said this was the outgrowth of an incident last fall in which 15 youths were admitted to hospital after an LSD party.

Two Human Torches Spark Czech Crisis

Svoboda Asks Nation To Curb Impatience

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Fears that more Czechoslovaks may set fire to themselves to protest continual curbs of government liberalization programs grew today after another attempted "human torch" suicide Monday night.

The latest burning came as the Slovak Communist party warned the country faced a crisis as the result of the self-immolation last week of 21-year-old philosophy student Jan Palach, who died Sunday from burns covering 85 per cent of his body.

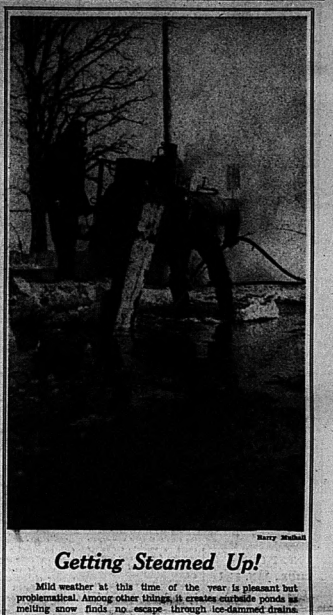
There also were reports from Budapest, Hungary, that a 17-year-old student set fire to himself on the steps of the National Museum.

News of the second burning here was given on television by President Ludvik Svoboda. It came after tens of thousands of Czechoslovaks, paying tribute to Palach, jammed Wenceslas Square in the heart of Prague in the biggest demonstration since the Soviet-led invasion Aug. 20.

Palach warned in a note found in his jacket that 15 other students would burn themselves unless censorship was lifted and the distribution of Soviet propaganda was banned.

It was not immediately known if the self-immolation Monday night by Pilsen brewery worker Josef Hlavaty, 25, was connected with the students' suicide ring.

Prague radio said Hlavaty was in hospital with second-degree burns over a large part of his body. But he was expected to live if there were no complications.



A later news bulletin said the 17-year-old Hungarian in Budapest apparently set himself alight in sympathy with the Czechoslovak suicide protest.

A brief Budapest radio announcement said the incident in the Hungarian capital occurred Monday afternoon.

In disclosing Hlavaty's attempted suicide, Svoboda appealed on television: "In the name of humanity, I call a halt to these terrible acts.

"I understand the impatience of youth and its uncompromising attitude . . . but I know it is not always the short cuts or the straight ways which reach the goal."

The warning that the country faced a crisis over Palach's suicide came from the Slovak Communist party after a presidium meeting in the Slovak capital of Bratislava.

Getting Steamed Up!

Mild weather at this time of the year is pleasant but problematical. Among other things, it creates curbside ponds as melting snow finds no escape through ice-dammed drains. Yesterday, city workmen were called to College and Sidney streets where a large pool was eliminated only after steam was forced through plugged drain.

Peace Talks Date Set

"How do you spell university?"

PARIS (CP) — The four main combatants in the Vietnam war will hold the first session of full-scale substantive peace talks here Saturday, the American delegation said today.

A delegation spokesman said the talks will open at 10:30 a.m. local time (4:30 a.m. EST).

The meeting will come exactly one week after a meeting among American, Saigon government, North Vietnamese and South Vietnam National Liberation Front (Viet Cong) delegates which cleared up procedural problems unexpectedly swiftly.

A proposal for the date was believed to have been agreed on at a meeting between the new chief American delegate, Henry Cabot Lodge, and his Saigon counterpart, Pham Dang Lam, this afternoon.

The proposal apparently got a swift affirmative response from Hanoi and the front.

Chief American negotiator Henry Cabot Lodge had announced earlier today that a meeting of the four main parties to the talks would take place this week.

Lodge, who arrived Monday night, conferred for 45 minutes today with the chief Saigon government delegate, Pham Dang Lam.

South Vietnamese Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky, who supervised his government's delegation here last month, is expected to return to Paris Thursday. He will not attend the meetings, according to sources in Saigon.

In a brief airport statement Monday, Lodge, who replaces W. Averell Harriman as chief United States negotiator, pledged to do everything he could to make the talks successful.

He was originally scheduled to arrive here later this week. But he cabled earlier when it was clear all procedural obstacles had been settled Saturday and the substantive talks could begin in the near future.

Montreal Institute Halts Transplants

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Heart Institute, where nine of Canada's 14 heart transplant operations have been performed, has announced an indefinite suspension of its transplant program while doctors investigate problems of post-operative complications.

Dr. Paul Davis, the institute's medical director, said Monday studies are already under way to find more successful methods of overcoming acute organ rejection and post-operative infection.

Seven of the institute's nine heart recipients have died since the first operation was performed there last May 31, Canada's first.

Dr. David said in an interview he did not feel it moral to continue under the conditions and problems which now exist. Although surgical techniques used by the institute's doctors "were perfect."

It could be months before the studies are completed and the transplant program is resumed, he said.

The institute's two surviving transplant recipients are Rosaire Brien, 58, who received his replacement heart Sept. 30, and Gerald Levesque, 58, operated on Nov. 29.

Four transplants were performed in Toronto hospitals last year. Two recipients still survive.

One heart was transplanted at Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal Nov. 3 and the patient is progressing well.

In Toronto, Dr. Wilfred Bigelow, chairman of an interhospital cardiovascular committee, said Monday Toronto hospitals will continue to perform heart transplants.

Dr. Bigelow, a member of the surgical staff at Toronto General Hospital, said the three Toronto hospitals which have performed heart transplants would act "in a manner in which we think the patients . . . will be best served."

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Juro Wada, a leading Japanese heart surgeon, defended heart transplants Monday "as the right procedure for terminal cases for whom they offer the only hope of continued life."

"It is good for them and good for their families," he said in an interview.

Cardinal Gets State Treatment

By GILBERT SEDBON

PARIS (Reuters) — Quebec Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal arrives here Wednesday on a five-day official visit during which President de Gaulle will stress further France's special relationship with the French-speaking province of Canada.

De Gaulle has personally worked out an elaborate program, excluding Canadian Ambassador Paul Beaulieu from any of the series of talks he will have with Cardinal and from the luncheons and dinners that will be given in honor of the Quebec delegation at the Elysee Palace and the foreign ministry.

Cardinal, who will have three meetings with de Gaulle, will get the red carpet treatment usually given to visiting national government leaders.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill. (Reuters) — Three men were killed and four were injured when they were fired on by a group of armed men in the downtown area, police said today.

Israeli Patrols Kill Arab Saboteurs

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli desert patrols killed six Arab saboteurs in two clashes in the Negev Desert near the Jordanian frontier Monday night, the Israeli Army announced today.

An army spokesman said one patrol killed three members of a guerilla squad near Ein Yahav, 37 miles south of the Dead Sea. Twenty minutes later a patrol intercepted another group of infiltrators in the same area, the spokesman said, and three more Arabs were killed.

After the clashes, the patrols found a variety of weapons and land mines.

The spokesman said there were no Israeli casualties.

The Arabs, the spokesman said, were members of the Al Fatah commando organization, which had not been reported operating in the Negev area in some weeks.

In Cairo, President Nasser told his new National Assembly that Egypt would continue to refuse Israel's demand for direct peace negotiations until all Arab lands are liberated from Israeli control.

An Israeli spokesman labelled the speech a continuation of "the destructive policy which the Arab governments have advocated for the last 20 years and which brought their people many tragedies.

"We will not give up one inch of Arab territory," Nasser said.

Echo of Campaign

Nixon's No Promise Speech Offers Only Hard Work And Hope

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Richard M. Nixon, with a "sacred commitment" to peace but devoid of slogans and promises, today set in motion the first United States Republican administration in eight years.

Unlike the preceding Democratic era of the Kennedy New Frontier and the Johnson Great Society, Nixon invoked no catch-phrases or specific pledges.

In a low-key inaugural address Monday he offered little more than hard work, realism in government and hope for the future—a sort of echo of the no-promises campaign that won him the Nov. 5 election.

Perhaps reflecting the divisive atmosphere of the land, Nixon and the other principals were markedly solemn as he took the oath that made him the 37th president of the United States.

It was shortly after noon Monday that the Johnson era came to an end and the Quaker son of a California grocer took over the nation's burdens.

Former president Johnson, winging off to his Texas ranch at the conclusion of a 32-year political career, said he was relieved that the end had come.

Despite the record $2,500,000 spent to make the three-day inaugural celebration the most glittering ever, the mood of the capital remained solemn under the grey, damp skies and the ever-present threat of spreading violence.

The anger of youthful pacifists and civil rights demonstrators underlined the problems of discontent with domestic and foreign policies that face the new administration.

Security measures provided Nixon on his first day in office were the most elaborate ever with some 9000 police and military personnel deployed throughout the city.

At latest count, some 80 persons were arrested and 12 injured in disturbances as protesters staged a counter-inaugural Sunday and on Monday chanted obscenities and hurled rocks.

Talk Draws Praise

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Richard M. Nixon's inaugural summons to peace drew warm praise from many parts of the world but at home left some Americans baffled and at least one Negro leader downright disappointed.

The speech reflected no sense of urgency and no sensitivity to the basic problems of hunger, poverty and race" in the United States, said Rev. Ralph Abernathy of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

Across the country, reaction from the man in the street was mixed, with some calling the speech "sincere, inspiring, impressive" and others saying they found it "confusing, vague, double talk."

U.S. newspapers, even those who opposed his election, had

Protesters Curbed

WASHINGTON (CP-AP) — Police cracked some heads and arrested 80 demonstrators as jeering, cursing anti-war protesters tried but failed to interrupt President Nixon's inauguration ceremonies Monday.

Several demonstrators left brief but sharp encounters with police nursing bloodied heads. But the violence fell far short of the pitched battles that marred the Democratic national convention in Chicago last August.

Some of the demonstrators were white masks in grotesque mimicry of Nixon.

Most of the arrests were for disorderly conduct, police said. Two youths were charged with burning an American flag and one with assaulting a policeman.

Fox Evades Police

PICTON (Staff) — A fox on the loose, probably rabid, is the quarry in an Ontario Provincial Police lookout here.

However, by the time police arrived the fox was nowhere in sight. An hour later the fox returned but again when police arrived for the second time at the scene the animal had vanished again.

Kiwanis Hands Over $33,700

Walking for money paid off last night when the Kiwanis Club of Belleville presented Belleville General Hospital with a cheque for $33,700 which will furnish the hospital with coronary care equipment.

The money was raised through the August Walkathon sponsored by the service club and was the proceeds from the 540 walkers and their sponsors.

Members of the Kiwanis Club were guest of the Board of Governors of BGH last night and following dinner Kiwanis president Grant Harrison and walkathon committee chairman Ken Carter presented the cheque to H. A. Hamilton, Chairman of the Board of Governors.

Originally it was thought by the club that they would purchase a special cardiology machine for the new hospital wing at a cost of over $18,000.

However the tremendous response to the Walkathon and its goal are now enabling the club to completely equip and furnish the Intensive Care Ward and a Coronary Unit.

In his remarks Mr. Harrison thanked the people of Belleville for the support they gave the Walkathon. Mr. Hamilton then accepted the shoe shaped cheque.

"This will make our hospital one of the best in the country," said Mr. Hamilton referring to the new wing and equipment in his acceptance speech.

He also expressed his personal opinion on the walkathon and said that not only did it set an example for other districts with projects but that it was one of the reasons the Belleville United Appeal campaign went over the top.

Mr. Hamilton thanked the group on behalf of the board before the entire group was taken on a tour of the new wing of the hospital.

Student "mayor of the week," Judy Schrieder of Nicholson Catholic College receives a pointer from city planning director Bert Kenny at city hall. Judy says as student mayor she will be interested in finding out "just what makes the city tick."

This week's student "Mayor of the Week" is Judy Schrieder, Grade 13 student at Nicholson Catholic College who appreciates the opportunity of "finding out what makes the city tick."

Judy is the second girl "Mayor of the Week" which will see representatives from all five city high schools take their turn in acting as understudy for Mayor J. Russell Scott.

Yesterday she had her initiation in city hall procedure as she sat through the regular council session. She was joined by Debbie Thompson of Centennial Secondary School who during her tenure of office last week told not get to attend a regular council meeting.

"I will be very interested in finding out just what makes the city tick" Judy told The Intelligencer prior to the council session.

WI Celebrates Occasion

AMELIASBURG — Sixty years of activities and accomplishments of the Rednerville Women's Institute were reviewed for the membership at the township hall here last night. The occasion was the diamond anniversary of the organization.

Of the three charter members still living, two were present — Mrs. Roy Williamson and Mrs. Earl Bunter.

The occasion was highlighted by the presentation of a life membership pin to Mrs. Earl Onderdonk. It was her 36th consecutive year as an Institute member. Earlier she served as district president of the expanding organization for three years.

The other life members of the Rednerville Institute, Mrs. Roy Giles, Miss Audra Brickman, Mrs. John Onderdonk, Mrs. John Hall, Mrs. M. B. Weese and Mrs. Ray Fox.

The first Women's Institute was founded in the village of Stoney Creek near Toronto on February 19, 1897.

Mrs. Adelaide Hoodless was responsible for its birth after her baby died from a feeding of impure milk. Her motivation was to bring rural women (farmer's wives) together for the purpose of providing them with homekeeping information and advice.

Her idea of raising the standards of homemaking spread in all parts of the world until today the Women's Institute is an international organization with a membership of 5½ million.

Last night's meeting commenced with a banquet served by the local United Church Women's Association.

A feature of the program was an exciting assessment of wedding gowns worn by brides who were married in the community from 1902 until 1965. A bevy of young women — the daughters of local families — acted as models for the unique fashion show.

At intermission equally as fascinating was the old fashioned gramaphone turning out popular tunes of yesteryear from cylinder records long a collectors item.

The 1969 Rednerseville Institute executive includes Mrs. Clifford Smith, president, Mrs. Winston Pulver, vice president, Mrs. Alfred Cairns, secretary - treasurer.

The Institute's original executive elected Jan. 20, 1908 comprised Mrs. Alex Anderson, president, Mrs. Charles Dalzia, vice president, Mrs. William Nethery, secretary - treasurer and two directors Mrs. Frank Dempsey and Miss Ella Anderson.

In charge of the program for the 60th anniversary was Institute member Mrs. Elmer Young.

City Expropriates Land for Park

City council yesterday moved to expropriate two properties on Canniffon Road which are best required for the development of that Riverside Park Area.

The two properties to be expropriated are the Lickford property and the O'Donnell property. By-laws authorizing the expropriation were passed by council.

Council Supports Increase in Power

Belleville city council yesterday voted to support the application of radio station CJBQ for an increase in its power rating from the present 1,000 watts to 10,000 watts.

But Alderman Paul Russell said he couldn't support the motion, claiming the requested increase in power might unfavorably interfere with the application for another radio station to operate in the Quinte district.

Frank Murray, radio station manager, told council the requested power increase would improve the station's daytime signal and make for better reception in North Hastings and throughout Prince Edward county.

Later in the meeting Alderman Gerald Joyce said the power increase would mean much to the area's economy in that local business people would be able to direct advertising to north Hastings.

And Mayor J. Russell Scott said the power increase would result in a communications benefit and was unanimously supported by the local Emergency Measures Organization.

City Conducts Housing Survey

Belleville city council is not going to let any grass grow under its feet which might delay possible future senior rental housing.

Currently the Ontario Housing Corporation is calling tenders for the construction of 96 low rental single family residences and 45 senior citizens apartment units.

But last night on a recommendation of Mayor J. R. Scott, council voted to request the OHC to conduct another survey of the city to determine the need for low rental housing before construction of the units now advertised.

"If we ask for the survey now we could have another group of houses finished in two or three years time," said the mayor.

Gambling Motion Expected

Possible Sunday operation of the Belleville Fair will again come up for discussion at city council.

A late last year council agreed to a request from officials of the Belleville Fair for permission to operate the fair on a Sunday should one or more of the regular fair dates be rained out.

The council decision was made over the objection of at least three aldermen and yesterday Alderman Don Williams said at the next meeting he would introduce a motion asking that no public gambling or sideshows be permitted to operate in Belleville on the Sabbath.

Also at yesterday's meeting a letter from Holloway Street United Church was received by council noting that the official board of the church disapproves the action of city council in allowing the Belleville Fair Board to hold the Belleville Fair on Sunday.

Awards Committee Suggested

If a notice of motion introduced by Alderman Robin Jeffrey is carried in council, Belleville will have a cultural awards committee to recommend individuals for recognition by the city.

The committee would recommend for civic awards local individuals who might have gained provincial, national or international recognition for their work in theatre, music, arts, literature and crafts.

Alderman Jeffrey feels the committee should consist of the director or assistant director of recreation, the president or vice president of the Quinte Arts Council, a representative from the local press, radio station and city council.

City council a year ago set up a sports awards committee for consideration of civic recognition of individuals in the sporting field.

The O'Donnell property was in the news last fall when the owners took the city to court for refusal to issue a building permit.

The court decision was in favor of the plaintiff and the city was ordered to issue the building permit.

Since the court hearing, however, the city decided to expropriate the property for park use.

Fire Chief Ted E. Poste, retiring as fire department head at the end of January, receives service plaque from Mayor J. Russell Scott. The plaque is in recognition of 30 years' service on the department — from 1939 until the present.

25 Year Pins Awarded

Eight city of Belleville employees with a quarter of a century or more service to the corporation, received 25 year pins yesterday from Mayor J. Russell Scott.

The presentation of the pins was made at the outset of Monday's regular meeting of city council with the recipients receiving the personal appreciation of Mayor Scott for their many years service.

The recipients included Fire Chief T. E. Poste, who will retire from the fire department at the end of this month, Deputy Fire Chief L.J. Culhane and Inspector Robert Fair, chief fire prevention officer.

Also receiving pins were Deputy Assistant Commissioner Clifford Matthews, William Dix, Safety and Trench Inspector, and public works employees Clinton Hannah, John Haley and Fred Bly Jr.

For Fire Chief Poste the occasion was a dual presentation.

In addition to his 25 year pin Chief Poste received a plaque from the city honoring his long service with the fire department.

The plaque was in recognition of his 30 years with the fire department as fireman, office and department chief.

Group Wants Crossing Near the Present Site

The city traffic committee would like to see the proposed grade separation replacement of the Canniffon Road level crossing placed in close proximity to the present site and wants it to provide efficient movement of traffic over on Highway 37 and east and west on College Street.

In addition the committee also wants assurance there will be a facility available to provide safe and fast access from 37 highway to the downtown core area, and to the extreme east end of the city.

The above traffic committee recommendation, approved yesterday by city council, follows a city planning department study which gave four alternative sites for the grade separation to replace the Canniffon Road level crossing.

Belleville General Hospital architects will be asked to reconsider a proposed plan for a parking bay at the hospital school of nursing.

The committee feels that the parking bay shown on the hospital plan is completely unrealistic and says Dundas Street, East, does not lend itself to driveways or parking bays at the above location.

Council approved the committee recommendation and also that parking be restricted on the south side of Victoria Ave. from Church Street to John Street from two a.m. to six p.m. except Sunday.

Council also went along with the idea of an education program to be conducted through the police department instructing citizens on the dangers of parking on the wrong side of city streets.

Mayor Expresses Regret When Motion Is Tabled

City council yesterday tabled a recommendation from Mayor J. Russell Scott calling for a special committee to be set up to discuss regional government and amalgamation with the Hastings county council.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey brought in the tabling motion claiming that before any council committee met with the county, city council members should meet with city department heads and decide on specific proposals.

"This," she said, "would allow each councillor to express his opinion."

"Let's put all our ideas together," she urged."

When the tabling motion was carried Mayor Scott expressed regret.

"The issue will be dead for this year, now," he said.

The mayor said that if the alderman had come to him before presenting the tabling motion he could have answered many of her questions.

City Manager J. R. Reynolds also expressed regret at the tabling motion.

The committee recommended to meet with county council included Mayor Scott, Alderman Gerald Joyce and the city manager.

Later in the meeting Alderman Joyce urged that the matter be re-introduced to council at an early date.

City Council May Insure For Replacement Values

Belleville city council wants to know the replacement value of all city owned buildings.

The question arose yesterday when insurance renewal came up for consideration and on the fact coverage on buildings and equipment was being increased by over $200,000, some members felt the coverage was far from replacement value.

Alderman Kenneth Soden drew attention to the fact that coverage on the arena was only $345,000.

"If the arena was destroyed by fire we couldn't replace it for $450,000 to $500,000," he said.

The insurance coverage on city buildings recommended by the city manager totalled $1,562,500 and on equipment $566,200. Mr. Reynolds said there was no suggestion that this represented replacement value.

Mayor J. R. Scott said council would have to make a decision whether or not it wanted replacement value insurance coverage on city owned buildings.

Council approved the insurance coverage recommended by the city manager but will have an evaluation done to determine replacement value.

Trenton Squadron

Cadets Get New Plane

TRENTON — The air cadets of 704 squadron are a proud lot of uniformed youngsters these days.

The training aircraft, purchased with the proceeds from the "around the Bay of Quinte" walkathon they completed in in the autumn, arrived at Aircraft Maintenance Development Unit at CFB Trenton the other day.

Acquired for the cadets was a Silmer with dual controls which makes it ideal for teaching flying. It is equipped to seat a pilot and three passengers. It was flown 1,000 original hours by the previous owner.

Before seeing service he a trainee the aircraft will undergo a major overhaul including an engine replacement with a brand new motor from the manufacturer in the United States.

To be utilized as a teaching aid the aircraft will have to be outfitted with regulation radio equipment. The cadets have assumed the responsibility of raising the necessary funds as a squadron project.

The cadets also express enthusiasm about the promotion of their new Commanding Officer J. C. Beeham to the rank of Captain in the primary reserve of the Canadian Forces.

Squadron headquarters have been buzzing with activity since the signal was received to proceed with Operation Deep Freeze a scheme designed to test the stamina and resourcefulness of the cadets.

Cadets will be transported to the bivouac area in from highway 62 north of Madoc by snowmobile the weekend of Feb. 8. They will be lodged on their ability to set up a supply dropping zone on a lake in the area the next day.

Floyd Russell Deline

Belleville Man Killed

CORNWALL — A Belleville truck driver, whose son was killed in a car crash last year, was one of four victims in yesterday's fatal traffic pileup near Cornwall on the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway.

Floyd Russell Deline, 50, of 48 Hyman Street, was killed instantly when his truck was one of 19 vehicles involved in the massive chain-reaction mishap.

Mr. Deline's son, Thomas Edward (Teddy) Deline, was one of two men killed last August in a crash on Highway 2 west of Belleville.

Mr. Deline was born at West Huntingdon 50 years ago, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Deline and has been a resident of Belleville for the past 27 years coming here from his native township.

He has been employed with the Phoenix Transport Company for some years. In the Second World War he signed up with the Second Division of Engineers and served overseas in the transport department.

Surviving are his wife, the former Dorothy Winnifred Adams, one daughter, Mrs. Bernard (Joyce) Michael, Belleville and two grandchildren, Tammy and Deborah Michael.

Mr. Deline is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home for service in the chapel on Thursday at two o'clock. Interment will be in Bellefonte cemetery with Rev. A. L. Sutherland officiating.

City Bus System

Perhaps a woman's touch will bring some renewed inspiration to the problem of how to attract more passengers to Belleville's deficit-plagued transit system.

Last year the city's buses carried 897,886 people, compared with 894,367 the year before That is a lot of people but in common with other municipalities the city suffers a loss on the operation.

Now, Mrs. Marylea Burtt has taken over as chairman and she has said a principal task of the Commission will be to encourage businessmen to leave their cars at home and ride the buses. As an inducement she points to parking problems and the fact it costs only 20 cents to ride the bus.

Perhaps, the best hope of attracting more passengers lies in the prospect of Belleville growing rapidly in the next few years. That being so it may not be long before the annual passenger complement reaches a million.

Fire Protection

Fire is a year round hazard, and all the more so in winter. Rural areas, with their preponderance of older homes, can be particularly vulnerable.

That should be reason enough for the Prince Edward County townships of Hallowell, South Marysburg, Sophiasburg and Athol getting together with a view to providing fire protection.

As of now, they stand to lose the services of Camp Picton's fire brigade when the camp shuts down. The nearest municipal service is at Picton, but no agreement so far exists between the town and its rural neighbors.

There has been talk of establishing a county-wide system, but as recently as September county council rejected such a scheme. Cost of course is a big factor, but as has been pointed out home insurance rates would drop if fire protection were available.

If a county system is not feasible, the above-mentioned townships nevertheless would be well advised to consider entering into an arrangement with Picton.

Happy Servicemen

There is no more appreciative an audience in the world than that composed of service-men. And when the entertainers are of the calibre of the indefatigable Bob Hope, supported by a bevy of beautiful girls, including Swedish-born Ann-Margret, who sings and dances, and Miss World (a Miss Plummer from England), so much the better.

Watching the faces of the U.S. and Commonwealth fighting men in the open-air audiences in Vietnam at Christmas, and screened on television the other day, brought mixed emotions. Whatever people from the safety of their homes, far from the battle zones, think of this conflict, for the fighting men it is only too real. Yet they can smile and laugh like no one in a theatre, or even sitting dully in front of the screen at home. And they have their serious out and they take pictures. And comedian Hope delights them with such quips as, "I left the States . . . couldn't stand the violence," and Ann-Margret and the other girls dance and sing and look sweet and the young soldiers sit back and show their appreciation. And yet, next day, they could be dead or wounded (like one young man among many the troupe visited in hospital who had walked on a mine. And they so young . . . many of them only 18 or 19.

Yes we all want the war to end, even if as outgoing President Johnson says it may mean a recession, but meantime think of the young men there. They can still smile, though bullets and bombs are too much an everday occurrence in their lives.

Carnival Ahoy!

It is good to hear that Belleville may have a winter carnival before the end of the season.

The Chamber of Commerce has taken preliminary steps looward sponsoring a carnival with the appointment of an organizing committee. However, at the moment Belleville is working its "banana belt" magic with mild weather that has brought a partial thaw.

A week or two ago conditions would have been ideal — but then, winter is far from over. February and March are yet to come, and that is still winter. Of course, there will have to be a Snow Queen and we can also expect skaters, tobogganers, snowmobile enthusiasts — and who knows maybe a dog team or two.

Ill-tempered 'Newfie Six' Put Steam Into Opposition

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Let's hear it for the "Newfie Six."

And make with that applause vigorously, for they just might have changed the whole tone and tempo of this Parliament.

They are the half dozen "Terrible-Tempered Tories" — as their Liberal foes here in the Commons call them — the six Newfoundlanders who showed the quiescent Conservatives how to fight.

And it turned out to be catching — just look at the rumble that the usually quiet and courteous Conservative Leader Sanfield got rolling on the way the government wanted to throw out the whole parliamentary rule book and bring in a new one, made to its measure.

He gave it enough momentum, with a surprisingly uncharacteristic head of angry steam, to keep it going perhaps long enough that the government, wearying of it, might compromise.

And a compromise by a majority could look suspiciously like a victory for the minority.

But back to the "Newfie Six" who first showed the Opposition how to sock it to the government.

They did it trying to save the CNR train that runs from St. John's to Port Aux Basques and the ferries to the mainland.

Maybe when all the glorious fighting is the history books have saved the Bullet.

But by their "Horatius-at-the-Bridge" example they could have saved the Opposition from catrophying in its own inaction of "over-responsibility."

Here is what happened, in brief.

The Canadian Transportation Commission — with Jolly John Pickersgill, the former "Mr. Newfoundlander," in the chair — gave the CNR the green light to sidetrack forever the Bullet for a bus service.

April 15 was — and likely still will be — the end of the line for the Bullet.

Likely, because the CN is keeping count of bus and Bullet passengers and the CTC expects its final accounting to run something like perhaps 100 to one.

But the "Newfie Six"—James McGrath, Walter Carter, Jack Marshall, Ambrose Peddle, John Lundrigan and Frank Moores — simply refused to see it that way. They fought and won an epic battle in the Commons through sheer stubbornness. The government agreed that, if they would just shut up, the fate of the Bullet could be considered by a Commons Committee where the "Newfie Six" "could have" at Jack Pickersgill.

Incredibly, they won the day there, too, ramming through a resolution that there could be no sidetracking of the Bullet until the committee went over to Newfie for a close-up, on-the-scene study of the issue.

There was some hanky-panky in the committee over that resolution, and whether it was perpetrated by the "Terrible Tories" or the "Dirty Grits," as they know each other, still another Commons Committee — the one on Parliamentary Privileges — will try determining.

Except for Newfoundlanders, though, what happens to the Bullet is nothing compared with what is happening to the Opposition.

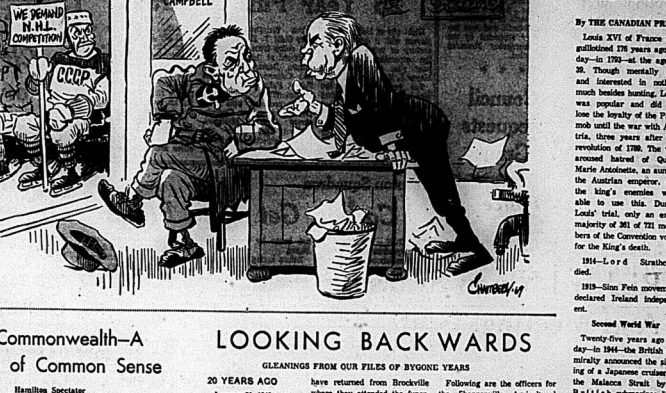
And largely because of the "Newfie Six."

The way it was when this Parliament opened last September, the Conservatives were all but paralyzed by a severe case of what the ruling clique called "responsibility."

It was rule, simply sheer poor parliamentary manners, to be nasty to the government. "Responsibility" required that an Opposition to be "reasonable" must assist the government in its best of all possible good works.

It was the civilized thing in the Opposition to worry about the state of the world, especially Biafra. And to fret about the state of the nation — much less raise hell about it — was unintelligent.

And so what were known as Maclimis and Bob Muir of Cape Breton, Wallace Nesbitt, Doug Altenbrack and George Hees of Ontario, Bob Coates of Nova Scotia, sometimes Tom Bell of New Brunswick, and always John Diefenbaker of Saskatchewan, were regarded "ruffians."



The "Newfie Six" were little less than "barbarians."

But those half-dozen "Terrible-Tempered Tories" just did not give a damn — and then, astoundingly, they won their seemingly hopeless one-sided fight.

Suddenly, then to fight with all your might became the thing to do. To the attack tore the Tories with "Battling Bob" Stanfield, no longer the "quiet man" in the forefront.

So let us hear it for the "Newfie Six."

"But I tell you it's out of the question – the Oakland franchise has already been transferred to Buffalo."

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Louis XVI of France was guillotined 176 years ago today—in 1793—at the age of 39. Though mentally dull and interested in nothing much besides hunting, Louis was popular and did not lose the loyalty of the Paris mob until the war with Austria, three years after the revolution of 1789. The war aroused hatred of Queen Marie Antoinette, an aunt of the Austrian emperor, and the king's enemies were able to use this. During Louis' trial, only an exact majority of 361 of 721 members of the Convention voted for the King's death.

1914—Lord Strathcona died.

1919—Sinn Fein movement declared Ireland independent.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—the British admiralty announced the sinking of a Japanese cruiser in the Malacca Strait by a British submarine; U.S. army and navy bomb bombers attacked the Pas de Calais area; Australia and New Zealand signed a pact to act as a single block in post-war civilian and defence problems.

A Matter Of Inches

"Australian girls wear miniskirts shorter than anywhere else in the world, even London. The beach is free. I think a girl should dress — or undress — any way she pleases so long as she is not naked." — Hattie Blaza, 21-year-old newcomer to Australia from Holland, commenting on a new Manley Beach (Sydney) edict that miniskirts must not measure at least two inches on the side of the hips.

The Commonwealth—A Triumph of Common Sense

Hamilton Spectator

The Empire, as it was known at the turn of the century, has passed. The navies have melted away; the fires gone. If it has been a retreat, it has been one of the finest retreats in the history of political evolution. If freedom means nothing, then the Commonwealth is unimportant and so is democracy in its true sense. God help us if it means nothing. We have seen the alternatives, the many alternatives. They are not pretty.

Britain herself has gone through perhaps the greatest bloodless social revolution ever recorded. She has done it without violence, threats, or guns, or tanks. It has been a saga of tolerance and common sense — neither of which virtue makes the headlines, but stands to the lasting credit of a race that has never accepted tyranny or blackout and has been willing to make immense sacrifices of blood and resources to maintain this tradition.

If there is a tragedy in the Commonwealth concept, it is that we take it for granted, even find it a bit of a bore. This is worse than cynical. It is condemning it outright. Mr. Trudeau undoubtedly sensed that in London. It can be hoped most Canadians sense it too.

Vietnam Peace Still A Dim Prospect As Talks Resume

By WILLIAM L. RYAN

PARIS (AP) — The Vietnam talks will begin anew Saturday under an agreement so vague and ambiguous as to becloud any participant's claim of victory. But new worries lies ahead, and few here expect progress toward peace to be anything but slow and tortuous.

The vagueness of the arrangements for the first enlarged meeting appeared to have been deliberate. The solution to an obstacle which held up this phase of the talks for more than two months centred on the arrangement of new large table and two small ones in the International Conference Centre. There will be no flags, nameplates or markings.

The French government has been asked to produce a big round table suitable for seating 16 delegates around it at one time, and two small rectangular tables, each 5½ feet long and three feet wide. The small tables will be placed at opposite sides of the big table, exactly 18 inches from its edges.

The South Vietnamese government can point to this table arrangement as actually providing the divided nation between two sides which it has demanded, and can even claim that the arrangement cuts the conference room in halves.

North Vietnam and its ally, the Viet Cong's National Liberation Front, can point to the fact that their original round table idea has been accepted, and that thus they consider the conference four-sided.

What appears to have taken place in the long weeks of bargaining is a vindication of the slogan of W. Averell Harriman, the departing chief U.S. negotiator, who pictures himself a champion of "open covenants secretly arrived at."

"The arrangement is exactly as we wanted it to be, Harriman said. "We will always consider it a two-sided conference. The other side considers it a four-party conference. We did not give in and we did not expect them to give in. Meanwhile, we can go ahead and do business."

But it seems clear that each side had to surrender something.

North Vietnam dropped its insistance on the drawing of lots by the four parties for a speaking order. Hanoi envisioned it, this process would have indicated equal status for the Liberation Front with the Saigon government.

Saigon dropped its insistence on a visible mark across the table to indicate two sides, and pictured the table arrangement which emerged Thursday as "the nearest we could get to the two sides that we have been fighting for."

North Vietnam gave way on the matter of flags and emblems in the conference room. Display of the Viet Cong flag could have been regarded as a symbol of sovereignty. But the North Vietnamese still consider the conference one of "four equals."

What it amounts to, then, is this: When the parties assemble Saturday (5 a.m. EST, 10 a.m. EST), the Americans and South Vietnamese will seat themselves at one side—one side of a two-sided war. The North Vietnamese and the NLF will approach the table considering themselves two separate political entities.

The seating order, at least for the first two sessions, has been arranged so this same principle can be carried out. The Americans and South Vietnamese, considering themselves a single side, have drawn the first speaking spot. The first speaker will be Nguyen Xuan Phong, No. 2 man of the South Vietnamese delegation, who will be followed by Ambassador Cyrus R. Vance. The North Vietnamese and the NLF are free to arrange their own speaking order; Hanoi's Col. Ha Van Lau, the delegation No. 2 man, or Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh of the NLF.

For the second meeting, the order will be reversed, and the North Vietnamese and NLF delegates will speak first.

It is considered certain that there will be much difficult debate on procedure preceding to enable the meetings to get down finally to the business of peace.

Jet Set Not in Jeopardy

The Party Cost $1,000... And $1.50 A Drink in Plastic Cup

WASHINGTON (CP) — As party-givers, the Democratic party has nothing to fear from the Republican party.

If the inaugural ball Monday night at the magnificent Smithsonian Institution in any indication, the record of the jet-set Kennedys and the southern-hospitality Johnsons is not in jeopardy.

The Nixon people didn't raise enough hoopla to ruffle the feathers of the august institution's resident hens—four Plymouth Rocks which are part of a pioneer-days exhibition on the second floor.

In fact, the main emotion generated was that of anger—quiet, polite anger—as formally dressed party faithful who paid from $25 a ticket to $1,000 for a box for eight got trampled, pushed and generally mistreated.

All six inaugural balls were so jampacked that dancing was a near impossibility.

At least 30,000 ballgoers gave the new president and his lady cheering ovations as he made the rounds Monday night, making brief speeches laced with humor.

The president and his family spent about 30 minutes at each ball and he wound up at 1:30 a.m.

The balls were the big windup social event of three days of inaugural activities. Some 25 bands performed.

The Smithsonian ball, one of the six throughout the city, ran into trouble when all the guests who were supposed to be scattered throughout the three floors of the building converged on the second floor to welcome Republican Richard M. Nixon and his party.

The ensuing crush prompted officials to turn off the escalators and station guards to halt the rush from the other floors.

The hostile indignation of members of the press and the paying guests finally caused at least one guard to abandon his post. The subsequent traffic-jam left many guests stranded halfway up one escalator all during the Nixon party's brief turn on stage.

The Smithsonian ball, featuring the music of Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians, also was designed as the party to which all foreign ambassadors were invited.

Canadian Ambassador A. E. Ritchie was one of those who good-naturedly elbowed his way to his place before the crush became impossible. But many of the diplomatic corps were stranded, shoulder to shoulder, behind pillars or television cameras until the jam broke after the Nixon departure.

Even Nixon appeared amazed by the sea of faces when he struggled to the platform. He brought some relief to the tense situation by remarking: "I thought this was supposed to be a dance."

Many of the paying guests were surprised when they found the drinks were not included in the price of admission. They had to pay $1.50 a shot, with the drinks served in plastic cups.

On top of that, the bars were late opening because the ice hadn't been delivered. When they did open the crush kept thirsty party-goers waiting up to 15 minutes for service.

After the Nixons departed, a measure of order was restored as guests drifted off to dancing on the crowded floors.

Mrs. Nixon wore a mimosa yellow silk satin ballgown, its jacket and cummerbund a-glitter with embroidered jewels.

Police Take Control

don of policemen guarding the parade route along Pennsylvania Avenue.

Paratroops rushed to form a second line of defence as Nixon's armored limousine passed. He turned his back to wave at the cheering crowd on the other side of the wide avenue but his car speeded up suddenly when a large rock hit within a foot of it.

Secret service agents accompanying the president's car batted down several objects that flew toward it.

After Nixon passed, they left Pennsylvania Avenue and ran toward Lafayette Park but never came closer than a well-guarded block from the White House and its reviewing stand, where Nixon watched the parade through bullet-resistant glass.

At the park they met and surrounded city Patrolman W. E. Larman. He lunged at one demonstrator, then they swarmed over him shouting. "Kill the pig!" Two, then two more officers arrived, the riot batons flailing, to rescue him. He was not seriously hurt.

Police clubbed one youth to the ground. When a girl wearing a First World War style doughboy helmet came to his rescue both were pushed into a patrol car and driven away.

In a running series of short encounters on H Street, demonstrators threw stones at police cars, an army car and at least two motorcycle policemen. City and federal park police bore the brunt of the crowd-control duties, assisted by paratroops and national guardsmen.

The running melee continued until dark, with rock-throwing and the occasional breaking of windows.

Praise Near Unanimous

kind if cautious words for the new president.

Almost unanimous praise came from members of both parties in Congress.

"I particularly liked the emphasis on his determination to pursue a policy of peace," said Senator J. W. Fulbright (Dem. Ark.), who as chairman of the foreign relations committee was one of the most persistent critics of Johnson administration Vietnam policies.

Nixon "pressed all of the right buttons and he struck all of the right themes," said Senator Edmund Muskie, the Maine Democrat and unsuccessful vice-presidential candidate.

Prime Minister Trudeau sent messages to both the incoming and outgoing presidents.

Trudeau, in his message to Nixon, extended Canada's best wishes and said he looks forward to working with Nixon "for the benefit of both our countries and fife peace and justice in the world."

Governor-General Roland Michener in another message wished Nixon "health, happiness and success" in his new job.

The leaders of the Soviet Union sent congratulations to Nixon and said the two world powers must strive to improve relations.

"Through joint efforts with other states the Soviet Union and the United States must do all that is needed to solve ripe international problems," said Premier Alexei Kosygin and Soviet President Nikolai Podgorny.

'One of the finest Canadian whiskies this country has ever tasted' beer cans and garbage at Nixon's parade.

The disturbances came in direct counterpoint to Nixon's call for an end to "raucous disorders."

"To go forward at all is to go forward together," said Nixon who gained the White House without substantive voter support from the country's youth or Negro community.

He pledged "to consecrate my office, my energies, and all of the wisdom I can summon, to the cause of peace among nations."

Even before he plunged into the merry whirl of Monday night's inaugural balls, the new president had arranged for a meeting of the National Security Council today.

Nixon also planned to meet with Gen. Earle Wheeler, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

It was at 12:16 p.m. Monday that the 56-year-old Nixon stood in the shadow of the Capitol dome and, with his right hand upraised and his left hand on two family Bibles held by his wife Pat, repeated in a firm voice the 35-word oath administered by Chief Justice Earl Warren.

Then, after cannons roared out a 21-gun salute and the marine band played "Hail to the Chief, Nixon delivered his 17-minute inaugural address in solemn and restrained tones.

"The greatest honor history can bestow is the title of peacemaker," he said without specifically mentioning the Vietnam war he inherited. "This honor now beckons America—the chance to help lead the world at last out of the valley of turmoil, and onto that high ground of peace, that man has dreamed of since the dawn of civilization.

The president promised to press forward at home for full employment, better housing, excellence in education, rebuilding of cities and improving rural areas. But, he cautioned, "we are reaching the limits of what government alone can do."

A few hours later, as the president rode in a bullet-proof black limousine from the Capitol to the White House, a band of anti-war demonstrators hurled rocks and other debris from the sidewalk.

None of the debris struck the presidential car, and Nixon ignored the protesters by turning to wave at the crowds on the other side of Pennsylvania Avenue.

Never did the shouting demonstrators — one estimate placed their numbers at 1,000 in the crowd of perhaps 250,000 come within a block of the bullet-resistant glass booth from which Nixon, his wife, their daughters Julie and Tricia and other friends and dignitaries watched the 2½-hour inaugural parade.

As the parade unfolded, Johnson was flying to his Texas home—in the same plane that carried him and the body of president John F. Kennedy back from Dallas five years ago.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and i our important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

City Alderman Speaks at B and P. Women's Club Meet

The Business and Professional Women's Club of Belleville started off the new year with a local political figure as the speaker of the evening Mrs. Robin Jeffrey, city alderman, at its Monday night meeting at the Sun Valley.

Her topic was women and politics, given to encourage able, honest and Christian women to seek public office at all levels of government. Mrs. Jeffrey stated that she has discovered during many of her previous talks to other groups, that there are many women today who do not realize or believe that they have the ability to run for office or become directors on boards of colleges or in industry or to be an equal of man in any way.

Mrs. Jeffrey went on to say, "Since your group is business oriented, you must be aware of the serious problems facing the leaders in our world today. You must also be aware of the indifference shown by too many women to these complex and serious problems. Women are often willing to go just so far — but when asked to become deeply involved then indifference sets in. Women are willing to become involved as long as it does not mean too much change in their routine or in their way of life. If a person shows deep concern, whether it be toward his fellowmen, or deep concern for the decisions that have been made or will be made by leaders in the city council or in parliament in Toronto or in Ottawa, then that person is a fool.

"There will always be those members of our community (men and women) who will feel that politics, decent housing, job retraining, adequate medical health services are not the business of women's groups. We need women whose concern moves outside the walls of their houses, their clubs and their churches and attack the causes that wound people. Women should be concerned about water pollution of these organizations ever encouraged one of their own sex to seek office."

Mrs. Jeffrey went on to say that when she became involved in the political field she decided to run for city council, where it is much better to be independent, to vote on issues free of any partisan affiliation.

She concluded "If we refuse or fear to take on controversial issues then by our very silence we endorse all the social and political evils that are found in our society. We must take part in club work in order to broaden our horizons and develop in us the ability to cope, to develop our talents and awaken us to our responsibilities, but once the abilities are developed then we must start to think of ourselves as possible politicians, school board candidates, or members on boards and committees. Why is it when half our population is female, are we represented by less than one half of one per cent of the members at Ottawa? Is this the just society that we as women should be satisfied with?"

Mrs. Jeffrey was thanked on behalf of the club by Mrs. Nettie Brown.

The business meeting followed. Fellow representative at the United Nations, Mrs. Katherine Kay, from Nova Scotia, will be guest speaker of the Trenton Business and Professional Women's Club on Jan. 30, at 6.30 p.m. in Green United Church, Dundas Street E., Trenton when all members are invited.

A resolution was passed to sign the petition presented by the president of the White Cane club of Belleville on behalf of its members. This petition is to be presented to the government to request it to retain the Blind Persons' Act.

New members enrolled were Irene Riddell, Margret Seams and Phyllis McPaul.

Mr. and Mrs. W.L Davidson Mark 50th Anniversary

TRENTON — Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Davidson of Trenton marked their 50th wedding anniversary at home at 163 Stanley Street here on Saturday.

The couple, however, plans to celebrate the occasion in June when Mrs. Davidson's sister Ethel (Mrs. George Bartlett) of London, England is flying to Canada to join them in the first reunion of the two sisters since September, 1919.

It was a beautiful day — Saturday, January 18, 1919, — when Ann Woodrow of London, England was united in marriage to W. L. "Sandy" Davidson of Brighton, Ontario.

The ceremony was performed in St. Barnabas' Anglican Church in London, England, with the Rev. W. Andrews officiating. Three of the bride's sisters Ethel, Algie and Margaret were bridesmaids, while a fourth sister Ella was the flower girl.

The bridegroom in army uniform was supported by Bob Blyth serving in the army overseas with him.

Mr. Davidson returned to Canada with his war bride in September, 1919. They settled at Brighton and lived there until 1933 when they moved to Trenton with their children Donald, Audrey (Mrs. Arthur Donnelly of RR3, Belleville), and Iris (Mrs. G. Griffiths of Woodstock).

Mrs. Nixon Takes Part in Inaugural Ceremony

WASHINGTON (AP) — Smiling proudly, Pat Nixon held two family Bibles as her husband took the oath of office Monday as the 37th president of the United States. It was "a great moment," they agreed, climaxing the years they had moved upward together.

Mrs. Nixon sat with her eyes closed throughout four prayers during the inaugural ceremonies at the Capitol.

At 55, she takes on a demanding role that her predecessor, Lady Bird Johnson smilingly said farewell to in the moment of transition.

She congratulated Pat and the wife of the new vice president, Mrs. Spire T. Agnew.

The two families—the Nixons and the Johnsons—gathered in front of a blazing fireplace in the White House Red Room on the historic morning and then went together to Capitol Hill. When it was over the Johnson family was off to the ranch in Texas as the Nixons became occupants of the 132-room, 18-acre White House establishment for the next four years.

Mrs. Nixon beamed when the marine band played Hail to the Chief to her husband for the last time as he took his place on the ceremonial stand. Beside her, Mrs. Hubert H. Humphrey, whose husband, the outgoing vice-president had lost his race against Nixon, shed a tear as the benediction provided the final postscript to the "Inaugurphreys' 1969 presidential hoper.

Mrs. Nixon made her inaugural appearance in a bright pink coat and dress, with a Russian sable off-the-face beret. Her two daughters, Julie 20, and Tricia, 22, were in pale blue and green respectively. Nixon wore the traditional cutaway.

"In a personal sense," Mrs. Nixon said afterward—in a comment relayed by a press secretary—"I only wish his mother and his father could have been here; how proud they would have been." Both of Nixon's parents are dead.

She added: "I like his (the president's) theme of peace in his speech." And she had applauded with the audience when Nixon said the times are on the side of peace.

Blonde Tricia Nixon proudly proclaimed "I thought it was the most eloquent speech I ever heard."

When the Nixons arrived at the White House Monday morning they were greeted at the door by their own two pet dogs, Pasha, a Yorkshire terrier, and Vickie, a miniature poodle. The Nixon pups cavorted with President Johnson's pet dog, a white mongrel named Yuki which is to remain here.

Horticultural Society Views Floral Arrangements

Miss Margaret E. Dove, a past president of the North Toronto Horticultural Society and of the Garden Club of Toronto, spoke to the Belleville Horticultural Society at their recent meeting in the Sunday School auditorium of Tabernacle United Church.

Miss Dove wrote a Toronto newspaper's gardening columns for 14 years and has won many awards for flower designs. She is a well-known Canadian accredited judge of flor er arrangements, a horticulturist, writer, lecturer and a teacher of floral art.

Working with fresh flowers, she built up 13 arrangements, each of a different type, to illustrate: formal balance; informal balance; line within a circle; massed line; line within a triangle; inverted triangle; modern arrangements; free form; fun arrangements; line arrangement, and avant garde designs.

Line arrangements originated in the Orient. Mass arrangements were brought from Europe. In America, line came to be augmented with mass.

In contemporary arrangements a wide variety of containers are used. They need not be expensive. The more ordinary they are the more interesting they tend to be. Miss Dove used a high candlestick, a rectangular pyrex dish, a wooden vinegar measure, a pie cup holder, a bath cap, a candelabra, a painted clinker and sheets of plastic.

The designers need to know the spot in the house where they are going to put their arrangements, before making them and should also know their containers and have a picture in mind of the type of background.

Spacing in the arrangement is important. The theory that only odd numbers of flowers can be used has been discarded. There should be a variety of shapes. Foliage has always been acceptable in flower arrangements. Halves of fruits are most interesting. Onions, lemons, peppers or pears may be used.

Materials may be used in an unnatural manner. For instance. Miss Dove split one aspidastra leaf along the veins and fastened a wire to the back of another, so that she could bend it in any direction. In the avant garde assemblages, there must be at least one leaf for them to be authentic flower arrangements and the only artificial plant material allowed in flower shows are artificial grapes.

The members of the Belleville Horticultural Society may have a chance to see more of Miss Dove's designs when they visit the Garden Club of Toronto spring show at O'Keefe Centre in a few weeks.

The names of ten people were drawn from among those joining the 1969 Belleville membership by December 31, 1968. They will each receive a rose bush this spring. They include: Mrs. Bob Norris, Mrs. Doris Ellsworth, Mrs. Everett Phillips, Mrs. E. A. Fleming, Miss E. Daly, Mrs. C. W. Coombs, Harold Cameron, Mrs. Doris Edwards, Mrs. Rhea Allen and Mrs. Eric Penny.

Spring-summer Collections To Feature Flared Skirts

ROME (Reuters) — Rome designer Schuberth brought back the late 1940s in a romantic-minded spring-s u mmer collection Sunday.

He showed wide-flared or gathered skirts swinging from tight-wide belts, short snappy boleros, huge picture hats and "sun-tops" — the bodice held up by two short straps, with draping and puffed sleeves.

Many of his dresses had hoods, some in the same material, some contrasting and some in lace.

His evening dresses were all in pure white, ranging from a romantic debutante number with a tight bodice and full bell-shaped skirt to sophisticated sheaths with high embroidered collars.

Rainbow stripes, swirls of brilliantly colored feathers, bulls eyes and dangling fringes of colored beads filled the collection of Gregoriano.

The hems of several day dresses were edged in contrasting colors — such as yellow or navy blue — and crenellated like the edge of a Medieval pavilion.

Several evening dresses were gathered in at the thighs in bloomer effects reminiscent of babies' rompers' suits.

Seeks Entry to Boys' School

NEW YORK (Reuters) — A 13-year-old high school girl filed a court suit Monday seeking admission to an all-boys school.

Alice de Rivers, who has an outstanding record especially in mathematics, wants to attend the all-male Stuyvesant high school in Lower Manhattan because of its high academic reputation.

Alice, at present a student at the co-educational John Jay high school in Brooklyn, is supported in her bid by the National Emergency Civil Liberties Committee.

Committee spokesman Ramona Ripston termed the Stuyvesant high school's policy "a vestage of an archaic system." She added that the 1964 Civil Rights Act ruled that public facilities cannot be denied to women because of sex.

Reader Says Goat Is Cleanest Animal

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Your reply to the wife who signed herself "Clothespin Nose," showed your ignorance, Ann. It is obvious that you have never been around well-cared-for goats.

ANN LANDERS

My husband and I have had a dairy herd for several years. Goats are the cleanest and most finicky animals on our farm. They do not have an offensive odor. I cannot say the same for our horses, cows, pigs or chickens.

So, Ann, in the interest of accuracy, when you wish to describe a careless unhygenic person, please say he smells like a horse, not a goat. Thank you. — FROM MISSOURI.

DEAR FROM: I was raised in Iowa and the goats I encountered were not exactly the essence of cologne. It just isn't true, I guess, that when you've smelled one goat you've smell 'em all. Please give my apologies to all your sweet-smelling Nannys and Billys.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I had an out of wedlock child last year. I had to move in with my parents because I couldn't make enough money to pay a babysitter and rent an apartment.

I work hard all day. My mother seems to think I should also keep my room clean and help her with the dishes. And that's not all. She feels I should do housework on my day off.

My dad is always bugging me about my social life. I am going with a very nice man. But I can't see him as often as every night. I am 23 years old and I resent being treated like a child. Don't you agree that they should get off my back? — PICKED ON.

DEAR PICK: No. Your track record is nothing to brag about. Maybe it's time you listened to somebody.

You complain because your mother expects you to help with the dishes and do housework on your day off. Has it occurred to you that your mother doesn't get a day off? She's at home every day taking care of your child.

As for seeing your boyfriend every night, I'm with Pa.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: "Anonymous" wrote to you recently and said, "When my husband was courting me 18 years ago, I fell in love with his brother. It was too late to call off the wedding so I married Arnold knowing he was not the one for me."

Now the woman wants you to back her up so she can dump Arnold and marry his brother because she has "sneaked around and pretended long enough."

You gave her a good "What-for" and now I'd like to add my nickel's worth.

A member of my immediate family pulled the same rotten trick and it landed two of her kids in a mental hospital.

Tell the Later-Day Cleopatra that if it was too late to call off the wedding before it happened, 18 years and three kids later is one whale of a lot too late. — MADE THE SCENE.

DEAR SCENE: You told her better than I did. Between the two of us she should get the message.

Successful Living

Essential Need for Happiness Is to Feel Wanted

By DORIS CLARK

"To share my moments of joy with someone else, to have others sympathize with my failures, appreciate my accomplishments, understand my moods and value my intelligence these are the essential conditions that are needed for happiness.

"Praise alone does not fulfill this yearning for companionship; neither does sympathy. There must always be that bond of true personal interest, which promotes an assurance that one is really wanted, not merely tolerated."

The inspiration is an excerpt from "Life at My Fingertips", the personal narrative of deaf-blind poet Robert Smithdas.

Note that while he wishes to share joys, he knows the essential need is to feel wanted. Who doesn't? Seems to me this is the difference between a cold cordiality and a warm acceptance.

Dear Doris: I have an 18-year-old daugher who seems to have no interest in life. All she does after she comes from school is eat, watch T.V. and then go to sleep. She is too lazy even to set her hair or take a bath, and so isn't even neat when she goes to school.

I do everything for her, such as clean her room and wash and press her clothes, as I am a very neat person and can't stand it when her room is messy, and if I don't do her clothes they will never be done. She seems to have no way with boys and is afraid of them. Right now she has no homework as she is taking only two subjects and does everything in school.

I cannot understand where I fail as I know how to cook and sew but I cannot interest her in doing these things. If her father will ask her to help him drive the tractor or car she will do it. She has a very bad temper and forever argues with her young sister. Desperate.

Dear Desperate: Isn't your second paragraph the answer to your first? Doing everything for a girl is no way to grow a happy adult. Many years ago she learned you would pick up the slack for her.

Listlessness, bad temper, fear of boys. There's more to this than meets the eye: and the remedy is not to be contained in one sentence or paragraph.

I'd check for a physical cause of inertia, and seek ways to reward helpfulness. She will never learn how to be happy until she learns how to be useful. But personal counselling is what you need now.

Dear Doris: I met a guy through a friend. I phoned him and we carried on a conversation for almost two hours. Then two weeks later he asked me out. We really got along well.

Then the next week end I phoned him and he said he had to study. In return I was quite nasty. I apologized the next day and he said he'd call me. Well, I've been sitting in my room for almost a week and he hasn't called, and I have my doubts that he will call this week end.

How can I get and keep him interested? He is six years my superior and I'm not sure how to act around him. — New In This Town.

Dear New: (1) No matter how friendless you are, phoning up almost strange boys is no way to surround yourself with friends. (2) You have lots to lose by this kind of thing. Why should he give up studies to take you out? (3) Even if he was crazy about you, 'id take a dim view of that six-year gap in ages.

Better make a new circle of friends in the regular ways: Joining social groups, school groups, church groups, or what-have-you. There's bound to be something going on you could take part in, with people you'll be comfortable with.

Albert College Guild Hears Talk on Freedom

"Freedom" was the theme selected by Rev. A. L. Sutherland for a challenging address at the January meeting of the Albert College Women's Guild. Stress was placed on the fact that neither individuals nor nations are always ready for freedom when they demand it. "There must be freedom from something specific. Most young people want freedom to run their own lives. Mature people want freedom to live a new life with no responsibilities. The prisoner longs for the hour of his release. An occupied country wants political freedom. There can be no political freedom without mutual responsibility and responsibility toward God. To be free involves responsibility of making choices," Mr. Sutherland proclaimed.

Mr. Sutherland was introduced by Miss Helen Sulman, who was in charge of the program, and was thanked by Mrs E. Hickey.

Following the address three pupils of Mrs. E. Boyce, Denise Sutherland, Linda Lewis and Linda Bushard entertained with piano solos and were thanked by Mrs. L. G. Hudgins.

Mrs. H. G. McKay, president, was in the chair for the business which included reports by the various officers. Also the matter of the annual spring bridge and euchre party was considered and the date of March 17 was chosen.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Father: "Johnny, sit up straight and eat your dinner properly. Why must you always be so messy?"

Mother: "Oh, for goodness sake, quit picking on him. He's just a little boy."

Parents with different viewpoints on child care may be wise to consult a child guidance expert or to read what child psychologists say. It is often difficult for parents to know whether they are expecting too much or too little from a child.

Mother: "Maybe I baby Johnny too much and I think you are sometimes too severe. Between us, we're confusing him. I got this book that tells what to expect at certain ages."

Drop Cheer Leaders

BANGKOK (AP) — Cheer leaders at Thai schools have nothing to cheer about, Dr. Boonsom Martin, director-general of physical education, ordered the schools to eliminate frills in sports and parades and cheering performances because they are too expensive. "Expenditures must be cut to a minimum since the value of sports is not in the beauty of the cheering squads alone," he said.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Chicken Casserole

By MARY MOORE

Bells were ringing right, left and centre: the door, the phone, the oven timer. I was in a hurry. I had the ingredients on hand but interruptions prevented me from getting on with my meal. I had to concentrate but finally there the casserole sat steaming hot on the dinner table and cooling to be freezer-wrapped in the kitchen.

LIGHTNING CHICKEN CASSEROLE FLORENTINE

(two medium-large — one for current meal, one to freeze)

(NOTE: first you have to boil a 3½ to-4-lb. chicken.)

meat from the 3½-to-4-lb. chicken
one 11-oz. package fresh frozen mixed vegetables
one 11-oz. package fresh frozen frenched green beans
1 chicken Oxo cube
1 can Cheddar cheese soup
1½ cans (nearly 2 cups) hot water
½ teaspoon M.S.G. (accent) divided
1 teaspoon salt (divided)

Stand two medium - large casseroles on the kitchen counter. Into one put the package of fresh frozen mixed vegetables. Into the other, put the package of fresh frozen frenched green beans.

Break up the cold chicken meat into medium-large pieces and divide it evenly and put a generous layer on top of the vegetables in both casseroles. Sprinkle each with half of the M.S.G. and half of the salt.

To the can of Cheddar cheese soup add the hot water and chicken Oxo cube and stir with slotted spoon over medium heat until blended. Pour half evenly over each casserole. Cover each with lid or foil and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. until bubbling all over — time depends on heat of sauce — mine was bubbling hot in 25 minutes. (Remember the fresh frozen vegetables keep this cold at first.) Serve one for current meal to four or five people. Cool and chill and freezerwrap second casserole for future use.

NOTE: You will see that these casseroles go together very quickly. I used the broth from boiling the chicken (which was on "special" at 39 cents per pound) for making chicken soup later on.

NOTE: I am now back in my office after my Christmas vacation, ready to receive and answer all of your letters.

Labor Strife, Costs Said Seaway Liability

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor was held to be the villain of the piece Monday as the owners of the Canadian and U.S. inland ship companies met for their annual joint conference.

Capt. Philip Hurcomb, general manager of the Dominion Marine Association, said labor strife, along with rising costs, is resulting in a loss of confidence in the St. Lawrence seaway as a reliable transportation route.

Pierre Camu, president of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority, said last summer's three-week strike of seaway employees was a big factor in the seaway's failure to reach its long-sought goal of 50,000,000 tons of cargo in 1968.

He said the authority has started a policy of sitting down now to talk things over with the unions representing seaway employees, instead of waiting until the life of the present-three-year contract runs out in 1971.

Speaking at the start of a three-day conference of the Dominion Marine Association and the U.S. Lake Carriers' Association, Mr. Camu reported that 48,000,000 tons of cargo moved through the seaway between Montreal and Lake Ontario in 1968. The record of 49,200,000 tons was set in 1966.

Original estimates of traffic, devised when the seaway's toll structure was mapped out before its 1959 opening, called for an annual volume of 50,000,000 tons by 1968.

Both Mr. Camu and his U.S. counterpart, Joseph H. McCann, administrator of the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation, stressed that the seaway has come much closer to its original estimates in recent years than it did in the first few years of operation.

Capt. Hurcomb said the Dominion Marine Association has urged that the seaway management on the Canadian side try to copy the practice from the American side of paying employees at rates prevailing in local industry in return for a non-strike pledge.

On the American side, the employees are classified as civil servants and are not permitted to strike.

Notice to Employers & Employees

At 12.01 a.m. on January 1st, 1969, the new Ontario Employment Standards Act became law

The New Employment Standards Act provides minimum standards for overtime pay, holiday pay and vacation pay; protects against long hours; ensures equal pay for equal work for women workers; sets higher rates of minimum wages.

hours of work

Maximum weekly working hours are established at 48. Employers may obtain overtime permits on application. Employees whose only work is supervisory or managerial are exempted from the hours provisions of the Act. A girl under 18 years shall not be required to work more than six hours overtime each week.

wage protection

Employers are required to provide a statement of wages and deductions to each employee at the time wages are paid. It must show: pay period, rate of wages, amount of wages, all deductions and the purpose of each, allowances and the net amount being paid the employee. Deductions include those authorized by the employee and such usual deductions as Unemployment Insurance, Income Tax, Canada Pension, Company Pension Plan and Hospitalization.

The Act provides that an employee will receive a minimum of one and one-half times his regular wage-rate for any work in excess of the maximum 48 hours per week. In addition to providing premium pay, this requirement is designed to curb the use of excessive overtime.

Special overtime provisions have been established for the following industries and may be obtained by writing the Employment Standards Branch of the Department: Sewer and Watermain Construction; Interurban and Municipal Transport; Local Cartage; Tourist Resort; Restaurant and Tavern; Fruit and Vegetable Processing; Taxi; Ambulance Service; Highway Transport and Road Building.

A regular, full-time employee and certain categories of part-time employees who work on a statutory holiday must receive a minimum of one and one-half times their regular wage rate. The holidays are Christmas Day, New Year's Day, Good Friday, Victoria Day, Dominion Day, Labour Day and Thanksgiving Day. Substitute holidays may be arranged with the approval of the Director.

equal pay for equal work

In order to protect the growing segment of women in the labour force the existing legislation covering equal pay for equal work under the Human Rights Code has been strengthened and transferred to the Employment Standards Act. This provision ensures that a woman who does the same job as a man in the same establishment is entitled to the same pay. The question of what is equal work will be determined on the basis of skill, effort, responsibility and working conditions.

THIRD SHIFT.

No girl under 18 years shall work in an establishment between midnight and 6 a.m.

If a woman works on a shift that begins or ends between 12:00 midnight and 6 a.m. her employer must provide transportation from her residence to the job or from the job to her home.

vacations with pay

The Act provides that every employee shall be given an annual paid vacation of at least one week after one year of employment. The vacation pay must not be less than 2% of the total pay received in the year in which the vacation is given. When an employee works for a period less than one year he is entitled to 2% vacation pay for the period worked. After three years of employment, the minimum is two weeks paid vacation and the pay must not be less than 4% of the annual earnings. The Vacation with Pay stamp book system for construction workers will be phased out between January 1, 1970 and June 30, 1970.

Any person doing homework as defined in the new Act is now considered to be an employee and is protected by the legislation.

agricultural workers

Employees engaged in the boarding or breeding of animals, the raising of furbearing animals, veterinary services, livestock registration, egg grading, flax processing, greenhouse and nursery operations, landscape gardening, mushroom growing, the growing of flowers for retail and wholesale trade, silvaculture, tree trimming and surgery, growing, transporting and laying of sod and the commercial dusting or spraying of hedges, lawns and trees except orchards, are now covered by the minimum wage, vacation pay, equal pay and wage protection provisions of the Act. They are excluded from the requirements regarding hours of work, overtime pay and premium pay for work on holidays. Employees engaged in all other areas of the agricultural industry are exempt from all provisions of the Act except equal pay and wage protection.

collection of unpaid wages

The department may now collect unpaid wages for an employee including the amount of wages due, overtime pay and vacation pay up to a maximum of $1,000. Formerly collection could be made for wages only up to the level of the minimum wage.

NOTE

There are some industries in the province under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government such as banks, airlines, railways etc. These industries are covered by the Canada Labour Standards Code and are not under the jurisdiction of this Act. If you are in doubt which legislation applies to you, call the Employment Standards Branch for information.

The above is only a general summary of the Act. For more specific information regarding the Act and its regulations concerning overtime permits, exemptions for special occupations, etc., contact:

Combined Artistry and Agility Necessary for Church Projects

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Maurice Bell and Don Myers spend most of their time in church.

At least five days a week in fact.

Sometime soon the results of their latest work project will be on view.

As partners in a church-decorating firm they now are readying St. Thomas Church for its sesquicentennial celebrations starting next month.

The task calls for a combination of artistry and agility — clambering 60 feet aloft to implant intricate designs over altar and nave.

But both men are veterans of their craft and claim to have a virtual monopoly on it in the Quinte district.

Both natives of Stirling, they launched the partnership in church-decorating 20 years ago by facelifting the interior of a church at Frankford. St. Thomas' is the 158th church they've contracted for redecorating — mostly around Hastings and Prince Edward Counties.

Depending on demand they claim the firm may work on 10 to 12 churches annually.

Key to each project is the scaffolding required.

Bell and Myers have been at work so long they come ready equipped — the St. Thomas project alone needed between 10,000-12,000 feet of lumber.

Still, the preliminaries are the most demanding part of each project.

Most difficult task is the erection of the upward, orderly sprawl of catwalks.

It took almost a week to build the scaffolding network around the walls of St. Thomas' before the artistic end of the job could be executed.

This part of the work absorbs the partners even when they're away from the job.

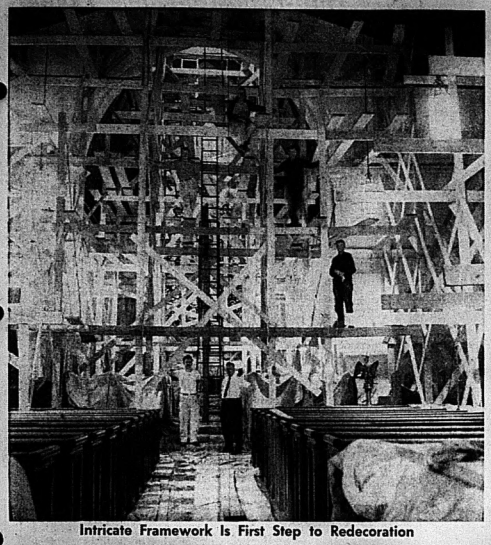
A trip to Quebec, for instance, makes it mandatory that he spend time eyeing the interiors of many old churches.

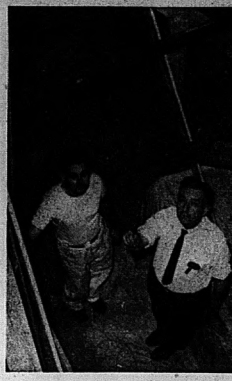
Once, he devoted an entire vacation in Mexico City to the task of seeking inspiration for symbolic designs.

Mr. Bell traces the symbols onto stencils for transfer onto church walls.



Nature of their craft can mean year - round employment for the partners and their helpers. Since they work indoors, weather is no influencing factor.

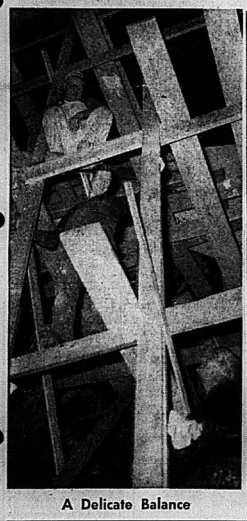
However, in summer, both men confess, outside work at times would be welcome.



"You get tired sometimes indoors and you like to get out in the fresh air," says Mr. Bell.

However, their work also reaps the rewards of personal satisfaction.

"When you get done you've something you can see," explains Mr. Bell. "It's much more interesting than — painting a barn, for instance. People go to church and admire your work.



Intricate Framework Is First Step to Redecoration

Liquor Outlets

Picton Chamber Secures Information on Plebiscite

By BOB DUNNETT
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — A special chamber of commerce meeting was held last night for the purpose of securing information about liquor outlets and what steps must be taken to obtain them.

The meeting was held for the members of the chamber and the representatives of municipalities in Prince Edward County.

The chamber, which takes a neutral stand on the issue, had invited E. J. Anderson, of Richmond Hill, an authority on liquor plebiscites and the laws surrounding the liquor act, to speak to the representatives.

Mr. Anderson said that since the last war, 350 communities had obtained licences to serve alcoholic beverages. Of the 350 communities none has reversed its decision. The decision can be reversed with a 60 per cent majority of the electorate.

He said that attitudes are changing, with many people looking on it as a matter of good business. He pointed out that when tourists, particularly Americans, come to an area, they expect all the services and that includes liquor outlets.

There are two methods by which a vote may be brought about, the first is if 25 per cent of the eligible voters sign a petition asking for a vote, or if council through its wisdom decides to initiate one. In the first case if such a petition is obtained, a vote is mandatory.

In order for the vote to be successful 60 per cent of the voters must be in favor of the community going wet.

Mr Anderson said that once a community has voted to allow alcoholic beverages to be sold, then any establishment which meets the regulations laid down by Liquor Licensing Board may apply for a licence.

He said that the people must vote on three different questions, lounge licence, tavern licence, and beverage room licence.

The first two usually are applied for together.

Mr. Anderson said that it usually takes almost three months from the time council passes the resolution until the Liquor Licensing Board sets the date for the vote.

He said that a private club may obtain a licence in a dry area providing they meet the regulations. They must have been serving meals for three years, and have a membership of 50 members.

Two hotels in Picton now hold licences to sell beer only.

Chief Gives Views

City Police Chief Douglas Crosbie and Lee Jourard, moderator of a panel on discipline at Harry J. Clarke last night, discuss the situation during a pause for coffee.

Too Law Oriented

Society Losing Sense of Responsibility: Crosbie

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Modern society has become so law oriented that it is losing all sense of individual responsibility Belleville's police chief told a group of parents last night.

Chief Douglas Crosbie, with Vincent Castellano of the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County and moderator Lee Jourard, led a discussion on discipline at the Bayview - Harry J. Clarke House and School Association's Jan. meeting.

"For every new product industry produces we have to bring in a new set of laws," the chief said. "When the light motorcycle and the snowmobile appeared, we had to draft special laws to protect the operators who were too irresponsible to protect themselves."

The chief cited statistics to prove his point.

"When I was a young officer a ratio of one policeman to every 1,000 citizens was considered adequate for public protection," he said. "Today in Belleville we have one policeman to every 720 citizens. In some American cities they require a ration of one officer to every 300 citizens."

Children pattern their behavior on the example set by their parents, Chief Crosbie told his audience.

"We all know of dance halls whose main reason for existence is the selling of mixers for the liquor patrons bring in on their hip," he said. "Yet when the police notify these patrons that their 14-year-old daughter has been found intoxicated at a high school dance they become very upset."

A mother in the audience chided the chief for keeping parents in ignorance of law breaking among the teenagers of the city.

"People are not aware that young people are getting drunk at school dances and that the presence of a police officer is necessary at school functions to ensure order," she said. "There is never anything about it in the papers."

"I admit this is one of the major faults of law enforcement agencies — we tend to keep these things secret," replied Chief Crosbie.

He suggested a campaign by the police and the press to acquaint the public with law - breaking among the youth of the community.

"There is a way to change laws you consider bad," he said. "You seek legislation to change them — you just don't go out and break them as the tendency seems to be today."

Both Mr. Castellano and the police chief agreed negative, corrective discipline of a child should be the last resort. The first approach to a problem should be to ask why the child behaved that way.

"Parents have been hypnotized by 'why'", retorted a parent. "They seem more interested in asking why than in moving to stop the bad behavior."

"You can't deny a child's God-given curiosity," replied the chief. "If you answer his questioning of your rules with 'no, because——' you satisfy his normal curiosity and give him reasons for 'chickening-out' and refusing to follow his groups' lead into undesirable behavior patterns."

The chief admitted young people have posed one question for which he has no answer.

"They ask me why adults cheer on hockey players during a fight on the ice at the arena, but lay a criminal charge if the same type of brawl is moved a short distance down the street to the corner of Front and Bridge."

On Paper, East Looks Like Shoo-in

by Maurice Switzer
Sports Editor

Aside from the Stanley Cup finals — since last year the National Hockey League's equivalent of the Super Bowl — tonight's first east-west all-star game is the most dramatic face-to-face confrontation of the NHL's established and expansionist factions.

The value of such a meeting, in the second year for the six-team "weak sister" western division, is questionable.

All-star games never did prove very much anyway — no matter how talented an assembly of the cream of the hockey crop may be, they just can't be expected to function as a unit on one night of the year.

But tonight's Forum festivities could prove even less than usual.

The only thing the westerners have in their favor is the fact the eastern all-stars are also playing together on a one-shot basis. Because if you started to compare the two lineups statistic-wise, you could be convinced it was a "Bewitched" on the side tonight instead of the annual all-star curb.

F'instance: coach "Toe" Blake promises a Phil Esposito-Bobby Hull-Gordie Howe forward combination for tonight's game. The three leading National League scorers will, some time during the evening, be on the ice with bloolike sensation Bobby Orr.

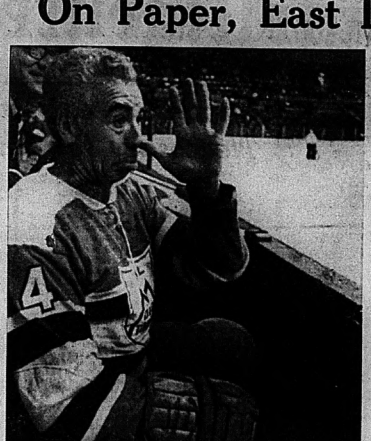
Between them, that foursome have accounted for 93 goals to date this season. That's more than the entire roster of the Los Angeles Kings — third-place club in the western division!

Want to discuss experience?

Gordie Howe made his debut into the NHL the year the west's all-star left-winger Danny Grant was born.

What makes the eastern stars look so impressive is the fact that this is the first time, other than during the 1951 and 1952 seasons, that all-star teams have not had their ranks depleted by the absence of members of the Stanley Cup champions.

(In those two years, the members of the first and second all-star teams played the annual contest, with both games ending in ties).



Under the old game format, the eastern team would have to play without the services of defencemen J. C. Tremblay and Ted Harris, and forwards Jean Beliveau and Bobby Rousseau.

The goal crease may be the western team's principle — or only — area of strength tonight, and that, come to think of it, is not such a bad place to be strong.

Unbelievable performances to date by the St. Louis Blues' aging twosome of Jacques Plante and Glenn Hall — now 24 goals ahead of the race for the Vezina Trophy — have to be considered as vital factors in tonight's game.

Between the pair, they have stopped pucks in more than 1700 National League games, a pastime that has been known to send goalies off in search of nice, quiet little chicken farms.

Even through the fog on my crystal ball that developed when a certain Grey Cup prediction went up in smoke, I can see the east winning tonight by two goals.

Bowman Needs Counter to Hull-Esposito-Howe Line

MONTREAL (CP) — The opposing coaches in tonight's 22nd annual National Hockey League all-star game—Toe Blake, formerly of Montreal Canadiens and Scotty Bowman of St. Louis Blues—have different theories as to how to use the talent made available to them.

Blake, who retired at the end of last season after 13 successful years in Montreal, will be guiding his ninth all-star squad.

Bowman is a freshman and came by the job because his Blues and the Canadiens were Stanley Cup finalists last season.

Tonight's game will be televised nationally by the CBC starting at 8 p.m. EST.

The format has been changed this year—with the East Division stars, picked by NHL Writers' Association, facing a like number of outstanding performers from the West Division. In previous years the formula was for the defending Stanley Cup champions to meet an all-star aggregation.

"I'll play my lines the way they were picked," Blake says. "I don't want the hockey writers mad at me any more."

Bowman, on the other hand, says he intends to keep players from the same expansion teams together as much as possible.

On paper the East appears to be a shoo-in, but both coaches claim this could be the most competitive all-star game of several years.

Each member of the winning squad will pocket $500, while each loser will get $250—the first time the players have been paid for their participation. All proceeds go to the players pension fund.

"We've got strong goaltending and a solid defence," Bowman says. "If we check a little, who knows?"

The Blues are currently 17 points ahead of second-place Oakland Seals in their division. "I think we'll do better with players of the same team playing together," Bowman adds.

He has the league's two top netminders working on his side—veterans Jacques Plante and Glenn Hall—both from his club. The pair have registered five shutouts each and allowed 24 fewer goals than their closest rivals.

However, Bowman's big problem will be to stop the explosive power packed into one big East Division line, that is, if Blake executes his proposed plan.

For example, who will Bowman use to check centre Phil Esposito of the Boston Bruins, left winger Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks and Gordie Howe on right wing. Esposito is currently leading the NHL scoring race with 29 goals and 38 assists. Hull has 30 goals and 32 assists and Howe has 21 goals and 37 assists.

Blake's lead-off man in front of goaltenders Ed Giacomin of New York and Gerry Cheevers of Boston, is the Bruins' Bobby Orr. He will be joined by Chicago's Pat Stapleton, Toronto's Tim Horton, and Montreal's J. C. Tremblay.

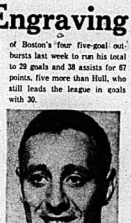
What's in a Name?

Boston Wants Engraving Done



MONTREAL (CP) — The name of a Boston Bruin has never been inscribed on the Art Ross Trophy, but centre Phil Esposito is making a valiant effort to have that omission remedied this season.

Statistics released by the National Hockey League Monday show the rangy Boston centre in first place in the individual scoring race.

The last time a Boston player won the scoring title was in 1943-44, when Herbie Cain turned the trick-four years before the late Art Ross donated the trophy to the NHL in 1947. Ross served for years as the manager-coach of the Bruins before his death Aug. 5, 1964.

Esposito finally overtook left winger Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks after following him closely in the race for several weeks. He has set the pace for his Boston team-mates — a pace that could smash all existing records for most points by a player and most goals by a team in one season.

Esposito scored a goal in each of Boston's four five-goal outbursts last week to run his total to 29 goals and 38 assists for 67 points, five more than Hull, who still leads the league in goals with 30.

PHIL ESPOSITO

Hull, playing with a fractured jaw for the past month, was able to gain only two assists last week, but his 62-point total is four more than that of third-place Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings.

Howe, a 22-season veteran with the Wings, scored two goals last week, giving him 21 for the season—the 20th consecutive term he has scored at least 20 goals.

Stan Mikita, Chicago centre and scoring champion for the last two seasons and four of the last five, is fourth with 53 points, including 38 assists—which ties him with Esposito in that department.

Fifth is Red Berenson of St. Louis Blues who now has 21 goals and 29 assists for 51 points in 55 gamer. Norm Ullman of Toronto Maple Leafs, Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens and Alex Delvecchio of Detroit are tied for sixth place with 49 points each, followed by Ken Hodge, Esposito's right winger, and Jim Pappin of Chicago, each with 46 points.

Goaltenders Jacques Plante and Glenn Hall of St. Louis, although they failed to gain a shutout for the first time in five weeks, maintained their lead in the Vezina Trophy race and their 2.00 goals-against average. They now have a lead of 24 goals over their nearest rivals —New York Rangers, Boston and Toronto.

Jim Dorey, rookie Toronto defenceman, continues to lead in penalty minutes with 146, but forward Pete Laframboise of Philadelphia Flyers has moved into second spot with 129.

Seals' Franchise Up in Air Until Next Month

MONTREAL (CP) — By the time the 22nd annual National Hockey League all-star game gets under way tonight, league governors will have spent a busy day and perhaps may have obtained a new partner.

A bid by a Buffalo group to take over the failing Oakland Seals franchise has become a main topic of the semi-annual governors' meeting.

Clarence Campbell, NHL president, said Monday night, no action is expected "until mid-February" on a bid by Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League to gain admission to the NHL by purchasing the sinking interest in the Seals.

Last Friday the Canucks management and Labatt's Brewerles of Canada Ltd. announced a new agreement designed to bring an NHL franchise to the Canadian West Coast city.

Earlier, a Buffalo group, headed by Seymour Knox, announced it intended to purchase the Seals and transfer the franchise there.

Jack Kent Cooke, owner of Los Angeles Kings of the Western Division, has opposed any transfer of the Oakland franchise, maintaining it should remain there to stimulate a natural rivalry on the U.S. West Coast.

Cooke said last week he had five votes among league governors in favor of leaving the Seals in their present location.

In order for a shift to take place, nine of the 12 governors would have to vote in favor of the move.

The Oakland franchise has suffered from a lack of attendance since its beginning in the 1967-68 season. Last season the team finished last in the newly-formed, six-team expansion division, and this season, despite an improved on-ice performance, attendance has remained poor.

SEED TALK
Five tons of Alfalfa per acre is possible. Two tons a realistic goal in the increasingly near future.
Agronomists have already produced ten ton crops under perfect conditions . . . conditions that can never be duplicated on the farm. On other hand yields in excess of 4 tons are routinely commonplace under reasonably good conditions.
Growing corn has taught us the importance of good management.
By applying the principles of improved technology and good management that we have proven as dramatically with corn to the production forages, we contend that the potential for increased yields and profits is far greater than with corn.
The selection of the best well-drained soils, use of fullfeed fertilizers, lime where necessary, thoughtful selection of variety and seed mixture and careful sowing and attention to the nurse crop are all prime factors in the establishment of potentially productive crop. Of equal importance are such factors as the timing of harvests for the most nutritional stage of growth, quick and well organized handling and storage and management control and winter management.
It's a fact that by utilizing the best varieties and managing them the way you know you really can, yields can be boosted from 2 and 3 tons per acre to 6 and 8 tons.
An incredible increase of 300 %!

His Claim to Fame:

Musial Rewrote Baseball Record Books

NEW YORK (AP) — The doors of Baseball's Hall of Fame were expected to swing open today for Stan Musial who rewrote record books during 22 years with St. Louis Cardinals.

The results of the balloting by veteran members of the Baseball Writers' Association of America were to be announced about 11 a.m. EST. A player must be named on 75 per cent of the ballots to be elected.

Since the first election in 1936, when former greats Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Honus Wagner, Christy Mathewson and Walter Johnson made it, only Ted Williams in 1966 and Bob Feller and Jackie Robinson in—1962 were chosen on their first try.

Despite his amazing hitting feats, it was doubtful Musial would become a unanimous selection among the more than 400 writers voting. No player has ever been given that honor.

Joining Musial among those eligible for the first time—a player must be retired for five years to be eligible—were Red Schoendienst, Musial's close friend and former team-mate who now manages the Cardinals, Early Wynn, Gil Hodges and Vic Wertz.

Actually, 24 former players became eligible this year, but the BWAAA screening committee deemed only those five worthy of being included in this year's vote.

The five joined 45 other former stars who were on last year's ballot. Of those, Roy Campanella, who missed by eight votes last year, was given the best chance for election.

Musial, who retired at the age of 42, set or shared 64 National League or major league records while compiling a career batting average of .331. He won seven batting titles, was named the league's Most Valuable Player three times and set the league mark for most hits during his career.

Although he called himself a singles hitter, he managed to collect more than 3,000 home runs and was considered a good outfielder before moving to first base late in his career. He also set the league endurance mark by playing in 895 consecutive games.

Another Orr?

Harvey Amazed by Junior

TORONTO (CP) — "Fourteen? I don't believe it."

Defenceman Doug Harvey of the St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League shook his head last October when someone told him the age of No. 7 for the 67s said in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Denis Potvin was almost a month away from his 15th birthday and already the husky youngster was being touted as the NHL's next Bobby Orr.

"For his age, he's not that far off Orr," coach Bill Long of the 67s said in an interview Sunday.

"I saw Bobby when he was 15 and playing for Oshawa Generals in the (OHA) Metropolitan Junior A group.

"It wasn't as competitive as our series today. And don't forget, Denis has four more years of junior hockey after this season before he can turn pro."

Potvin, five feet, 11 inches, 185 pounds and still growing, was eligible to play midget hockey when Long brought him up with the 67s last fall.

And Harvey wasn't the only St. Louis player impressed with Potvin following a pre-season exhibition game against the Ottawa club.

Defencemen Barclay and Bob Plager told Long following the game that they wouldn't want to be around when the teen-ager joins the NHL.

The 67s lost 9-5 and Denis had a bad afternoon.

"I know I have to improve defensively," he said.

"I can rush the puck well, but I don't do the job well enough in front of the net."

Denis is much like Orr. Both he and the Boston Bruins star are polite, well-spoken and talented.

Bob Davidson, chief scout of Toronto Maple Leafs, calls it inborn hockey sense.

"Potvin has tremendous potential," Davidson said in an interview. "But he should stay in the Junior A series to develop more."

Meanwhile, the poised youngster with the brilliant poke check may face the same tough choice between education and hockey which confronted Orr when he left Parry Sound, Ont., to join the Generals.

Sometimes, I get confused," Denis said.

"I'm in Grade 10 and it's getting harder all the time. I miss a couple of days of school when we're on the road and other times I'm just so tired, I can't study.

"I think about playing pro hockey a lot, but I don't want to get my hopes up.

Gordie Howe's HOCKEY

Who argues against money? The answer should be, and probably is, nobody. Taking it from there, I would say the National Hockey League now has a perfect format for its All-Star Game.

Money and honor or honor and money. Take your choice.

As you are probably well aware, the All-Star Game this January has money prizes. Each of the 18 players on the winning club getting $500 and $250 for each of the 18 men in the losing club.

But let's forget money for awhile. To me there is nothing quite like making the All-Star team. It's a thrill, sure, but it is more than that. There's some suspense to it. You may think you have a chance to make the team, but you never know for sure until the announcement is made. Then there is satisfaction in knowing that you are judged among the best.

I well remember back when I made it the first time. I tingled for several weeks after that. Back then, I think it was the first couple of All-Star Games I played in, the players were allowed to keep their All-Star jerseys. I liked that.

The jerseys were blue with silver stars as I remember. I know I had a couple for years and finally wore one out as my fishing sweater. The other I gave to a radio friend of mine from Saskatchewan, Beattie Martin. He wanted it as a keepsake.

Under the old format, that is prior to this year's game, the All-Stars played the Stanley Cup winners and to me most games were good ones. By that I mean they were well played. There was a tie game in 1967 when the Canadiens blanked the All-Stars, 3-0. I don't know what happened that night, nobody seemed to be going for the All-Stars and it was the first time an All-Star team was ever shut out.

Something I didn't know until just a few days ago was that there is no midseason voting this year on trophies. I can't say that I'm for or against this arrangement because it is something that can be argued both ways.

A player who has a strong first half, but who struggled in the second half could miss out under the system of balloting at the end of the season. On the other hand, and it has happened, when there was mid-season voting, players with a good first-half have built up such a lead that nobody could catch them in the second half.

One thing my years in the league have taught me, if you merit a trophy on your season's play, you generally get it. I can't remember any miscarriages of justice.

Coached by Wellstein

Batawa 'Little League' Tops.

Little League competition in the winter? Ridiculous? Not at all for the Nancy Greene Little League skiers of the Batawa Ski Club practice on weekdays after school and compete against other clubs in weekend dual meets.

The 25 members of Batawa's Little League are currently under the tutelage of Peter Wellstein, Batawa's contribution to Canada's National Ski Team.

Peter, who has returned to Batawa to allow a broken leg to mend, sits on a bench at the bottom of the ski slope and uses a megaphone to correct the skiers' faults as they come down the slopes.

Evidence that the system works was given last weekend when the Batawa youngsters played host to the Oshawa Ski Club and copped the dual meet by a score of 106 points to 91 points.

Bennett Smeets captured second place for Batawa while Neil Ackerman, John Dekker, Alfred Probst and Miss Leslie Cormack finished from fourth to seventh respectively.

The Batawa Ski Club is a non-profit club and exists primarily for the younger skier. The Little Leaguers are all under the age of 12.

The purpose of the league is to foster interest in racing and prepare a team for dual competition, which continue this weekend when the Batawa Club plays host to the Toronto Jaycees.

NHL Coaching 'Primitive' Says Lloyd Percival

WINNIPEG (CP) — Lloyd Percival, a Toronto physical fitness expert, says National Hockey League coaching methods are "primitive."

In an interview Monday, Percival said:

"A coach can't expect to be an expert on everything from his vantage point on the ice. He should have assistants who concern themselves with specialized facts of the game . . . like in football where the head coach has assistants."

A more sophisticated style of hockey would result, said Percival, author of a hockey handbook which was used as a training reference by the Soviet Union.

His criticism extends to the standard of coaches in amateur sport as well.

"Our chief need," he said, "is to develop a coaching system such as they have in the United States and many Communist countries.

"We should organize the coaching talent we have. I know of 80 well-qualified coaches who have moved to Canada from other countries but can't get their certificates."

He classifies coaching in U.S. high schools as "great." In U.S. colleges as "magnificent," in Canadian high schools as poor and in Canadian universities as "getting better."

Plaster Casts Are Easily Removed

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: How do doctors make plaster casts on people? And how do they get the casts off without cutting the person? — A. A.

A cotton covering is placed on the skin. Then strips of gauze, impregnated with the plaster material, are applied wet, so they can be moulded exactly to the shape of the limb or body. This dries quickly and forms a firm cast.

Various easy and safe ways have been devised for removing the cast. One involves a scissors-like instrument. Small electrically-driven saws with shields to prevent touching the skin also are used.

I'm no great mechanic but I believe one device works on the same principle but it moves only a very tiny distance. Then it will cut anything hard that is pressed firmly against the blade but it won't cut your finger. The reason: the motion of the blade is so small that the skin, being soft, merely presses right with the hard blade, rather than being cut.

Whatever kind of cast you are going to have, don't worry about being cut or hurt. You won't be.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I would like some information on emphysema. My son has it, and he has been offered a trip to Florida for the rest of the cold weather. Someone told him the ocean air wasn't good for him and that he might get tuberculosis. He wouldn't be living near the ocean. — Mrs. E. W. E.

That "tuberculosis" business is completely untrue and in many of thinking, an unkind thing to have said to anybody. Tuberculosis is caused by germs, not climate.

I presume that, like many other emphysema patients, your son has difficulty outdoors in cold weather — and perhaps trouble indoors if the house gets too dry. A moderate amount of humidity is helpful, and too much dryness makes it more difficult for the patient. Florida (or any other state) can't be a complete answer to his breathing problems but I see no reason why he should forego the trip.

For more information on the what, why, and how of emphysema, see my booklet, "How to Control Emphysema." For a copy send 30 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope to Dr. Thosteson, care of The Chicago Sun-Times, P. O. Box 158, Dundee Ill.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I was told that I have a heart murmur but what it means is worse than "as it isn't going anywhere," in the doctor's words. What could be mean exactly? — Mrs. E.

Simply that he has detected a gurgling or other sound in your heart, but that there is no detectable heart damage, and the sound, or murmur is not changing in character. Harmless murmurs are fairly common.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I passed a calcium oxalate kidney stone and have been advised to limit phosphorus and calcium in my diet. Should some dairy products be limited more than others? How about dry milk? Margarine? — A S.

All milk products should be limited. Margarine, a vegetable oil products, has half the calories of butter. A high water intake is important to lessen the chance of formation of more stones. Dry milk has as much calcium as regular milk.

Notes from Behind the Glass

By C.D.T.

A rink of George Peters, Vince Gallipeau, E. Jesse with Bob McInnes on the head end from CFB, Trenton, will represent this district in the Consolaa playoffs that will continue in Kingston on Monday. This district is splitting into two divisions and the Kingston east the playoffs will take place this weekend with the winners meeting in a two out of three match to decide the district winner to go into the provincial playdowns. Bob Mann and his rink from Kingston is favored to represent the eastern part of the district.

On Monday morning at the Quinte Curling Club under the direction of Bill Gault, OCA convener Glen Wager and his rink from Napanee edged d. Patterson of the Trenton Club 8-6 while in the afternoon games the Napanee rink again emerged victorious over Jim Fewell and his rink from Picton by a 9-7 count.

In the evening the CFB rink took on Napanee in the final game and although the Napanee curlers tried hard, they were no match for the precision play of every member of McInnes' rink. They won the game 11-3 and 3 ends were blank at the end of the 10th end. A large gallery followed the play throughout the two days and some excellent curling was seen.

Congratulations are due to Dr. Frank McCue, Dawson Wood, Bill Smith with Bob Bastable skipping from the Quinte Club in winning the district playoffs in the zone for division at Trenton on Sunday. The Bastable rink had a hard time to squeak in the first game when they were three down coming home with last rock against them. The Quinte rink picked up the three shots needed to tie and won in the end. Colborne threw the bye in the second game but Bastable again came through and in the final beat Del Laughlin of Cobourg. This rink will now go to Kingston to play in the district play-offs.

A rink of Vera Fairman, Betty Walmsley, Hettie Dyble with Hazel Blair skipping won the Molson trophy bonspiel played at the Quinte Curling Club on Saturday. There were 16 rinks entered from clubs from Kingston, Napanee, Kingston Gairns, Peterborough and Belleville. Hazel McNevin and her committees arranged a delightful day for the women and the draw for several door prizes made the day more enjoyable for a few of the curlers.

In second place was a rink of Mrs. Margaret Isabel Nolan, Sue Elgata with Elva Chamberlain as skip from Peterborough, while the third two-game high was a rink of Beth Shurtleff, Margaret Mc-Pherson, Anne MacDonald with Barbara French of Napanee as skip. The fourth place finisher was a rink of Carol Pearson, Loreen Sugarman, Jamie Brophy, Carolyn Boyd, Lafferty - Smith Express Lines Cup, and the Fox Cartage Cup.

All games in the spiel will be eight ends, except the finals which are scheduled for ten ends.

General chairman for the event is Max Fisk of the CFB Club. Vern Berglund also of the CFB Club has been appointed Umpire-in-chief.

Mild weather on the weekend left a few sewers in Picton in a clogged condition. Some streets were slippery as ice melted and in other areas the streets were more like ponds. Here a town workman clears a clogged sewer.

Ottawa Facing Growing Criticism Over Foreign Policy Review Delay

OTTAWA (CP)—Some informed, non-government sources here feel that Canada's foreign policy review has been going on long enough and that the time for taking decisions is at hand or should be.

Coupled with this sentiment is a rumbling discontent over the cloistered fashion in which the review is being carried out. Complaints are heard that little real attempt is being made to involve the public.

Some observers question whether Canada is being fair to its NATO allies in leaving its policy on regional defence arrangements unsettled for so long.

"I think Canada should make up its mind and soon," says Prof. Louis Sabourin, head of the centre for international cooperation at the University of Ottawa.

"We have a responsibility to tell our allies where we stand. We should stop saying our policy is under review. At the same time, the Canadian public should realise that a review is not equal to a complete change of policy."

Among some leading Conservatives there is a suspicion that the Liberal government is using the review to cover up a tendency toward drift and indecision —"waffling" was the word used by one prominent Conservative —in the foreign policy field.

In their view, nine months is ample time for a government to decide on the basic contours of its foreign policy. Prime Minister Trudeau took office nine months ago.

Prof. Sabourin notes that Mr. Trudeau has said he would like to involve the public in discussion of foreign policy. The idea of public participation necessarily takes a long time to put into effect, the professor concedes.

However, Opposition Leader Stanfield recently took the government to task for, in effect, not bringing the public into the discussion of foreign affairs.

He described as valid a point made by Stephen Clarkson in his book, An Independent Foreign Policy for Canada, that the foreign policy making process is almost completely sealed off from the normal give-and-take between public and government.

Even members of Parliament have no significant access to this "closed circuit," Mr. Stanfield said. The opposition leader referred to a "gulf" between policy and public opinion in Canada, and said external policy has become too important to leave to the external affairs department.

Other people have found it ironic that the review is being carried out, by and large, by the same external affairs department experts who have been responsible over the years for instituting the policies they now ar re-examining.

Cornwall Officials Deny Smoke Blocked Highway

CORNWALL (CP) — Truck drivers and police blamed smoke from a nearby municipal dump for adding to a heavy fog which caused a 33-car pileup on the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway that took four lives early Monday.

But city officials said only two or three small fires were burning at the dump and fog alone was responsible for poor visibility that led to the accidents.

The accidents all happened within 10 minutes on a three-quarter mile stretch of freeway near Cornwall.

In one accident, two flatbed trucks collided and burst into flames and in another, five trucks and two cars spilled across the highway.

Oscar Lemarche, a truck driver travelling east of Montreal at about 80 miles away, said he slowed down just before the accident because of the fog.

"Visibility was about 10 feet with a combination of fog and smoke coming from the industrial dump.

"I stopped the truck and got out and lit flares. Then I ran back west to flag down the other drivers. I could sense something awful was going to happen.

"Then I heard bang-bang-bang in the eastbound lane. It was like gunfire during the war.

"I felt completely helpless."

Lawyer Says Denis Asked Only If Bribe Considered

TORONTO (CP) — Counsel for Raymond Denis contended Monday that the former ministerial assistant did not offer a bribe to a representative of the United States government seeking to extradite Lucien Rivard, but rather acted only as a messenger.

The argument concerning the purpose of a conversation between Denis and Pierre Lamontagne in a Hull, Que., hotel room July 14, 1964, was discussed at length as an appeal of Denis's conviction on a charge of obstructing justice by offering a $20,000 bribe opened in the Supreme Court of Ontario.

Denis, 36, was sentenced to two years Dec. 15, 1967, but has been out on bail. He returned voluntarily to Carleton County Jail Monday.

Mr. Lamontagne, a Montreal lawyer representing the U.S. government in its efforts to extradite narcotics smuggler Rivard, claimed at the trial he was offered the money by Denis if he would not oppose bail for Rivard. Denis was executive assistant to then immigration minister Rene Tremblay.

Appeal lawyer W. B. Williston of Toronto said the evidence did not disclose an attempt to bribe. At its highest it was no more than an inquiry as to whether Mr. Lamontagne would be willing to accept a bribe.

He said it was essential for the Crown to prove Denis was actually in a position to carry out the bribe, that he actually had the money in his possession.

He said the trial judge was obliged to instruct the jury on the distinction between an attempt to commit an offence and a mere act of preparation.

He contended Mr. Lamontagne considered Denis was only a messenger.

At the trial Denis testified he never offered a bribe. He had simply inquired about extradition procedure, the facts in the case and the possibility of bail.

Mr. Williston's argument was received critically by members of the three-judge panel.

Chief Justice G. A. Gale said the defence now as arguing the interpretation of an aspect of a conversation that Denis denied.

Mr. Justice W. O. Schroeder said: "The fact that he (Denis) mentioned how payment would be made at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel in Montreal puts it far beyond the realm of a mere inquiry."

Jagan Asks Canada To Halt Recognition

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Cheddi Jagan, Guyanese opposition leader, said Monday he will urge Canada to withdraw diplomatic recognition of Guyana because of what he called fraudulence in last month's elections that returned Prime Minister Forbes Burnham to power.

The 51-year-old leader of the People's Progressive Party said he has not yet been able to arrange a meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau to discuss the matter.

Dr. Jagan, on a week-long speaking tour of Canada, showed two films to a student audience at the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education. The filigs alleged that voters' lists of Guyanese residents in New York and London were tampered with.

The films, made by the Granada Television Co. of Great Britain, showed that 94 per cent of the 36,743 overseas ballots went to Mr. Burnham's People's National Congress. The remaining 2,316 votes were divided between Dr. Jagan and Peter d'Aguir of the United Force party.

Mr. Burnham was returned to power with 30 of 53 seats while Dr. Jagan's party won 19 seats.

Swinging Mission Dances in Church

TORONTO (CP) — Rev. Brian Thresher of Kingston brought his own swinging brand of worship to Toronto Sunday, and had the congregation at St. Luke's United Church dancing in the aisles.

Mr. Thresher, who tours with a rock group called the Missions, told the evening congregation of 300: "The greatest way to show your love for God is to sing and dance."

Wearing a bright red Mao jacket and clapping to the pounding music, the ordained United Church of Canada minister strolled up and down the aisle inviting the congregation to take part.

Within seconds the aisle was full of young worshippers dancing. As young girls danced with the minister, older churchgoers watched from the pews and pedestrians peered in the door.

One elderly man put on his hat and coat and walked out.

Mr. Thresher said his group offers a "swinging service of praise." They tour the United States and Canada with their musical service, but return one Sunday a month to their Kingston parish.

"It's a happening," Mr. Thresher explained. "You just sing it out and the congregation joins in."

Is anything being done about pollution?

Yes and NHA is helping!

NHA stands for National Housing Act. This Act enables your Federal Government to work actively for better living conditions across Canada.

Today — the pollution of soil and water is posing a direct threat to health in more and more parts of our country. And it is proving a hindrance to our full enjoyment of Canada's natural resources. Pollution is a matter of concern to all of us — individuals, organizations and governments. For its part, under the NHA, the Federal Government has for several years been helping provincial and municipal authorities to finance sewage treatment facilities in many Canadian communities — large and small. And Federal grants are providing funds for basic research into the problem.

This doesn't mean, of course, that the battle has been won — that the NHA is a cure-all. But it does mean that something is being done — and that NHA is a part of it.

In short, NHA is vitally concerned not only with the home you live in, but the kind of environment your home lives in.

NEW YORK (AP) — The major television networks, by pool coverage, by individual enterprise and by meticulous planning, provided a splendid front row seat for the inauguration Monday of Richard Nixon as president of the United States.

They had cameras every where that cameras were permitted, and from the moment from his hotel quarters Monday morning until he walked into the White House as president in the late afternoon, television screens recorded his progress.

The major events—the administration of the oath of office, the inaugural speech and the long parade—were handled in smooth fashion. The extra special dimension of the day was provided by the closeups, and an occasional warm, human moment.

It was, of course, a great day for the incoming president and his family. But the omnipresence of the cameras made the role of the outgoing president difficult, even awkward.

Lyndon B. Johnson handled it well, but there were moments when every viewer must have identified with him and sympathized deeply. This viewer will remember particularly the moment when, seated in the limousine, he took a long, thoughtful look at the White House for the last time as president.

Then came the moment when he and his smiling successor arrived for the inauguration ceremonies. Johnson and his vice-president stood, almost like spectators, as reporters and broadcasters clustered around Nixon and Agnew.

There was, too, the departure of the Johnson family for Texas.

The former president, obviously moved, shook hands warmly with a crowd of well-wishers before boarding the presidential plane. The networks cut back and forth between the new president as he led the parade and the farewell drama going on at Andrews Air Force base.

Of special interest to television viewers, too, were evidence of the tight security precautions surrounding the presidential party. Even before the network announcers described an antiwar demonstration on the motorcade route to the Capitol ceremonies, you knew something was going on.

The bodies of the secret service men around the limousine tensed and they moved in protectively around the car carrying the president and the president-elect.

The inaugural balls, covered late in the evening by CBS and NBC, were pretty much of a mess. There were so many people crowded so closely together that it was impossible even to see what many of the women were wearing.

Mrs. Nixon looked pretty but as far as her gown was concerned, all one could see were some white and some glitter.

Top European Concert Pianist Presents Concert in Belleville

By EUGENE LANG

Who? (is an interrogative pronoun) — fairly common knowledge. Who is Sylvia? (a song by Schubert) — universally believed. Who is Aline Van Barentzen? That is the important question that many Bellevillians have been asking of recent days prior to last evening.

Well, Aline Van Barentzen is a seasoned concert pianist hailing from France (although born in the U.S.A.) that none of us had ever heard of. She has been at the piano a long while, having played a Beethoven Concerto at the tender age of seven, and having been the youngest student to ever have won the First Prize for Piano at the Paris Conservatoire National Superieur de Musique — this at the fragile age of eleven.

Among her teachers have been Dohnanyi at Berlin and Leschetizki in Vienna (he died in 1915) so she has had the best from her early days. She has concertized widely in Europe, North Africa and South America having over two thousand appearances to her credit.

She became Professor of Piano at the Paris Conservatoire National Superieur de Musique in 1954 and has received the highest award that France can bestow in having been decorated with the Chevalier de la Legion d'Honneur in 1966 for her services in music and culture. In 1962 she received the Chevalier des Arts et Lettres, another coveted honor from the French Government. And yet, we in Belleville — and without exception — had never heard of her at all.

But, enough of background and on to the task at hand, Madame Van Barentzen made her initial debut here last evening at the Belleville Collegiate under the auspices of the Quinte Arts Council before an audience that lacked nothing in appreciativeness though something in size.

Her program consisted of solid piano fare from the outputs of three masters for the keyboard — Schumann, Chopin, and Debussy. In her opening composition, the very difficult and lasting Etudes Symphoniques Op. 13 of Schumann she wrested from the Steinway robust power and virile strength, yet could spin softly veiled musical strands as seen in the right hand part of Etude No. III and conversely the left hand accompaniment of Etude No. XI.

Repeats were not taken at all and 4½ pages were deleted from the finale, thus shortening the length of this pyramidal favorite of all pianists, but the overall performance was very good, nothwithstanding some ponderous bass octaves that came thundering out and the overzealousness of executant in bars 4 and 5 from the end. Etudes III, VII and VIII were somewhat too heavy and forceful.

Madame Van Barentzen shone out like a brilliant star in her galactic rendition of the six Preludes from the pen of Claude Debussy. Music of this composer is different from that of any other in that the music is evoked, suggested, hinted, but hardly ever openly stated, resulting in a sense of tone colors that border on the saprofitic to the aural nostril.

Madame Van Barentzen wafted these permeations through the medium of her ten fingers deftly controlled yet vibrantly alive on the responding black and white ivory cives under her command. "Voiles" ("Sails") was a vision of soft clouds looking down on drifting boats as the floating whole tone chords were underpinned by shifting pedal meanderings.

"La Danse de Puck" (Puck's Dance) was given a whimsical characterization in mock illusions. "Bruyeres" (Heathlands) turned out to be an exotic Gallic view (both as to creator and recreator) of the land of the heather.

"La Puerta del Vino" (Wine Gate) was envisaged in a habanera rhythm with harmonic clashes that the artist conveyed with deft pedaling and voluptuous painting. "La terrasses des audiences de clair de lune" (The terrace for moonlight audience) was shaded in a lunar softness of delicate passage work.

"Feux d'Artifice" (Fireworks) concluded the group with dazzling pianisms in grueling gyrations that culminated in end to end glissandos of eye catching appeal. Al in all the pianist use virtuosity for its own sake in the Debussy, but made sure that the message was master to the tortuous technique involved. Superb in every detail.

Five compositions by Chopin concluded the rewarding recital. The Fantaisie in F Minor, Op. 49 was portrayed in the grand manner with large-loud brush sweeps cascading over the piano in passionate abandon.

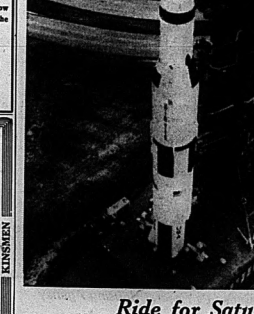
Only the B Major lento section seemed to be b'ock-ed out into metric countings, but the conceptual realization was overpowering in McAdame's consummate command of this masterwork. Two Etudes (The Black Key) and (The Aeolian Harp) were given glittering (in the first) and undulating (in the second) performances, with the lovely false accents in the latter imperceptibly, yet not missed (at least by these ears) in handling of same by Madame.

The F sharp major Nocturne was sensitive and nostalgic except once when our soloist seemed out of hand and pounded one base octave that shattered whem it should have shuddered. The familiar Polonaise Op. 53 ("Heroic") was whipped up in a manner of manly mascularity that fittingly brought an excellent recital to its denouement.

One encore, the delightful mazurka like Waltz in F in Major OP. 70 No. 1 came through with etched clarity in the facile runs and sparkling melodiousness in the pivotal middle section.

Summing up, Our septuagenerian artist stamped indelibly on all minds that the sunset years must be the best — she proved it in every aspect — her playing, her love of life, as exemplified by talking to her later, and the rigorous schedule that she maintains year after year in travelling thousands of miles to bring her superb artistry of the piano to many of people (like the Belleville audience) who had never heard of Madame Aline Van Barentzen, a pianist to be reckoned with. Community Concerts of New York — take note.

Following the recital Madame Van Barentzen and guests were entertained at the home of Mrs. Charles Wilson, 256 Bridge Street East, While in Belleville Madame Van Barentzen was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Rennie, 12 Eleanor Gardens.



BONARLAW — The cubs of Bonarlaw met their regular Cub meeting with the boys' parents attending.

The highlight of the evening was the investing of the five boys into the Scout Iroquois and Mrs. Wendy Ackers was invested as a Cub leader.

Joe Irish spoke to the boys on their Scout Law and Promise, before he invested the boys. Mrs. Don Leonard helped J. Irish in the investiture of Mrs. Ackers.

Presents were then given out to the boys and the Scouts made presents for their parents. Refreshments were served to the boys by the leaders and parents.

Trudeau Subject to Criticism For Performance in London

OTTAWA (CP)—Like a tall, stern schoolmaster, Opposition Leader Stanfield dressed down Prime Minister Trudeau Monday for his performance at the Commonwealth conference in London.

It appeared, he said, that never in Commonwealth history had Canada "made a contribution less important and less useful."

"I do not think any leader of the Opposition has ever had occasion in the past to reproach the government of this country in any way in this connection, and, if I may say so, I hope it will not be necessary again."

NDP and Creditiste spokesmen joined in to make it a rough return to the Commons for the prime minister after his first official foreign trip as Canadian leader.

David Lewis, NDP parliamentary house leader, accused the prime minister of "uncommitted dilettantism" and said his London performance added up to "one big zero."

Mr. Stanfield spoke of an "attitude of casual non-involvement and non-commitment" that also threatened to become a government tradition at home.

He also said the prime minister had been guilty of "inexcusable talent" in suggesting police surveillance of Canadian reporters, even if the remark had been meant in a light-hearted way.

But in fact the remark had not been light-hearted, and he found it deeply disturbing.

Rene Matte (Creditiste-Champlain) said London newspapermen noticed what Canadians have known since the election last June—"that the prime minister is a tremendous disappointment."

Mr. Trudeau's troubles began almost as soon as he announced that he would report briefly on the Commonwealth meeting.

"Were you there?" one MP asked.

"Where the hell were you?" Mr. Trudeau shot back.

"We weren't invited."

"And you never will, I may tell you that."

The prime minister went on to discribe the meeting as a successful and significant one with free and frank exchanges.

He said he was deeply disappointed with the lack of success of a Canadian attempt outside the conference to convince Biafran representatives to accept Nigerian representatives in an effort to end their civil war.

And in connection with his trip to Rome after the conference, he said Canada is anxious to open diplomatic relations with the Vatican.

Mr. Stanfield said Canada in the past has played a leading role in the Commonwealth, and other members were disappointed by the lack of Canadian leadership at the most recent meeting.

"It would not be surprising if there had grown among other members of the world community a concern that Canada might similarly abstain from other international responsibilities that it has heretofore assumed," he said.

There seemed to be little doubt that Canada has contributed to a weakening of the Commonwealth.

Mr. Trudeau had tried to excuse his role on the ground that he was a 'new boy.'

"He may be a new boy in the Commonwealth, but Canada is not.

"In any case I have too much respect for the prime minister to find him believable in this self-assumed pose as the innocent abroad as far as the Commonwealth is concerned."

Along with Mr. Lewis, Mr. Stanfield drew unfavorable comparisons between Mr. Trudeau's performance, and that of his predecessors, John Diefenbaker and Lester B. Pearson.

Both opposition leaders also questioned Mr. Trudeau's actions on the question of sending diplomatic representation to the Vatican.

Mr. Stanfield said the opposition had been given to understand that the matter was still under review.

"While not wishing to carp, I am surprised that the prime minister has taken this initiative after having expressed doubts, in an offhand way perhaps, some weeks ago about the usefulness of existing methods of diplomacy."

Mr. Lewis said both Mr. Trudeau and External Affairs Minister Sharp had emphasized involvement of the people in a review of international policies.

Yet he apparently had made a decision on the Vatican representation without any warning to the people.

A reason Mr. Trudeau was reported to have given for the step, the large number of Roman Catholics in Canada, is irrelevant, Mr. Lewis said.

It might well be useful to have relations with the Vatican, "but not on the basis of religious division in Canada or across the world."

Winter Lake Navigation Possible But Not Wanted

OTTAWA (CP) — Most inland ship operators appear to have little interest in efforts to extend the navigation season on the Great Lakes, Brig.-Gen. Robert M. Tarbox, U.S. Army engineer, said Monday.

Gen. Tarbox told the annual joint conference of the Dominion Marine Association and the U.S. Lake Carriers' Association that some degree of winter navigation is possible if it is wanted badly enough.

"Weather will not always prevent operations, but simply complicate them," he said.

Safe operation under severe winter conditions "can be achieved."

However, a majority of the bulk cargo vessels now operating on the Great Lakes are "not designed or constructed for operation under winter ice conditions."

Gen. Tarbox said the engineers and coast guard had attempted to extend the season by keeping waters for the benefit of a few who wanted it extended. But "the great majority of operators" appeared to lack interest in the project.

Gen. Tarbox is division engineer of the U.S. Corps of Engineers for the north central division. The corps is responsible for maintenance of the U.S. parts of the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes system.

The engineer's Detroit district has undertaken a study of water-way de-icing methods to see just how practical and economical it would be to extend the navigation season on the Great Lakes and the St. Lawrence seaway.

Garrison Continues With Trial

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The state abandoned Monday its effort to delay the trial of Clay L. Shaw, 55, wealthy retired New Orleans businessman, charged with conspiring to murder President John F. Kennedy.

Assistant District Attorney James Alcock withdrew the state's motion for continuance at a hearing before Criminal District Court Judge Edward J. Haggerty and said the state would be ready to go with the long delayed trial scheduled to start today.

District Attorney Jim Garrison's office had filed for the trial delay Friday contending that the federal government was withholding evidence vital to the case.

Garrison contends there was a New Orleans-based conspiracy in assassinating President John F. Kennedy in 1963. The Warren commission findings said the late Lee Harvey Oswald acted alone in shooting Kennedy and that it found no credible evidence of a conspiracy.

Pelletier Says Judy Inaccurate

OTTAWA (CP) — The government indicated Monday it would not try to block any investigation by the Commons broadcasting committee into allegations against the CBC by Judy LaMarsh, former state secretary.

State Secretary Gerard Pelletier said the committee can determine its own course of action and the government is impatient to hear any additional information Miss LaMarsh can give.

Mr. Pelletier described as "without basis" a charge by Miss LaMarsh that former CBC president Alphonse Ouimet delayed from a report an allegation that CBC employees were taking kickbacks on films bought in th U.S.

He added in reply to questions by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield that the government could conduct an inquiry concerning the alleged kickbacks if it had more detail.

John Reid (L—Kenora-Rainy River), chairman of the broadcasting committee, told Mr. Stanfield he will consult the steering committee on whether Miss LaMarsh should be called before the full committee to substantiate her charges.

Opposition MPs Not Impressed By Quality of Bill Amendments

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs were not impressed Monday with the quality of government legislation placed before them.

Despite the grumbling the Commons gave second reading and sent off to committee for clause-by-clause readings a bill to amend the Canada Evidence Act and the Historic Sites and Monuments Act.

A third bill aimed at reducing drug prices by increasing competition was still under debate at the 10 p.m. adjournment. It will lead off House business today.

Lawyer Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) said he could not see the urgency in the amendments to the Canada Evidence Act. They dealt with changes in rules of evidence concerning hostile witnesses, expert witnesses, affadavits and other matters.

"It seems to me that our best procedure would have been to allow the standing committee on justice to examine the proposed changes in order that the entire Canada Evidence Act could be considered," said the leading Conservative spokesman on legal matters.

Walter Dinsdale (PC—Brandon-Souris) said the proposed amendments to the Historic Sites and Monuments Act were "minor" and complained that the Commons was being asked to go into labor "to produce a mouse."

These changes increased the historic sites committee to 15 from 14 members and would give cabinet the power to raise their $50-a-day payment while on government work.

Mr. Dinsdale said Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien should have brought in more sweeping changes. For example, he suggested that the historic sites and monument section of Mr. Chretien's department be brought under the administrative section as the national monuments and the national battlefields.

Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) also had some unkind words for the bill to amend the Patent Act, the Trade Marks Act and the Food and Drugs Act.

She said the bill didn't go far enough to combat high drug prices. While it was a start, it was only "crumbs when what we need is a whole loaf."

Justice Minister Turner told the Commons that he is leading a study that could mean a complete overhaul of the Canada Evidence Act.

He said the rules governing what evidence may be admitted in Canadian courts have been "frozen." It was time to adopt them to the computer age.

But the changes he proposed were too urgent to await the study.

One change would allow lawyers to call as many expert witnesses as they wanted. Now, to call more than five, lawyers must so indicate at the start of a trial.

Another change would allow lawyers to cross-examine their own witness.

Mr. Woolliams said the changes seemed to favor the Crown. He promised more detailed criticism of them in committee.

Ran Harding (NDP—Kootenay West) was unsuccessful in his attempt to get government funds for a Nancy Greene ski memorial for Rossland, B.C. Mr. Christian said Miss Greene, a gold medal winner for Canada in the Winter olympics, was much too lively and much too young to be turned into an historic site.

Campers, Rescuers Swept to Deaths in California Floods

OJAI, Calif. (Reuters) — Six boy campers and four men who were trying to rescue them from floods were all washed off a navy bulldozer carrying them to safety and were presumed drowned, police said early today.

Another man riding with the group, who was rescued by a police helicopter, said the 10 others aboard the bulldozer were swept off one by one by rising waters as the vehicle stuck in mud.

Included among those presumed dead were six boys ranging in age from 10 to 14, from Canoga Park, a North Los Angeles suburb, their adult guardian, a sheriff's deputy and two others who went to rescue them.

The boys, camping in the Los Padres mountain park, were stranded by rains which have lashed Southern California for three days.

The boys' parents arranged for the rescue team, equipped with a huge bulldozer which is being tested by the navy for use in Vietnam, to bring back the youths.

The bulldozer got stuck in mud while attempting to cross Sespe Creek here at midnight Monday night and was held there as the creek built into a torrent.

Sheriff's officers said the man rescued in the area told them he was riding the tractor across the creek with the others and was washed off.

John Scott Eckersley, 28, said he was knocked unconscious and, when he came to, the others were gone.

On the basis of Eckersley's story, Sheriff's Deputy John McKinley said: "We are listing 10 people as missing and presumed lost."

Eckersley was treated for shock at Ojai Community Hospital and released.

He said he had been hiking in the area when he came across the marooned group before the rescue party arrived.

In trying to manoeuvre the tractor across Sespe Creek, an estimated six feet deeper than normal after steady rains, Eckersley said the heavy machine's engine died in midstream.

A torrent of water overturned the tractor, Eckersley said, washing him unconscious onto a bank.

The boys were identified as Ronnie Castle, 13; Bobby Castle, 14; Frank Donato, 13; John Raub, 14; Donnie Salsbury, 10, and Eddie Salsbury, 12, and their leader as Robert Samples, 43.

The three searchers who reached them Monday were identified as Sheriff's Deputy Chester Larson, Navy Chief Petty Officer Bob Sears and U.S. Forest Ranger Jim Greenhill.

The Southern California storms have taken a mounting death toll, particularly on the roads, with 20 road fatalities blamed on the storm in Los Angeles County alone.

For the first time in recorded history, the weather bureau said every one of its California stations reported rain Tuesday.

As flood-stricken cities called for aid, Gov. Ronald Reagan signed a declaration of emergency enabling the state to release funds and seek federal money.

A 18-inch total downpour hit the Ojai-San Luis Obispo area of west-central California, trapping the six boys and four men.

Eckersley, in describing the tragedy, said:

"Water was rising up over us. One by one, we got numb from the cold and just slipped away.

"The chief was the first to go. Finally, there were just two of us, the sheriff and me."

Standing atop the tractor with water up to their necks, said Eckersley, "He fell back on me, and I went down a few times and hit my head but managed finally to get to the river bank."

Military helicopters were ready to fly into the area as soon as rain subsided.

Meanwhile, slackening rain was reported in the state.

No Agenda For Talks

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnam's speedy agreement to begin substantive peace talks Saturday appeared a hopeful omen to some U.S. officials today, but they warned again that long and difficult bargaining lies ahead.

This was apparent in an editorial of the official Hanoi newspaper Nhan Dan.

The only way to halt the Vietnam war, said Nhan Dan, is for the United States to comply with Hanoi's four-point program and the five NLF demands — an end to American "aggression in Vietnam," withdrawal of all non-Vietnamese troops and liquidation of their bases, non-interference in South Vietnam's political future and South Vietnam's eventual reunification with the North.

U.S. chief negotiator Henry Cabot Lodge and Saigon's No. 1 man at the table Pham Dang Lam, are expected to suggest that the talks first concentrate on a general military de-escalation, beginning with the demilitarized zone and spreading south along South Vietnam's border with Laos and Cambodia.

U.S. officials appear to expect that there will be no wrangling over procedures and the agenda and even that there will be no agenda. They think that the talks could develop quickly into a free-swinging series of meetings, with each side bringing up subjects for discussion as it rates them in importance.

Lodge is expected to spend the next two days briefing the senior U.S. delegation staff on the line the Nixon administration will pursue. It also will study conference documents and consult with the South Vietnamese delegates.

Tearful Girl Asks Czechs To Halt Protest

PRAGUE (CP) — Prague Radio said that a 22-year-old locksmith set himself afire during the night in the town of Brno, at a square where a memorial to Jan Palach had been erected.

It was the third attempt by a Czech at suicide by fire in seven a week, but Palach's is the only one so far for which a political motive has been established.

The locksmith, Miroslav Stalinka, suffered second-degree burns over about 12 per cent of his body and is in good condition, the broadcast said.

Palach, a 21-year-old student, set himself afire in Prague last Thursday to protest the reversal of the country's reform program as a result of the Soviet occupation. He died Sunday.

Palach's suicide note had said other students were ready to burn themselves, starting Tuesday, until press censorship was lifted and the Soviet occupation force stopped distributing the propaganda publication Zprawy. But there were no immolations in Prague during the night.

A girl-friend of Palach's went on television Tuesday night and appealed to other students not to stage more protest suicides.

Helenka Zahradnikova burst into tears as she said: "I speak to the boys in the group with Jan Palach, don't do it. It's not worth it."

"It's something about peace talks that lasted 1,000 years!"

Off-track Betting Appealed

TORONTO (CP) — Operators of Toronto's off-track messenger services say they intend to conduct business as usual despite a decision by the provincial government Tuesday to appeal an Ontario Court of Appeal ruling making the services legal.

The six operators say they will carry on until they receive a directive from Attorney-General Arthur Wishart.

The attorney-general's department will apply to the Supreme Court of Canada next Tuesday for leave to appeal the decision handed down Jan. 8. If the court decides to hear the appeal, dates will be set later in the year.

De Gaulle Plans To Fill Mandate

PARIS (Reuters) — President de Gaulle said today he has no intention of stepping down from the presidency before the end of his mandate in 1972.

The 78-year-old president made a statement about his political intentions to the weekly cabinet meeting amid speculation over recent remarks by former premier Georges Pompidou on Pompidou's possible candidacy for the presidency.

"I have the intention and the duty to fulfil my mandate until it expires," de Gaulle told his ministers.

Pompidou, who said he was surprised by the speculation, appeared anxious to ward off any misinterpretation of his remarks. He insisted that he did not know de Gaulle's intentions and would never consider challenging him.

Montreal Crime 'Not Excessive'

MONTREAL (CP) — Police Director Jean-Paul Gilbert says Montreal, despite a rash of bombing incidents and gangland slayings in 1968, did not experience a crime increase to compare with other major North American cities.

Total number of crimes rose 4.5 per cent over the previous year, by comparison with an increase of 13 per cent in Toronto, he said.

Director Gilbert told a meeting of the Canadian-Italian Businessmen's Association Tuesday that the 35 slayings in Montreal in 1968 represented a rate of 2.5 per 100,000, compared with a rate of 7.5 in major U.S. cities like Washington, Detroit and New York.

"These crimes always receive broad publicity in the press and because there is an immediate solution, they result in severe criticism for the police."

He said 1,515 robberies with violence were committed in the city while 13,980 were committed in Chicago and 8,281 in Los Angeles—cities with twice the population of Montreal.

Montreal also had four times less car thefts than Chicago.

The most notable increase was in juvenile delinquency, as 8,064 young offenders appeared before the courts and 6,712 were placed in detention homes, representing increases of 10 and 54 per cent respectively.

Yukon Pilot W. C. Grant Flies 5,000 Hours

Busy Pilot

Moon Trip Short Jaunt

By ELMER BONTER
(Staff Reporter)

TRENTON (Staff) — Aircraft pilot W. G. Bill Grant may never land on the moon or fly around it, but he's travelled four times the distance involved in making the return journey in his career as a Yukon pilot.

Recently Major Grant the operations officer of 437 squadron CFB Trenton became the Tryston Squadron's first member of the Yukon pilot's 5000 hour club and received a gold pin and scroll in recognition.

At the Yukon's average flying speed of 400 mph it means he has travelled in flight two million miles over world air routes. A lot of the time he logged while serving in United Nation's peacekeeping role with the Canadian Forces.

Major Grant acquired as many more flying hours starting with the Tiger Moth training in 1942 and considerable duty as a North Star pilot with the RCAF after his overseas tour in World War II. His total experience as a pilot covers in excess of 10,000 hours.

Asked whether he'd encountered any real emergencies in his long association with flying he replied: "Let's say there has always been hard runway under me on all the landings so far."

He said he would definitely choose flying as a career if he had the chance to do everything over again.

He is a native of Vancouver who makes Trenton home for his wife and five children.

Cosmonauts Get Royal Welcome

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet Union's four Soyuz cosmonauts arrived in Moscow today to hugs and kisses from Kremlin leaders and a triumphal welcome from thousands of Russians after the historic link-up last week of two manned spaceships in orbit.

The four—Cols. Vladimir Shatalov, Yevgeny Khrunov and Boris Volynov and civilian scientist Alexei Yeliseyev—flew to the capital with a jet fighter escort from the Baikonur Cosmodrome in Central Asia.

Vnukovo-2 airport was gay with flags and brightly-colored slogans welcoming the spacemen from Soyus 4 and Soyus 5 and hailing their feat as a triumph for communism.

The four marched from their plane along a red carpet to the reviewing stand where they reported to Brezhnev and Podgorny on the success of their mission.

Fire Averted At City Plant

A fire threat came a full freak circle at a big Belleville industrial plant this morning.

Fire department officials still are marvelling at a chain reaction of circumstances that may have saved Wilson Concrete Products' offices from heavy damage.

Firemen tell it this way:

Sometime during the night fire broke out in the motor of a steam-driven fan in an office hallway. It was burning the surrounding wall area when suddenly the motor dropped on pipes feeding steam to the apparatus.

The plumbing caved, spurting clouds of steam in the air, and dousing the fire.

The threat was revealed when employees arrived at the offices this morning.

Damage was estimated at $4,000.

Students Plan Play

For its 1969 production Nicholson's drama club has chosen a long - standing favorite of theatre audiences: Arsenic and Old Lace.

The play has lost no popularity since it was launched down the years at its Broadway premiere in 1941. Enroute it has been turned into a successful movie.

Its characters, headed by two eccentric spinsters intent on doing good even if it kills the recipients of their intentions, have delighted theatre goers ever since.

Books Removed From School

The library collection was removed from Sir Mackenzie Bowell School in December, leaving only four schools in the city serviced by the public library. They are Hillcrest, Parkdale, Prince of Wales and Sir John A. Macdonald.

Books circulated to borrowers totalled 19,623 during Dec. Of these, 11,267 were borrowed by adults and 8,356 by children.

The main library enrolled 107 new members and the east branch 24. Children's registrations totalled 60.

"Book orders were slow arriving and in Dec. hundreds of books were received and catalogued," Miss Olive Delaney, chief librarian, said in her report.

The inter-library loan service, to libraries within the region, continues to grow, she said, and in Dec. 57 requests were received for books to be mailed to the libraries concerned.

Hong Kong Flu Not Here Yet

It's a long way from Hong Kong — even for an ambitious virus.

And as far as Belleville is concerned, it's been a wasted trip so far this year for the Hong Kong flu bug.

At least, a bug hopeful of epidemic results.

A survey by public health authorities shows current absenteeism in schools and industry does not reflect any epidemic situation.

"We haven't got any problem at all," assures Dr. C. R. Lesk, health officer for Hastings and Prince Edward counwould not be long-lived.

The rate of absenteeism is not above 10 per cent — for all causes including colds and influenza.

In fact, says Dr. Lesk, absenteeism from industry and the classroom has been "well below" the 10 per cent mark in recent weeks.

Any serious outbreak of influenza would surge the figures upwards while an epidemic would double or triple the number of absentees.

Thus far, no cases of the Hong Kong flu strain have been positively reported in the Quinte district.

This does not spell immunity, however.

Identification requires laboratory tests.

Meantime, a ban on visitors went into force at Belleville General Hospital yesterday.

The ban was announced Saturday as precautionary measure because of the prevalence of flu in the community. It was imposed on advice of the BGH medical staff.

Hospital authorities today were hopeful the regulation

Computers Discussed

On Monday, the Bay of Quinte Chapter of the Society of Industrial Accountants held its monthly dinner meeting.

The program director, Capt. Stu Yake of CFB Trenton, introduced two experts who discussed computers and the accountants role. They pointed out that in some companies data processing is the responsibility of the accountant.

In order to cope with these responsibilities the accountants are required to know what data the other departments of the company require to be processed.

The computer can rapidly provide the accountant with information which would have been time - consuming, and, therefore, allows the accountant time for more managerial responsibilities. George Lewis of Erie Technological Products Ltd., thanked the speakers.

Regional Government At Least 3 Years Away

Regional government will not become a reality in Hastings county for at least three years, according to Hastings MPP Clarke T. Rollins.

At the inaugural meeting of Hastings county council yesterday, Mr. Rollins said he had been assured of this by Municipal Affairs Minister, Hon. Darcy McKeough.

He quoted Mr. McKeough as saying that careful study and consideration with respect to regional boundaries and other matters would be needed before regional government could be instituted in this area.

Stirling Reeve Donald Rodgers, 51, a veteran of many years in municipal life, was named county warden at the inaugural meeting.

In his inaugural address, Warden Rodgers said that evolution and communication had done much to bring about political and economic change in the country.

He believed, however, the basic reason for the more recent changes in communities had been the advancement of communication.

The motor car, aeroplane, rockets, radio, the press and television had accelerated the lines of communication so rapidly that communities had been hard pressed to keep pace.

Mr. Rodgers said in the past few years major changes had taken place in Ontario and in Hastings and we are led to believe we must consider more.

"I believe that some of these changes have been so rapid that communication is lagging," he said.

In the coming year, Warden Rodgers said he would ask council for assistance in revitalizing its lines of communication, "not only among ourselves — which is most important — but with our neighbors.

"We, in Hastings, have seen the culmination of many achievements and can be justly proud of what has been accomplished . . ." he said. "We are proud also to be citizens of historic Hastings and must continue to work to seek the rewards our citizens have the right to expect."

"In Canada our country has attained recognition because we have had strong stable governments with which citizens have felt they could communicate."

"I say that the day you take the involvement of the people out of government, and sever their lines of communication, on that day you no longer have representative government."

Rev. Bruce Small of St. Paul's United Church, Stirling, pronounced invocation at the inaugural session and later called for continued public interest in government matters.

"You can't have good government unless the people are willing to act in this service," he said.

Mrs. Katherine MacGillivray Discusses Men's Fashions

Sales and Ad Speaker

High Style Boost to Male Confidence

A gray flannel fig leaf!

That was the subject of Katherine McGillivray's speech last night to the members of the Belleville Sales and Ad Club.

In other words - - - men's fashions.

Colors, novel styles, long hair, beards, moustaches were all applauded by the Public Relations Director for the Allied Chemical Company Ltd. of Canada.

Mrs. McGillivray, the only female guest speaker to speak at the club in the past few years, traced the history of men's fashions through the past centuries and questioned why colors and high styles vanished during the 18th, 19th and 20th centuries.

The female PR director verbally blasted that "western myth which says there is something effeminate about colorful clothing" as she historically traced the progressions of men's fashions through the ages.

High style clothing with an individualistic touch, according to Mrs. McGillivray, gives males a self confidence and svelte that they normally do not possess.

BGH Costs Up; County Share Same

The total cost of the new Belleville General Hospital addition has increased to about $9,100,000 from the original estimate of $8,657,554, but the cost of the county is still well within the amount originally pledged by Hastings county council.

County Clerk-Treasurer and Administrator Carl Bateman told council yesterday that the county's share of the hospital project will be between $1,550,000 and $1,600,000 or well within the $1,680,000 originally pledged by the county.

The net share of the overall costs to be borne by the city and the county is estimated at $5,027,571, plus certain administrative and financing expenses.

The reference to hospital costs was made by Mr. Bateman yesterday in his report to council at the inaugural session.

Mr. Bateman said from time to time it had been suggested to him that the hospital construction program was costing far more than had been anticipated.

However, the construction project had been completely reviewed and although costs had risen to approximately $9,100,000, increased revenues from other sources would keep the county's net share to within the original estimate.

The additional revenue was made up of government loans and grants and contributions from service and other organizations. Mr. Bateman said.

The Belleville Kiwanis Club contributed nearly $34,000 from its walkathon last autumn, while the Women's Hospital Auxiliary had pledged $40,000.

This year's Hastings county council has five new faces among its members.

They are Gordon Wilman, Leonard Walsh and Stan Cassidy, deputy reeves of Sidney, Tyendinaga and Hungerford townships, Albert Vader, reeve of Wollaston and Kenneth Fisk reeve of Herschel township.

Bounty Is Sought On Hybrid Wolves

Over the years, wolves and the payment of wolf bounty, have been a matter of spirited discussion by members of Hastings county council and this year apparently is no exception.

The subject cropped up again yesterday at the inaugural session — the question this time being whether or not bounty should be paid on hybrid wolves.

After 15 minutes discussion council voted to concur with an Ontario county resolution, calling for amendment of the wolf bounty act to provide for payment of bounty on such animals.

But the question worrying some of the councillors was how you identify hybrid wolves.

It remained for wolf expert Reeve Charles Gordanier of Deloro to spell out what a hybrid wolf really was.

But at the same time Mr. Gordanier said he felt if payment of bounty on hybrid wolves was approved the province would be paying a lot of bounty on dogs."

His definition of a hybrid wolf was a cross between a coyote and a dog. Timber wolves will not mate with dogs, Mr. Gordanier said.

But whether or not hybrid wolves are really wolves, they apparently kill a lot of sheep and deer.

Thurlow Reeve Borden Forsythe said the hybrid wolves were actually more cunning and daring than the real wolves. He said these animals run and kill deer merely for the sport.

Bancroft Deputy Reeve Earl Hawley said in his area deer brought down by wolves which had eaten only parts of the rear quarters and then left the deer to die.

Deer hunters meant considerable revenue for North Hastings "but we don't need the wolves," he said.

Tax Rate Won't Change

AMELIASBURG—The time is fast approaching for council to bring in its 1969 budget.

Meanwhile, for those taxpayers inclined to speculate on an increase in the mill rate for this year, Reeve George Cunningham's advice is "stop fretting."

Reeve Cunningham foresees no change in the 1968 rate of 17.371 mills, although three months remain before all spending estimates are complete.

In fact, he said the economy of the township is in a very healthy condition. Credit is due, he explained, to continuing new residential construction, which began in earnest 10 years ago.

Ameliasburg's total assessment stands at the $18,205,900 mark, a record high and a target for the other nine municipalities in Prince Edward County to shoot at. An additional $378,000 in new assessment from residential building was applied to the rolls last year.

At the present time Ameliasburg, with very little industry in comparison, provides the county with as much tax money from its assessment as the town of Picton. The county's third best contributor from taxes is Sophiasburg township with the Lake Ontario Cement assessment ($9 millions) as a major portion of its total.

Presidential Rhetoric

"We have found ourselves rich in goods but ragged in spirit; reaching with magnificent precision for the moon but failing into raucous discord here on earth. . ."

Thus spoke President Richard Nixon of the United States in his inaugural address in Washington. The U.S. has had many orators among its presidents, from Abraham Lincoln and his immortal Gettysburg Oration to John Kennedy and his stirring, youthful rhetoric.

"Ask not what your country can do for you, but rather what you can do for your country," Kennedy said.

Nor was outgoing President Johnson found wanting in this regard. Where words would have failed many a man, Mr. Johnson's eulogy to Mr. Kennedy following the Dallas assassination in 1963 was as brief as it was, in the circumstances, in good taste.

"We have suffered a loss," Mr. Johnson said in part, "that cannot be measured. . ."

Of course, the United States is going to need more than mere words to pull itself out of the mire of discord at home and trouble overseas. Still, what a man has to say, and how he says it, tells a lot about his personality. And Richard Nixon, though still comparatively young in years, is an old campaigner. He should give the presidency, as well as the nation, new life and fresh purpose.

Expo Throwback

Expo 67, according to Mayor McFarland of Picton, was a "waste of money."

That it was a costly event, and ended up with a formidable deficit no one can deny. Expo would have finished less in the red if, for instance, passengers on the minirail had been charged a small amount for the ride.

Be that as it may, there are some things in life that are beyond price. Expo was one of them. As Mayor Drapeau of Montreal said, Expo was a "spiritual experience." And since there is little in our increasingly materialist and automized society that has much to do with the spirit we can count ourselves fortunate in that regard.

Without Expo, Canadians would never have come to know themselves as they did, or gained such insight into their own lives and the lives of others. We would just have been muddling along as before, in the shade of the United States, wondering who we were and where we were going.

Through Expo, Canada achieved identity. It was the year this country came of age — and never mind the cost.

Arab Belligerency

The CBC of late has been giving considerable publicity to the activities of Arab guerrillas training for resumption of hostilities against Israel. In news bulletins and again the other night, in The Way It Is, viewers have been treated to film of militant Arabs going through their paces at secret training camps.

Why all this emphasis on the Arab side of the always dangerous Middle East confrontation, which already involves the big power blocs and one day could be the spark for a third world war.

The CBC has been accused of leftist leanings and this is reflected by the content of news bulletins and documentary programs. That being so, it may not be without significance that since the defeat of the Arab armies a couple of summers ago they have been re-equipped by the Soviet Union to the point that they are once again adopting a belligerent pose towards Israel.

Significant too is the fact that some of those same communist-supplied weapons, specifically sub machine guns, were seen in the hands of the guerrilla trainees in The Way It Is Sunday night.

The Hijack Game

The absurdities of the aircraft hijack game are increasing daily. One of the latest diversions to Cuba involved an Ecuadorean aircraft en route to Guayaquil from Miami and Quito. The aircraft had landed on schedule at Quito and was on the last leg of its flight when the pilot reported a gunman had forced his way into the cockpit and ordered him to fly to Havana. Out of consideration to both passengers and crew, this particular hijacker might have made his move much earlier. As it was, the plane had to turn around and refuel at Barranquilla in Colombia for the long haul back to Havana. Hijackings have become so frequent it is about time airline authorities took counter measures. The most obvious — and safest — plan would be to search all passengers and their hand baggage prior to take-off on all routes within easy reach of Cuba.

Experienced Observer's Warning

Marijuana Users Can be 'Hooked' Says Drug Authority

DAVID WILKERSON, widely-known for his work among youth as executive director of Teen Challenge in New York City, is also an authority on narcotics and their effects on users. His work frequently addicts during the past decade has brought him wide recognition from governmental and private organizations. In the following article in the Teen Challenge Newsletter, reprinted from The Pentecostal Evangel, he expresses the belief that marijuana is "the most dangerous drug used today."

Recently a report on marijuana was issued by 17 researchers from a famous university. They based their conclusions on interviews with 100 marijuana using young people over a period of one year.

The main conclusion was: marijuana had not only failed to harm these users, but had been good for them. The smokers, they said, were keener, dressed better, and had gained more insights into human nature and more knowledge of the world than their non-smoking companions. The report also suggested that, through marijuana, these young people had been kept from alcohol and harder drugs.

When I read that report on the front page of the Los Angeles Times I was shocked and horrified: for I knew the effect it might have on millions of teenagers.

I disagree totally with the current permissive attitude toward marijuana. I consider marijuana the most dangerous drug used today.

I have been working with drug addicts for 10 years. At Teen Challenge we have counseled 2,000 of them — as many in any private agency in the world. What the "experts" who think they know all the answers don't know is this: 90 percent of all the drug addicts we have ever treated began with marijuana and then graduated to something harder. We ask each of these addicts how they got started on the route to narcotics and almost always the answer is: "I took a stick of pot."

Proponents of the use of marijuana continually stress that there is little lasting physiological harm occurring in its use. Some of the investigators claim they took the drug without serious after effects, but the chronic user does develop a psychological dependence which causes him to lose control and precipitate a pattern of compulsive abuse.

I can tell you from firsthand experience that marijuana users become just like "hooked" users, persons addicted to heroin. Chronic marijuana users lose their motivation and develop antisocial tendencies which often lead to violent antisocial behavior. After touring the hippie sections of cities all over the world, I am convinced that many of the runaways are "drug burns", who try to sponge a living while giving nothing in return.

I know what marijuana does. It breaks down resistance to drugs. It paves the way to alcoholism and drug addiction. It destroys moral values, especially sex standards.

Marijuana is not an aphrodisiac but it does influence sexual response by releasing moral restraints. This makes marijuana attractive to college students who have developed promiscuous sexual patterns.

Marijuana speeds up heart action, dilates the pupils of the eyes, and slows muscle response. It increases laziness and antisocial attitudes. It destroys inhibitions, impairs judgment, gives a person a feeling of greater capability than he actually has, and distorts his sense of time and space.

That's a perfect setup for automobile wrecks. A good many accidents today are caused by pot-smoking teenagers careening down a highway while they listen to someone on the car radio saying that marijuana isn't harmful!

There's a substance in marijuana known as THC that can produce illusions, delusions, and hallucinations. One pot-smoker thought he stood outside himself and watched himself shrink, die, and be buried. A father of young marijuana smoker confessed, "When I am up on weed, I'm really living. I float up and up until I am miles above the earth. Then I begin to come apart. My fingers leave my hands; my hands leave my wrists; my arms and legs leave my body; and I just float till over the universe."

Enough. THC will produce psychotic reactions; which means that fooling around with marijuana can definitely affect the mind.

The marijuana smoker often wears "teashades" (dark sunglasses worn because of the dilated pupils). Through these he enters his own world to meditate on the beauties of art, nature and music. Or he may simply step out of an 18-story window to pick up a butterfly on the lawn below!

My advice to young people is: the first stick of pot you smoke is a symptom of a disease that will destroy you mentally and destroy it. Don't take any chances. If you ever get possession of marijuana in any form, turn it over to the police.

This idea that marijuana is harmless hooks a lot of suckers. Frequently parents will bring a marijuana - smoking son or daughter to me for help — and I can't help them because the smoker has gotten the idea, "I am really not hooked and I'll never become a junkie. Te a isn't that bad." From the time the permissive propaganda about marijuana began to spread around the country, I have not been able to help one such smoker.

The story of it is that a year later the same youngster will come back dirty and unshaven and hooked on heroin. I wish every expert who thinks marijuana is so great could see this happen as often as I do.

Letter to the Editor

Expo No Waste of Money

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I would like to differ with the statement of Mayor McFarland of Picton that Expo was a waste of money. It is true that the money could have removed railroad crossings or built houses — but would it have been used that way? These things should have been taken care of long ago and no doubt will be in the near future.

But Expo gave Canadians and the visitors to Canada a real lift. The whole Centennial Year was lifted out of its daily routines and transported into a realm of wonder, fantasy and excitement. The unusual architecture of the buildings, the chance to see at first hand the culture of many lands, the exciting films — who will ever forget the Telephone Building and the three dimensional film of Canada? It made one proud to be a Canadian. The multifaceted screens of Czechoslovakia and the Canadian North, the Ontario building and so many wonderful sights in the buildings of Russia, India, France, etc.

Do we have to sit down and cry because this glorious exhibition cost so much? Do we always have to be so businesslike and expect our pleasures to give us profit and interest in dollars and cents? I do not think that any one of us who visited Expo or maybe some of those who couldn't, will forget it or regret the cost.

Youth in Revolt—Power Without Responsibility

Peterborough Examiner

All over the world youth is in revolt, crusading against the moral, social, political, economic injustices in his society.

He goes across his academic limits to sympathize with the cause of the victims of suppression — the wronged and the injured.

In democracies, where people have the right to be wrong, he challenges the right to his elders to control his freedom, individuality and education.

It is often questioned how far youth should go to participate in non-academic issues. Is it not possible that the "well-aware" youth is unaware and is misguided in the low and early flames of enlightenment, by the excitement of tribal involvement, by the alignment of free thought with revolutionary impracticality?

Should not the student be more of a student — a listener and an observer — rather than active participant in causes for which he is not knowledgeably prepared?

No one can reasonably ask the young to be satisfied with some kind of sanctuary or security in exchange for their right to fly as high and as far as their own strength and ability will take them as individuals. Their guidance in flight, however, remains the instinctive responsibility of their elders.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jan. 22, 1969 . . .

Queen Victoria died 68 years ago today—in 1901—after reigning for 64 years, longer than any previous British monarch. Her husband Prince Albert had died 40 years earlier. Edward VII succeeded her.

1947—An Indian assembly voted unanimously to adopt a resolution proclaiming India a sovereign and independent republic.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—British-American forces made a new landing on the west coast of Italy behind German lines; Allied airborne troops announced an air campaign knocked out all airfields in Rome except one; Lt.-Gen. Spaat, commander of the U.S. Strategic Air Forces in Invasion, predicted the Luftwaffe would be knocked out "in the summer."

Society—Dead and Alive!

"Modern man is dead, a puppet. He is deliberate and without emotion — a machine. He is reliable, but without live intentions, wishes, wants and desires. His life is very boring, empty and meaningless. Generally, he does not suffer deeply, but how little he knows of true, creative living!"

That's the word from Dr. Everett Shostrom's fascinating little paperback, Man the Manipulator. In an even more interesting paperback now on the stands The Revolution of Hope, Dr. Erich Fromm remarks that modern man is well fed and entertained, yet passive, un-alive, and with little feeling. Are these views correct? I believe so, true in Canada, at any rate, which I travel endlessly from coast to coast.

Dead people all over the place! Their faces blank or else woebegone; you'd think they had just been told they had some awful, incurable disease — the lack of life, love, the love of life: the viewings of death days, grey walls, grey sky and cynicism set in. "Life, who wants it? Life, who needs it?" with Graveyard, here we come! Graveyard, here we are!

Dead people. Deadness, is highly infectious; people get it from one another — employees from employers, children from parents, students from teachers, and teachers very often from students. If it were smallpox or cholera or typhoid, the authorities would step in fast enough to curb it. But what can the authorities do about a disease of the soul, a disease from which they suffer so abundantly and so obviously themselves, a disease that they themselves transmit to those under them?

It's bad enough to note this disease among adults; what's worse, and I speak from ample experience, is to find it so prevalent in the young. By the time a child reaches the kids under 12 I've been taking around with me lately, the pupils of school crowd are full of spit and vinegar; they love life. But about the age of puberty, something happens to many or most of them. The eyes glaze over, the mouths droop, the spirits and cynicism set in. "Life, who wants it? Life, who needs it?"

Canadians—Courtesy of the U.S.

Peterborough Examiner

Hurrah For Gerard Pelletier, the secretary of state. He has asked the Americans in what is described by one report as the hardest-hitting attack yet by a Trudeau man on U.S. attitudes, to show Canada some respect.

"We ask you to respect our customs and our interests," he told the Compressed Gas Association, a powerful U.S. industrial lobby, in New York. "We ask for your full appreciation . . . what we ask for above all is that you realize and accept the fact that Canada is not the 51st state and that It is a different country from the United States."

Does that not ring the bloody bell? Does it not strengthen the resolve of every man, woman and child in this country to be prepared to stand shoulder to shoulder along the border to resist the inevitable invasion?

But wait . . . that is not what Mr. Pelletier proposes . . . good heavens, he is asking for those privileges, not demanding them.

Canadians, he explains, just have a special way of looking at the world and at life, and possess a stance that differs different from that of Americans. It is an attitude generally difficult to define but one which emerges each time that particular situations arise.

To put it more precisely he says that once American capital has crossed the border 'we treat it to act as if it were Canadian capital,' which is another way of saying the servant is asking the lord of the manor if it is permissable to use bonuses to improve living quarters.

Pueblo Skipper Says White House Alerted Ship in Danger

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — The Pueblo's skipper says he used a communication priority direct to the White House as well as to his navy superiors in Japan after North Korean gunboats surrounded his intelligence ship.

Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher told a navy court of inquiry Tuesday he kept the channels open as the North Koreans made their first attempt to put a boarding party aboard. Minutes later, a salvo of shells from a subchaser raked his radar mast, wounding him and three of his crew.

Bucher said he did not order his crew to man their two machine-guns and fight because it would have meant certain death for the gunners since the subchaser and three torpedo boats were standing at point-blank range. He said he had "no hope of outrunning them" to avoid capture.

The 41-year-old officer spoke calmly to the five admirals comprising the court, but he appeared emotionally drained when he finished Tuesday. By then he had testified for 12 hours over two days.

He resumes his story today.

He did not elaborate on a brief reference to the White House, and was not questioned about it. There was no indication if he had received instructions from anyone. Navy sources said they believed this was the first public mention of messages from the Pueblo directed to the White House.

A White House spokesman said last year, shortly after the Pueblo was seized, that there had been a delay in informing then President Johnson.

The delay was attributed to the time it took presidential aide Walt W. Rostow to compile information for a briefing. When the joint chiefs of staff were informed never has been disclosed but the then Defence Secretary Robert McNamara was said to have received word nine minutes after the Pueblo sent its final message.

By then the North Koreans had taken over the ship, one man was wounded fatally and the other 82 aboard were headed for 11 months imprisonment.

"I don't understand why he gave up the ship!"

Jabbing at a sea chart with a pointer, Bucher denied 17 times —once for every Communist allegation—that he sailed the Pueblo into the 12-mile territorial water the North Koreans claim offshore.

Bucher said earlier his assignment was to conduct surveillance on Soviet ships in the Sea of Japan and monitor North Korean radar.

It was halfway through his narrative Tuesday that Bucher told about messages designed for his commanders in Japan and ultimately the White House.

One message described the approach of the submarine chaser and its threat to open fire.

Another, he said told of North Korean torpedo boats rushing up, two Communist MiGs flying overhead and one of the patrol boats "yawing toward my bow" with an armed boarding party.

"I raised the precedence (on the messages) from flash to critic," Bucher said, a navy priority rating that meant they went "immediately and straight to the White House." He said he told his radioman to keep the channels open.

Bucher, describing the opening shots fired at his vessel, said the subchaser began firing "at 1,500 to 2,000 yards."

As the torpedo boats approached, Bucher said the quartermaster fixed the Pueblo's location at 15.8 miles from nearest land. Bucher said this was confirmed by Navigator Edward Murphy Jr. and "I myself went down to the wheelhouse and manned the radar . . . and confirmed it."

A junior officer asked about scuttling the Pueblo, but Bucher said it would have taken more than 2½ hours and the vessel was in only 30 fathoms of water.

"Also the water temperature was freezing," Bucher said. "A man cannot survive but very few minutes in that kind of water—perhaps less than five minutes."

Lonesome Cities by Rod McKuen

Lonesome Cities is the newest collection of love poems and lyrics by American Rod McKuen. The poems express gentle longing and paint wistful portraits of cities and their people, of cowboys and lumberjacks; these love poems, sometimes erotic, speak honestly of people's need for one another.

The Wind His Wings compiled by Mary Alice Downie

This book is a delight for young and old alike. It presents a lively selection of Canadian poems — modern verse, delightful nonsense poems, Eskimo chants, and translations of French Canadien folk songs in a setting of brilliant and colorful illustration.

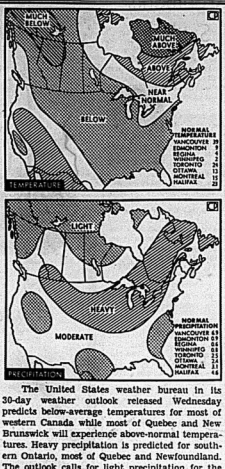
New Voices of the Commonwealth by Howard Sergeant

During the last few years, there has been a lively and rapidly increasing interest in the poetry written by poets in the various countries of the Commonwealth. Each of the countries concerned has its own cultural, social, economic, and political problems to tackle in its own way, regardless of what is happening elsewhere. What they all have in common, however, is the English language. The choice of poets ranges from those who have remained unpublished in collected form, or who have published one or two volumes, to those who have achieved recognition outside their country of origin or residence.

Selected Poems by Leonard Cohen.

Selected Poems represents Mr. Cohen's own choice from his work, ranging from the lyric love poems of The Spice Box of Earth to thoughtful considerations of religious and social problems included in three earlier volumes. Also included are a series of new poems. The voice of Leonard Cohen is searching, deeply personal, and, above all, universally evocative.

Wild Grape Wine by A. W. Purdy



Mr. Purdy's book of poems ranges from short, humorous verses to lengthy dramatisations of how the poet feels about Canada, its geography, history, and people. Many of the poems are set in and around Amelialsburg, the writer's home town in Prince Edward County. Mr. Purdy lived for a time with the Eskimos in the Canadian Arctic from which trip he produced the book of poems North Of Summer.

Collected Poems 1934-1952, by Dylan Thomas

This book contains most of the poems written by Dylan Thomas up to the year 1952. Included is the very lovely poem he wrote on the death of his father, Do Not Go Gentle Into That Goodnight.

Bread, Wine and Salt by Alden Nowlan

Known chiefly as a poet of the New Brunswick countryside, Nowlan now turns to the city and to politics and history for his subjects. He is a very private poet, a poet of childhood, loneliness, and memory. The most moving poems in Bread, Wine and Salt are concerned with the isolation surrounding everyone in love and in the face of death.

The United States weather bureau in its 30-day weather outlook released Wednesday predicts below-average temperatures for most of western Canada while most of Quebec and New Brunswick will experience above-normal temperatures. Heavy precipitation is predicted for southern Ontario, most of Quebec and Newfoundland. The outlook calls for light precipitation for the northern parts of British Columbia, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec. The outlook is not a specific forecast and changes may occur.

Conductor Hired At Campbellford

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford Citizens' Band has engaged a new conductor in the person of Phil Parker, who is reported to be one of England's best-known authorities on brass instruments.

His study of music began at an early age, and he later conducted a clinic in brass technique in London, England. He is an accomplished oboist.

In England he operated a studio and workshop for the repairing and testing of instruments of all types and has played practically all types of brass instruments.

Mr. Parker's son, Jack has been music director at CDHS for the past several years.

The band will resume practice sessions and all who are interested are invited to come to the Legion Hall on Thursday evenings. Mr. Parker will hold pre-practice classes for a half-hour before regular practice begins.

Policy Changes Suggested by Reeve

NAPANEE — Harold Creighton, newly elected reeve of South Fredericksburgh, attended the first County Council meeting for 1969. In his opening speech, he put forth a practical and well-formulated policy for the county.

Welfare on a county basis, regardless of boundaries was one of his proposals. He planned, he said, to set up a special committee to investigate this matter.

The new warden also suggested, that one man be appointed by the county to act both as building inspector and as safety construction inspector, to be available to those municipalities who could not find a suitable man for either or both these duties.

Warden Creighton stated that he would suggest the setting up of a committee to investigate the possibility of forming a county planning board, with regional government in mind.

He spoke about the great period of expansion which the county is on the verge of, stating "we must think, not only of today and of how we ourselves will be affected, but of tomorrow, and of how it will effect future generations."

A county planning board, such as Warden Creighton proposes, would have the picture of what was taking place in the whole county, and distribute this information. "Plans must be made, not just on a local, but on a county basis," he said.

Warden Creighton believes that the existence of regional government is often prompted by the laxity of some local governments.

"Let us show that we have the forward look and that we can face up to responsibilities and may avoid regional government and the loss of much of our local power," he admonished council.

Successful Living

Change Often Better Than Rest

By DORIS CLARK

We hear a lot about there being more leisure time these days, but if you are like me you may be saying "What leisure time? Where is it?"

Yet I know I must make leisure — and so must you — if we are to keep our health and balance.

We can all think of times when, dead tired, we were headed for bed. Then the phone jarred us. An invitation followed by a sociable evening out, proved better than a rest.

"If you put your nose to the grindstone rough
And keep it down there long enough
Soon you'll find there's no such thing

As stones that murmur, or birds that sing
These three things will your world conquer:
Just you and the stone and your darned ol' nose."

Dear Doris: Our 17-year-old daughter is expecting, the end of this month. We approve of her boy friend but she did not want to marry before she finished grade 12. She is at present living in a home for unwed mothers and taking correspondence studies.

The boy friend is 21, at present is working for my husband and living at our home. At present the plan is for our daughter to finish her year, and I am prepared to help with the baby. She does is talk of a wedding in six weeks time.

Would this be better, if the young man stays on at our home? — Uncertain.

Dear Uncertain: To me the burning question is: Does your girl want marriage at all? Holding out for the school year may be one way of postponing an event she is unsure about. She is only 17, and it should not be pushed into marriage to a grown man.

You are the ones who can make her thoroughly free to resng. If she wants to. The counselor at the home or the child care agency can help you and her to sort out your thinking.

Neither the young mother nor her unborn child will benefit by an ill-advised union.

Dear Doris: My age is 24. My extremities, legs and arms are very thin in comparison to my trunk. My waistline is thick. I may add I have a very round fat face. My large bunline is unsuitable for my flat buttock area.

Doris, are there any exercises I can do to increase the muscular area in my thin legs and arms, also the buttock area? Can I reduce the fat-round appearance of my face by exercise or with the aid of artfully applied make-up?

In my youth I was dubbed — Tub on Two Sticks

Dear Tub: Since your weight is right, your job is to re-arrange fat and build a little muscle. I am sending you my 10-cent leaflet Be Figure Perfect which includes routines for that thick waist and thin other place. Also for the calves.

On-the-spot running is a good exercise for developing leg muscles. Start with three minutes a day, working up to 15. Lift each foot off the floor at least nine inches as you run (having made sure your doctor approves).

A hairstyle which is not round, and make-up designed to widen cheek bones and minimize chin and jowl roundness, can achieve a miracle. Here's where your hairdresser and cosmetic naiadly can do you great favors.

Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for 10 cents and a large stamped, self-addressed envelope, unless otherwise specified.

Ideal Method for Cooking Steaks

By MARY MOORE

This time the preamble becomes a postlude for the reason this dish requires an explanation.

ARGENTINIAN BEEF STEAK (serves 5 or 6)

1 sirloin steak weighing 2 pounds
¼ cup oil
2 tablespoons cooking wine
2 tablespoons vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
½ teaspoon meat tenderizer
2 teaspoons cornstarch
2 teaspoons sugar
¼ pound scrubbed sliced mushrooms
½ cup dairy sour cream

On a deep platter or shallow pan combine the oil, wine, vinegar, salts, pepper and meat tenderizer. Marinate steak in it 24 to 48 hours in refrigerator, turning 3 or 4 repeated Drain (but save marinade). Broil on broiler pan on rack 5" from preheated burner, turning when top is rich brown and broiling other side. Time depends on you. If you like steak medium - rare, 7 minutes on each side are sufficient. Transfer to preheated platter.

To make Sauce discard any excess oil from top of reserved marinade. You need only ½ cup marinade. Stir into it the cornstarch, sugar and mushrooms and cook stirring over low heat for 3 or 4 minutes, then add sour cream and heat to below boiling. Serve with or over steak.

WEDNESDAY

Dinner Menu

Lightning Chicken Casserole (see Tues.); W G N Muffins (see Mon.); Grapefruit and Orange Fruit Cup; Tea.

POSTLUDE

As you may have guessed this treatment of a good well hung red brand sirloin steak is like gilding the lily. Half of my crowd said "Was all that fussing necessary?" The reply to this is that top grade steaks are hard for amateurs to identify and this marinating tenderizes and flavors steaks about which you are doubtful. When our readers decide to buy steaks they should know enough to demand top grade well hung beef that does not require marinating and not to go along with the herd of meat buyers and meekly select what the butcher has already cut for you. Most important of all the above marinade will be a boon to freezer owners who have underhung beefsteaks in their freezers that they have discovered are tough when broiled or fried. They should thaw them and then proceed as above. Sauce may be omitted if desired.

CHURCH GROUPS

ST. COLUMBA CHURCH

The Presbyterian Women of St. Columba Presbyterian Church met on Monday evening in the Church hall gaily decorated with Scottish tartans and maps. Mrs. B. Hackett, president, opened the meeting and conducted the business.

The following decisions were made by the members: that a twenty-five cent membership fee be charged; coffee parties to be held on Feb. 12 and May 7; that the group cater to the Annual Congregational meeting and for a dinner at St. Audrew's Presbyterian; Church; to look after all nursery supplies for the year; to donate a sum of money to the Board of Managers immediately and to send $25. to the Women's Missionary Society supply fund.

The devotional period was led by Mrs. J. Allan and Mrs H. Pollard. The story was told of Scotland's famous Bonar brothers and the reason behind Horatius Bonar's writing of one of his hymns.

To honor Robbie Burns one of his poems was recited and Scottish songs were played and sung.

An auction sale with Mrs. R. Brain as auctioneer added a small amount to the treasury.

Ann Landers

'Money' Arguments Can Be Settled

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I hope every married couple who argues about money will read this. For more years than I care to admit, I handled the family finances. Ray gave me his cheque. I, in turn, gave him an allowance. I paid the bills and was supposed to have a little left over.

Ray worked out a budget which made no provisions for inflation or emergencies. I found it nearly impossible to meet our obligations. For years we've been living from hand to mouth. Whenever I tried to talk to Ray about it we ended up in an argument.

A few months ago everything piled in on me. Ray saw a past due notice from the dairy and lit into me like a maniac. I calmly handed him the chequebook and said, "I've been struggling with this for 10 years. Now you handle the money." He hemmed and hawed, but I wouldn't give an inch.

Sixty days later Ray handed the chequebook back and said, "I feel like a heel. Please take over the dough again, honey. I don't know how you've managed all these years."

So, Ann, when one feels that the other is a poor manager, suggest that they switch places. I'm glad we did. — TRIED AND PROVEN.

DEAR T and P: So am I. When people learn to live in harmony my mail is a lot lighter. Thanks for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 20 years old and very much in love with a girl who will be 15 in a few months. I know you will say she is too young for me, but you are wrong. This girl is more mature than any of the 18-year-olds I have dated. She is also fully developed. Every place we go she gets served liquor and nobody asks to see her I.D.

Her folks don't like me because I am in uniform. This means we have to see each other on the sneak. I'm just about broke renting cars.

I'm going overseas in a few weeks and I'm worried sick that someone will move in on me. This is the real thing and I want her to wait. Please Ann, help me, I don't want to lose her. — MOOSE.

DEAR MOOSE: She may be "fully developed" but 14 is still 14 — and that's too darned tender for a boy of 20. If she's lucky she'll lose you..

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was thinking of buying my boyfriend a very nice sweater for his birthday. When I told my girl friend she said, "Ann Landers says it isn't in good taste to buy a boy clothes. That's his mother's job."

Did you actually say that? I can hardly believe it! What should a girl buy for her boyfriend if she wants to spend more than $3? — WINNIPEG.

DEAR PEG: Yes, I said it and I meant it.

If you want to spend more than $3 you can buy him a $5 book, or two $3 record albums, or a $7 wallet, or an $8 pair of sunglasses, or a $9 chess set, or a $10 photograph of yourself. The list is endless.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I'll have to get Doris a coat just like Jane's or she'll think I don't love her as much. We really can't afford to buy two coats this month."

Children must learn they cannot always be treated exactly alike — and this fact has nothing to do with the way you love them. Family finances and individual needs have to be considered in purchasing clothing.

Mother: "Your winter coat looks fine, but Jane's coat is too worn to wear any longer. We'll get you a new coat for spring."

Women's Hospital Auxiliary Meets for Annual Luncheon

By LINDA GELDART

Pride in past achievements and a small army of newly elected officers made the annual luncheon of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary a special occasion for the many members present.

Taking place in the new cafeteria of the hospital the event was a happy climax to a year of extremely hard work and dedication for the members and their executive.

The Auxiliary, more than 250 members strong, operates a wealth of projects for hospital patients. These project - services extend from puppets for the youngsters to the utilization of teenage hospital volunteers, to providing gifts for the patients on many occasions throughout the year. And these are only a few.

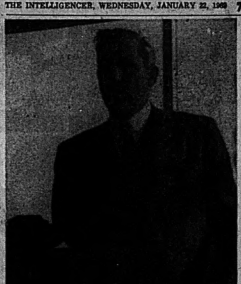
Terming the greatest advancement in medicine as the "treatment of the patient as a person", Mayor Dr. R. J. Scott asserted the Auxiliary is "the backbone" of this advancement. He extended congratulations and good wishes on behalf of the city.

H. Hamilton chairman of the Hospital Board of Governors congratulated the auxiliary on exceeding their pledge objective.

Philip Rickard administrator of the Belleville General Hospital, saw the occasion as an "historic one", and said the hospital was looking forward with anticipation to the extended services the Auxiliary will provide in the future.

Past president, Mrs. W. Harvey told the gathering, "we can all take pride in our accomplishments of this past year. Our greatest was the increase of our pledge from $15,000 to $20,000.



Speaking about the new president, Mrs. R. E. Burley, Mrs. Harvey said, "during the past president described her as bringing "a wealth of experience to his office, and under her guidance, it will be another year of growth and accomplishment."

In her acceptance speech, president, Mrs. R. E. Burley, paid tribute to the support and cooperation of all members "so that this organization may function to its fullest potential and continue to be the instrument of public relations for our hospital that it has been in the past."

Serving with Mrs. Burley on the executive, are the following officers: first vice-president, Mrs. J. E. Nelles; second vice-president, Mrs. S. Bochok; third vice-president, Mrs. C. D. Ashley; recording secretary, Mrs. W. J. Musgrove; corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. E. Moore; treasurer, Mrs. R. S. Fairman and immediate past president, Mrs. J. E. Nelles; convenors of various committees and projects were also named.

Immediate past president, Mrs. W. G. Harvey hands over the gavel to the newly elected president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, Mrs. R. E. Burley. The occasion was the Annual Luncheon held in the new hospital cafeteria on Wednesday.

Dr. R. T. Potter was guest speaker at the Women's Hospital Auxiliary's Annual Luncheon on Wednesday. His topic was "extended patient care," and he told his audience of the tremendous possibilities of home care.

Community Honors Couple

The Mount Pleasant-Rawdon community tendered Mr. and Mrs. Edward Herring-ton (nee Donna Knight) a shower party in the church hall.

Rev. W. C. Cox was master of ceremonies, and the program was opened with a sing song. Mrs. Garth Joslin was pianist and Mrs. Cox conducted the singing.

Randel Scott gave a recitation and piano selections were given by Jill McAdam;

Jeannette Hoard and Mrs. Mac Sharp. Readings were contributed by Mrs. William McAdam; Mrs. Percy MacMullen; Mrs. Herbert Smith; Mrs. Harry McAdam and Howard Jeffs.

Harvey Couch and son Kenneth provided music on the harmonica and accordion. Vocal solos were rendered by Lynn Joslin and Mrs. W. C. Cox.

The newly married couple were given seats of honor, after which Miss Jean Jeffs read the address, and Miss Brenda Campbell presented the gifts.

The recipients voiced thanks, after which the group in charge served refreshments.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. D. McComb on Saturday, Jan. 25.

President's Report Notes Increase In Pledge in Aid of Hospital

In her annual report at the Women's Hospital Auxiliary luncheon Tuesday afternoon the outgoing president, Mrs. W. G. Harvey noted that the greatest accomplishment during 1968 was an increase of $5 pledge to the hospital, from $15,000 to $20,000. With this increase the decision was made to purchase the furnishings of eight day rooms for the new hospital, eight crash carts and a Sony videotape machine; also the filling of 21 planters to be placed in the new hospital.

Mrs. Harvey also gave a resume of the various meetings she had attended during the year on behalf of the Auxiliary and expressed thanks to each and everyone for their co-operation and assistance during her term of office.

Recording secretary, Mrs. R. S. Fairman gave a most comprehensive report of activities throughout the year stating that ten executive meetings, ten regular meetings were held with an average of 6 members in attendance at the general meetings. At a number of the meetings cheques for various amounts were presented by the Opportunity Shop. It was also noted that this corresponding secretary, Mrs. F. Moore had sent out 23 get-well cards, six sympathy cards, 43 thank-you cards, 19 business letters and 35 invitations. She also notified all officers and executive members in advance of executive meetings.

The recording secretary also noted that public relations chairman for 1968 was Mrs. J. E. Nelles with a committee including Mrs. M. F. L. Jones, Mrs. J. K. Bradford, Mrs. J. H. Forrester and Mrs. L. J. M. Tremblay. A bulletin and press report of each monthly meeting was forwarded to the public relations director of the Provincial Association by Mrs. Nelles.

Ten informative bulletins were edited by Bulletin convener Mrs. B. E. Burley. These were processed for mailing by Mrs. A. Duffy who handled 600 pieces of mail during 1968. Mrs. G. W. Gist took care of the stencils each month.

Each special day of the year favors were presented to patients and this service Holiday Treats was successfully convened by Mrs. D. Leslie.

Twelve layettes for needy babies were placed in the Samaritan cupboard at the hospital by the convener Mrs. H. Temple. At present the cupboard is well stocked and supplies are on hand to place in the cupboard when needed. Knitting has been done by members and friends.

Mrs. W. S. Greaves convener of the social committee and her helpers Mrs. J. H. Sloan, Mrs. B. V. Doherty, Mrs. J. I. Vesterfelt, Mrs. G. A. Bennett and Mrs. J. S. Curtis assisted at a number of social functions during the year.

Mrs. S. Bochok chairman of the Volunteer Services reported that the in-hospital volunteer program was altered considerably in 1968. After each service was examined and evaluated, some were discontinued. She also noted that the lending library sponsored by the Auxiliary completed a successful year due to generous donations of a wide variety of books and up-to-date magazines. A new service was added in September, providing transportation for out-patients to physiotherapy. A total of 70 adults and 25 juniors were active in volunteer services during the year. The Cradle Picture division contributed $500, and $66.50 was realized in commissions from hairdressing appointments. Mrs. Bochok expressed thanks to the volunteers, even though small in number this year, the hours of service have been greater.

Opportunity Shop chairman Mrs. Thomas Short reported that the Shop had contributed a total amount of $18,200 to the Hospital Auxiliary and that the response from local citizens this past year had been outstanding. There was also an increase in volunteer staff with a total of 128 active members. The Shop which marks its 21st birthday this year is considered a "model" for Hospital Auxiliary Shops throughout the province.

Reporting for the Puppet Group Mrs. Lillian Ashley stated that during the year 500 puppets were placed in the Pediatric Ward of the hospital. The biggest expense in making the puppets is the purchasing of puppet faces which have to be obtained from the United States, but overcoming this there is a bank balance of $194.37.

The financial statement for the year ending Dec. 31 as prepared by George A. Welch and Company revealed that the bank balance for the Belleville General Hospital Women's Auxiliary stands at $23,865.74. Receipts for the year amounted to $23,675.63 with disbursements totalling $5,607.83. The sum of $5,777.89 was recorded for the bank balance on hand as of December 1967.

Alouette Club Lists New Officers

Last Saturday night, the French Alouette Club for Belleville and region held its first meeting of the year and its annual general meeting in Trenton, under the direction of Bernard Gagnier, president of the club.

Among members present were Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Thiffault, former residents of Belleville, from Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Desjardjoli, previously residing in St. Boniface, Man., but now living near Belleville at Trenton.

The business of the meeting included all the reports of 1968 activities, a few amendments to the club constitution and the election of a new executive for 1969.

The club secretary, treasurer and committee chairmen gave their reports as follows: Mrs. Gilles Lavoie, secretary, the report of 1968 annual general meeting; Mrs. Lorna Hunt, treasurer, the year's financial report and a report of the club assets; Messrs. Donat Clement and Alban Beaulieu, the report of the social activities in 1968 and entertainment committee; Mrs. Adele Bertube, the auxiliary women's committee report; Mr. Leopold Leclair, the club monthly bulletin publication committee; Mr. Jean-Claude Paquin, the reception and recruitment committee; Mrs. Suzanne Beaulieu, the cultural and social relations committee; Mr. J. A. Conde Bertube both the club auditors' report and the bowling league committee and Mrs. Jeannette Pilon, Messrs. Ludger Briand and Armand Bedard, the election committee committee. It was noted that all the activities were a success and although many members were transferred during the year, membership is about 218.

There were two amendments proposed to the constitution one of which concerning the executive committee quorum was adopted.

Ending his office as president Bernard Gagnier announced that according to the constitution, the vice - president, Donat Clement, was automatically president of the club for 1969. He thanked the members of the executive for their help and support during the year and all the members of the club for their participation in the club activities, especially the 10th anniversary dinner last November. As Mr. Gagnier will be transferred to Magnetville, P. Que., early this year, he won't be able to act as past president of the club. This function will be filled by Mr. James Hultquist, Sr., who was president of the club a few years ago.

The election was conducted by Mr. Gagnier assisted by Messrs. Ludger Briand, Armand Bedard, George Chiasson and Maurice Bertube. Elected were: Gilles Lavoie, vice - president; and as directors, Mrs. Ann Chiasson, Jacqueline Hultquist and Claire Hall and Messrs. Claude Hurst, J. A. Conde Bertube, Guy Chevrier, Michel Lemire.

After presentation of the new executive Mr. Gagnier, music and a time of fellowship closed the meeting with lunch prepared by the women of the club.

The new committee will choose someone to act as secretary of the club and will name a member as treasurer. Mr. Bruno Rivard will continue to act as editor of the club bulletin.

Dr. R. T. Potter M.P. Speaks on Patient Care

By LINDA GELDART

Guest speaker at the Women's Hospital Auxiliary's annual luncheon, Wednesday afternoon, Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP, spoke to the members and guests on a topic that is most important to him and which he feels should be further explored — "extended patient care."

Telling his audience that "our citizens are being deprived of a service we haven't had the initiative to promise," he explained the concept of care, and the different types of hospitals available to deal with each.

He maintained the key to the quality depends on the facilities available: while the principle of care centres around the grouping of patients with similar illnesses.

With such a grouping of patients, there begins development of a program directed with the patient's specific needs in mind, as well as the health and welfare needs of the area.

"Often," he reminded his listeners, "we forget the beds just aren't available," and this in turn prevents the proper placement of patients. This results in some patients using higher cost facilities when lower cost ones would do.

These different types of patient care must be acknowledged, Dr. Potter asserted otherwise "an imbalance of facilities" comes about, because all types of care are inter-related.

He stressed the vital importance and future utilization of "home care," which would prevent the unnecessary use of hospital institutions. Such a home care plan would have to be provincially based, with the help and advice of local agencies, supplemented by present facilities.

"Careful planning, and an evaluation of the community's needs and resources can equal continuity of care," he concluded.

Bares Ring

ALVARADO, Mich. (AP) — Mrs. Neil Coulter of Alvarado lost her wedding ring last spring as she worked in her garden. She searched and searched but couldn't find the ring. It showed up recently while Mrs. Coulter and her family were eating dinner. A baked potato that came from the Coulter garden contained the ring.

POPULAR STYLES IN TWEED — Tweed is the order of the day here. Left, a herringbone tweed from Scotland was chosen by Hobson of Copenhagen for the simple but elegant coat with slight tailored waist and patch pockets. A British herringbone tweed was used by a leading Danish men's wear manufacturer, Meyer, for the belted sports jacket in centre. On the right, the checked coat with fur collar is in a heavy tweed fabric from northern Ireland. This garment was also designed and made in Copenhagen — by Maddox.

Marmora Red Cross Branch Reports Successful Year

MARMORA — The Marmora Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society, held its annual meeting last week and elected its officers for the year 1966.

These officers are: president, Mrs. Alice Sisk; vice-president, Mrs. Granville Melikjohn; secretary, Mrs. Raymond Smith; treasurer, Mrs. Francis Rothermel; committee chairmen: sick room equipment loan service, Mrs Tom Shannon: water safety, Mrs. A. M. Jones.

Also elected: welfare and disaster services, Mrs. M. H. Borland; senior citizens, Mrs. Howard Bleecker; campaign, Mrs. Tom Hanley; telephone, Mrs. Melikjohn; press and publicity, Mrs. G. A. Wentworth.

Reports presented indicated a busy and successful year. Mrs. Tom Shannon reported that the use of the Loan Cupboard had increased over the previous year. A new wheelchair and walker had been purchased for the Loan Cupboard, and a wheelchair given to a nursing home. Some donations were also made to the Branch.

With Mrs. Don Bailey as chairman, the annual "Blitz" was successful in raising the amount of $514.33. Reports presented by the treasurer, Mrs. Rothermel, indicated that expenses for services provided in this area last year exceeded this amount — disbursements totalled $1209.79.

Mrs. Jones, water safety chairman, reported the swimming program conducted by the Recreation Committee had been very successful, with 87% of the students passing the tests.

A report from Mrs. Borland, disaster and relief chairman, showed a total of $200.51 had been spent to assist three families after fires, as well as welfare assistance from Red Cross headquarters, Toronto, amounting to $68.69.

In order that the Marmora Branch of the Red Cross Society may successfully carry out its yearly program, it is necessary that membership be increased.

During a discussion on this regard, it was concluded that the public may not be aware that the membership is open to everyone and in future, notice of meetings will be published in the paper. It is hoped that more citizens will attend these meetings and help in ensuing a successful organization.

The Red Cross "Blitz" for 1969 will be held on Monday, March 6th, with Mrs. Tom Hanley as campaign chairman.

Charlotte Whitton Resides in Quiet Section of Capital

OTTAWA (CP) — In a quiet section of the capital there's an old-style grey stucco house with a bright red door, a small sign in the window saying "no agents" and, like as not, a big, sleek tomcat sitting on the step.

This tranquil setting houses a diminutive woman who can be gracious, outspoken or downright fierce.

Charlotte Whitton, 72-year-old Ottawa alderman and former mayor, loves both picturesque language and a good fight—as long as she thinks she has something worth scrapping about.

Among other things, the property Miss Whitton is an honorary Indian princess and has the distinction of probably being the only woman in regret that a pollution centre was not named after her.

"I was made a princess of the Piegan Indians just after my re-election as mayor of Ottawa in 1961," she said. "They gave me the name of Mawakee."

Later, after a lengthy digression into the ins and outs of city politics in the '50s, when she was Ottawa's mayor for six years, she explained that the original Mawakee had been a prominent Indian woman.

"I think the name means pretty woman—which would obviously be a misnomer," she said, launching without further ado into more civic politics.

"I ran for election as mayor in 1961 because of the dilemma over the river pollution cleanup. I came back to make sure plans and money for pollution control were completed.

"Some controllers thought it would be a great joke to name the new pollution control centre the Charlotte Whitton Pollution Control Centre. They brought it up at board of control thinking I'd be angry.

"But I said I'd be delighted to think that 50 to 100 years from now I'd still be controlling pollution in Ottawa: and they shied off."

Miss Whitton is also proud of her efforts to get the city a royal grant of arms, low cost housing units and a new city hall.

The original city hall, she recalled with a chuckle, burned down on April Fool's Day, 1931, and what with discussions and plebiscites still hadn't been rebuilt almost 20 years later.

"In December, 1950, I first ran for board of control to bring the wandering ghost of city hall to rest, if I had to build it on an island—and that's what I did."

Her pet peeve is "the punishment meted out to people in public life particularly by parents and teachers who have little children and students writing to you by the scad that they have been given a story to write or something."

"The number of women who write and want something of yours to use for an auction . . . Jon my soul I think I'd have been giving away the laces out of my shoes if I'd answered them all.

"I've spent in the last year an average of $20 to $25 a month sending these things and only had one acknowledgment. So I've stopped it. I've stopped being a co-operative Canadian.

"And the number of requests I get to speak . . . and by the scads. They of course want your biography. They know you're a great Canadian woman, they say, and would you send us a biography." She laughed a little scornfully.

She is equally outspoken on such subjects as the royal commission on the status of women, which she labels "an exercise in futility."

"A woman has to be twice as good as a man to be thought half as good. You not only have to prove yourself, but you have to counter generations of prejudice."

She is also not to be outdone by Judy LaMarsh, a cabinet minister in the Pearson government who recently said that if she were ever pregnant she would rather seek an illegal abortion than appear before a board of psychiatrists, doctors, lawyers and priests.

"Any woman," Miss Whitton snorted, "would be a goose who would submit to such a gaggle of ganders. It puts a woman and her body in the category of a brood mare."

With that, Felix the cat and special tea from India claimed her attention. But even then, the wheels turning in her mind seemed almost visible.

Attack on Airport

Civil Aviation Group Defers Action on Lebanese Complaint

MONTREAL (CP) — A succession of government representatives said Tuesday Israel's commando attack on Beirut airport last month was outside the jurisdiction of the International Civil Aviation Organization.

The ICAO's 27-member council was meeting in extraordinary session to consider a Lebanese complaint about the Israeli attack in which 13 Lebanese civilian aircraft were destroyed Dec. 28.

Dr. Assad Kotaite, Lebanon's council representative, said the Israeli attack was an act of premeditated aggression against civilian facilities.

Dr. Shabtai Rosenne, Israel's deputy ambassador to the United Nations who is representing his country at the ICAO meeting, did not speak Tuesday.

Dr. Kotaite said the attack contravened ICAO rules on civil aviation, and called for censure and expulsion of Israel from the ICAO.

The ICAO is responsible for developing plans and procedures for international air traffic. It has 116 member nations and has its headquarters in Montreal.

A spokesman for the organization, founded in 1944, said it can develop policies and call on member states to adhere to them, but has no powers of enforcement.

The extraordinary council session, which opened Monday, was adjourned to Thursday without taking action on the Lebanese complaint.

Also discussed was serial hijacking.

Of 16 government representatives who stated their positions Tuesday, most said the Lebanese complaint was not a matter the ICAO council can settle.

The British delegate said the ICAO convention has no provision for sanctions against a member state and any attempt to apply them would go beyond the organization's powers.

France said the council should take steps to ensure the safety of airline equipment and passengers and called for measures to prevent repetition of the Israeli attack.

Tanzania, Czechoslovakia and India came out in favor of the Lebanese stand.

The United States, Belgium, Argentina and Spain called for broader treatment of the questions, and Tunisia urged measures against Israel.

St. Marys River

Commission Told Industrial Wastes at An All Time High

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. (AP) — The International Joint Commission was told Tuesday by an American and a Canadian that industrial wastes are at an all time high in the St. Mary's River which connects Lake Superior with Lake Huron.

H. W. Poston, chairman of the United States section of the Lake Superior-Huron-Erie advisory board of the IJC, and Dr. E. A. Watkinson, who holds a similar position for the Canadian section of the board, made the assertion.

Twenty years of efforts had been made to improve the qualities of waters on the boundaries of the U.S. and Canada, they said.

The two spoke at the first of two public hearings scheduled for this week. The second hearing will be in Windsor, Ont., today.

Tuesday's meeting was presided over by former Indiana governor Matthew Welch, who said that though "great improvements" had been made in the abatement of water pollution, standards set by the IJC still have not been met.

The meeting occurred on the same day that incoming Gov. William Milliken stated that Michigan plans to implement anti-pollution programs in the state as soon as possible.

In Washington, meanwhile, Democratic party Senator Philip A. Hart of Michigan urged that the U.S.-Canadian Joint Commission move promptly to stop pollution in waters common to both nations.

Only a concerted basin-wide approach, he said, would clean up three rivers on the Canadian-Michigan border.

The rivers are the St. Marys, the St. Clair and the Detroit.

Two Canadian companies were mentioned pertaining to the St. Marys River pollution.

The commission was critical of Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd., and Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd., while applauding industries on the U.S. side of the international waterway, for eliminating sources of pollution.

Arnold Heeney, Canadian co-chairman of the commission, said the attacks on the Canadian companies "bring me no national pride," but added that "the shoe will be on the other foot" in Windsor.

James L. McIntyre, assistant superintendent of employee relations for Algoma Steel, said his company had spent $2-700,000 between 1956 and 1968 in water quality control programs and added that three other programs would cost Algoma $1-800,000.

A. R. Askin, Abitibi Paper spokesman, said his firm had spent $1,500,000 since 1960 on the installation of equipment directly connected with control of industrial pollution.

In an interview after the meeting, Mr. Heeney said he was pleased that both Algoma Steel and Abitibi Paper had stated "for the first time" that they were working on the problem.

Canadians Held After Yacht Drifts Into Chinese Waters

HONG KONG (CP) — A seafaring Canadian couple, held for 12 days in China when their crippled 40-foot yacht Simulcus drifted into Chinese territorial waters, said today they would have been jailed if they were Americans.

Arne Larsen, 54, and his wife, Evelyn, 45, of Nainamo, B.C., sailed their battered yacht into Hong Kong Tuesday after the Chinese released them Monday.

They were almost captured a second time by the Chinese Tuesday but a Japanese freighter rescued them, Larsen said.

The Larsens told of their ordeal at a news conference here.

A typhoon battered their boat and drove it off course on the way from the Philippines to Hong Kong. The Larsens mistook a small Chinese island for Hong Kong and were held by Communist authorities when they landed Jan. 8.

The Larsens said the Chinese gave them cigarettes, badges and books of the thoughts of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Apart from being questioned incessantly each day during their detention, they were well-treated, Mrs. Larsen said.

She said they were set free because China had trade relations with Canada.

"You are lucky you are not Americans," she quoted a Chinese officer as saying.

Larsen said: "They never threatened us. They went through our boat and our belongings very thoroughly but they took nothing.

"Monday they made us sign statements that we had wrongfully invaded Chinese territorial waters, that we would not tell lies about them after our release, and then they allowed us to sail for Hong Kong."

Larsen and his wife had just taken possession of their Hong Kong-built ketch and were sailing it home when they were hit by a typhoon between Hong Kong an Taiwan Jan. 1.

The main mast snapped, Larsen said, but the ketch was still seaworthy and they decided to sail it back to Hong Kong for repairs.

"What we did not know was that our compass had been damaged. . . . We sailed into Communist waters without knowing it."

They were some 30 miles from the mouth of Hong Kong harbor when an armed Chinese junk came alongside, captured the ketch and towed it to Waishow Island, on the southeastern tip of China.

On Waishow, Larsen said, he and his wife were confined to separate rooms and almost continuous questioning began.

"Over and over again they questioned us about our family and friends, and especially about how much money we and our friends had. That seemed to be their main interest—how much money we had."

After being released Monday and as they were sailing toward Hong Kong, Larsen recounted, "an other armed Communist junk suddenly came up behind us."

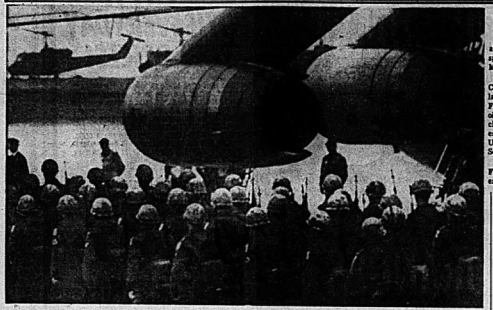
"The men on board the junk tried to use shark hooks to hook my boat. I zig-zagged my course and the junk nearly succeeded in catching us."

Larsen said he was "reasonably certain" they were outside Chinese territorial waters at the time.

"They were moving in for another attempt when we saw the Japanese freighter Shane Maru and we began frantically to wave and shout for help. The captain apparently saw our plight and he swerved course and cut between our boat and the Communist boat as it moved in on us still again."

Larsen and his wife pulled their ketch into Hong Kong harbor late Tuesday and sailed it to the shipyard where it had been built.

"We will get it repaired—it may take several weeks—have a bit of a shakedown run, and then sail again for Canada."



Auto Club Criticizes Amendment

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner received face-to-face criticism of his proposed Criminal Code amendment dealing with impaired driving in a meeting Tuesday with a representative of the Canadian Automobile Association.

R. B. Erb, general manager of the association, said that "giving a man a criminal record because he refuses to submit to a breathalizer test is an infringement of human rights."

Mr. Erb said the 1,000,000-member association favors tests to determine the blood alcohol level of motorists as an effective way of reducing drunken driving.

He said, however, that the association strongly disapproves of legislation which would automatically give a criminal record to a motorist for the "mere refusal" to submit to a breath test.

U.S. Troops at Czech Border

U.S. troops march away from a giant C141 Starlifter jet transport at the Nuernberg, Germany, airport on their way to manoeuvres near the Czech border. Both the Soviet and Czechoslovak Communists have protested the manoeuvres in which some 5,000 combat-ready GIs will participate.

Mason Named To Post

PICTON (Staff) — Jesse Ivan Mason has been appointed a police commissioner for Picton.

Mr. Mason was informed of his appointment yesterday by Judge W. S. Lane.

The 57-year-old department store owner succeeds to a position left vacant by the death of Lancelo. Nethery, long-time crown attorney.

The appointment awaited confirmation by the Ontario Police Commission.

"I'd heard my name might be considered for the office," said Mr. Mason.

The new commissioner said from a businessman's point of view, he had no serious criticism of the town's police force.

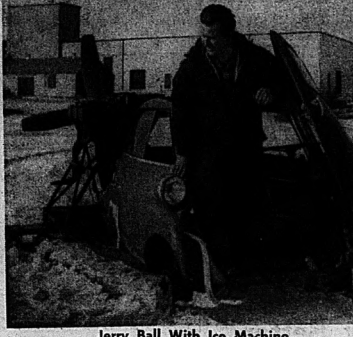
"I think that the public should more fully appreciate police forces, not only here, but throughout the province," said Mr. Mason.

He declined to comment on the recent salary increase sought by the police department. Mr. Mason said he wanted more information on the request.

The new commissioner came to Picton from Belleville 36 years ago, and since 1950 has been in the retail business. He is the owner of Mason's Department Store on Main Street.

Since coming to Picton he has been active in community affairs.

Mr. Mason is a past president of the Kinsmen Club and at present is a member of Kiwanis, a club of which he also served as president.



For eight years he was a member of the Picton public school board, two of them as chairman.

He is a member of the Prince Edward County Memorial Hospital board of governors, and is co-chairman of the local Salvation Army charity fund.

In earlier years he took a keen interest in local sports, playing on many town ball teams.

Mr. Mason is married with one daughter, Mrs. Don Stewart, also of Picton.

Other police commissioners are Judge Lane and Mayor Harvey McFarland.

Jerry Ball With Ice Machine

This Snow Machine Goes 125 mph Across the Lake

By DONALD MACKENZIE,
Staff Reporter

Snowmobiles!

They're nothing when you can travel across lakes and fields at 125 miles per hour plus.

"That's as long as you can hold the machine on the ice," says Jerry Ball, the owner of one of the most unusual snow vehicles in the Quinte area.

Made out of the body of an Isetta three wheeled motor car, skis and an airplane engine the amazing machine does everything from sink itself in the ice to travel across West Lake in Prince Edward County at over 100 mph.

The 190 horsepower 450 cubic inch Lycoming six cylinder airplane engine was already installed on the 'snowplane' when Mr. Ball purchased it from William Boulter in Belleville three years ago.

And after numerous trials and tribulations (mechanical, that is) such as getting the engine running, 1969 has seen Jerry Ball of Ball's Machine Shop in Wellington with one of the hottest winter speedsters ever.

After it was purchased from the well known Belleville boat racing team of Boulter and Son Mr. Ball said he had to replace a cylinder or two and make a few other modifications.

"Although there aren't too many of the machines in the Quinte area," he said, "I understand that they are quite common in the northern parts of Ontario."

Mr. Ball starts his 'snowmoplane' by twirling the wooden propeller in the same fashion that was used to start the engines of the old World War I airplanes.

And then watch out!

"The airplane engine is out of a four seater plane that could carry three thousand pounds in baggage weight — now it's behind an 800 pound car body and what else can you not expect except speed," said Mr. Ball.

Everybody in Prince Edward County is wondering if the contraption will be allowed to race in the open snowmobile event at the annual Tweed Winter Carnival.

"If so, watch out," says Jerry. "The crazy thing has a bad habit of taking off."

Cow Killed Near City

A cow on the run out of Belleville last night tangled with horsepower and stopped — dead.

The cow, valued at $300 caused damage estimated at $1,500 when it was struck by a van at the intersection of Highway 14 and the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway.

Provincial police say the animal earlier escaped from the barns of Belleville Live Stock Sales where it was being unloaded from a truck.

Driver of the 1969 van, 22-year-old John Martin, of Weston, was uninjured.

Proctor-Silex Strike Continues -- Plant Not Seeking Workers

By BOB DUNNETT
Staff Reporter

PICTON — The Proctor-Silex strike, now dragging into its seventh month, could be over in an hour — if the company would allow arbitration, says a union spokesman.

James Donofrio, United Electrical Workers international representative, says the company will not negotiate the increased wage demands sought by the strikers.

There are also differences on the sidelines of the main issue as the strike continues here.

The company says despite the strike it is almost in full production and has more than 100 workers in the plant. The total does not include office staff.

A Proctor-Silex spokesman said today the plant is "well-stocked and well-staffed" and at present is not seeking any further help.

Mr. Donofrio claims there are only about 80 workers in the plant.

By the latest count there are still 70 strikers to man the picket lines, says the union officer. Of the original 104 in the walkout, 22 have gone back to work and 12 have obtained jobs elsewhere.

The union has asked for $1.60 an hour for females and $1.80 for males as a base rise. The company has offered $1.25 an hour for females and $1.42 for males.

Mr. Donofrio said that they were willing to bargain about wage increases but that the company has made their final offer.

He said that part of the management rights clause which the company insists must be in the contract makes union's wage demands almost useless.

The union representative said that the organized labor movement is opposed to any compulsory arbitration, but had suggested last fall that both parties let the dispute be settled by voluntary arbitration.

Mr. Donofrio said while the new contract was being arbitrated, the strikers would return to work.

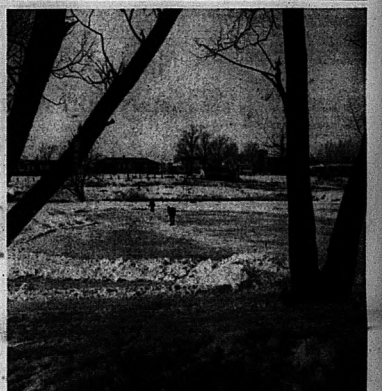
When asked how long the strike would last, Mr. Donofrio said they would strike as long as they had to in order to get their demands. He said that financially there is no end to how long the strike could last because they have the financial support of unions all over Canada and the States, plus the local unions.

A striker's pay per week, is $40 if married with a family, $37.50 if married and $35. for a single person. Strikers cannot draw unemployment insurance while on strike.

Mr. Donofrio said that the boycott against Proctor-Silex products plus the added expense of running the plant while it is being picketed, is hurting the company.

He said that the workers went on strike July 17 because the negotiations were too slow, and there weren't enough of them.

Mr. Donofrio said that the company had brought in a lawyer from the States who could not be here to carry on negotiations fast enough to suit the workers.



Unions Offer Support

Committees from Belleville and Trenton labor councils last night met with organizers of Local 565, United Electrical Workers, whose members have been on strike since last July.

Among the support decisions taken at the conference-

last night, says Belleville and District Labor Council president Ray Bradshaw, were:

- A canvass of local retailers selling "Proctor-Silex appliances, to impress the cause of the strike on store owners.
- A fund-raising campaign among district union locals.
- Canvassing for funds outside local plants.
- Distribution of handbills publicly listing brand names of Proctor-Silex products.
- Volunteers from other local unions to reinforce strike picket lines.

Winter's A Bit Distant

With unexpected, but welcome thaw after harsh weather spell, winter seems a bit distant these days — like these hockey players on Zwick's Island lagoon. It's had one effect on outdoor sports. These players are unable to manoeuvre on skates due to rough, soft ice conditions and must make do by shuffling along.

Veterans Start to Feel Effects Of A War Fought 25 Years Ago

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Once upon a time their raw energy powered an incredible machine: The fighting establishment of World War II.

That was going on a quarter of a century ago. And now, some of them are beginning to feel the effects of that awesome consumption of human effort.

And hopefully, to offset their disabilities they are making claims on a war that is now a generation of radical change away.

And likely, their numbers will increase, says Ian Urquhart, a man intimately connected with the latter-day personal effects of yesterday's world hostilities.

As a service officer for the Canadian Legion in Ontario, it is his job to help expedite veterans' problems through government processes.

To those ends he was in Belleville yesterday, holding one of his regular interview sessions.

And among the veterans seeking his advice there once again was a sufficient number to emphasize that, while World War II is history, it still presents contemporary human problems.

The young men who once strode briskly out to war are growing older. And the natural aging process only now is revealing the personal price they paid.

"This was a pattern established after World War I," says Mr. Urquhart. "Guys came out of the forces in their twenties. The things that happened to them in the service didn't bother them then.

"Now the average World War II veteran is in his fifties.

"What didn't bother a man of 30 is knocking him now."

And, as more veterans enter the age grouping, more disabilities may become evident, he feels.

Few of them may have little to do with enemy-inflicted injury. Most could result just from conditions of service.

Battle fatigue, now inducing nervous conditions, lengthy exposure to the elements bringing on arthritic complaints, the sustained tirades of artillery barrages resulting in bouts of deafness for men who once manned the guns.

Difficulties may understandably arise in processing pension claims based on such problems, says Mr. Urquhart.

The end complications of a World War II gunshot wound are easily traced. The incident would have been recorded in contemporary war musical files.

But to pin a handicap suddenly manifesting itself today on personal rigors endured 25 years ago poses obvious problems.

However, there are a number of things going for the veteran claimant.

Department of Veterans Affairs officials — who process all claims — are "very, very helpful and sympathetic," assures Mr. Urquhart.

Then there is his own function. Working out of Ottawa, as a Legion service officer he covers Eastern Ontario's 78 Legion branches.

His advice to veterans on how to expedite their problems through the proper government channels is given irrespective of membership in the Legion.

"The only important thing is that they are veterans," says Mr. Urquhart. "I never ask them if they're Legion members. It could matter less to me."

His personal background assures interviewees of a sympathetic hearing. At 37 he is in the "average age" group of World War II survivors. An airforce veteran, he himself suffers the disabilities of spinal arthritis.

Inevitably, the problem of veterans will be phased out in time.

But for years to come, Mr. Urquhart expects his workload to remain constant.

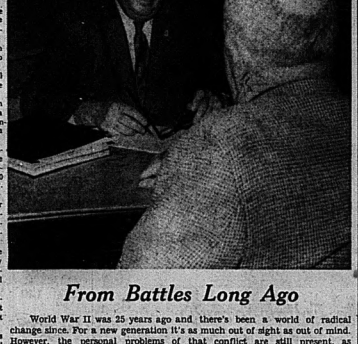
There are 960,000 war veterans still living — 840,000 of them from World War II. (The oldest is a grand old soldier of the Northwest Rebellion, now 102).

Expanding social welfare programs may eliminate many of the personal problems in years to come.

But some of the effects from the war of a generation ago could still be issues.

Pensions, for instance, still are "a sore point" with the Legion, says Mr. Urquhart.

The totally-disabled veteran was originally pensioned on a scale equivalent to wages earned by unskilled laborers in government service.



Subsequent pension increases have not kept pace with the pay hikes in the work category. Today a single man, 100 percent disabled receives $3,180. a married man $4,056.

"We've been trying for years to convince the government its scale is very unrealistic," says the Legion official.

Government social welfare schemes of the future may provide some measure of relief in security and medical treatment.

But the cause of the disabled war veteran will not slip from view, Mr. Urquhart indicates.

"The pensioner is always going to be with us — and he's the person with whom we're concerned."

From Battles Long Ago

World War II was 25 years ago and there's been a world of radical change since. For a new generation it's as much out of sight as out of mind. However, the personal problems of that conflict are still present, as Canadian Legion official Ian Urquhart — in Belleville yesterday — hears daily.

Western Stars Satisfied to Tie

* * * * *

Larose's Late Tally Provides Stalemate

MONTREAL (CP) — It isn't very often that some teams are satisfied with a tie but for the National Hockey League's Western Division All-Stars it constitutes an upset of some sorts, particularly when it comes against the top stars in the game.

The Western Division All-Stars, in reality castoffs from the older, established Eastern Division, scrambled but tied most of the way and eventually wound up earning a 3-3 deadlock in the 22nd annual NHL all-star game before 18,256 spectators Tuesday night.

Scotty Bowman coach of St. Louis Blues who handled the coaching duties for the Western Division team, said he thought the tie was as good as a victory.

"The tie was good for hockey in general and certainly good for the teams in our division," Bowman said. "I'm not going to say I was worried when the other team took the 3-2 lead in the third period, but it was an awfully nice tie to get.

"We got good performances from a lot of players out there tonight, but I was particularly pleased with the work of our kids like Danny Grant, Danny O'Shea and goaltender Bernie Parent.

"It was a great chance for them to show what they could do against some very select opposition and I think they came through very well."

On the other hand, Toe Blake, former coach of Montreal Canadiens who handled the Eastern Division team, said the only time he enjoyed the game was when his team led 3-2 early in the third period.

"Red Berenson, Jim Roberts and Claude Larose must have learned their lessons well from the time I coached them here," Blake said. "They got the goals against us and that was enough to make a game of it. I guess it was just a case of them paying me back."

Berenson and Roberts, both with the Blues now and Larose, who plays for Minnesota North Stars, all played for Blake while he was coach here.

Larose scored the tying goal with less than three minutes left in the game after combining with Grant and O'Shea.

The tie overshadowed a brilliant individual effort by Frank Mahovlich of Detroit Red Wings, who scored two goals for the East. Bob Nevin of New York Rangers was the other East goal-getter.

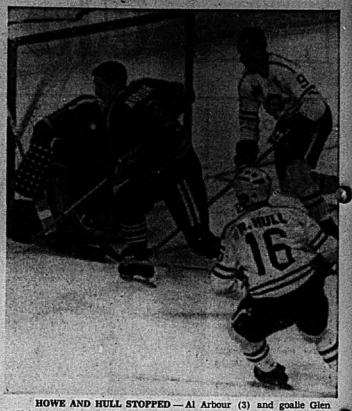
O'Shea started the play that led to Larose's equalizer when he stole the puck in the East zone and fed a pass to Grant, who passed the puck across the goal crease to Larose. It was tipped in behind Ed Giacomin of New York Rangers.

Giacomin shared the East's netminding duties with Gerry Cheevers of Boston Bruins, with Giacomin, who gave up two goals, playing the first and third periods. The West had 27 shots on goal.

Glenn Hall and Jacques Plante of the Blues and Parent shared the goaltending duties for the West. The East had 37 shots at the West net. Hall allowed one goal while Plante gave up two.

The two other goals scored by the West were strictly St. Louis efforts as the Blues had eight of 19 All-Stars.

Berenson put the Blues in front 1-0 early in the first period but Mahovlich got that back late in the period with his first goal of the game. Berenson was set up by veteran Doug Harvey and Noel Picard, both of the Blues.



Roberts managed the only goal in the second period when he beat Cheevers from close in after taking a breakaway pass from Berenson. Picard also drew an assist on the goal.

Mahovlich pulled the East back on even terms with his second goal of the game early in the third period and Nevin gave the East the lead for the first time when he scored at 7:20.

However, Larose came back with his equalizer at 17:07.

Larose said he was happy with the new format that provided an East-West clash instead of the All-Stars facing the Stanley Cup champions in the annual game.

This year's new format also called for members of the winning team to be paid $500 while members of the losing team would get $250. But because of the deadlock, each player was expected to receive $375.

HOWE AND HULL STOPPED — Al Arbour (3) and goalie Glen Hall of the West All-Stars combine to stop Bobby Hull (16) and Gordie Howe of the East All-Stars in the 22nd National Hockey League All-Star game in Montreal, It was the first time the east had met the west in an all-star game. (CP Wirephoto)

Nats' Coach Snaps at NHL: 'Think You Can Do Any Better?'

VANCOUVER (CP) — To an eight-year-old boy, a red Russian uniform or a white Canadian hockey outfit doesn't have any significance.

What counts with him is talent, ability, determination and sportsmanship.

This was brought home strongly Tuesday night at Vancouver's Coliseum where the Russian national team whipped Canada's national team 7-0 before a sell-out crowd of more than 15,000.

Outside the Canadian dressing room after the game, there was scarcely a young fan. But there were many crowded around the Russians' room.

"Can I have your hat Alexander?" asked one small boy of Alexander Ragulin.

"Will you autograph my program Igor?" asked another.

Inside the Canadian dressing room, coach Jackie McLeod was calm, but disappointed.

"We had a bad game and as a result, it looked like we don't have any hockey players on our club at all."

The Canadian coach disputed a statement by Punch Imlach, Toronto Maple Leafs' coach, who said after Canada's first loss to the Russians: "Not one member of the Canadian team could make the Leafs."

McLeod said: "I think we have four players who could make his club."

When asked to name them, he declined, but added: "If the NHL think they're that much better than the Russians, why don't they play them?"

Seth Martin, who played goal in the NHL last season with St. Louis Blues, and who was with the national team the previous season, said:

"If Canada ever wants to regain the international championship, it will have to have help from the NHL."

Martin is one of few players to have competed in both NHL and international ranks. He said he would like to see the NHL play the Russians, and he predicted the Russians would win their share of games in a 10-game series.

Babe Pratt, former NHL star and member of the Hockey Hall of Fame, wasn't impressed with the Russians.

He predicted that an NHL team would "handle the Russians as easily as they trimmed our national team here tonight."

But Aakady Thernichov, one of the Russian coaches, disagreed.

"There are seven players who played tonight who would not be part of a Russian team that would challenge the NHL," he said.

"There are four top teams in Russia on which to build a club that could challenge the NHL."

No Help Here

DENVER, Colo. (AP) — There's one man in Denver who knows he's a compulsive gambler and wants help.

The man wrote to the Colorado racing commission, enclosing a picture and his physical statistics.

He asked to be "barred from all race tracks in Colorado, particularly the dogs. . . ."

"I know this is an oddity, but this has to be done inasmuch as I bet too heavily."

The man, unidentified, still must fight his battle alone. The commission said he isn't licensed by the commission, so the commission has no jurisdiction to bar him from the tracks.

Fans Threatened

ORILLIA (CP) — Bill McGill, coach and general-manager of Orillia Terriers, threatened to pull his club out of the city Tuesday following a 4-3 win over Oakville Oaks which moved them into third place in the Ontario Hockey Association senior series standings.

"If I can't get the support of the fans, then I will take the club to a place where I can," McGill said in an interview following the game.

Only 325 fans turned out to see John Hall, Moe Galand, Grant Moore and Mike Draper score for Orillia. Goaltender Gerry McNamara assisted on Draper's second-period goal.

Oakville, which outshot the Terriers 28 to 26, got goals from Jack Price in the first and third periods.

The Follow-through

Billie Waldron (left) and Judy Davidson (right) show their form as they follow through after making shots during last night's inter-club competition at the Belleville Garrison Badminton Club. The competition was in preparation for Saturday's Central Ontario Class "C" championships to be held at RCAF Station Trenton.

Badminton Buffs Hold Fort at Armories

By MALCOLM JOBSTON
Staff Sportswriter

The Belleville Armories' list dormant much of the time but on Tuesday evenings and Saturdays throughout the winter months the old structure shows definite signs of life.

The Belleville Garrison Badminton Club holds the fort at the Armories at this time and has been doing so since the 1930's.

The 65-member badminton and social club has four player classifications - junior "A", "B", and "C" and also courts on the vast floor surfaces of the Armories.

A player above the junior age of 18 years competes in the "C" classification. A tournament championship in a sanctioned tournament forces a player to rove up to the next classification, ex. "C" to "B", where he must remain for three years, unless he steps up to a higher grouping.

The game of badminton requires little equipment a racquet, bird, sneakers and shorts as all kind is required. The use of good court facilities is then the prime requisite for a badminton club.

Club President Gene Refausse estimates that sixty percent of the Belleville members are recreational players who engage in tournaments just for experience, with other members being primarily tournament competitors.

An avid badminton player himself Gene stresses that badminton is a game which requires co - ordination of the mind and body. One must combine the strategical knowledge of where to place the bird with the physical skill of how to do it.

Normal strength is quite sufficient to play the game well. Good hand - eye co - ordination, better than average reflexes and the ability to react quickly are, in Gene's opinion, the most important and necessary assets for a badminton player.

He rates the service, the smash on offence and the backhand on defence as the three most essential aspects of the game which a player must master to become proficient.

Squash and table tennis are the sports which require nearly the same skills as badminton and therefore best complement badminton.

Badminton is a game for all ages, and many Belleville competitors, who range in age from eight to the late fifties will be at the Trenton Air Base Saturday to compete in the Central Ontario Class "C" championships.

Tuesday night the club held a warmup tournament for Saturday's competition with Gene Refausse and Mike Church capturing the Men's doubles title while Doug Grant and Chris Goyer finished in second spot.

Billie Waldron and Ken Potts won the Ladies doubles edging out Sue Smith and Barb Hart in the finals.

Fish and Game Club Members Swap Yarns at Annual Dinner

STAFF — It took a while for warmups, but midway through their annual ladies' night dinner last night, members of the Belleville and District Fish and Game Club were swapping fishing and hunting yarns in full gear.

About 170 turned out for a turkey supper, annual award presentations, and an entertaining slide show and commentary by famed naturalist Alma Wallace, covering her travels in the Alaska area.

Also on the agenda was the presentation of the club's third honorary life membership by president George Woodhouse to long-time Intelligencer sports editor George H. Carver.

Then it was time to talk about the ones that didn't get away.

Gordan Cooper's 46-pound muskie catch last summer earned the Patterson St. resident the Judge J. C. Anderson Trophy for the best fish caught in any category by a club member. The catch was also good for the Simpson-Sears' muskie prize.

Next down on the scales was Carmen Howard's 15-pound, 9 ounce pike, which qualified the Centre St. angler for the Walker Hardware award.

Stirling's Art McConnell won the Hinchey Trophy for the largest landing an 8-pound, one ounce Lake Trout.

Another Stirling fisherman made a clean sweep of the bass-catching honors. Robbie Maguire took home the Lipson Furniture and Hibbard Electric prizes for 5-pound large mouth and 3-pound small mouth bass catches.

Former Rivals Now Teammates

Musial, Campanella Enshrined

NEW YORK (AP) — Stan Musial and Roy Campanella, brilliant stars for 10 National League seasons, have become teammates on baseball's most illustrious roster.

Musial, who holds more individual records than any player in history, and Campanella, the great Brooklyn catcher whose career was cut short by a crippling auto accident, were voted into the baseball Hall of Fame Tuesday.

A panel of 340 members of the Baseball Writers Association of America combined the pair, who won NL Most Valuable Player awards three times apiece.

Musial was swept into the Hall in his first year of eligibility. The St. Louis Cardinals standout for 22 years was named on 317 ballots. Only Ted Williams had ever drawn a higher percentage of votes.

Campanella, paralyzed from the waist down since his accident 11 years ago this month, made the Cooperstown, N.Y., shrine after having fallen eight votes short of the necessary 75 per cent a year ago.

This time, he was named on 270 ballots and became the second Negro among the 95 players in the Hall. The first was Jackie Robinson, a former team-mate.

Lou Boudreau, former Cleveland shortstop and manager, was the only other candidate to receive more than 200 votes. He got 218, 37 less than were required.

Vancouver, Buffalo Rebuked

Seals to Stay in Bay Area

MONTREAL (CP) — Vancouver and Buffalo are miles apart geographically, but both have one thing in common—they will have to wait a while longer to find out if either or both will gain entry to the National Hockey League in the near future.

The league's board of governors spent a good part of Tuesday entertaining the fact that interests from both cities have made bids to purchase the attendance-shy Oakland Seals franchise.

At the end of the deliberations, Clarence Campbell, NHL president, emerged from the meeting to announce there will be no immediate shift of the Seals to either city. The governors had not even got to the voting stage on the subject but had deferred it until their next meeting in New York Feb. 18.

A Buffalo group, headed by Seymour Knox III, led a group known as Niagara Frontier Hockey Inc. in its application to transfer the ownership of the Seals and the location to Buffalo.

This group had filed application for transfer in time for the item to be placed on Tuesday's agenda.

However a later move by Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League, in conjuction with Labatt Breweries of Canada Ltd., to make a similar purchase did not take part in time to be placed in front of Tuesday's session.

"It is the decision of the league to have the Seals continue in the Bay area and everything will be done to keep it there," Campbell said, not ruling out the possibility of a move across the water to San Francisco from Oakland.

Summer Early For Olympic Star

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

For most of Canada it's winter, but in the humid confines of the University of Toronto Settlement Club it's just the beginning of the long, wet summer of Angela Coughlan.

After a four-month layoff, the tow-head who came to Canada from London as a baby is back in the tank preparing to defend the one world and eight Canadian swimming records she holds.

Angela was five-foot-five and weighed 120 pounds last year when she set a world record by going 1,650 yards against the clock in 18:47.8.

A few months later she celebrated her 16th birthday at the Olympic Games in Mexico City where she made the finals in the 400- and 800-metre freestyle events and shared a bronze medal in the 400-metre freestyle relay.

She also went down to about 110 pounds when stricken with a stomach ailment.

"She has got all that weight back and more," Angela's mother, Denise, says.

"She's about five-foot-six now and she has got to lose some of the 130 pounds she's carrying."

In the last year Angela has broken the Canadian freestyle records at 200, 400, 800 and 1500 yards and at 200, 400 and 800 metres.

She has travelled 50,000 miles to compete in New Zealand, South Africa, the United States and Mexico and won at 400 metres and 1,500 metres in the South African championships.

To do it, she had to travel 140 miles a day in two daily round trips from her home in Burlington, Ont., to Toronto to train under coach Nick Thierry.

"Now it's starting all over again," Denise Coughlan says.

"For now, it's only one trip a day. She goes in by commuter train and drives back with her father." Gerry Coughlan works as an engineer in Toronto.

Royals Out of Second

Mel Barrigar Landscapers broke a second place tie with Napanee Royals last night by defeating the Napanee girls 6-4 in a Quinte Women's Hockey League game.

Marjorie Reid paced the winners' attack with four goals and an assist while Susan Morton notched a goal and two assists and Nancy McCallum chipped in a goal and an assist.

Janice Workman with a pair of goals and Betty Galt and Donna Godfrey with singletons accounted for the Napanee scoring.

Blake Kerr Imperials Paste Kingston Midgets

Blake Kerr's Imperial midgets notched their highest goal total of the season last night, defeating Kingston Lakeshore Kinsmen 12-1, in preparation for the Ontario playdowns.

Gary Thompson, Greg Scarlett and Terry Meagher each fired a hat trick for the Imperial midgets. Allan Genereaux counted two goals and Doug James added a single goal to complete the Belleville scoring.

Goaltender Paul Muldoon played a strong game in the nets for the locals and drew an assist on one of Terry Meagher's goals.

The Imperial midgets are planning a Teenage Dance in the Armories Friday, January 31st, to raise money for their hockey ventures.

Attack on Beirut Airport Could Lead to War Says Pearson

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Former prime minister Lester Pearson said Tuesday the recent Israeli attack on Beirut airport could only lead to "all-out war" in the Middle East unless the great powers step in to settle the dispute.

But then he warned that either Soviet or American intervention would inevitably result in war.

In a wide-ranging question period with about 250 Queen's University students, Mr. Pearson said his greatest accomplishment as prime minister was the compromise with Quebec which brought the Canada Pension Plan into effect.

In what apparently was a reference to former state secretary Judy LaMarsh's recent critical book in her years in Ottawa, he said he had been "reading accounts of this which don't seem to me to have much relevance to the facts."

Other subjects Mr. Pearson touched on were:

—The rumor that he had been told off by former U.S. president Johnson for his 1965 speech in Baltimore, Md., calling for a bombing halt in Vietnam.

"I didn't get roasted. I didn't even get fried. He told me in no uncertain terms that I was wrong to go down there and say that. And I said I thought I might be helpful to him. But he didn't see it that way."

—Prime Minister Trudeau's recent criticism of the press for invasion of his private life.

"When you're in politics . . . you have to give some things up and one of them is privacy. It's irritating . . . but it's more irritating if they don't, if they just don't care."

—The choice of 'Give Us A Majority Government' as a liberal party slogan for the 1965 federal election.

"I think we should have emphasized more why we deserved a majority government."

—The recommendation of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism.

"I don't know if they will bring the country together, but if we don't do things like this we won't have a hope of keeping the country together."

—Bow ties.

"It's nice to be able to wear them now without someone saying it's a political symbol."

Mr. Pearson is to be at Queen's until January 28 for a series of lectures and debates.

Nixon Meets With Cabinet Today--Plans News Conference

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon will hold the first cabinet meeting of his fledgling administration today amid reports he plans to call a televised news conference within a few days.

The cabinet will meet following the swearing in of 11 of its 12 members together with top United Nations and budget aides.

Chief Justice Earl Warren will administer the oath in the East Room of the White House during ceremonies beginning at 8 a.m. EST.

Gov. Walter J. Hickel of Alaska, Nixon's designate as interior secretary, will not take part as the Senate still has to approve his appointment.

A White House spokesman said there was no "great wave of concern" that pro-conservationist senators would block the appointment.

Charles W. Yost, ambassador-designate to the United Nations, and Robert P. Mayo, Nixon's choice as director of the bureau of the budget, also will be sworn in.

The possibility of a televised news conference was raised by White House press aide Ronald Ziegler. He hinted it may be scheduled within a few days and also said Nixon was discussing delivery of his own State of the Union message to Congress.

He emphasized, however, no decision has yet been made.

President Johnson made his final State of the Union speech before Congress Jan. 14.

Nixon had a long schedule in his first full day as president Tuesday. It included a meeting of the National Security Council, the country's top security planning group, a discussion with Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff and a meeting with Gale Plaza, secretary-general of the Organization of American States.

Attending the nearly-hour-long meeting with Plaza were State Secretary William P. Rogers and Henry Kissinger, Nixon's national security affairs adviser.

The new president took only two breaks from his first full day in office.

One was to attend a reception for about 1,200 Republican campaign workers and other was to witness the swearing-in of his White House staff aides.

Goldwater Aide Gets Justice Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — An Arizona lawyer who figured prominently in the presidential campaigns of 1908 winner Richard M. Nixon and 1964 loser Barry M. Goldwater will be No. 2 man in the justice department.

Attorney - General-designate John N. Mitchell announced Tuesday that Richard G. Kleindienst, 43, of Phoenix, will be the deputy attorney-general.

The appointment must be confirmed by the Senate.

Another close friend of Goldwater, William H. Rehnquist of Phoenix, is to head the office of legal counsel.

Basford Called 'Shadow Boxing Champ' During Drug Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford moved on two fronts Tuesday with bills designed to protect the buying public.

While the Commons gave second reading to his drug prices bill, the Senate had a first look at his measure opening the way for the government to ban or regulate dangerous consumer products.

Both are amended versions of bills that died with the end of the last Parliament. The hazardous products bill, introduced and given first reading in the Senate, expands considerably on the kind of products subject to control.

There was no debate on the Senate bill, but in the Commons Mr. Basford continued to face a crossfire of criticism for members who felt the drug bill, designed to lower prices through broader imports and more competition, went too far or not far enough.

Raymond Rock (Montreal Lachine) joined two other Liberal MPs who spoke the previous day in arguing that the bill would damage the Canadian drug industry.

And on the other side of the House Les Benjamin (NDP Regina-Lake Centre) called the bill a "faltering and insufficient step in the right direction."

His colleague, John Gilbert (Toronto Broadview), called Mr. Basford the "shadow-boxing champion of Parliament." He said Mr. Basford had shadow-boxed with the National Hockey League, the Combines Act and advertising and was doing the same thing with the drug manufacturers.

Mr. Basford in turn said he was amused at the NDP charge that the legislation is ineffective.

He reminded NDP members that their party during the last election campaign predicted the Liberal government would cave in to a drug lobby and not reintroduce the drugs bill.

If the bill was ineffective, why all the fuss from the NDP during the campaign?

Mr. Basford said the bill, designed to lower prices through broader imports and more competition, is only one of five government steps toward lower prescription drug costs. He listed the other four:

The first had been removal of the 12-per-cent federal sales tax on drugs, followed by lowering of import duties on drugs coming into the country.

Next would be an information service to supply doctors with data on proven drugs and their cost.

The further step would be a pharmaceutical assistance act under which manufacturers could get loans to help improve their product.

And finally there would be discussions with the provinces on retail prices, which fell under their jurisdiction.

Mr. Rock endorsed the argument that the drug bill, in permitting wider imports, would force Canadian firms to stop production and instead become importers and distributors.

Many Canadians, now employed, would look to the U.S. in future for jobs, he said.

After the drug bill received second reading—now a routine stage under the new rules—the Commons turned to second reading of a bill to remove the five-per-cent interest ceiling on loans under the Fisheries Improvement Loans Act.

Fisheries Minister Davis said the change should make it easier for fishermen to get government-backed loans. They would be made for ships, fishing equipment and shore installations and the $20,000 limit would be raised, possibly to $35,000.

Opposition members greeted the measure with little enthusiasm.

Lloyd Crouse (PC—South Shore) a fishing company executive from Lunenburg, N.S., questioned where fishermen would get money to pay higher interest rates when their income already were down.

NDP House Leader Stanley Knowles said there was nothing much in the bill except the increased rates—on the pattern of earlier bills raising rates for farm loans.

PM Conference Ruled Out for Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau does not want to have a Commonwealth heads of government meeting here until French-English relations in Canada are in better shape, informants say.

In its concept and operations, the Commonwealth is English-speaking, though the secretary-general, Canadian Arnold Smith, is fluent in French as well as English.

Only two Commonwealth members can be said to be French-speaking: Canada and Mauritius, a group of islands in the Indian Ocean.

Mr. Trudeau is said to feel that, given the present state of French-English relations in this country, it would be inappropriate, at least in the next year or two, to hold in Ottawa what would in effect be a full-scale conference of prime ministers whose only working language here would be English.

Mr. Trudeau said last week in London that he has no strong feelings about having the next Commonwealth conference in Ottawa.

This is a change in attitude since the Pearson administration.

The conference just concluded in London was originally to have been held in Ottawa, But Centennial Year and last year's general election intervened.

The conference has met only once outside London. That was in Lagos, Nigeria, in 1966.

The next meeting, in 1970, likely will be in Barbados.

Kenya offered its capital, Nairobi, as the site of the next conference. However, several members, including Canada, showed little willingness to send representatives there at a time when Asians, mainly Indians, are being forced to leave Kenya.

There is a possibility that the Canadian delegation to the next conference will travel by ship instead of jet plane.

Mr. Trudeau and many members of his staff suffered from the jet syndrome in London. There is a six-hour time difference between Ottawa and London and the prime minister had a great deal of difficulty sleeping during his first few days in London.

Mr. Trudeau had to cancel one afternoon session of the conference to get some sleep and he complained of "feeling flu-ish."

By the end of his London and Rome visits, several of his aides were ill, one of them with pneumonia.

Double Trouble

Identical twins Terry and Tracy Bruce await a fingerprint expert's verdict on who's who. A nail-polish spot to tell them apart came out in the washtub. Mrs. DeWitt Bruce, of Detroit, says she plans to have a dot tattooed on one of the girls so they won't need to wear hospital ID bracelets all their lives. (AP Wirephoto)

French Failed to Negotiate in 1945

LONDON (AP) — Lord Mountbatten, the supreme Allied commander in Southeast Asia in the Second World War, is reported to have tried to get the French to negotiate with the Viet Minh in 1945 in a move that might have prevented 22 years of conflict in Vietnam.

This disclosed in dispatches from Mountbatten made public Tuesday after being withheld by the British government for fear of offending France. The Viet Minh were the forces of Ho Chi Minh, now president of North Vietnam.

Mountbatten's account said the French were helped back to power in Indo China by the British general in Saigon, Sir Douglas Gracy, who died in 1964.

The dispatches say the French had inadequate forces to reclaim their former colony, occupied by Japan in the war, and only gained control of Saigon, now the capital of South Vietnam, by a coup d'etat carried out with British assistance.

The London Daily Mail in a report on the Mountbatten papers calls his advice "one of history's great 'might-have beens'."

Pituitary Is Small But Mighty Gland

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the purpose of the pituitary gland and what vitamin does it require? — R. F. H.

It doesn't require any particular vitamin—but it is a mighty important little organ. It's no bigger than the size of a pea and is located at the base of the brain, just in back of the top part of the nose. But, my, what influence it has!

The pituitary could well be called the "master gland" of the body. It produces hormones which regulate the other glands — thyroid, pancreas, adrenals, ovaries, testes.

The other glands in turn, by a process called "feedback," keep the pituitary informed of their activity, so the "boss," or the pituitary, knows how operating at proper level—most of the time.

Serious trouble with the pituitary is not common, but if, for a hypothetical case, the pituitary failed to function, all the other glands would slow down. In such rare cases as removal of the pituitary, it then requires administration of proper hormones to govern those other glands, to keep the patient in reasonable health.

An added task of the pituitary is to control growth, by producing at the appropriate time in life, "growth hormone," about which experts are gradually learning some thing. But it's a difficult problem.

If the pituitary develops a tumor, the result can be acromegaly, or gigantism — the patient begins to grow. This is not an even, balanced growth, however. Some parts of the body become oversized, others do not. Some intricate (and fascinating and useful) surgical techniques have been developed to treat this.

Another pituitary chore is maintaining proper water balance in the body. This is controlled by the posterior part of the gland. Deficiency there results in diabetes insipid (quite different from the common "sugar diabetes") with the patient drinking and eliminating tremendous amounts of water. Medications to stimulate the proper part of the pituitary are employed to control this.

Individual differences in valving other glands also may occur — faulty secretion of thyrotropic hormone can mean deficient function of the thyroid, for example. In that case, medical science has become quite proficient in restoring proper balance. The same, within limits, is true of the function of some of the other endocrine glands.

Clearly, there is a lot yet to be learned about the endocrine (glandular) system, but it is encouraging to stop and take stock of what has been accomplished so far.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: A friend recently had a lump removed from the neck and the doctor called it a low grade malignancy. What is the difference between a low grade malignancy and what they call cancer? E. A. S.

Malignancy is a synonym for cancer. The term "low grade" is used for certain types that either do not grow rapidly or have little tendency to spread. Other types grow rapidly and metastasize (spread to other parts of the body) quickly.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it allowable for a person with only one kidney to do 30 minutes of physical exercise in a fully-equipped gymnasium? I am 64. Which is better, a sauna or a steam bath in my case? — Mrs. A. O. P.

Assuming that you are in fairly good health otherwise, there is no reason not to engage in the exercise you mention. A simple shower is all you need. A sauna or steam bath is not harmful but is not necessary — just a matter of preference on your part.

World Teems With Ideas

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Even though I have been asked it for more than 20 years, it never fails to surprise me that people should want to know "how do you come up with a different idea to write about every day?"

This is almost invariably the first question strangers ask when they meet me, and I have never found an adequate reply that would not seem like a rebuke or a preening of self-satisfaction.

The plain fact of the matter is that the world is teeming with ideas, and never more so than today. There are on my desk dozens of clippings and notations, all of them positively screaming to be written about. The real problem is how to find time to them adequately, and how to encompass them intelligently within a few hundred words.

Almost everything we have grown used to in the world requires re-examination and re-valuation today. Theology is changing almost daily; psychology is lilting itself by its own bootstraps; political economy would confound both Marx and the classical economists: education is experiencing a revolution: there is not a single area or discipline of human endeavor that is not being questioned, changed, expanded, refined, analyzed, and being extrapolated upon.

No one has to "think of" ideas; the problem is consistantly, at such a rate and volume that the real task is to sort out the significant ones from the transient ones. Modern life is full of fads and fancies, all the weird and exotic ephemera of a rich, insecure, bored, hysterical and anxious society.

To separate these passing sensations from the new concepts that are the harbingers of present and prophetic for the future if a far harder job than any that has ever confronted day on a different subject. For it is distressingly easy to be misled by what is merely faddish, the novel, the trivial, the vulgar and the sensational, the epiphenomena of our modern malaise.

St. Thomas defined intelligence as mainly "the art of separating and combining." He meant it consists in separating different elements that seem similar, and in combining similar elements that seem different. Anybody, for instance, can harangue indignantly about "law and order"; but it is merely sound and fury unless the writer knows how these two words differ, and how they must be combined — with the glue of Justice.

What should confound a journalist today is that there is too much to write about, and too little time and space in which to write it. The temptation toward over-simplifying is enormous, but it must be resisted as never before, in this complex and contradictory world of ours.

Hamilton Man Mine Beneficiary

TORONTO (CP) — William A. T. Gilmour of Hamilton, named in a court judgment sole beneficiary of the estate on which the rich Texas Gulf Sulphur Co. mine near Timmins is situated, said Tuesday night he is pleased with the decision.

The estate of Murray Hendrie owned part of the land on which the $2,000,000,000 copper-zinc-silver mine is located. It gave a two-year option in June, 1963, to Texas Gulf of New York to purchase the property for $18,000.

The option agreement provided that if Texas Gulf took up the option and put the property into production, the estate of Murray Hendrie would be entitled to 10 per cent of the profit from it.

The judgment by the Ontario Supreme Court means that Mr. Gilmour 65, is entitled to royalties from the mine, which went into production in 1967.

Mr. Gilmour said:

"I was surprised by the outcome because it was a complicated matter and I wasn't at all sure the decision would be in my favor."

The Supreme Court decision on the estate disinherits about 100 descendents of Mr. Hendrie's 10 brothers and sisters who last year asked for a court decision on the interpretation of the will.

Mr. Hendrie, who died in 1914, left his estate to the widow's children on her death. He had none of his own. Mr. Gilmour was the son of Mr. Hendrie's widow by a previous marriage.

Seaway Tolls Claimed Irritant to Business

OTTAWA (CP) — Demands for abolition of St. Lawrence seaway tolls were raised on behalf of iron ore and grain interests Tuesday at the joint annual conference of Canadian and U.S. Great Lakes shipowners.

Albert L. Fairley, president of Hollinger Mines, said the Canadian government holds "a rather foolish and ridiculous" position in support of seaway tolls, "which are hurting the iron ore industry in Canada and actually helping the U.S. industry."

J. E. McWilliam, president of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, said abolition of seaway tolls is a measure necessary to the bolstering of Canada's grain export position. He said Canada needs to do itself all the favors it can to stay in the grain-exporting business.

But delegates to the joint conference of the Dominion Marine Association and the U.S. Lake Carriers' Association heard the other side of the seaway toll story from R. S. Cope, research commissioner for the Canadian transport commission.

He said it is a basic principle of the new Canadian transportation policy that users pay to use facilities provided at public expense.

"If the user does not pay for facilities provided at public expense, the taxpayer has to bear the burden. This produces distortions in the nation's transportation system and in the economy."

Capt. Philip Hurcomb, general manager of the Dominion Marine Association, said the seaway is still in its development stage after 10 years of operation and therefore is entitled to support from the public treasury, just as the development of railways was assisted with public funds late in the 19th century.

Harry N. Cook, executive vice-president of the U.S. National Waterways Conference, expressed support for efforts of Canadian shipowners in their toll-abolition campaign in Canada. Noting that the United States levies no tolls on inland waterways except its sections of the St. Lawrence seaway, he said there is a danger that the toll idea may spread south from Canada.

Mr. McWilliam warned that Canada's agricultural economy is based too strongly on wheat, instead of resting on a variety of grains.

Capt. Hurcomb described the Canada Wheat Board as "an autocratic, arrogant body" that is not doing the selling job the government wants the country to believe it is.

"Some people think the board's money is in a van counting the day's receipts when the attack occurred. The slayers took no money.

Four other members of the Warlords held earlier for questioning were role released.

Gang Leader Charged In St. Louis Shooting

Meanwhile, Illinois state police began patrolling sections of the city plagued by shootings in recent months. They were called in at the request of Police Chief Virgil Baltese.

One survivor, 22-year-old Dan Roberts of Washington, D.C., said the seven victims, members of a magazine sales crew, wouldn't accept anything less than two years at the time."

Mr. Powell is also prosecuting the Rush case.

Britstone pleaded guilty in 1967 to a charge of conspiring to defraud the public of up to $100,000,000 and got a one-year sentence plus a $10,000 fine from former magistrate David L. Coon.

"There was a deal made with the Crown. . . ." said Britstone. "I was the originator of it."

He said he never spoke to the magistrate, but Mr. Powell and Mr. Humphrey did.

Britstone testified Monday how he was hired by Rush as a foreign transfer agent in Nassau in 1966 after Britstone's wife had loaned Rush $5,000.

The trial continues.

Witness Says Deal Made With Crown

TORONTO (CP) — Manuel (Manny) Britstone Tuesday testified that he, his lawyer, the Crown attorney and the magistrate made a deal on a 1967 conspiracy charge against him so that he would testify against stock promoter Myer Rush.

Britstone, 50, was the first witness in the trial of Rush, who is charged with possession of $5,940 in cheques obtained by fraud. Rush, 44, was extradited from England last year to face the charge.

Britstone told Rush's lawyer, James Karellis, he had heard he could receive five years in prison on the conspiracy charge. He said he went to see special Crown prosecutor Clay Powell with his lawyer, David Humphrey, "and he (Mr. Powell) wouldn't accept anything

'Sermons in Stones'

Julia, Doris Day Show Are Top New Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — Had William Shakespeare been around 200 years later, knocking out material for what is known as "The media," it is probable that his line about "sermons in stones" would have rolled out of his electric typewriter as "sermons in situation comedies."

By order of the television code, the lesson that "crime doesn't pay" is implicit in every program involving crooks and the law. There also seems to be some unwritten rule about packing a neat little lesson in every-day living in among the laughs of our people-next-door comedies.

On a single night—Tuesday—viewers learned painlessly from Julia that pride must never be confused with self-righteousness, and, 30 minutes later, The Doris Day Show was a demonstration about interfering parents.

All things cnsidered, NBC's Julia and its helpful hints are cnsiderably easier to take than CBS's homilies wrapped around the person of Miss Day. For one thing, the former is a wittier, more urbane half hour which, while hardly a realistic portrait of the home and office life of a registered nurse, still has plenty of spirit and that elusive quality called charm.

Miss Day can handle broad comedy with the best of them; she survived several undignified knocks in the seat of her tailored slacks and was thoroughly smeared with raw eggs in the most recent outing. But the series is beset by the kind of bogic, tired stories that were predictable as far back as The Donna Reed Show. It is further afflicted by a loud laugh track.

One of the great pluses of Julia is its forthright handling of Negro-white relationships. In the Tuesday night show, the attractive character played by Diannah Carroll encountered a touchy, militant football star obviously on the lookout for slights and put-downs. At the climax, Julia read the young man off, of course, and changed his life.

Somehow Miss Carroll's winning ways and the permissive writing permit what could be pretty sticky stuff to come off nicely. "Julia" is week in and week out, remains a bright new series that really deserved its niche among the top 30 shows.

NBC's Laugh-In climbed back into first place in the most recent Nielsen ratings report, covering the period between Jan. 5-12.

Other entertainment shows in the top 10 were, in the following order, NBC's Bonanza, CBS's Gomer Pyle and Beverly Hillbillies, NBC's Dragnet, CBS's Ginsmoke, NBC's Dean Martin Show, CBS's Family Affair, NBC's Ironside and ABC's Bewitched.

'Pretty Boy' Takes Dive

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

One year ago Bob (Pretty Boy) Felstein was one of the hottest pieces of professional boxing in Canada.

He had not fought anyone of note but he was big and young-boasting he could beat Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo of Toronto, and promoters were beginning to sit up and listen.

One matchmaker from the Prairies spent a week in Toronto trying to arrange a Chuvalo-Felstein bout because the champion's future was in doubt and the Canadian Boxing Federation was ordering a title defense.

Felstein?

He's one of the prettiest cab drivers in Toronto.

"I'm still a fighter," Felstein says. "I still train just as hard. The only reason I don't is cab licenses" was because it disciplines me. For three years I haven't worked. It's time I used my spare time to earn."

The bizarre set of events that put his handler behind in the tune of $20,000 in living expenses began four years ago.

Felstein was a janitor, making $6,000 a year. He was a talented amateur boxer and a Toronto syndicate picked him as a prospect. It's finance his full-time training. The syndicate soon gave up when they said they could not arrange for United States bouts because they refused to "sell a piece of him."

Pat Giardiano took over the contract three years ago, giving Felstein a weekly living allowance while he trained and charging it against his future earnings—which didn't develop in four fights in 1967.

He fought once last year and collected $1,350.

"In March I signed to fight Chuvalo, but that fell through. In April, we signed again, but the venue was changed from Toronto to the West and we declined to switch."

The Prairie promoter signed a title match for Calgary between Chuvalo and Jean Claude Roy of Montreal instead.

"Now I wish we had taken it," Felstein says, "because I'm still convinced I can beat George.

"July was to be the big one for me against Ernie Terrell. The week before the fight, I had an infected elbow and the postponement became a cancellation."

In August he was to fight in Houston, Tex., "but my opponent got sick."

Vikings' Canadian Imports Look for Better 1969 Season

WASHINGTON (CP) — Coach Bud Grant of Minnesota Vikings took the National Football League team farther in 1968 than it had ever been before.

Quarterback Joe Kapp, gaining respect as a tough competitor, contributed to making the Vikings the surprise of the season in finishing first in the Central Division.

The question for 1969 is whether the two, both of whom were in the Canadian Football League, can do as well in 1969—or better. A sound attack, perhaps most notably a shortage of top-threat pass receivers, is one drawback to a club with a more-than-adequate defence.

"We don't have the talent the Colts have," Grant conceded after losing 24-14 to Baltimore in a playoff game for Western Conference championship. Kapp, former Calgary Stampeder and British Columbia Lion player, threw 44 passes and completed 26 of them and also ran 10 times for 52 yards to lead the Minnesota ground attack.

He had also taken a physical beating that forced Colt linebacker Mike Curtis to suggest "He must have gotten tough in Canada." Grant said he didn't know "anybody who ever played harder."

Grant is a perfectionist who in 10 years of coaching Winnipeg Blue Bombers set a CFL record of five championships and four Grey Cups. He came to the Vikings two years ago. Before the playoff with Baltimore, he was asked to look back over the two years.

Grant is not a great talker and manages to convey the impression that not many questions asked about football are intelligent.

How had 1968 been different for him than 1967?

"The difference is that we won three, lost eight and tied three in 1967," Grant said crisply.

"This year, we won eight and lost six."

Had he been surprised after being elected by most experts for last place in a division consisting of the defending champion Green Bay Packers, Chicago Bears and Detroit Lions?

"We're not in this thing for fun," was Grant's reply. "We expect to win. Joe Kapp had a full season this time. Last year he came to us after the training camp had finished. He's no rookie. He has played well for us."

But the Vikings had their troubles, too.

Injuries removed their top rookie, flanker Bob Grim. Quarterback Gary Cuozzo, rated by some as better than Kapp, broke a shoulder early in the season. Bob Lurtsema, top Viking runner last year, was out most of the season with a broken leg.

Kapp is six feet, two inches tall, 215 pounds, dark-haired with a scar from some distant Vancouver episode running down the right side of his square jaw. He finished 13th among NFL passers in 1968.

He has been described as possessing a running style akin to that of a deer with a broken leg or of a stork with leg pains. He played two years with Calgary and six with British Columbia and is a man who takes his time about answering questions.

Could he call his style in 1968, in which he passed little in some games and ran a lot, an evolution of Canadian-style roll-out action?

"I didn't roll out for the last six years in Canada," says Kapp. That was when he was with British Columbia. "Some games you try to do one thing and some games you try something else, whatever seems to work best."

He says it is not that easy to compare the Canadian and National Football Leagues quickly.

"Canada has good football players, too—that isn't the big difference to me—although not as many good players.

"But there are more teams (8 to nine) and more personnel on each team. This year, I knew my own players better and had a better line on the opposition."

Minnesota closed out its season Jan. 5 at Miami in the annual NFL runner-up game, facing Dallas Cowboys. The Vikings lost 17-13. Kapp played the first half and completed eight of 19 passes and Cuozzo completed seven of 16.

Until further notice, Kapp still is No. 1 in Grant's book.

Labor Leader Says Congress Will Press for Better Wages

TORONTO (CP) — Organized labor will continue to "rock the boat" until it wins substantial gains for hundreds of thousands of underpaid workers, President Donald MacDonald of the Canadian Labor Congress said Tuesday.

"There are, unfortunately, a lot of misconceptions abroad with regard to wages and the present economic situation," he said in a speech to the annual meeting of the Religion-Labor Council of Canada.

An Economic Council of Canada report pointed out the extent and severity of "poverty" among Canadians. Mr. MacDonald said, in "one of the most damning indictments of contemporary Canadian society that could possibly be made."

Much attention had been paid to reports in recent years of some workers getting wage increases amounting to 30 per cent. But such settlements affected only a minority of workers and in many cases were a "catching-up process." Many others were receiving inadequate wages.

"May I remind you of the prolonged Procter-Silex strike at Picton with employees receiving base rates of $1 cents an hour for women and $1.27 for men."

Mr. MacDonald said a study of Ontario wage rates last fall showed 40 per cent of retail trade employees earn less than $1.50 an hour. In the clothing industry the number below $1.50 an hour was 43 per cent, in knitting mills 51 per cent, in laundries and cleaning establishments 60 per cent and in hotels and restaurants 74 per cent.

At the same time, labor was barraged with suggestions that it slack off on wage demands, "that we must stop pressing for wage increases because we will rock the boat."

"Well, let me say we are going to continue to press for better wages and better conditions; and in the light of circumstances I have just been talking about I think it is time there was a good deal more boat-rocking done."

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For January 23

Your birthday today: This will be a restless, searching year in which you find many of the things you'd like to develop are already committed elsewhere. To create your own is very difficult but may be worth the effort. Sentimental interests thrive space. Today's natives are rather gregarious, people their smugly individualistic characteristics. Feather is people personal identity is important.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You hinder yourself a bit with too many conflicting urges. Attend to health, no matter how you feel, but particularly if there is the slightest persistent symptom.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): A more insular position goes better today. If you must work in close touch, at least forget to mention any of your personal affairs. At soon as you can, go home and get comfortable.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Abrupt comments are easy to avoid, impossible to retrieve; see that your side of everything flows smoothly and never mind how anybody else is doing.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Make room, somebody else arrives who can also think. His solution may be as good as yours. Let others talk, while you listen and learn. Make a pleasant gesture for your own this evening.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): If you are cowardly instead of brave today, you'll regret it. Do a cheerful demeanor, watch your step in amenities and legal details. Romance is not favored, so wait.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Good work and worry do not mix. This being the case, let a conscientious job be your outlet. Remember older people are no more scared than you are, and act accordingly.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): You and your money are in great demand. Also your friends are a bit up in the air over nothing. Have the patience to put up with this nonsense. Be honest with your mate. It's all right.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Resolutions about better health are in order. Just stick to them once you make them. The orthodox approach is better in all directions. Do your work seriously, then play this evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Protect your progress by looking at a reasonable time with some caution. Your friends will know as much as or more than you do about a critical matter. Do not incur debts at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Associates during the day, your loved ones during the evening will all be happier if you do not take a critical attitude or offer ratings of people and their actions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Haste is the factor to avoid. Everything else in time goes with you and your progress, but not immediately. Have the forbearance to mark time.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): The emphasis is on your inner self and how it is thriving. If you can take the day off without penalty, do so, and pursue the cultivation of your personal studies.

Lower prices are really important, as Loblaws discovered several months ago from its Consumer Survey. That's when we immediately launched our continuing "New Look" program of lower prices.

But my mother says that lower prices alone will not help some of the shoppers she sees in supermarkets because they don't know how to shop wisely for the family table.

To help these shoppers, many of the community colleges in Ontario are sponsoring evening courses in consumer education. For example, a new ten-week course in "Consumer Education In Meal" begins tonight at 7 p.m. at George Brown Community College in Toronto (21 Nassau Street—no stairs to climb). Its organizer, Arthur Buck, says that shoppers would make better purchases if they knew what to buy in the first place.

I heartily recommend Mr. Buck's interesting, informative and demonstrated lectures.

P.S. Any community college that does not have a consumer education course will be happy to start one—all you have to do is ask for it—and you should.

Four Major Industries Prospects for Belleville

Quebec Minister Sees de Gaulle

'68 Commission Work on Record

By DONALD MacKENZIE, Staff Reporter

Belleville's 1968 industrial commission voted itself out of business yesterday afternoon but not before it added a rosy hue to the city's industrial picture.

In a dazzling forecast obviously designed to get the commission's activities on the record, acting chairman Fred Deacon revealed that four major industrial developments were distinct possibilities in the year ahead.

"A total of 400,000 square feet of new industrial development is in various stages of serious negotiation," said Mr. Deacon in his report.

Without using names, he said a major international food manufacturer will in all likelihood announce the location of a 150,000 square foot plant in the city.

"We are also negotiating with a large appliance manufacturer for an 84,000 square foot plant as well as a national service industry interested in locating its training school in our community, allied closely with a major motel chain."

A fourth industry (heavy goods) was named as a serious prospect for a 140,000 square foot plant employing three shifts of workers.

Gerald Joyce, the new chairman of the industrial commission, this morning concurred with Mr. Deacon's indication that Belleville is in for a large industrial expansion because of prospects already in the planning stages.

However, Mr. Joyce said that since he has not yet had the opportunity to sit down with Industrial Commissioner Ray Brown and go over everything in detail, he could not specifically name square feet, dollar or employee figures.

A meeting of the new commission will be called shortly, said Mr. Joyce, to acquaint its members with what is coming in the near future and to familiarize the membership with industrial problems that must be overcome.

Mr. Deacon referred to the troubles which beset the commission last year when he said "it was because of the knowledge we all had of the industrial expansion at our doorstep that the majority of the board chose to keep its own counsel and to weather the storm of political harassment."

Mr. Deacon was referring to a confrontation between the commission and Mayor J. Russell Scott after the mayor objected to the commission's appointment of directors, refused to attend the meetings and told council he had "lost faith" in the commission's operation.

After a series of meetings, city council gave the commission a vote of confidence and established a committee to review the makeup of the commission.

As a result of the committee's report, the commission's directorate increased from seven to nine directors and membership on the 22-man board became the choice of council rather than of the industrial commission itself.

Shots in the Kremlin

Madman Fires on Parade, Slightly Wounding Cosmonaut

MOSCOW (CP) — A mentally unbalanced young man fired several shots at a motorcade led by the Soviet Union's four cosmonaut heroes Wednesday, severely injuring a chauffeur and inflicting slight wounds on cosmonaut Georgy Beregovoy, the Soviet foreign ministry said today.

The shooting took place before more than 1,000 onlookers at the entrance to the Kremlin, but it was hushed up for nearly 24 hours. Official confirmation of the incident came only after reporters asked government spokesmen for details.

A foreign ministry official said the gunman was "schizophrenic."

Following the four cosmonauts in their open car was a long line of closed limousines carrying members of their families, other cosmonauts and leading government and Communist party officials.

A late unofficial report carried by Reuters said the cars containing the top Russian leaders had left the cavalcade just before it arrived at the Kremlin, and were not in any party.

The shooting apparently was kept from the foreign press to avoid spoiling the Kremlin ceremony that honored the four new cosmonauts. Soviet news media ignored it.

The foreign ministry spokesman said he had no details on the incident.

The gunman, who was not identified, was immediately seized by onlookers. The fact that he has been described as schizophrenic indicated the case will be treated as the act of a madman who had no political motive.

The incident began leaking out from unofficial sources today. One Soviet source said Beregovoy was cut only by broken glass, not hit by a bullet.

The foreign ministry spokesman, told of this and other unconfirmed details, said "the facts as you have them look place."

The attack occurred at Borovitsky Gate, one of the main entrances to the Kremlin compound, shortly after 2 p.m.

There was no evidence that the gunman fired at the four cosmonauts who were standing up in the back of a convertible limousine.

The cosmonauts — Vladimir Shatalov, Boris Volynov, Alexei Yeliseyev and Yevgeny Khrunov — were being honored for their successful flight in Soyuz 4 and Soyuz 5 last week.

Cosmonaut Bergovoy, who made his orbital flight last October, was riding in a closed limousine behind the four new spacemen. All other surviving cosmonauts in the Soviet space program also were in the parade.

Quebec's 'Justice' Assailed

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec province was described today by a royal commission as only "marking time" in the fight against crime. It recommended radical reform "to humanize the administration of justice."

Police, lawyers and judges, were all bludgeoned in an outspoken attack by the five-man commission which said "Quebec doesn't have an over-all justice policy".

The justice commission, set up nearly two years ago by Justice Minister Jean-Jacques Bertrand, issued the first volume of its final report today, describing aspects of justice administration with words like:

"Repressive and irrational, vindictive, profound injustice, completely outraging, incoherent, arbitrary, instinct reigns, draconian, confusion."

A plea for "a new basic philosophy" in the justice system, based on "respect for the fundamental rights of the individual" came from the commission, headed by lawyer Yves Prevost, 60.

Mr. Prevost, who served as municipal affairs minister and provincial secretary in the Union Nationale government of the late Maurice Duplessis, led the commission on a tour of several nations to find that:

"Quebec presents the image of a pretty vindictive state in treatment of the accused and the prisoner".

Tornadoes Kill 15

HAZLEHURST, Miss. (AP) — A series of tornadoes knifed across central Mississippi early today, killing at least 15 persons and injuring scores.

One twister carved a half-mile swath through Hazlehurst, 30 miles south of Jackson, and searchers reported eight dead and several injured. The Mississippi highway patrol reported seven killed in Simpson County between Mendenhall and Harrisville, east of Hazlehurst.

Hospitals at Hazlehurst and Mendenhall were reported filled and victims of the tornadoes were being sent to hospitals in Jackson.

Pueblo Captain Faces Possible Court-martial

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — A navy court told Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher Wednesday that he was suspected of violating naval regulations in surrendering the intelligence ship Pueblo to the North Koreans.

He was informed by the five admirals constituting a court of inquiry that anything he said from now on might be used against him in court-martial proceedings.

But Bucher, obviously shaken by the statement, said he would continue to give "full details" of the Pueblos capture and of the 11 months he and his 81 surviving crew members spent in captivity.

Bucher resumes his testimony today—the first anniversary of the seizure of the ship by the North Koreans.

Wednesday, Bucher, 41, described how he gave up the Pueblo with her guns still covered. The court recessed briefly after he told of "receiving" aboard a party of North Korean riflemen about 20 miles off Wonsan Harbor and how they prodded his crew to sitting positions on the deck.

After their return, his face tensed as he heard counsel for the navy, Capt. William Lemmon, declare: "Commander Bucher, it is my duty to tell you that facts revealed in this court of inquiry render you a suspect of a violation of USNR Article 0730."

"And you are further advised that you don't have to make any further statement on it and any further statement on it may be used as evidence against you in a subsequent trial."

A court of inquiry is not a military trial, like a court-martial, but only an investigative hearing. Nevertheless Bucher's status suddenly had changed from "a party to the court" to "suspect." Shortly after the crew's release just before Christmas at least two navy admirals had called Bucher and his men heroes.

Newsome quoted regulations: "The commanding officer shall not permit his command to be searched by any person representing a foreign state nor other personnel under his command to be removed from that command by such a person, so long as he has the power to resist."

Bucher's civilian lawyer, E. Miles Harvey, immediately demanded: "Commander, at the time the North Koreans first set foot on your ship did you any longer have the power to resist?"

"No, I did not," Bucher answered.

Irish Protestants Riot in St. Paul's

LONDON (AP) — Irish Protestant supporters of Rev. Ian Paisley said today they intended to subpoena John Cardinal Heenan and the Archbishop of Canterbury to testify in court over Wednesday night's riotous service in St. Paul's Cathedral.

Rev. Brian Green, a London Baptist minister who is a close associate of Paisley, said:

"This will be a big test case. We claim the service was illegal because it was not according to the (Church of England) prayer book."

Protestant extremists yelling "No popery" tried to wreck the service in St. Paul's, which Cardinal Heenan had been invited to address as part of the worldwide Christian Unity Week.

Scores of demonstrators were ejected from the cathedral by ushers and Plainclothes police when they waved aloft Bibles and shouted anti-Roman Catholic slogans.

The only one arrested was Rev. Thomas James Ivan Foster, 23, minister in Paisley's Free Presbyterian Church at Brookeborough, County Tyrone.

Detective David Chapman said Foster was blocking the way of the Archbishop of Canterbury by shouting and waving his arms in the cathedral's centre aisle.

After Foster pleaded not guilty today to two charges of riotous and indecent behavior in the cathedral, police asked for the case to be heard later so that they could be legally represented. The charges were brought under an old Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction Act.

Hearing was set for Feb. 24 and Foster was released on £10 ($28) bond.

Cardinal Heenan, believed to be the first Roman Catholic cardinal ever to appear formally in the 17th century cathedral, won applause from many of his listeners when he said the demonstration showed "the need for the ecumenical movement."

"Of course," he added, "I realize these are not members of your usual congregation."

Changes Made in Organization

Gerald Joyce Heads Industrial Commission

Out with the old and in with the new was the story of the Belleville Industrial Commission yesterday.

Yesterday afternoon saw the last meeting of the old commission wrapped up with the chairman's report by Fred Deacon and a resolution being passed to change the make-up of the commission.

And last night at the meeting of the new commission Gerald Joyce was elected to head the organization assisted by vice-president elect Robert Aikken.

Six directors were chosen from the membership and three were appointed by city council, Ald. Don Williams, Gerald Joyce and by virtue of office Mayor J. Russell Scott.

Giving council the power to choose the members of the commission and have three representatives on the board of directors was a resolution passed by the old commission at yesterday afternoon's year end meeting.

Of the new board only Gerald Joyce and Mayor J. Russell Scott have ever served on the commission before.

Two former chairmen of the Belleville Industrial Commission yesterday expressed some dissatisfaction with council's action concerning the commission.

Both Jack Ellis and J. C. (Pat) Houston made reference to the council at the final meeting of the old industrial commission.

"I'm not so happy myself that this organization has become so council dominated", said Jack Ellis, who along with Mr. Houston was awarded a plaque for outstanding service to the commission.

A motion made by Mr. Houston accounted for the other reference to council when the former chairman moved the commission recognize the outstanding contributions made by Fred Deacon who has been acting-chairman since the resignation of George Hume last summer.

Mr. Houston blamed city council for "arbitrarily failing to ask him (Mr. Deacon) to remain on the commission".

"This is the thanks he gets", said Mr. Houston who also expressed regrets at the loss of Mr. Deacon's experience and knowledge as well as his hard work.

"It is the least this lame-duck commission can do to recognize him".

The motion to recognize Mr. Deacon's contributions was applauded by all the directors and was unanimously passed.

Mr. Houston also expressed appreciation at yesterday's meeting for the confidence of council in appointing him to the 1968 commission but turned down the appointment.

Almost all of the 14 members and directors who resigned from the 1968 commission were unhappy about city council's recommendations to expand the membership from seven to nine and to allow council to appoint the members.

Director A. D. Revill, in his letter of resignation, stated he did not think the new setup would make any contribution to effectiveness of the organization. Others expressed the same sentiments.

Nevertheless, as the directors submitted their resignations yesterday, their last important piece of business was to pass a resolution to change the make-up of the commission and comply with council's wishes.

Four New Industries in Prospect Here

The new board of directors consists of three members of council, Gerald Joyce, Donald Williams and, by virtue of office, Mayor J. Russell Scott.

Others from the membership elected to the board at last night's meeting were Robert Aikken, Robert Leely, Lou Lewis, Bruce Nixon, Bruce Curtis and Dr. J. M. Hartt.

Of the new membership of the industrial commission, only chairman Gerald Joyce and Mayor Scott have ever served on it before.

None of the members of the resigning commission will be on the new organization.

Mr. Deacon, in his afternoon speech, paid tribute to the courage of his fellow directors.

"It would have been much easier for us all to resign and then publicly strike back at those who distorted our efforts. Our motives and our efforts were publically questioned and we came under heavy attack from within and without," he stated.

However, the acting chairman also emphasized that even with the turbulence over the commission in past months "Belleville is on the move."

The greatest pitfall to gaining new industry, according to Mr. Deacon is the attitude that achieving industrial success is related by some directly to political success.

With the correct attitudes towards industrial expansion viewing it as a social obligation and a willingness to spend the money needed Mr. Deacon foresees a bright future.

"It is the employment of people that brings the prosperity we seek."

"People — employment — wages — these are the key contributors to a prosperous growing community," he finished.

C. L. R. Gray is the man who advises Unemployment Insurance Commission on prosecutions in Ontario. As legal counsel he was in Belleville lecturing UIC teams taking anti-fraud course.

Fraud Prosecutions Jump

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Ah! Those were the days!

Remember the hopes of a little unearned income from federal coffers?

Required was a mere fraudulent claim for unemployment benefits.

Not that there wasn't retribution. Some were caught, hailed into court.

Some — but not all.

Now the scene is changing. And as good a spokesman as any for the new era is C. L. R. Gray:

"We will uncover more and more fraud. And it will mean more and more prosecutions".

For the public-funds predator the intent of his prediction is as chilling as it is serious.

Mr. Gray knows what he's talking about.

He's Ontario regional legal counsel for the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

In Belleville yesterday, his forecast could be met with confidence.

He was addressing the people whose job it is to track them up — a class of 40 UIC auditors currently taking a two-week investigation course in Belleville. When it ends tomorrow they will almost double the number of commission fraud investigators in Ontario.

As legal counsel, Mr. Gray is the man who advises on all UIC fraud prosecutions in Ontario.

It's a post now busier than ever as the UIC steps up its campaign against unlawful claims that has drained its treasury of millions.

Mr. Gray estimates he prosecutes as many as 20 prosecutions daily from various UIC offices around Ontario.

The caseload is going only one way: Up!

It's simply inevitable.

The "investigation system has been overhauled and updated. This new sophistication, manned by a heavily-reinforced investigation staff, must result in more fraud cases.

"We're not just sitting around the corner waiting to nab people." Mr. Gray stresses.

The stepped-up anti-fraud campaign has produced results since it was launched last year.

The courts also are taking a sterner attitude on convictions, says Mr. Gray.

Penalties can range between $50-$75 on each charge — and each fraudulent claim for a week's UIC benefits means a separate charge.

"In some areas the courts are hitting even harder, giving no option of a fine but up to 30 days in jail," the UIC lawyer claims.

There are other sorts of reaction. Suddenly, with the publicity the anti-fraud campaign attracts, there are more guilty consciences at large.

"Now the public is making more and more voluntary disclosures of fraud," say Mr. Gray.

And it's not only workers who are involved in the UIC drive.

Intent of the campaign is to protect all taxpayers, says Mr. Gray.

Employers who fail to comply with UIC legislation — thus victimizing their workers — also are liable for prosecution, he warns.

The investigators course, involving UIC personnel from around Quinte, is being held at the Hotel Quinte. It ends this weekend.

The Belleville and Suburban Roads Commission will spend the major share of its 1969 budget will spend the major share of its 1969 budget on reconstruction of another section of Wallbridge Road in the Loyalist College area.

Roads Commission chairman Harry Morrow told members of Hastings county council Wednesday that his commission would spend $106,000 in construction this year, of which all but $5,000 would be on the Wallbridge Road.

The total suburban roads budget for the year is estimated at $134,077 of which about $22,000 will be spent on maintenance.

Mr. Morrow said his commission would have hoped to complete reconstruction of No. 2 highway and the CN double trackcks this year but with funds limited by Belleville's one half mill levy on its equalized assessment, this would be impossible in 1969.

He explained that the city levy for suburban roads was limited by the municipal act to one half mill which will raise $27,648 this year.

The city levy is matched by the county with the remaining 50 per cent of the suburban roads budget coming from the department of highways through subsidy.

Last year a section of Wallbridge Road past Loyalist College was rebuilt although front conditions in the fall prevented completion of the contract.

The remainder of last year's construction contract will be completed as soon as weather permits, while tenders will be called for reconstruction of a second section of the road.

This year's contract will include construction of a new bridge over Jones Creek at an estimated cost of $42,300.

In 1970 the remainder of the road south to No. 2 highway will be reconstructed and the entire 4 miles will be paved.

Future plans for Wallbridge Road call for construction of a grade separation over the CN double tracks.

Mr. Morrow said engineering for the overhead structure could commence this year with 1971 tentatively set for a construction start.

Number of County Farms Is Gradually Diminishing

The number of farms in Hastings county is gradually diminishing but farming is still "big business" in the county.

In his agricultural report, submitted to Hastings county council this week, agricultural representative Douglas Tipper said that there were 1,100 commercial farms in the county with the bulk of these representing a capital investment of $55,000 or more.

"Using $55,000 as the average we are talking about a business with a $60,000,000 investment - - - and in anybody's language this is big business," he said.

Mr. Tipper said this accentuated the importance of the challenge faced by the county agricultural office in its yearly programs.

He said the main objective of his office was "to help the farmer to help himself so he can obtain the same standards of living as any other comparable Canadian."

The county agricultural representative and his aides, Ray Pender, extension assistant, Wayne Martin, associated agricultural representative, and county home economist, Miss Mary MacEachern, reviewed the work of the county office during 1968.

Despite revamping of junior programs to bring them more in line with the times, the agricultural report indicated the county junior farmers were having a difficult time with declining memberships.

Last year 183 boys and girls enrolled in 282 agricultural projects in the junior program. There was concern that only about 10 per cent of the total rural youth in the county is being reached.

The average age of 4-H members in the county last year was 13.6 years as compared with 14.7 years in 1967. One of the major concerns is in providing programs which will have the necessary challenge to retain 4-H members for a longer period, the report said.

CFB take 1 proof indent ma.

The department of national defence will allow a commercial air service to use runway facilities at CFB Trenton but provision of passenger accommodation, ramps and road-ways would be the responsibility of the town of Trenton.

This is the gist of two letters received this week by the Trenton Chamber of Commerce — one from the department of national defence and the other from Royalair, a Montreal based airline which has shown Trenton as a feasible stop in a proposed twice daily run between Toronto and Montreal.

Jack Wilson, Trenton Chamber of Commerce Manager quotes the Minister's letter as saying the department agrees in principle with the proposal that commercial air service be provided for the Trenton-Belleville area using CFB Trenton.

However, approval would be subject to:

Department of transport approval for the service.

The establishment of a civilian facility at CFB Trenton from which this service could operate without interference in any way with existing or planned military operations.

The Minister said that the DND position has been that while the Trenton base is capable of accepting the proposed service there are no facilities such as waiting rooms and ramping area for civilian use.

Such facilities would have to be provided by the agency or agencies involved, he said.

The Minister said a suitable location for a civilian terminal is available in the northeast section of the aerodrome provided suitable buildings, ramps and roadways are provided.

Royalair's position is that it is Trenton's responsibility to guarantee passenger accommodation.

In a letter to the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, G. W. deMalpas Finlay, sales director for Royalair, says the above would be a problem which Trenton would have to solve and put in writing so Royalair could proceed with its application for service Trenton.

Despite the Minister's letter, the Chamber of Commerce manager says Trenton has not given up the idea of making bold use of the present Trenton DND terminal and predicts further representations will be made to Armed Forces officials.

Mr. Wilson estimated the cost of providing a pre-fabricated terminal would be about $5,000. There would also be the problem of parking and security to be considered.

Banquet Enjoyed

It's tradition for Hastings county council members to eat well during their inaugural session in Jan.

And this week's session of council which saw Stirling reeve Donald Rodgers elected as warden was no exception.

Tuesday evening council members and administrative staff were feted by the warden-elect to a buffet luncheon in the county administration building committee chambers.

Then Wednesday county councillors were guests of the A.E. Wilson Insurance Company for luncheon at the Sun Luck Gardens. The Wilson company has carried the county's liability insurance since the late 1920's and each year since that time has presented the warden with a gavel. This year Warden Rodgers was presented with his gavel by company representative Frank Crews.

Wednesday night council members were hosted at dinner by the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

New Industry For Deseronto

Deseronto town council has offered its support to a potential $2 million industry at the west end of the community.

Industrial chairman John Layfield told council Monday night he had received inquiries from the Canadian branch of a company with European headquarters which wants to locate in the town.

Enough Said

Having roasted Prime Minister Trudeau for his performance, or rather what they consider his non-performance, at the Commonwealth conference, and dismissed him as a "dilletiante," the Opposition would do well not to labor the point further.

The same may be said concerning Mr. Trudeau's own castigation of the Press. The prime minister in the heat of the moment over-reacted considerably, lecturing the newsmen for their emphasis on matters pertaining to his private life and suggesting that the police might begin compiling dossiers of their personal matters too.

Mr. Trudeau himself is anxious to get on with the business of running the country and there is little to be gained by endless and fruitless debate on matters of relatively little consequence. The prime minister may have performed no miracles in London, but then what do people expect? On the other hand, he did contribute a thoughtful address on the rights of minorities. He also injected a certain degree of life into an occasion which traditionally is so conformist and indecisive in character that many have despaired for its continuance.

As for his suggestion that members of the Press might find themselves the subject of police scrutiny, the prime minister can scarcely be taken seriously. In any event the RCMP have security dossiers on a great many people, so the idea is hardly as sensational as may be imagined.

Let us have done in Parliament with futile debate over matters of little consequence. Instead, Canadians are entitled to serious consideration of the real problems facing the country. Matters like the rising cost of living . . . pollution and the like.

Nixon Keeps Calm

When it comes to demonstrations by yelling, jeering, rock-throwing mobs, President Richard Nixon is no fledgling.

The target of mob treatment riding up Pennsylvania Avenue after his inauguration the other day, Nixon turned his back on them to wave at the jubilee cheering crowd on the other side of the avenue.

Nixon of course had had a foretaste of the phenomenon of "protest" — in Latin America — long before it gained a hold in the United States with the increasing tempo of the Vietnam conflict and the establishment of the anti-war groups. That was during his long stint as vice-president in the Eisenhower administration. In Venezuela and other countries of Latin America he was the target of angry anti-American protests.

In another, rather different confrontation, he engaged former Premier Khrushchev of Russia in a spirited defence of the United States and of its superiority in the field of consumer goods and man-for-man material comforts. That encounter came to be known as the "kitchen debate," since it took place in the kitchen of a typical U.S. family home at an American trade exhibition in Moscow.

Nixon is a man with a lot of courage and determination. But he is also a humble man, for when he fell into the political wilderness (after losing the Governorship of California) and was visiting Moscow on private business he tried to make contact again with Mr. Khrushchev — by this time deposed himself and out of favor with the Soviet hierarchy. Incidentally, Mr. Nixon was accompanied on this occasion by Premier Smallwood of Newfoundland. The former Soviet leader was not at home, but the visitors left a message for him.

The new president is a man with the personal touch, a quality that should serve him well in the difficult days ahead.

Day's End

Remember a few years ago when it was so mild in January that some golfers were making the scene on courses almost free of snow. Well it is not all that warm in Belleville right now, but it is certainly mild for the time of year.

Dusk is perhaps the most beautiful time of day in this latter part of January. For then the sun goes down, and the sky and the delicate tracery of the trees and the glistening grey-white of the winter fields give substance and beauty to what otherwise may be a desolate scene.

It is a time when one wants to stand and stare — at the clouds and the color, the moon and the stars, and see something of the great beyond that a busy world rarely permits.

Communications Gap Threatens Cabinet Solidarity

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau has been lamenting his lack of real "communication," as he calls it, with Canadians generally.

Perhaps he might better concern himself with the communications gap among just 20 Canadians — specifically, the members of his own cabinet, and his colleagues.

Currently he is at work rewiring his national network of political agents — professional and amateur — in expectation of becoming more informatively plugged in on the country.

This shorting of his information circuit can be traced to its source, the crossing of ministerial wires around the cabinet table.

Sitting as close as shoulder to shoulder in that circle of power, the cabinet sometimes seems so far apart that one minister does not know what another is saying. Or even care.

Take the cabinet communications gap that exists on two of the touchiest topics nationally, defence and language.

There is Postmaster General Eric Kierans — soon to become, of all things, communications minister — saying the government ought to pull out of NATO and NORAD; defence commitments with Canada's allies, and transfer some of the armed services into a global police force.

The rest of the armed services would be starved out of existence under the "Kierans Plan" with their budget being turned over to foreign aid.

Then there is Defence Minister Cadieux swearing it can never happen. That Canada could never, with honor, do it.

And there is External Affairs Minister Sharp agreeing that it is next to impossible.

But then there is the prime minister who hints it is not all that impossible. And to make things even murkier for Canada's armed forces and allies, sympathizers with the services that they might feel like employees of a firm that could go out of business.

If he wonders why he suffers from a communications gap with Canadians, it might just be that with all this crossing of cabinet wires, they don't know who or what to believe.

Now about bilingualism — and oddly, this language problem has a small but agonizing defence relationship.

There is Justice Minister Turner telling Canadians that the French-English program of bilingualism must be "gradually, progressively but fairly pursued."

And nobody — he emphasizes that "nobody" — will be penalized in all the vast, nearly, 500,000 - member empire of the federal civil service for not acquiring a second language.

Former Prime Minister Pearson, who initiated the bilingualism program, is on the parliamentary record as saying, in the same pledge — which, for some possibly worrisome reason, he found need to recently repeat.

But there is the prime minister talking about certain unspecified civil servants who remain bilingual being shoved into elevator operators' jobs in areas where French isn't much spoken.

Maybe he was kidding — and perhaps he wasn't — it isn't always easy to read his real meaning.

And now there is State Secretary Pelletier laying down a departmental law that all communicationsmen who meet the public must speak both languages.

Here in the national capital, that means some 100 war veterans — now titmembers of the Corps of Commissionaires — doing guard duty in the National Gallery, the War and National Museums, the Museums of Science and Technology, the National Film Board, and other cultural agencies.

Of those 100 old soldiers, may be as many as one-third are bilingual. The others are to be transferred, many to old cobblehouses, and some demoted in rank.

If the Pelletier way of implementing the bilingual program "gradually, progressively but fairly" as promised by the justice minister is to be followed in other departments, some 1,500 veterans could discover that old soldiers are not immortal — on government jobs. They could fade away by wholesale replacements and perhaps dismissals.

But then, with this cabinet communications gap, who and what to believe?

Fashionable Military Men

The Printed Word

A sideburn, the young man might be told, is not a sideburn at all. It is a burnside, named after one of the generals in the U.S. Civil War.

There is a suspicion that General Burnside decided that he could not get into the history books in any better way than by his whiskers.

Over and above the usual blunders, two of the British commanders in the Crimean War made their contribution toward male fashion of the day. One was Lord Raglan, who came along with a sleeve that even the women sometimes like and the other was Lord Cardigan, who invented a woven known mainly nowadays as a sweatercoat.

Beatles Organization Faces Difficulties

Peterborough Examiner

Apple needs a new broom, says John Lennon, one of the Beatles.

This apparent non sequitur actually means that, according to Mr. Lennon, managerial changes are needed to arrest the financial decline of the Beatles' business holdings. Apple is the name of the organization, with assets of $2,000,000, covering music publishing, television, shops, motion pictures and electronics.

Getting to the core of the matter Mr. Lennon says the Beatles will be broke in six months if Apple continues to lose money at its present rate. Its headquarters are on London's fashionable Savile Row in premises that cost $1,300,000 a year ago.

It has a staff of about 40 persons.

George Harrison, another of the Beatles, in an apparent effort to stave panic and mass hysteria among the group's fans, has given what he calls a clarification of his colleague's remarks.

"Apple has plenty of money — we all have," says Mr. Harrison. He explains that what Mr. Lennon meant by losing money was the overly indulgent gifts made to charity. "We've just been too generous and that's going to stop."

Meanwhile Apple has announced that managerial changes are being made, which suggests that Mr. Lennon may be right; perhaps the Beatles have bitten off more than they can chew.

Letter to the Editor

A Student Says His Piece

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

I read with disgust your Jan. 17 editorial on University Scribes. I could not help wondering how you could be so paranoiac as to put yourself up as a judge for any other newspaper when, you, yourself, fall far short of any journalistic standards.

Your coverage of the national elections in 1968 was the most prejudiced reporting I have ever read. Compare the number of articles on the Conservatives with that of the Liberals, and upon words, compare it with the number of articles concerning the NDP. Even the positioning, not to mention the way they were written, reflected an all too obvious bias.

Then, your "Youth Page," I am quite sure, promotes little or no interest from the students. But I suppose this stems from your policy of printing only "factual reports." I suppose it stems from this policy that you prevent any publication by students which is the least bit "controversial" and might give your paper bad publicity.

I wonder what you mean by "bad publicity"? Is it publicizing what some people might happen to think although it goes against the dogma of your newspaper? Is bad publicity printing something besides the mediocre garbage which usually comes out of the Intell?

You say in the editorial you are not supporting censorship yet you exercise it to the fullest extent, especially in the Youth Page.

Then you have the audacity to say that responsibility is not very much in vogue among university students. I ask you how much responsibility is involved in glossing over issues prevalent in our high schools? How much responsibility do you use in giving biased political coverage? And what is the responsibility of a newspaper that does not cover certain city events because it may reflect badly on members of its staff?

A University newspaper published for its students. If the students object to this, then indeed obscenity it is up to them to say so and up to this point I have heard of no outcry from the students of Regina. I have heard much talk, inane statements made by editors who have never seen the paper, and probably up until this time had never heard of it.

JEFF HUME

Editor's Note: Blanket condemnations of a newspaper that "does not print controversial and innuendoes such as the above, give us little to go on. It is more than likely the writer could be more specific. Readers of course are at liberty to choose their reading material and can switch to other publications if they desire. Nevertheless, whatever their choice, they are unlikely to find words like "garbage" used as in the context above, and which tends to confirm what our editorial had to say about the tastelessness of some student publications.

President's Global Outlook

Middle East . . China . . Missile Control on Nixon Agenda

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP)—Peace at home and abroad is the main theme of President Nixon's "Forward Together" inaugural address, which he directed specifically at "my fellow citizens of the world community."

"For the first time, because the people of the world want peace and the leaders of the world are afraid of war, the times are on the side of peace," the 37th United States president said.

"I shall consecrate my office, my energies and all the wisdom I can summon to the cause of peace among the nations," said the man who prides himself on his grasp of foreign affairs.

Only hours before he spoke the Soviet Union struck a similarly-conciliatory note by offering—with obvious timing—to begin immediate talks on limiting the growth of attack and defence nuclear missile systems.

There is no doubt the Nixon priorities include immediate establishment of firm contact with the chief U.S. nuclear adversary. But the actual talks will take time to arrange.

Similar caution about new foreign policy initiatives has been signalled by Nixon and his cabinet.

Defence Secretary Melvin Laird told a Senate committee last week that extensive preparation must precede the nuclear talks. He talked of needing some months.

These are the talks outgoing President Johnson had been on the verge of undertaking last August when the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia intervened.

Nixon spoke in generalities and did not even mention directly the war in Vietnam, which he is left to wind up.

The Middle East and the possible outbreak of another Arab-Israeli war also rank high on his agenda. Indeed, the Middle East situation by its volatility may deny him the luxury of the long, careful foreign policy review he has begun.

A Nixon reference also gave a hint of possible relaxation in relations with China.

"We seek an open world—open to ideas, open to the exchange of goods and people, a world in which no people, great or small, will live in angry isolation," he said.

China created considerable surprise here last January by asking the U.S. to resume talks held periodically at Warsaw until they were suddenly broken off by the U.S. in 1965.

The request—presumably because of the chaos created by the cultural revolution.

The first session of these renewed talks is scheduled for mid-February, with China showing signs of re-establishing more internal order.

Nixon's repeated references to desiring peace lacked specifics and he warned that "those who would be tempted by weakness, let us leave no doubt that we will be strong as we need to be for as long as we need to be."

But he stuck with the theme first outlined last summer that "after a period of confrontation, we are entering an era of negotiation."

"The greatest honor that history can bestow is the title of peace-maker," he said. "This honor now beckons America—the chance to help lead the world at last out of the valley of turmoil . . ."

He added: "We cannot expect to make everyone our friend but we can try to make no one our enemy."

Fair Board Directors Defend Action on Sunday Operation

Directors of the Belleville Agricultural society at their annual meeting last night defended their action in asking city council permission to hold Sunday fairs if necessary.

Last fall the fair board asked and received council approval to hold Sunday fairs to recoup possible losses if any of their regular fair dates were rained out.

But the issue has refused to rest there and local church organizations have voiced objection to the possibility of Sunday fairs.

The latest turn of events was a notice of motion this week by Alderman Donald Williams who said he would bring a recommendation to council seeking to bar gambling and horse race betting in the city on Sunday.

Yesterday fair directors regretted the unfavorable publicity resulting to the fair as a result of the board request for Sunday fair operation.

Fair board members said directors would be the last to encroach on the Sabbath "unless it was absolutely necessary."

It was pointed out that the fair is held for the good of the district with directors volunteering their services.

And past fair president Carl Thompson said that in addition to volunteering their services, fair directors have personal financial responsibility.

"People don't generally realize that the 17 directors of this fair are personally responsible for fair debts. They would have to meet the bill if the fair went broke," he said.

The financial report for last year's Belleville fair showed receipts of $95,098 with cash receivables of $7,877 by way of agricultural grants.

Expenditures last year totalled $82,975 resulting in a cash gain of $19,000 or down slightly from the 1967 surplus figure of $19,255.

In his report fair secretary Everett Gowsell said that although the dollar gain for the fair was down slightly from 1967, capital improvements to the fair grounds and buildings were up by $4,300 over 1967.

"From an over-all point of view, 1968 continued the trend of advancement," he said.

Total improvements to fairground buildings last year amounted to $7,535. These included a paved floor in the coliseum, new lighting and installation of refrigeration equipment for staging of the cheese and butter show.

Mr. Gowsell said the fair society was in a financially sound position, was free of debt and could operate without loans or overdraft for the foreseable 1969 season.

New Name for Fair

The century old Belleville Fair today has another name.

At their annual general meeting last night directors of the Belleville Agricultural Society decided to go regional and voted to change the name of their fair to the Quinte Exhibition.

And also for the first time in the fair's history an "outside" man Harold Clark of Trenton, has been named to the fair board executive.

At last night's annual meeting last year's fair president Cameron Bunnett was returned for another year as was vice president John R. Bush. The second vice president is Mr. Clark of nearby Trenton.

Seventeen directors to the fair board were named along with two new life directors — Harry Burns and Stephen Garvin. Alderman Arthur Keegan is the city representative on the fair board.

This year's directors for the Quinte Exhibition are Miles Benedict, Cameron Bunnett, John R. Bush, Arthur Corfield, Phil Flagler, William Gault, Harold Clark, Hudson Ketcheson, Donald McNevin, Dr. J. F. McCorquodale, Allan Revill, Percy Ray, Douglas Rollins, Gerald Vance, Kenneth Vivian and Ridley Wallbridge.

President Cameron Bunnett, Douglas Rollins and Donald Spencer were named delegates to the Central Fairs Association annual convention to be held in Belleville on Feb. 4.

Delegates to the provincial fairs convention in Toronto in Feb. are the fair president, the two vice presidents and secretary - manager Everett Gowsell.

County Education

New Board Names Committees

Hastings County Board of Education this week appointed five committees, three on a temporary basis, to handle special areas of concern to the new board.

These are in addition to the reconstitution of all former boards in the county as committees of the new board. Each committee composed of former trustees of 1968 boards is temporary and may be dissolved when its function is completed.

Two of the newly formed committees are permanent and required under legislation setting up county-wide boards. They are the advisory vocational committee and advisory committee on schools for trainable retarded children.

The three trustees on the advisory vocational committee are Everett Fairman, chairman, F. John Follis of Bancroft and James Spry of Bonarlaw. Two non-trustee representatives are yet to be appointed to the committee.

The committee for retarded children will be composed of three trustees and three representatives from the Belleville Association for Retarded Children. Trustees named are Mrs. Jean Hutchison of Trenton. Robertson Collins of Belleville and Emerson Robinson of Maynooth.

A temporary committee was set up to work with the business administrator, after he is hired, to select the board auditor and banks. Serving on this committee are Raymond Rowe of Frankford as chairman, Paul Fleming and John D. O'Flynn, both of Belleville.

The staff-board relations committee will be composed of James Clarke of Belleville, Ralph Weaver of Trenton, Macdonald Smith of Belleville with Donald Williams of Stirling as chairman.

Appointed to serve as alternates of this committee when regular members are absent are Mrs. Miriam Graham of Belleville, Mrs. Jean Hutchison of Trenton, Emerson Robinson of Maynooth and Milford Waller of Thurlow.

The non academic staff committee will be chaired by Mrs. Miriam Graham of Belleville with Milford Waller of Thurlow, Laurason Gunning of Hungerford, and James Clarke of Belleville as members.

Picton Kinsmen Donate $500 to Mentally Retarded

PICTON (Staff) — The Mentally Retarded Association of Prince Edward County received a cheque for $500 at the Kinsmen banquet last night.

The banquet was also in honor of the Kinsmen softball team, which won the Ontario championship last year.

President Laverne McConnell, presented the cheque to Harry Hotston, president of the Mentally Retarded Association of Prince Edward County.

The donation will go toward a workshop for these people, who, when they reach the age of 18 must leave the mentally retarded school.

This workshop will allow these people a decent respectable way of life, said Mr. Hotston.

He said that the cost of the workshop would run around $1,000 per person.

Mr. Hotston said that there is a very low government grant given for this kind of institution.

The workshop will be self-supporting once it is set up said Mr. Hotston. Contracts are made with companies for repetitious, but time consuming jobs. Once the mentally retarded are shown how to do the job, they can go ahead with it on their own.

Mr. Hotston said that the workshop must be operating within three years, but he feels that it won't take nearly that long. We have a place in mind already, he said.

The hold up is a shortage of money. Last year the association raised $8,000 of which $7,500 was spent in paying for a school for the mentally retarded. The other half of the cost of the school, which was $15,000 was obtained from the government through a grant.

Commons Debate Staged

Ships Tied Up at Vancouver Awaiting Suitable Grade Wheat

OTTAWA (CP) — Three Liberal cabinet ministers threw up a stout defence Wednesday night against Conservative charges that the government is responsible for the tie-up of 31 vessels waiting at Vancouver to load Canadian grain for export.

In a six-hour Commons emergency debate triggered by a motion from Stanley Knowles (PC — Mackenzie), which accused the government of mismanagement in getting dry grain to Vancouver:

1. Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said the bottleneck results from an unexpected high demand for Canadian wheat and the desire to move as much tough and wet grain as Vancouver terminals for drying. Unusually low temperatures also were an important factor.

2. Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson said Conservative charges are "unjustified and unwarranted" and a disservice to Canadian grain producers.

Even before the debate began, the CPR announced in Montreal that the first of a number of special trains carrying dry No. 2 Northern wheat was en route from the Prairies to Vancouver.

Twenty-three MPs took part in the debate which ended at 2:05 a.m. EST.

The unusual Wednesday night sitting resulted from new rules approved by the Commons in December. Speaker Lucien Lamoureux, in granting Mr. Knowles's motion for a special debate, took the option of having it held at 8 p.m., two hours after the Commons normally adjourns on Wednesdays.

Mr. Korchinski, a Saskatchewan wheat farmer, lead off the debate by noting that many MPs are disgruntled by having to return to their desks on a night off. But he felt he had to resort to the emergency-debate rule to bring the spotlight on the grain tie-up.

Both Prime Minister Trudeau and Opposition Leader Stanfield sat in for at least part of the debate. Up to 70 of the 263 MPs attended, although the figure sank to as few as 30 as the debate went into the late hours.

Mr. Korchinski said customers for Canadian wheat are wondering whether Canada can deliver the grain they want when they want it.

"If the prime minister devoted as much time to wheat as he does to detest, then we wouldn't have this problem," he declared.

Bob Mr. Korchinski and Jack Horner (PC — Crowfoot) called on Mr. Trudeau to relieve Mr. Pepin of responsibility for the Canadian wheat board.

Mr. Horner said the minister is "an amiable fellow, a very nice person, who knows absolutely nothing about the job he has to handle."

Harold Winch (NDP — Vancouver East) said 15 of the ships at Vancouver are awaiting No. 3 Northern.

He said four loading berths were unoccupied "because the right grades of grain were in the right place at the right time.

He blamed lack of co-ordination, years of neglect and lack of planning.

"For God's sake, we know you can't resolve the difficulties in one day," said Mr. Winch. "But will you please do something constructive soon?"

Albert Bruce Douglas (C. Assiniboia) joined opposition MPs in blaming the situation on outmoded transportation and poor grain-handling facilities.

"He called for a single transportation controller rather than the committee system now in use.

Japanese Food Agency Annoyed

TOKYO (Reuters) — The Japanese Food Agency said today Japanese ships have been tied up in Canadian ports since last month waiting for loading of Canadian wheat for December shipment.

Japanese importers said tenders have been invited for 624,000 bushels of Canadian wheat, but it could not be offered due to port congestion in Canada.

Japanese importers said the congestion was attributable to difficulty by Canadian sellers in collecting suitable quantities of dry wheat, such as Manitoba No. 2 which Japan wants to buy.

House Gives Second Reading to Four Bills

OTTAWA (CP) — An emergency debate on the wheat situation in Western Canada dominated parliamentary business Wednesday but the Commons also gave second reading to four government measures and sent them to committee for detailed study.

Ray Perrault (L—Burnaby-Seymour) reacted to the defence of Finlay Rattenbury by Davis during debate on amendments to the Fisheries Improvement Loan Act.

Mr. Perreault, one-time Liberal party leader in British Columbia, took strong exception to remarks by James A. MacGrath (PC — St. John's East), Mr. McGrath said Mr. Davis's bill was fine for B.C. but would do little or nothing for hard-pressed Newfoundland fishermen.

Mr. Perreault said these remarks were divisive and accused the Newfoundland MP of conducting "destructive vendetta gainst Mr. Davis.

He said the amendments would help fatten the income of all fishermen. It added insurance, trust and loan companies to those institutions that could give the government-backed loans for fishing vessels, gear and shore installations.

And by removing the fixed five-per-cent and inserting instead a higher "more realistic figure," the government was improving the climate for more loans to be made.

Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin warned the government of serious effect on water levels of the Mackenzie River system and Lake Athabasca during debate on amendments to the Navigable Waters Protection Act.

James Richardson, minister without portfolio, said the amendments would ensure that larger ships would be able to use the shipping lanes because of the legislation against manmade obstructions.

But Mr. Baldwin said the act failed to prevent B.C. Hydro from erecting a power dam on the Peace River. Filling the vast reservoir created by the dam had lowered levels in the Mackenzie to the extent that its use as a waterway to bring goods into the Canadian North was affected.

It also had turned beautiful scenery along the Peace into "a ghastly sight."

Veterans Affairs Minister Jean-Eudes Dube introduced an amendment to the Veterans Land Act allowing the government to set interest rates on some loans rather than have them fixed by statute.

The 3½-per-cent rate on loans up to $6,000 would remain, but rates on loans of more than $6,000, now set at five per cent, would be at a rate to be set by the government.

Mr. Dube said 117,000 veterans had taken out loans under the legislation passed in 1942. The loans totalled $611,000,000.

Your Dollars

Financing A House

After much searching you have found just the home you want; now you will probably want to arrange financing.

One important point must be emphasized. Always contact your lawyer before you sign anything or pay any money. This is absolutely essential. It is his responsibility to read, explain and check all written transactions and agreements.

Where do you get a mortgage? There are several sources, including mortgage companies, insurance companies, trust companies, chartered banks and The Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

What types of mortgages are available? There are three main types. First, The National Housing Act mortgage. These mortgages are available from banks, trust companies and so on, or as a last resort, from your office of The Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. Your loan may be as high as 95 percent of the value of your property. But the maximum you can borrow is $18,000 for new homes or $10,000 for existing homes.

The monthly payments which include interest, principal and taxes cannot exceed 27 percent of the borrower's income. Where the applicant's wife is working, up to 50 percent of her earnings may be included in establishing the total annual income.

For example, if your annual income is $900 a month, you can make payments of $135 per month. If the wife is earning $250 a month, the monthly payments can be increased by $83.75, for a total of $168.75 per month.

When financing by a NHA mortgage you must supply at least five percent of the total value of the house and land from your own resources. This can take the form of cash land or labor. NHA loans are usually made for a period of 25 years but may be increased to 35 years in some cases. For more detailed information contact your local bank manager.

The second type of mortgage is the conventional mortgage which is available for both new and existing homes. Under this mortgage, amounts up to 75 percent of the value of the property may be borrowed, but the maximum amount you can borrow is much larger than the $18,000 under the NHA mortgage. The monthly payments cannot exceed 25 percent of your income but 20 percent of your wife's income can be used to arrive at the total annual income.

The third type of mortgage is the "second" mortgage. If you do not have the necessary down payment you may take out a second, much smaller mortgage. This type of mortgage is issued by finance companies or often by the seller of the house. The second mortgage usually runs for five to 10 years and has an interest rate of 12 to 15 percent. Of course, if you have a second mortgage you will have two monthly payments to make.

It is in the second mortgage that you can get into financial difficulty. If you must borrow more than $2,500 on a second mortgage for a down payment — reconsider the deal. And beware of contracts where payments are low. These payments may only pay the interest and very little of the principal. The last monthly payment could be for a very large sum, forcing you to refinance.

The fourth type of mortgage is the combined mortgage. This mortgage combines the first and second mortgage into one monthly payment. Up to 90 percent of the property value may be borrowed.

It is impossible to discuss all aspects of house mortgages in this article. But several points can be emphasized. First, be certain you have a lawyer and have him explain every detail you do not understand. Second, don't put all your money into the down payment. Keep enough for moving costs, lawyer's fees, needed repairs and emergencies. And third, shop for the best mortgage rate and terms. Begin with your bank, insurance company or Credit Union.

Searching for the best deal will make your dollar go farther. Take the time to do it properly.

The Apple Appears Polished to Visitor in Beatleland

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Editor's Note: Staff reporter Barry Grills has just returned from a trip to England where he surveyed the mod music scene. While there he kept a pre-arranged appointment with officials at Apple, the Beatles' headquarters. In the second of his series he recounts the experience.

A lot of eyes are cast in the direction of Britain's contemporary music scene and Apple Corps Ltd., the well-publicized company owned by the Beatles.

It wasn't so long ago that Apple was formed from remnants of Beatles Ltd. and other business interests of the famous four and their former manager, Brian Epstein.

It was to be a company of sound and pictures — records and films — with side effects such as Apple clothing shops.

John Lennon and Paul McCartney were the chief spokesmen for the new company, a company predicted to be one of Britain's leading exporters.

Now, scarcely a year later, Beatle John Lennon has announced that the famed Apple Corps is close to bankruptcy. No one knows for certain why the balloon is about to burst, or, in fact, whose balloon it actually is.

John Lennon has said that the company will undergo management adjustments. He feels there might be a solution.

Looking at past achievements and failures of the company, there appears to be no way to predict its fate or, if it is doomed evaluate the mistakes it has made.

GEORGE HARRISON

Apple clothing stores were the first Beatle business ventures to fall by the wayside.

In the line of recording, however, things don't appear to have gone wrong. Recording for Apple were Mary Hopkins, Grapefruit and the Beatles themselves. One would think that Beatle recordings alone would assist the staying power of Apple in the recording industry.

But let's look at the building and its contents. With a little imagination we can travel to London and to Apple.

Suppose you were to travel to London to keep an appointment at Apple, as I did just three weeks ago yesterday. Travel along with me in your imagination.

Suppose.....

.....you have a demonstration tape of yourself, your musical group, or some promising protege and you have landed in London with the hopes of obtaining an audience with the people at Apple.

You phone the company first and you get an appointment with one of their employees whose chore it is to hear demonstration and auditions and accept or reject pre-emptive recording services.

Finally the appointment day, usually the day after the phone call, arrives, and you work your way through the elaborate and complicated London network of trains and "undergrounds" to Oxford Circus.

From there you make your way down Regent Street to Conduit Street and to Savile Row, that famous old street of the City of Westminster in London. You are now in the area of Carnaby Street and you are looking for 3 Savile Row.

However, you have already noticed that the street numbers in London are confusing and the street begins at number six. So you head for the nearby police station.

A bobby comes to the desk.

"Where's Apple," you say?

"I beg your pardon!"

"Where's Apple, you know, the Beatles' company?"

"Oh," he says, "it's down at the end of the street. It's a white building with a little sign saying 'Apple'."

There you are back on the street and you walk to the other end, barely an eighth of a mile and there it is. It's not at all what you expected, a white building looking more like a house about five storeys high and there is a little sign by the door which says just "Apple".

The thing that strikes you most about the sign is its inconspicuous appearance — almost an apology for the fame and fortune it represents.

Directly in front of the building you see a vehicle parked — half jeep; half truck; — and you see the name Hare Krishna scrawled on the side.

You remember that Hare Krishna is a religious figure from the United States and a close friend of the Beatles. He's the one that's mentioned in the Lennon and McCartney tune, I Am the Walrus.

You approach the monstrous door of the Apple office and who should come bursting out but the owner of the strange vehicle himself. At first you are quite taken aback by the appearance of the man.

He is attired in a long dress and a blouse and wears a string of bright red beads about his neck. His head is completely shaven save for a scalplock at the back, tied with a red ribbon.

You now make your way into the office by pushing on the gold doorknob of the biggest white doors you've ever seen.

Her room is totally white and devoid of chairs. Instead the interior is decorated with white cushions. Here and there you notice little piles of sawdust and electric plugs not yet screwed into the wall.

She informs you that Mr. Chesters will see you and you make your way to the "lift".

As the elevator makes its way to your floor you are surprised to see Noel Redding of the Jimi Hendrix Experience exit from the compartment.

Finally you hear your demonstration tape being played and you talk with an Apple employee about the Canadian music scene and he agrees whole-heartedly that it could be better than it is.

He explains that he has had some experience in Canada. He played there as a manager for Jimi Hendrix.

Finally your tape audition is complete and you chat some more while you anxiously await the verdict.

And then....

....."I'll have to play this for Peter," he says.

Peter Asher is the boss at Apple in London and he makes the final decision on tapes.

"Come in tomorrow anytime after lunch," he says.

And there you are the next day at Apple, soon after lunch to receive the news that it has been rejected because it isn't "strong" enough. Not strong enough means he thought it too soft and gentle for present needs, you learn. Still, he has your name and address. And that's the end of an adventure.

But again, what about the failure of Apple and the Beatles themselves? Things don't look well for Beatle George Harrison, who has been accused by friend John Lennon of doing too many things for charity.

A concert planned by the famous four, the first in two years, has been cancelled. It was to be played for free.

It can't help but be a bad scene when you can't even contribute your talent free of charge. For the Beatles, 1969 could look like 1929 all over again.

Nicholson Elects 'Mayor'

By PAT WALL

This is Nicholson's week for putting a mayor in City Hall. Mayor Russell Scott will have the assistance of Judy Schrieder in performing his tasks.

Judy was elected by the students. At the end of her five days of politicking Judy is going to give the school a report to assembly.

The boys' junior and senior basketball teams are looking for victories in their games against Albert this week. As yet the Irish are undefeated.

The NCC student council is holding a dance this Saturday night. Music will be supplied by the Ken-Dees, an up-and-coming group from Deseronto.

The Drama Club is polishing off its production of Arsenic and Old Lace. Judging by the enthusiasm shown by the cast it will be something to look forward to Jan. 31 and Feb. 1.

Actress Judy Brown shows the new flip-tipped curly coiffure set with pin curls. The tighter wave lasts longer and can be arranged in more than one style.

Hair Styles Defy Weather

By REBA and BONNIE CHURCHILL

These scat styles laugh at the weather, for they're designed to chase the droop, dangle, dropout tendencies caused by rain, wind or snow. The flip – tipped curly coif, worn by Universal actress Judy Brown, is set entirely on pincurls (twried toward the face), which means the wave is tighter, lasts longer. Teasing is restricted to close-to-scalp — just for lift and roundness. Ends and bangs are finger-brushed to keep hair short and bouncy.

Ready for a snowball fight or apres-skiing? Then brush hair back from face, letting end tips tumble across a colorful bandeau. Fun part of this style is you can give ringlets a booster bounce without anyone seeing it. Should curly strands dangle, roll them around a pencil, and slip a bobby pin under curl. If you select coated pins, like they use on TV, even the brightest lights will keep your "salvage work" a secret.

Long hairs get the winterized treatment too! Part tresses into two pigtail-like sections, and secure with covered elastics, plaitle loops, or colorful rings. Instead of braiding, fashion them into bunch curls by back-brushing hair from elastic to end tips and finger-shaping into loops. Judy, seen in the TV series "Ironsides," reminds each side must be rounded like a ball, so hair is contoured and controllable.

BCI Holds Dance

By GARY BOULTON

Belleville Collegiate's students have come alive in the past few weeks. Once again, the cheerleaders proved themselves. They aired in the recent competition in which Quinte, Moira, Centennial and Picton took part.

At old BCI tradition, the Elevator, was on sale from Jan. 15 to 22. The Elevator society held a successful dance Jan. 17 with the Raven Angels playing.

Another old tradition at BCI has been the cause of much activity, Kampus Kapers, the annual variety show, is under the direction of Mr. MacMillan, head of the English department. This collection of BCI talent will be presented later in February.

The school newspaper, tentatively called the Bruised Banana, has a surprise for the students. It will be coming out this week. The second edition will cost five cents and promises to be well worth the wait.

The grade 13 honor system has been under debate this month. Discussions between teachers, principal and students have been held.

A petition has been circulated, asking for the removal of the permissive system. Whatever the outcome it will be a result of the co-operation of all concerned.

The grade 13 English department sponsored a trip to Toronto Jan. 18, to see the final performance of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern are Dead.

At Centennial

Examinations Under Way

By BARB BRUCE and ALEX DUNN

The majority of Centennial Secondary School students are writing semester exams this week.

Those who wrote groped through the school daze and trod in reverence to their teachers. However, the harvest shall yield what the seeds of knowledge have become in the damp, dark brains of our young prodigals.

Students of Centennial are waiting for the second in a long and progressive series of motion pictures. The first was shown at Christmas and received rave reviews. Director-producers Dianne Harder and Frank Johnston, both Grade 11 students, promised more and better productions in the future.

Those people who have been watching Mr. Jones emerge from dark cubby-holes bedecked with spider-webs and dust may rest at ease. He has not taken to making Frankensteins but is locating a darkroom for our newest addition to the school's activities — a camera club.

Recently added to the list of teaching aids at Centennial is an audio - visual machine which taxes the picture and sound from the TV set. It can also be used to tape the presentations of one class for showing to another class.

Students Protest Extension

By BETH PRICE

Centre Hastings Secondary School students decided this week to take action against the ruling of minister of education William Davis concerning the length of the school year.

Before the Christmas holidays a walk-out was staged to protest the extended school year. Realizing the students were concerned about the decision, the student's council took action.

An assembly was held Jan. 7 when students discussed whether to protest further or let the issue drop. Vice-principal Robert Graham gave a brief account of Mr. Davis' reasons for the extension. Then the assembly was opened for questions from the floor.

After the assembly a vote by written ballot was held and the result was a strongly affirmative vote to continue the protest.

A second assembly was held the next day to determine the course of action. After a heated discussion the following resolutions were decided upon.

"We resolve to compile a complete list of students' attendances over the entire time the school year and send copies to Mr. Davis, Clarke Rollins, MPP for Hastings, and the school board.

"We resolve to contact the Toronto schools, already better organized than we, and have them our support, provided their ideas are similar to those we hold.

"We resolve that all students be informed of the outcome. We favor walkouts only as a last resort."

The resolution was handed to the student's council for discussion and revisions. The students hope the resolutions will lead to the withdrawal of Mr. Davis' decision and they are determined to carry them through.

(FRANKFORD CWL)

FRANKFORD — The Catholic Women's League of the Frankford Parish held a meeting at the home of Mrs. W. Waszylw on Wednesday, Rev. Father McGarvey opened the meeting with the League Prayer after which the minutes of the last meeting were read.

The group has three projects underway for the new year. One being the collecting of Christmas and all-occasion cards, as well as the collecting of used stamps and the knitting of squares for quilts which will be sent to the missions.

A pot luck supper is planned for Feb. 20 with the hope that all parishioners and newcomers will be in attendance. Because of this supper there will be no CWL meeting until March.

Lunch was served at the close of the meeting.

Sister C. Wallace Believes in Co-education

HALIFAX (CP) — Sister Catherine Wallace, a serenely attractive, deeply religious woman who heads Canada's only woman's university, believes firmly in co-education.

The president of Mount St. Vincent University, a liberal arts and science college operated here by the Roman Catholic Sisters of Charity of Halifax, says she believes co-education prepares girls for life "in the real world," and also that Catholic girls should not be restricted to a Catholic environment.

She hopes soon that greater co-operation among four other institutions of higher learning here will mean a sharing of facilities and bring her girls into classroom contact with others.

Sister Catherine, dressed in a smart black suit with white sweater, nylon stockings and pumps, and a small black veil on the back of her short-cut silvery grey hair, said in an interview she thinks her university should relate to non-Catholic universities.

And, in turn, "we would bring a whole group of Catholics to the university complex which would make it more representative of the population." (Census returns for 1961 showed there were 260,104 Roman Catholics in the total Nova Scotian population of 737,007.)

Working towards closer co-ordination with Mount St. Vincent are Dalhousie University, University of King's College, Nova Scotia Technical College and the Maritime School of Social Work.

About half of "the Mount's" 627 undergraduates live in residence and the rest off campus, and Sister Catherine says they have ample opportunity to lead the kind of social life needs do.

Though she believes women should not be isolated academically or socially, Sister Catherine says Catholics should have their own places where they can relate to other Catholics and discuss problems peculiar to themselves.

"I still believe that at this time in Canadian history there is a place for Mount St. Vincent as a women's university."

She believes her university has a role to play in the Maritimes in encouraging women to come to university. "It isn't enough to say 'We're here,' we still have to go out and look for women to go to university."

Mount St. Vincent takes a special interest in mature women and has a program of continuing education for those in their 30s and 40s.

More than 100 women, many of them married and with children, are enrolled in part-time and night courses to improve teaching and business skills, acquire degrees and improve academic status.

"Women come to us because they aren't really happy," the slim, youthful-said.

A woman's world centred around husband and children was becoming less and less demanding, and many a bright child went to school the mother was left with an empty house and nothing much to do.

The jobs once done by volunteers are being taken over by professionals, and many content women are dissatisfied with the routine tasks of volunteer groups, Sister Catherine said.

Unless qualified by further education, they had little incentive to move out into the world of other interests and careers.

Now in her early 50s, Sister Catherine joined the congregation of the Sisters of Charity, a religious order founded in Halifax over 100 years ago, after finishing high school.

She opened the first central Canadian classroom high school in Vancouver and was its principal for six years before returning to Halifax to become professor of English at Mount St. Vincent.

Later she became supervisor of the order's educational programs across Canada and the United States.

Just before she became president of Mount St. Vincent in 1964 she had set her heart on working in Latin America, but she returned to Nova Scotia "because I really feel I can do something in the field of continuing education."

WEDDING

GOUGH — WILLIAMSON

Counties United Church, Oshawa was the setting for the recent candlelight wedding ceremony, when Patricia Ann Williamson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Williamson of Oshawa was united in marriage to Wayne Douglas Gough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gough of Belleville.

The officiating clergyman was Rev. D. Arscott and Mrs. W. A. Short played the traditional wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length empire styled gown in white Italian borealis brocade with high-buttoned styling, long sleeves and full gathered back. A headdress of two velvet lilies with crystal centres caught her waist length veil. She carried a bouquet of stephanotis and ivy centred with a solitaire orchid.

Mrs. John Wellman, Oshawa was matron of honor and the bridesmaid was Miss Lynda Davey of Tyrone. Both wore gowns of deep purple velvet in the same styling as the bride's gown. Their headdresses were French bows, in silver. Each carried a bouquet of silver sprayed white carnations and mums.

Larry Gough of Belleville was best man for his brother, and the usher was Richard Storey of Toronto.

The reception was held at the Georgian Motor Hotel, Oshawa where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a dress and coat ensemble in gold shantung with beaded neckline with a corsage of yellow roses complementing her attire. Assisting the bridegroom's mother chose a turquoise sheath dress with matching accessories and a corsage of pink sweetheart roses.

For the honeymoon trip to Mexico City and Acapulco, the bride wore a beige knitted sheath with leopard trim and antique brown accessories.

The couple who are both teachers will reside at 310 Elgin Street in Oshawa.

Shoppers Stand in Line To Buy Judy's Book

OTTAWA (CP) — Judy LaMarsh sat on a fringed platform beyond the party favors and ladies' hats. She was the department store's Wednesday afternoon special — former secretary of state, former minister of health, and now, huckster of books.

Miss LaMarsh, author of Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage, was in the process of autographing 300 copies of her best-seller on the inside world of Parliament Hill.

On the bookrack immediately beside her were copies of a paperback called Born to Raise Hell.

Before her stood a queue of fur-coated ladies and rather sheepish-looking gentlemen, preparing their lines for their 15-second interviews.

"You may not remember me . . ." they invariably began.

Miss LaMarsh, resplendent in her bright red dress and costume pearls, often couldn't quite recall their meeting at the University of Toronto Liberal Club in 1953. But after a few lines of chatter she rediscovered an endless number of old friends, much to their delight.

"Oh Judy, you should have been named mother of the year," said one rather bewildered elderly lady.

"It takes two to tango for that type of thing," smiled Judy.

"Sign right on your picture" said a gentleman.

"Which wrinkle?" smiled Judy.

"I'm buying your book for my sick sister."

"This book plus a bottle of rum will cur the flu," smiled Judy. At the back of line people seemed aware of their place in history.

"If you get the first edition signed its supposed to go on to posterity you know," marvelled one lady.

Mrs. Paul Hellyer stood patiently in line, and had a book autographed to herself and her husband, the transport minister.

In Judy's book Mr. Hellyer "suffers from an inability to communicate easily" but "is what he is . . . that is pretty damn good."

Mrs. Hellyer told Miss LaMarsh that she had described her husband "better than I ever could."

One of the aides of Jean Marchand, rural development minister, stood in line for his boss.

"To my doll, Jean Marchand—Love, Judy" went the inscription.

"Blow him a kiss for me," she told the aide.

In her book, Mr. Marchand is "tough as only a labor minister can be, and a real doll."

Many of the women in line were office workers in Judy's department when she was in the cabinet, and she passed knowing looks with some of them when they told her they "could write a thing or two, too."

RYLSTONE W.I.

A small crowd was in attendance for the annual Rylstone Women's Institute Family Night at the Institute Hall on Wednesday evening. Mrs. Ernest Irwin, vice-president, was in charge of the meeting, which was opened in the usual way.

The motto, "if you cannot be thankful for what you receive, be thankful for what you escape," was prepared by Mrs. Ella Jones and read by Mrs. James Milne. Mrs. Carl Reid gave a humorous reading.

John Spencer operated the sound projector for the two films, "Upper Canada Village," and the "Trent-Severn Waterway," which were much enjoyed.

The program was convened by Mrs. Stanley Kerr. Later, a pleasant social hour and refreshments were enjoyed.

Ann Landers
Illegitimate Child Gives Point of View

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I think maybe I can help that lady who gave up her baby for adoption and signed herself "Bitter." She said she cried every night for 10 years because she had married another and am therefore in a position to know what it's like from the child's point of view. My life was hell. When I was six years old I knew what "bastard" meant. I was left out of things and told to "go home." I was blackballed from a club when I was 12 because they couldn't find a member whose mother was a "Miss."

My mother kept saying "Those people are ignorant. Don't pay any attention to them. And of course she was right, but an adolescent feels more than the reasons, and I suffered in ways that no child should have to suffer. The emotional damage of being raised by an unmarried mother was enormous. I know she meant well, but I would not do to a child what she did to me. My mother's "Love" was, as you put it so well, "selfishness turned inside out."

DEAR SIDE: Thanks for the assist. I intend to stay with this point of view, in spite of the criticism of those who think I am heartless and unfeeling.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I just finished reading the letter signed "Color Us Nauseated." She was complaining about the couple of lovebirds at the office who were forever pawing and making eyes at each other. When one went to the water cooler, the other followed. They held hands by the pencil sharpener and smooched behind the file cabinet.

She shouldn't complain, Ann. At least those two lovebirds are a girl and a fella. There are two guys in our office who like each other and it's more than we can stand. I hope you will print this letter so the gal who wrote it will see. Some people don't know when they are well off. If she'll send us her couple, we'll send her ours. — CHICAGO.

DEAR CHICAGO: To each his own. Or her own. Or its one. Or — oh well — thanks for writing.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: All of us have seen ourselves in your column at one time or another. Please say something about people who are dieting. Maybe they will recognize themselves and stop boring all their friends with what they are eating, what they are not eating, and how they are starving to death.

In the past two days I have had my ear talked off by five friends who insist on filling me in on all the tiresome details — pounds lost, inches off — and even the menus. I couldn't care less. Print my letter, Ann. It will be your good deed for the day. — FED UP ON THE UNDERFED.

DEAR FED: Thanks for putting my words in your mouth. Bless you.

ST. THOMAS' A.C.W.

The annual meeting of the St. Thomas' A.C.W. was held recently in Marmora with eight members present. The meeting opened with a hymn followed by prayers led by the president.

Mrs. Runnals read the Scripture lesson, and Mrs. Colling read the minutes of the last annual meeting. Mrs. Preston thanked Rev. and Mrs. Saunders for their interest and co-operation during the past year.

Mrs. L. Tanner, in absence of treasurer, Miss Edna Tanner presented the financial report showing a substantial balance. Several thankyou notes were read and a vote of thanks was extended to the officers for their loyal devotion to the work of the A.C.W.

Rev. Saunders then presided over the election of officers, which resulted in re-election of all. The program followed, with each member contributing.

The meeting closed in the usual manner, after which Mrs. Saunders served dainty refreshments.

Successful Living

Helpful Services Given by Oslo Geriatric Centres

By DORIS CLARK

When it comes to practical, helpful services to old folks at home, or not at home, the Geriatric Centres in Oslo (Norway) have much in crow about.

Staffing a Geriatric Institute we find a social worker (who is director), a hairdresser, a podiatrist and a nurse, among others.

Why a hairdresser? Because at 85-plus it may become well-nigh impossible to bend over a basin and work with hands over head.

But why a podiatrist? Because the older we get the harder it is to reach our toes. Some callouses, corns and ingrown toenails are agonizing to walk on. Even one big toenail can grow long enough and horny enough to cripple a fellow and require a special cutting instrument. The podiatrist keeps feet trim and functioning.

As for the nurse, she helps the healthy with bathtub insand-outs as well as keeping a watch on the not-too-well.

Volunteers help with meals-on-wheels, visit the sick, dream up hobbies and fun and games.

In Canada we are beginning — just beginning — to tackle some of these things, in large centres. Any reader who is looking for a worthwhile project might well start asking questions about resources where they are for older persons.

Dear Doris: I am a grandmother and would like your copy of "What Is Love?" to put in my scrapbook for the family to share if they desire. Enclosed find 10 cents.

One piece o' advice was so good I traded it to my niece who has to raise four little girls by herself, although I would have liked to have kept it for my scrapbook. You said if children weren't so important, parents wouldn't care where they were. (Hope I quoted it right). — Grateful.

Dear Grateful: I've said it more than once. Here's the idea:

When it comes to limits of any kind, teen-agers would say "Forget it!" — if they could get away with it. They are trying to grow up, and anything which frustrates them is irksome. Why say where they are going? Why obey a curfew? Why introduce all their friends?

Yet nobody suddenly becomes adult. We move from milestone to milestone, gradually. The wise parent watches progress, offers praise, allows further freedom when his girl or boy seems ready.

If he doesn't, the slap-in-the-face which Mom or Dad may hear later will run like this: "Mother, I do wish you hadn't been so lenient with me. I should never have been allowed to hang around with that gang and stay out all hours of the night."

Confidential to Skinny: Slow down a little, don't be quite so anxious, and don't neglect breakfast, as so many girls your age do. If you want to round out, you need something to do it with.

Eat a good, well-balanced diet. Read and obey "Any Chart for Curves", which will help you fill out in the best places. And so that your personality grows with your figure, concentrate on some things or some persons outside yourself.

(Doris has studied human behavior and can shed light on your dilemma. Write to her enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Lengthy Process in Making Ravioli

By MARY MOORE

A certain relative of mine has been coaxing me to make ravioli for years. She tasted it at Chez Ernest in Montreal over 20 years ago and wanted me to produce a reasonable facsimile.

This week I made them and she smiled and looked up from her plateful and said, "You did it!"

These are not for hurry-up cooks. The ravioli dough has to be rolled paper-thin and cut out and filled and sealed so well it will not break open when it is cooked. These do not break open.

RAVIOLI (40)

Dough:
6 medium-large egg yolks
4 tablespoons lukewarm water
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour — Divided

FILLING:
½ lb. ground chuck beef
¼ cup barely cooked chopped drained spinach
2 tablespoons chopped fresh or bottled parsley flakes
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
1 tablespoon chopped onion (or bottled flakes)
1 small egg
1 tablespoon grated Parmesan or Cheddar cheese

To make Ravioli dough mix together as thoroughly as possible the yolks, water, salt and one-and-one-half cups of the flour (reserve one-half cup for board). Knead for 5 minutes on lightly floured board. Let dough rest covered for 15 to 60 minutes. Roll out on floured board to paper-thinness — mine was 26 x 24" so do not give up — it will roll that thinly. Using a ruler cut into forty 3" squares.

To make Filling, in large frying pan without any fat combine all filling ingredients except egg and cheese and cook stirring until meat is seared and vegetables are limp. Remove from heat, stir in egg and cheese and cool. Spoon about 1½ measuring teaspoonfuls near one corner of each square of dough. With finger tips moistes all edges and then seal triangles with floured finger tips and, then use fork tips to reinforce seal: Set aside about one hour in single layer on floured cookie sheet to dry and set (or refrigerate if to be made in advance.) Have very large saucepan or kettle with 2-qts water and 4 teaspoons salt boiling and drop in 20 of the ravioli and cook covered 20 minutes. Skim out onto large platter. Add remaining 20 and repeat. All of this may be done in advance. If so these ravioli are firm enough to tolerate reheating in boiling water flavored with one or two Oxo cubes.

Serve with Tomato Sauce: In saucepan mix together one 19-oz. can tomatoes, 1 cup water, 2 tablespoons bottled or fresh onion flakes, 1½ teaspoons oregano, ¼ cup finely chopped celery leaves, ½ teaspoon each salt, M.S.G., and garlic salt and 2 teaspoons sugar. Simmer 10 minutes. Mix together 2 tablespoons each all and flour and stir in to hot sauce until thickened. Serve hot over ravioli and sprinkle top with additional fine grated Parmesan or Cheddar cheese.

Clip this recipe — it is long and seldom found in cookbooks.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Father: "I get so tired of working at the same old job every day. I wish I could have a chance to go to school again and learn interesting things the way you do."

A parent who continually paints a grim picture of his work may make his children feel guilty because they think he is unhappy all day long while earning a living for them. Shop talk should be fairly cheerful and interesting, especially at the dinner table.

Mother: "Did you have a good day at the office, dear?"

Father: "We were terribly busy but a couple of unusual things happened early this morning - - -"

Czech Exiles Return

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Two Czechoslovak intellectuals who helped formulate the country's liberalization program last year were reported back in Prague today after returning from exile.

News of their return came Wednesday night after it was reported two more persons set fire to themselves, bringing to four the self-burnings so far, and amid reports Russian troops have arrested an unspecified number of Czechoslovaks.

The two intellectuals are Ota Sik, a former deputy premier considered largely responsible for economic reforms introduced last year, and Prof. Edvard Goldstucker, liberal president of the Writers Union.

Well-informed sources said the two men were back in Prague for the first time since the Russian-led invasion of Czechoslovakia Aug. 20.

Sik, who was said to have returned from Vienna, Austria, by train, has been a frequent target of Russian criticism for his liberal economic ideas and support of political reforms.

Goldstucker, criticized by East European newspapers outside Czechoslovakia for being a prominent reform leader and for his Jewish origins, returned from England.

The disclosure that Russian troops have arrested Czechoslovaks was made at a news conference by Czech Interior Minister Josef Grosser, the newspaper Slobodne Slovo reported.

It was the first known admission of Soviet arrests and Czech officials were reported to have protested to Russian military officials over them.

It was not known how many persons were arrested nor on what grounds they were being held.

But Grosser was quoted as saying the arrests were being given top priority and senior state and party officials were being kept informed of the situation.

Increasing incidents between Soviet troops and Czechoslovaks were reported recently, and Grosser said that in some cases the Russians took action after provocation.

Meanwhile, a powerful new progressive front was being forged at a founding congress of Czech labor unions, which spoke out against censorship and demanded free elections soon.

Prague television said the congress will use the slogan "We don't want to be regimented" as the theme of its final resolution.

The slogan was coined by Vlastimil Tomari, leader of the 800,000-member Metal Workers Union.

Student leaders attended a session of the congress Wednesday and were believed to be planning a common protest policy with workers.

Student demands for an end to censorship and a ban on the distribution of the Russian Propaganda newspaper Zprvy were given strong emotional backing by the death Sunday of student Jan Palach, 21, who set fire to himself in Prague Jan. 16.

The fourth attempted "human torch" suicide in a week was made Wednesday, and the official news agency CTK reported for the first time the third burning took place late Tuesday.

But CTK and Radio Prague said these two latest acts of self-immolation were personal rather than political.

Frantisek Bogri, a 24-year-old convict who set fire to himself in a western Slovakia prison Tuesday night, was a psychopath who tried to kill himself six times since he was sentenced for theft and attacking a policeman, CTK said. His injuries are not serious.

Miroslav Malinka, a 23-year-old mechanic who set fire to himself Wednesday in Brno, was facing theft charges and discussed suicide with his father, the agency added. He also was reported in satisfactory condition.

Sik, who is still a member of the Czechoslovak Communist party, was in Yugoslavia at the time of the invasion. He decided against returning to the country from Switzerland last month after saying there were no guarantees he could leave Czechoslovakia again.

Goldstucker, visiting professor of comparative literature at Sussex University at Brighton, England, was advised to leave the country by friends after the invasion. There were fears then the Russians would carry out mass arrests among Czechoslovak intellectuals.

Opening Lead: 4 of Diamonds

At duplicate bridge the end result of a hand often hinges on the opening lead. Today's hand Board 14 from the Belleville Duplicate Bridge Club's Jan. 14 game illustrates this point.

West on lead against South's three no trump contract, chose the not unreasonable lead of the diamond four. Holding two outside kings as entries, all he needed from his partner was one of three cards in diamonds, and the lead deserved a better fate. Dummy played low, and the seven was taken with the ten. The Jack and Ace of Hearts were cashed, preserving an entry to dummy, and the spade nine was won by west's King. A spade was returned to the Jack, Queen and Ace.

Now declarer cashed the King and nine of hearts, pitching clubs from dummy; West threw a club on the first heart, but on the second he was squeezed in three suits. Letting go a diamond would give South four tricks in the suit; a club would bare the King; so West threw a spade, but this was a futile effort as well. South cashed the two of spades bringing about this position:

NORTH

C: 9 8

WEST
D: Q J 6
C: 5 4 3
EAST
D: 9
C: J 10 7 6

SOUTH
D: 4
C: A 2

When South now led his last spade, West could see that the end was near. He did his best, throwing the five of clubs as nonchalantly as possible, but South was not impressed. The King of diamonds, the Ace of diamonds, and a club back to the Ace picked up the now singleton King, for a well deserved top score.

Ruel Doesn't Mince Words With Critics

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

"I am only 35—too young for the juice. I tell my bosses 'If I won't do, tell me so and I go.'"

This is the answer of rookie coach Claude Ruel of Montreal Canadiens to critics annoyed at the National Hockey League team's second-place standing in the Eastern Division.

The Canadiens, defending Stanley Cup champions and heavy pre-season favorites to finish atop their Division, trail Boston Bruins. Ruel, who succeeded Toe Blake as coach, has been blamed in some quarters for the Canadiens' slow start.

The criticism has come mainly from fans as well as some sports writers.

"I cannot do better," Ruel says. "I do the best I can and my players, they do the best they can. Don't forget last year at this time we had 51 points. This year we have 57, four behind Boston.

"If they think I'm not capable, I shouldn't be coach. I'm young and I've got a job that everybody else wants."

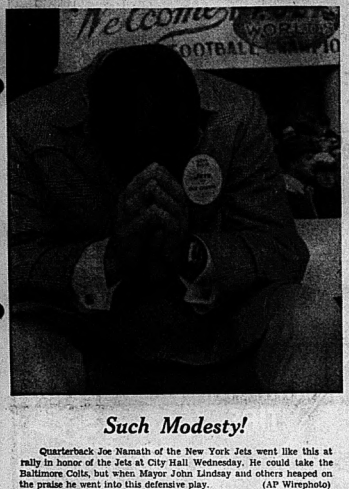
Ruel, the youngest coach in the NHL, blames most of his team's trouble this season on injuries.

Both regular goaltenders, Gump Worsley and Rogatien Vachon, were sidelined together for about six weeks. Other players who have suffered injuries include Terry Harper, Jacques Laperriere, Jean Beliveau, Henri Richard, Gilles Tremblay and Ralph Backstrom.

"I want to finish first and I'll be disappointed if we don't," says Ruel. "But I'll be satisfied if we finish second."

The Canadiens get a chance to gain some ground on Boston tonight when they play host to Oakland Seals at Montreal. In other games Boston visits Detroit Red Wings, Toronto Maple Leafs are matched against the Blues at St. Louis, New York Rangers welcome Los Angeles Kings, Chicago Black Hawks are at home to Philadelphia Flyers and Minnesota North Stars visit Pittsburgh Penguins.

The game tonight gives Ruel a chance to regain the limelight from Blake. A constant winner as Canadiens' coach, Blake was given a lengthy ovation Tuesday night when introduced as the Eastern Division coach at the All-Star game.



Ruel says the reception given to Blake was justified, and didn't bother him.

"After all, he was their coach for 15 years. He won eight Stanley Cups. But the fans here have never been bad on me."

Ruel says he has the support of his players, many of them older than their coach.

Canadians Prove Excellent Pupils

VICTORIA (CP) — "We play Canada to learn," said coach Anatoli Tarasov of the Russian national hockey team. But so far on their tour, the Russians have been giving lessons to the Canadian nationals.

Wednesday night's lesson, learned during an 8-3 loss to Russia, was that the Russians don't tire after 40 minutes.

Canada did and allowed three unanswered goals in the final period. But the Canadians played far better in the first two frames than they did in a 7-0 trouncing in Vancouver Tuesday night.

"Our forwards played much better, but our defence was having a bad game," said Canadian coach Jackie McLeod, whose team also lost 4-2 to the Russians in Toronto last Sunday night.

Gerry Pinder scored two for Canada and Derek Holmes one as the Russians held period leads of 4-2 and 5-3.

Wayne Stephenson, goalie with the Winnipeg-based national team, was pulled after the first period for Steve Rexe of the Ottawa-based crew who made some fine saves.

But Rexe didn't have the help he needed from his defence, who again handed goals to the Russians by poor clearing attempts. Victor Zinger bobbled a low, but handled long shots well in the Russian goal.

STEVE REXE
Fine Effort in Vain

Vladimir Vikulov and Vladimir Petrov each scored twice for the visitors. Single goals came from Alexander Ragulin, Vyacheslav Starshinov, Boris Malorov and Boris Mihailov.

Each club drew nine minor penalties before a sellout crowd of 5,298 and Bob Birdsell of Canada was assessed a third-period misconduct for arguing a cross-checking call against Ted Hargreaves.

The teams meet again in Ottawa Friday night.

Tempers flared several times and once in the second period each team was down to four men after a series of penalties.

Midway through the second-period, Al DeMarco tried a long shot which Chuck Lefley picked up. Lefley shot and Pinder dumped the rebound into the net at 11:38.

The Russians held only a 42-39 margin in shots on goal and the Canadians outshot Russia 17-15 in the first period.

Said McLeod:

"We'll make changes for Friday's game in Ottawa. John Ferguson and Paul Cadieux will be on defence and we'll try two lines from the Ottawa team."

Governors Vote to Keep Interlocking Format As Is

MONTREAL (CP) The National Hockey League will remain with the same type of East-West interlocking format for the 1969-70 season that it now is using, NHL president Clarence Campbell said Wednesday.

Under the current arrangement each of the 12 teams will play 76 games — eight games against rivals in their own division and six against clubs in the other sector.

Last season the clubs played 74 games—10 against their own division and four against the other division.

Campbell said a proposal to revert to the 1967-68 formula had been defeated at Tuesday's meeting of the league governors.

Effective immediately, none of the 12 clubs will be able to employ three different goalkeepers in any one contest.

The president said there is no objection to a club retaining three goalies on its roster, but that only two can be used in any one game and the pair must be designated by the coach before the game starts.

Some clubs this season have employed three netminders in one game.

Under the new rule, if the starting goalie is removed and subsequently replaced by his backup man and the substitute is then withdrawn or injured, the original starting netminder must return to the game, Campbell said.

Gordie Howe's HOCKEY

We played in Chicago recently and Bobby Hull was wearing a helmet that reminded me of the astronauts. It had a fatcgaard on it like a football helmet.

He has it, of course, to protect his broken jaw. When we were on the ice, his line was against mine and he kept muttering while we were waiting for faceoffs that "I'm having trouble seeing."

I can sympathize with him, but on his scoring record I'm not going overboard with my sympathy. His vision isn't restricted that much and anyway he carries the puck by feel, by looking at it. Anybody that can carry a puck on one of those curved sticks he uses, especially on the backhand, has to be good.

We had one of his sticks in Detroit and I was looking at it. Using a stick like that, you have to carry the puck on the heel of the stick when you have it on your backhand and you can only have about the width of the puck to carry it on.

Frankly, I could never do it. Anyway I carry the puck on the front area of the blade of my stick.

I've never had a broken jaw, and right here I touch wood. Having your teeth wired together like that must be torture. On top of that you can't eat anything solid. That would be enough to drive a man up a wall.

Back when I had my serious head injury, I had to wear a helmet for an entire season and that was enough for me. They are sweaty and uncomfortable and while I can appreciate the protection they afford, a helmet is just not for me.

In that game in Chicago, I noticed that Bobby was having a little trouble keeping the helmet sitting properly on his head. He took one bump and almost had to stop while he adjusted it. However, he scored a goal on us and he's been getting his share, so it hasn't hampered his shooting. He has so much talent though, I think he could play blindfolded and still get his share of goals.

There was one incident in that game that was embarrassing for myself and Matt Ravlich, of their defence. It started on the boards at their baseline. I had the puck and it got in my skates and he jammed me against the boards.

His kept jamming me and I thought, "that puck has to be down in my skates somewhere." However, what seemed strange was the rest of the players started to move down the ice.

Finally Pat Stebler, the linesman, skated up behind us and said "Hey, the puck's at centre ice."

Embarrassing, hey?

Have Edge on 'A's

Mo-Hawks Warm Up For Playoff Stretch

STAFF — All of Belleville is in the midst of a January thaw, but especially the Belleville Mo-Hawks who are warming up for a stretch run at a playoff spot in the eight team OHA Senior "A" hockey league.

Friday night the Mo-Hawks play host to the cellar-dwelling Woodstock Alcans at the Belleville Arena. It's a good time for the Alcans to be coming to town, for they are the only team over which Belleville holds an edge in season's play, a n d a win would boost the Mo-Hawks playoff chances.

The last time the two teams met, Belleville came o u t of Woodstock with a 5-4 victory, and since then the locals have played their best hockey of the season. Belleville has won two of three games with the Alcans this year.

Playing-coach Davey Jones will have a full lineup available for the Woodstock game and Sunday's road trip to Oakville. Jones said "We're going to win Friday night. We must win all our remaining games and have two or three on the road. If we do the race could boil down to our two games with Kingston."

Belleville is coming off Sunday's 3-3 tie with the second place Barrie Flyers, and has a 2-1 home ice win over Oakville in their last encounter as proof that they can knock off t h e Oaks.

The aggressive play of defenceman Greg Marchen and Lionel Body was cited by Jones as having shored up the club's defence corps in recent games, and Jones expects a similar effort from the rest of the line and a pair of wins this weekend, to narrow Kingston's six-point lead in the battle for the last playoff spot.

Picton Srs. Win Again

BCI Hoopsters Sweep Boards

BCI's tradition of winning basketball games appeared in litte danger last night as the Collegians swept four games from Centennial.

The senior Collegians remained undefeated by dumping the Chargers 68-45, the junior Collegians climbed past idle Moira into first place by tripping up Centennial 54-43, the bantam "A" squad moved into second spot with a 46-28 win over the Chargers, and the bantam "B" club defeated Centennial 39-16.

In the senior game action Picton sailors preserved their second place standing by edging third place Napanee 49-47, while Napanee Juniors won their first game of the year, defeating winless Picton 37-32, and Picton bantams picked up their second win thrashing Napanee 47-17.

The senior Collegians controlled the play much of the way as Ted Shaw hooped 21 points, Bill Mindenhall netted 19, Bob Wright counted 14 and Ken Richardson added 13. Dennis Nelson with 13 points, and John Koch with 12 topped the Centennial scorers.

BCI juniors sose the game at the foul line as Centennial played slowdown to prevent BCI from working the fast break.

Dave Wright scored 16 for the winners, while Brent Gallupe contributed 15 points and Rob Stirling nine. Guard Mike Thompson threw in 17 points for the Chargers in defeat. Bill Johnston netted eight, and Mike Semark and Keith Wilson added six points each.

The use of a 1-2-2 zone in the third quarter led to 15 points and carried Picton seniors to their win over Napanee. Max Burleigh scored 16 points for Napanee while Wayne Coward added 12 and Steve Ward 11.

Dave Cechetto hooped 18 points for Napanee while Dave Cunningham counted 13 and Bob Cook nine.

A zone press in the third quarter forced five Picton turnovers in a row and carried Napanee to their junior win.

Dave Finlay threw in 14 points for Napanee, while Rob Madden and Brian Babcock added six each for the winners.

Bill Barrett scored 15 points in a losing cause for Picton, while Dennis Bond added ten and Joe Burleigh netted six.

Little Error Margin

Marksman Club Meets No Place for Jitters

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Sportswriter

For members of the Quinte Marksman Club, there's more twixt trigger finger and target than meets the eye.

The 30-member club meets every Tuesday night in the Belleville Armories from seven to nine o'clock and members test their skill with 22 calibre handguns at targets 20 yards distant, with three inch bulls-eyes.

Many of the members compete in trials in Campbellford, Trenton, Kingston and other cities in the surrounding area. For them handguns are both a hobby and a competitive sport.

The handgun weighs as much as 40 ounces and is held at arm's length without the support of a rest of any sort.

A small movement of the arm or a jerky trigger finger creates a margin of error which will be multiplied many times over before the bullet reaches the target. A good round for a club member would be 80 points out of 100.

Concentration, good eye sight, good hand-eye co-ordination and a steady arm are necessary to achieve success in this demanding sport.

A good firm grip on the gun handle is essential for the gun must feel comfortable in the shooter's hand. Most handguns have both adjustable rearsights and adjustable foresights. The foresight adjustment is commonly used to control the elevation of the bullet.

Tim Bolsvert a member of the Quinte Marksman Club stresses that when buying a gun one man Club. Some of the precautions taken include the wearing of ear protectors, never loading a gun until everyone is behind the firing line, leaving the lights on until the last moment before firing, leaving the breech of the gun open until firing, and having all the guns point downrange unless they are being inspected by a safety officer.

The Marksman C lub has a summer outdoor range on the Redneersville Road, where standard outdoor distances are 25 and 50 yards, with the targets larger than those used indoors.

Handguns are a year - round or seasonal hobby at the Quinte Marksman Club, which is still signing new members.

'Off-Limits to Man'

Galapagos Islands Featured in TV Specials

NEW YORK (AP) — If we have many more TV specials about the remote, sparsely inhabited Galapagos Islands, they may become successors to Acapulco or Las Vegas as "in" places for tourists. And what will happen then to the ice-footed boobies and the Darwin finches and the giant tortoises that the conservationists want to keep alive?

A little more than a week ago, Jacques Yves Cousteau and his fun-loving divers gave the ABC viewers a once-over-lightly tour of the volcanic Galapagos and its unusual fauna.

Wednesday night CBS viewers had a closer, more comprehensive look at the island that more than a century ago stimulated Charles Darwin to study and think more deeply about the origin of the species.

This special apparently was made originally for the British TV audience and it had Prince Philip doing some of the commentary and frequently mentioning the need to keep the islands off limits to man.

The camera team of Alan and Joan Root—who made Born Free—shot the footage showing the reptiles and birds found on the barren islands far off the coast of Ecuador. Since most of the creatures are amazingly tame, they had some marvelous sequences.

Viewers, thus, were able to see in close up the amazing courtship rituals of lumbering tortoises, sleek frigate birds and the clown-like blue-footed boobies. We watched the woodpecker finches poke twigs and cactus spines into tree holes to dig out insects.

Prince Philip visited the island briefly four or five years ago and is interested in conservation. His remarks were directly to the point and he displayed a good sense of humor and a nice turn of phrase. Most of the narration, however, was done by American actor Leon Janney.

For a family audience, it was a delightful hour. It would, however, have been helpful if, after lecturing us on the importance of saving the Galapagos, someone had told us specifically how individuals could help.

ARDA Subsidy Halted -- Councillors Are Unhappy

Hastings county councillors are unhappy over the fact that the ARDA (Agricultural and Rural Development Act) subsidy has been withdrawn from municipal petition drainage projects.

During Dec. municipal councils were notified of the withdrawal of ARDA funds on such projects for all Ontario except the 11 counties east of Frontenac county.

At the inaugural session this week county councillors concurred in an Aldborough township resolution asking the province to continue ARDA subsidies to all municipal drains if works surveyed or in the hands of engineers prior to Dec. 31, 1968.

And yesterday councillors fired off a resolution of their own making formal application for inclusion of Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington in the continuing subsidy scheme.

County Agricultural Representative Douglas Tipper noted that only the 11 easterly "low income" counties had been included in the original ARDA drainage subsidy program.

However, Hastings had asked to be included with the result that the subsidy program was opened up for the entire province.

This he said, resulted in rapid depletion of funds allocated and the increased demands had "scuppered" the province wide program.

Robert R. McMahon, Kingston, rural development officer said ARDA realized that the withdrawal of subsidies was probably a backward step but when farmers were getting to see the value of drainage. Under the circumstances, however, he said there had been no alternative.

The report given by Mr. McMahon was intended to be given by Clayton Hall, rural development counsellor, but he is in Barrie this week attending a course relating to ARDA's farm enlargement and consolidation program.

The report showed that under the ARDA farm consolidation program which went into effect in 1965, 30 uneconomic Hastings county farm units had been purchased and consolidated with larger farms.

The average size of farms purchased was 128 acres at an average cost of $62.50 per acre for a total cost of $232,500.

Under the ARDA capital grants program $83,408 h.d been paid in grants to 150 Hastings farmers — to assist with farm drainage and building construction.

Another 55 farmers had received $10,767 in assistance for fence row removal and in 24 applications $6,762 had been paid in assistance for farm water supply.

Centennial Manor Has 33 Residents

The question of whether residents from outside the county should be admitted to Hastings Centennial Manor at Bancroft has posed a knotty problem for members of the county homes for the aged committee.

This was admitted at the inaugural session of county council this week following the reading of the homes for the aged report which said there were only 23 residents at the Bancroft home.

In reply to a question from Rawdon Reeve Alton Monture, home superintendent Gerald Caldwell said there was accommodation at the Bancroft home for 110 residents.

Reeve Morton said a million dollar building with only 23 patients didn't strike him as being very efficient and said the number of patients should be increased.

Sidney Reeve Jack Bush said this matter had given the Home committee much concern last year but said if the admission policy was changed to allow residents from outside the county "we would soon fill the building."

"It's a problem bigger than meets the eye," he said.

Reeve John Gaby of Marmora township didn't feel Hastings should get itself in the position of subsidizing other counties by admitting patients from outside the county.

Warden Lloyd Asselstine of Wollaston said, "The Jayhawkers" (9)

Cheese Grant Approved For Plainfield Plant

The Maple Dale Cheese Co-Operative on Highway 37 north of Plainfield has been given an ARDA amalgamation grant of $32,200 to help pay the cost of expanded factory facilities.

Clarke T. Rollins, MPP for Hastings announced approval of the grant at yesterday's session of Hastings county council.

Maple Dale factory patrons constructed a new cheese factory a few years ago but were ineligible for grant because no amalgamation was involved.

Since then patrons from the former Mountain Factory and Brook Factory have amalgamated with the Maple Dale Co-Operative and the request for the amalgamation grant was made last autumn.

Quebec Teachers Seek Voice in Making Educational Decisions

MONTREAL (CP) — The 66,000-member Quebec Teachers' Corporation has organized rotating or spot strikes to begin by the end of this month in English-and French-speaking Roman Catholic schools. Why?

Corporation President Raymond Laliberte says a request for a voice in decision making is one of the most contentious issues still to be resolved in the conflict which has dragged on for the last 18 months.

". . . Teachers should be the only ones to decide such things as what courses will be on the students' curricula, but here we're not even being allowed to take part in those decisions," he says.

"I think it's because the province's 8,000 school board trustees would find themselves without jobs if the teachers made the decisions. After all . . . trustees have no authority, or use for that matter, in any area other than deciding what textbooks will be used by the teachers.

"School financing as well as major policy decisions are handled by the department of education."

Mr. Laliberte predicts the current conflict will last several more weeks.

". . . As long as the government tells us it won't give us one extra cent and that we won't be allowed to participate in decision-making, I don't see any immediate solution," he says.

"Will we go farther than rotating strikes to make our point? I don't know at this time.

"Personally, I will never again recommend to our membership that they respect special government legislation herding them back to work the way I did in February, 1967. I have had my fill of those special bills."

The act called Bill 25, adopted Feb. 17, 1967, ended a 26-day general strike and extended the teachers existing contracts until June 30, 1968.

They remain without contracts for the current academic year.

Talks broke down Dec. 18 when the government refused to agree to arbitration on grounds that most issues still to be solved would require amendments to legislation or to the education department budget.

Settlement of the issues would therefore require action by the legislature, not simply by an arbitration board.

Salary clauses have been settled since mid-October when it was agreed that "the average salary for teachers for the next three years would be about $6,-900."

"Teachers in British Columbia, meanwhile, average between $8,000 to $8,500 a year," Mr. Laliberte says.

"But in addition to decision making, two other issues are unresolved—working conditions and upgrading of teachers skills.

"If the government granted our demands it would cost the province an extra $15,000,000 a year of a total education budget of $400,000,000. . . ."

Mr. Laliberte says teachers would stop exerting pressure on the government and call off its rotating strikes if binding arbitration is granted.

So far, 20 of the corporation's 62 teachers' associations have advised the labor department that they will strike. Four associations have said they will not take part in the strikes.

Snow Cart Centre Proposed

BARRIE (CP) — The St. Lawrence Parks Commission is considering two proposals for extending the park season through the winter with the use of snowmobiles, Fernand Guindon, Ontario minister without portfolio, said Wednesday.

Mr. Guindon, representing the government at the opening of a new snowmobile distribution centre, said one proposal is for development of 30 snowmobile trails on commission property between Morrisburg and Cornwall.

The other proposal is for annual international snowmobile competitions on the seven-mile highway called the Long Sault Parkway which circles into the St. Lawrence River on a series of connected islands.

The parkway now is closed in winter, he said. A golf clubhouse to be built soon could serve as a winter headquarters and there are restaurant facilities nearby.

Of all winter requests made at the tourist information centre in Barrie, Mr. Guindon said 33 per cent are for information on snowmobile trails, and the department of tourism and information has had to extend its daily reports on ski conditions to include snowmobile conditions.

LaMarsh Charged With Libel

VANCOUVER (CP) — Judy LaMarsh came here Wednesday to publicize her new book and, within minutes, was met by a deputy sheriff who handed her a writ alleging libel in the book.

The writ challenges that Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage libels Ed Murphy, a radio reporter with CKWX, Vancouver, who formerly covered Parliament Hill.

The former secretary of state blinked in astonishment, then accepted the writ. It was handed to her as she prepared to enter an elevator in a downtown hotel, shortly after she arrived by air from Montreal.

Lawyer Charles Maclean had earlier filed the writ at the British Columbia Supreme Court registry. It names publishers MacClelland and Stewart Ltd. as co-defendants.

Miss LaMarsh, saying she was tired, did not comment. She was to autograph copies of her book in a downtown bookstore today—as she did in Montreal Wednesday.

New Rules Will Strengthen Passport Security

OTTAWA (CP) — New regulations aimed at "strengthening the security of the Canadian passport" were tabled in the Commons Wednesday by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp.

Besides demanding closer proof of the identity of an applicant, they stipulate that all passports will expire after five years. This cuts off the previous system of permitting one five-year renewal.

Mr. Sharp also announced a doubling of the fee for a passport, to $10, and said the department plans to open passport offices in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver. A smaller Maritimes office will be opened later.

After tabling the new regulations in the Commons, the external affairs minister told reporters the changes bring Canada's system into line with those of other countries.

In the past it had been possible to get Canadian passports in ways not available in other countries, and he was concerned about criticism in this area.

Mr. Sharp ordered a study of the Canadian system last June after James Earl Ray, accused assassin of Martin Luther King, was arrested in London carrying a fake Canadian passport. Mr. Sharp said applicants in future will have to provide documentary evidence of their claim to Canadian citizenship.

Those claiming birth in Canada will have to present birth certificates. Those born outside the country will have to provide certificates of naturalization, certificates of citizenship or of registration of birth abroad.

Anyone wanting to get a passport who does not have these certificates, he said, should confirm their citizenship status with a federal citizenship registration office or the registrar of Canadian citizenship in Ottawa.

The new regulations also affect situations in which an applicant submits a statutory declaration that he cannot get a guarantor of his application.

In future anyone making such a declaration will also have to fill out a questionnaire giving personal information through which he can be identified by the passport office.

Mr. Sharp said the five-year limit on passports is being imposed because of a security hazard resulting from a steady increase in the number of passports lost or stolen.

Officials said there were 1,949 instances last year where passports had been lost or stolen and not recovered. The comparable figures in 1963 and 1964 were 935 and 655.

There have been several cases of Canadian passports turning up in the hands of spies. Soviet agent Yuri Loginov, for example, was arrested in South Africa in 1967 carrying a Canadian passport he had obtained the previous year in Tanzania.

There also have been cases of multiple frauds, notably the instance of a Montreal minister who helped some 94 West Indians obtain Canadian passports in 1959-60.

Proof Can Come Too Late

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

The trouble with waiting for "conclusive proof" is that by the time we get it, it may be too late to escape the consequences: science is far from sure that long-term exposure to polluted air presents a fatal hazard, but if we wait a decade for all the data to be collected, before moving on the problem, we may end up with more data than population.

It's surprising we haven't adopted the British term, "smarmy" to fill a descriptive void in American usage — meaning excessively or unctuously flattering, ingratiating; servile, and falsely sentimental.

We expect too much of our politicians, which is why we are so invariably disappointed in them; as that modern seer, Buckminster Fuller is fond of pointing out: "A politician is someone who deals in man's problems of adjustment — and to ask a politician to lead us is to ask the tail of the dog to lead the dog."

If you want to be sneaky about it, you can win many a bar-room bet asking who was "the first president of the United States in Congress assembled"; not Washington, but John Hanson, who was president under the Articles of Confederation eight years before Washington took his oath of office.

Learning only from experience is one of the dumbest ways to learn, for experience can condition us to limit our field of learning to drastically: as Mark Twain vividly put the same thing: "A cat who has jumped on a hot stove once will never jump on a hot stove again — but it will never jump on a cold stove, either."

When we discuss the serious "diseases" of the social order, we think first of crime, for it is the most shocking and dramatic, but, actually, such cumulative "diseases" as the instability of family life, the alienation between the generations, and the breakdown of human communication are far more serious, for they attack the central nervous system, as it were, of the social organism, whereas crime affects only the peripheries.

(Indeed, the root cause of these three, as well as crime, lies in what the Greeks called "anomie," a sense of rootlessness and helplessness of individuals, an anxiety bred from loss of community, which is why all these pathological conditions are seen more markedly in big cities.)

De Gaulle Assures Cardinal Quebec Officially Rediscovered

PARIS (CP) — Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal of Quebec, wafted forward by an outpouring of Gaullist oratory, French cuisine and classical culture, met a variety of leading French officials today as part of an itinerary in startling contrast to that awaiting him in Britain.

Cardinal goes to London Sunday after the glittering red-carpet reception being tendered him on a visit to France which began Wednesday.

His schedule in the British capital is solely a matter of such engagements as meetings with businessmen and Quebec students.

His Elysée schedule today includes a date for lunch with Foreign Minister Michel Debre and a talk with French Premier Maurice Couve de Murville.

Main motive behind Cardinal's round of talks and socialising here is a significant step-up in the present level of France-Quebec co-operation.

President Charles de Gaulle, who already has toasted the Quebec visitor and meets him again Friday, included richly-worded salutes to France-Quebec ties in his Wednesday night salute to Cardinal and other top members of the Quebec delegation.

De Gaulle told dinner guests at the Elysee Palace—and they did not include Canadian Ambassador Paul Beaulieu—that "the French living on both sides of the Atlantic . . . have officially rediscovered one another."

As if to reinforce warm words with utmost hospitality, the French leader entertained his guests with a presentation of 18th-century drama by the famed Comedie Francaise, a variety of classical music and a wealth of mouth-watering wines and dishes.

Beaulieu was expected to be among the guests when Cardinal and other members of the Quebec delegation gather for their lunch with Debre at the Quai d'Orsay, headquarters of the French foreign affairs ministry.

But Canadian federal officials were given the back-seat treatment by de Gaulle himself in what the newspaper Le Monde suggests may be another attempt by the president to irritate Ottawa into possibly careless action.

The emphasis in activities planned for Cardinal and Industry Minister Jean-Paul Beaudry today is on French technical and scientific accomplishments as well as on the purely political.

Even enthusiasts of Franco-Quebec cot-operation see most of its achievements so far as being in cultural and technical fields, in addition to whatever political dividends it may have earned its backers.

But increasingly heard here are calls for more effective involvement by French business men in Quebec, as proof of its readiness by Paris to put more commercial cash into the province's development.

France has had a tough year economically, one sign of which is de Gaulle's decision to reduce by 10 per cent his government's contribution to the Franco-West German youth exchanges.

His determination to maintain French presence in Quebec remains seemingly unaffected by budgetary cuts, however.

Possibly the only bright light from the Ottawa's point of view Wednesday was the news conference performance of Gen. Jean-Victor Allard, chief of Canada's defence staff.

He hailed what he called the excellence of Franco-Canadian military co-operation and added that Canada's armed forces are counting on France to help train 1,000 French-speaking Canadian officers.

School Addition To Be Ready Soon

DESERONTO — There is every indication that the addition to the public school will be ready for use by the end of January, and possibly earlier, Principal Rodney Dean believes. Workmen are now finishing up the floors, and there is some painting still to be done. "Given no delays, there is a prospect of everything being ready by the weekend," he stated.

Two classes are now being taught in church Sunday School quarters. The basement of St. Mark's Anglican Church has been in use since September, 1967. Last September Deseronto opened its first kindergarten in the school itself, and grade one pupils with two teachers, were moved to the ground floor Sunday school rooms of the United Church.

The addition includes a general purpose room, doubling as assembly hall and gymnasium, a library, which will also serve as a classroom, special education room, kindergarten, one additional classroom and rooms in the basement which can be used for various purposes, for guidance teaching and storage, among other things.

Already Principal Uens is having difficulty making adjustments, principally because the library must also be used as a classroom. At present the school has only a part-time librarian.

White's District

WHITE'S DISTRICT — Miss Darlene Stoneburg and Mr. Douglas Jamieson of London were weekend guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Stoneburg.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Reid and Ruth of Clarkson accompanied by his mother, Mrs. S. C. Reid and sister Margo were recent visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Allen of Richmond Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Brown of Peterborough who recently returned from the Bahamas were visitors of his sister, Miss Mabel Brown and brothers, Messrs. Harold and Gerald Brown.

Mrs. George Cotten opened her home for Bible study this week.

Hastings Historical Society Elects New Officers for 1969

The 1968 expenditures of Hastings County Historical Society were the largest in the organization's history, president E. J. Buckley told members at the annual meeting in Carty Library auditorium Tuesday night.

According to the financial report, the society spent $7,110, for the most part, on the County Museum. It was left with a deficit of $122.

Curatory wages accounted for a large part of the increased expenditure. The remainder went for restoration of exhibits, installation of display cases from the James McFee Jewelry Store, creation of an extra display room and lighting.

During the annual meeting, Brad Brummell, of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School Key Club presented the executive with a cheque for $325 raised by club members at a Christmas season dance. The society's funds were further augmented by a $200 legacy from the estate of Mrs. Mabel M. Gutsell.

Other gifts received by the society during the year were, a slide projector from Dr. Andrew's grandson for showing the museum's collection of old glass slides and a set of valuable reference books from W. Allan Dempsey, Robersville.

In his report, retiring president E. J. Buckley suggested the establishment of a museum board of governors, a group other than the executive of the Historical Society.

He said a museum board could act to provide an adequate funding system to ensure the permanence of the museum and to find a more suitable home for the museum.

At present, the County Museum is operated by the Historical Society. The new executive of the society will investigate ways and means of separating the society and museum organizations and of setting up an independent board to administer the museum.

The new executive, elected to serve from Jan. 21, 1969 until June 30, 1970, will be headed by Robert A. Porte, as president. E. J. Buckley will serve as past-president.

Other officers are: vice-president, Robert J. Orr; secretary, Mrs. G. A. Bennett; treasurer, Kenneth S. Hill; directors, James R. Connell, Ray E. Short of Rawdon, Mrs. Ray K. Jeffrey and Mrs. Rodger Greig.

Scott, Cunningham Meet

AMELIASBURG — Two heads are better than one.

When Mayor Russell Scott and Reeve George Cunningham got their heads together yesterday a suggestion by the latter to have a traffic light installed at the north end of the new CPR overpass received the Belleville mayor's approval.

Mayor Scott told Mr. Cunningham he favored the idea and would recommend the city's traffic committee give immediate attention to the matter.

Since the span was opened motor traffic entering and leaving from Bridge Street West became badly snarled with increasing regularity. Mr. Cunningham said "I knew what I was talking about because I got caught in the long line-ups more than once on trips to and from the city."

The township council met with Mayor Scott and city manager J. R. Reynolds for discussions about fire protection and garbage disposal privileges Belleville provides Ameliasburg under contracts now in the process of being renewed.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Mines and western oils led a small advance in moderately active mid-morning trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today.

The base metal index rose 1.10 to a record at 117.93. Gains in all sections outnumbered losses by almost two to one.

The rising indexes reflected strength in New York where market is going up. There was no special news, although brokers said the prospect of progress at the Vietnam peace talks in Paris this weekend was boosting share prices.

Among mines and oils, Falconbridge gained 1¼ to 114, Home A 1¼ to 43½, Asamera I to 27¾ and McIntyre Porcupine 1 to 99.

Sherritt Gordon was up ¾ to 11¾ after a delay in trading to match orders. The company said it has not yet made an economic discovery in its search for ore in Western Australia.

In industrials, Block Bros. rose 1¾ to 24, National Containers 1 to 13¼ and B.C. Forest ¾ to 29¾.

Among the heavy traders, Domtar gained 1 to 14¼ and Alcan ¼ to 32. Great West Saddlery lost ¾ to 20¾.

Great West Life was up 2¼ to 105. The company said it has no merger plans, although its stock has been rising on rumors that outside interests might make a takeover bid.

Golds were unchanged despite the sharp drop in the free market price of bullion in London. Gold bullion declined after David Kennedy, secretary of the U.S. Treasury, said there would be no change in the official price of monetary gold.

On Index, industrials rose .02 to 190.59, golds .09 to 247.23 and western oils 2.09 to 248.12. Volume by 11 a.m., was 1,210,000 shares compared with 1,772,000 at the same time Wednesday.

The Toronto market closed Wednesday with firm gains following an indecisive trading session the previous day.

The industrial idex rose .60 to 190.57, which is only half a point below its record earlier this month. Advances outnumbered declines by 397 to 251.

Trading volume was more active. A total of 5,136,000 shares changed hands compared with 4,390,000 Tuesday.

Brokers expect the market to remain in a strong position unless there is a sharp change in direction in New York. No one has forgotten the severe plunge two weeks ago when the New York market set off an unexpected slump on North American stock exchanges.

Dylex Diversified gained 4 to 17, A.G.F. Management 4 to 56, Canada Bread 2¼ to 21 and Block Bros. 2¼ to 22¾.

Marg has been a resident of Belleville for the past 23 years. She is married to Charles Cooke, a Belleville native, and they have four children. In the past Mrs. Cooke has been extremely active in the leadership of local church and home and school organizations.

Her career now takes up a great deal of her time. She has been selling Real Estate in Belleville and district for over 6 years. In this time Marg has handled more than 7½ million dollars worth of Real Estate transactions . . . so she knows what is going on in the local scene. For 4 consecutive years she won the award for real estate sales exceeding $1 million. This record was one of the reasons that A. E. LePage Limited chose Mrs. Cooke to represent them in the Quinte district rather than their usual procedure of awarding the post to a man of long-standing in the company. Also of major significance is the fact that Marg is the only woman in the managerial position with A. E. LePage.

TO LET

THE KNIGHTS NEEDED
THEM !

If saddles hadn't been invented in France in the early Christian era, the bold knights of the Middle Ages could never have stayed on their horses, let alone fought battles! Today saddles are used by nearly everyone who likes to ride horses.

Once your family may have enjoyed riding. Now that their new pursuits have left still-good saddles and other equipment (perhaps a horse?) lying around them with an Intelligencer Want Ad. It's just common sense to dial 962-9171 now!

Hormone May Provide Cure For Crippling Bone Diseases

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Canadian-discovered hormone which may cure crippling bone diseases will undergo its first extensive trials in humans at the Mayo Clinic, the Canadian Society for Clinical Investigation was told Wednesday.

The hormone is calcitonin, the 1961 discovery of Dr. D. Harold Copp, professor and head of the physiology department at the University of British Columbia. It is not yet authorized for testing in humans in this country.

Dr. Copp reported a new break-through in producing large supplies of calcitonin in pure form. He's been getting it from glands of Pacific salmon at fish canneries here.

At the same time, Dr. Claude Arnaud of the endocrine research centre at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., said the drug will be investigated extensively in humans suffering from osteoporosis and Paget's disease.

Osteoporosis appears in a variety of forms, especially in the aging process and in women after menopause. For unexplained reasons, the body does not make enough bone tissue to keep up with the normal wear and tear of living.

Paget's disease is a dramatic and uncontrolled increase in the formation and resorption of bone tissue by the body, causing great pain.

Because calcitonin seems to stop bone resorption and withdrawal of calcium from bone tissue, it may be of help in these metabolic bone diseases.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For January 24

Your Birthday today: Group effort is the pathway into the coming year. Experience gained is for further reward later. Evenings yield higher savings, easily retained. Family life, romantic interests are strongly favored throughout the year. Today's natives tend to be obstinate because of their honest convictions and unwillingness to compromise. Experimental schemes hold a great attraction for these people.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your partner may hold the key to a joint profit. Nobody else among your connections is likely to have anything but problems. Abstain from financial turns. Skip most of the Friday night chores. Retire early.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Work interferes with your home life. Despite this annoyance, keep an eye open for odd circumstances. Unusual chances to make extra income.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You lightheartedly hit on a piece of luck. Make the most of it without boasting. Make no increase in spending. Respond to an invitation or make a small party of your own.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Make a clean sweep of all weekend chores this uneventful day. Get them all done so you can have more fun.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): A quick manoeuvre can bring results today, if you know your markets. Health protection, group insurance, individually prescribed diets are all part of the picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Low-key, but very real, phenomena, unprecedented experiences are promised. Original ideas are hard for your older associates to accept.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Follow that sudden cheerful resolve to try unorthodox methods. They work if boldly applied. Ask for any money due. Early rest is desirable.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Keep a pleasant manner while you stay on the conventional highway to better human relations. Serious issues should be talked out this weekend with a mate, at best this very evening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Coincidence brings luck to you and the people around you. Make a genuine attempt at a new pattern of health habits. Your working arrangements also improve if you make the effort.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You run into higher expenses. Resist, however, and the day balances out to benefit your career. Turn the new situation over in your mind.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Original ideas are acceptable in the right places. Expect fresh viewpoints and different competition. Results if your home management pile up and hinder your weekend freedom. Get busy!

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): You will find it hard to accept the changes in your working conditions or new people. You must have time to get used to both. Preserve your equanimity; you'll adapt!

Russians Probe Shots in Kremlin

WORKMEN AT HAZLEHURST, MISS. reported finding three dead here and were looking for at least one more believed to still be in the wreckage. The house was destroyed by a tornado that struck the community Thursday morning. (AP Photo)

Path of Destruction Cut Through Mid-Mississippi

HAZLEHURST, Miss. (AP) — Massive clean-up operations began today in central Mississippi where tornadoes killed 29 persons while carving a path of destruction across three counties.

The twisters, roaring in from the West Thursday morning, injured more than 139 persons and left approximately 300 homeless. Damage was estimated in the millions.

The first area struck was a predominantly Negro settlement just outside south Hazlehurst in Copiah County. The tornadoes then moved northeastward into rural areas of Simpson and Smith counties.

Utility crews worked into the night Thursday to restore most of the electrical and telephone service.

Hazlehurst Hospital alone treated 128 persons. Many others were taken to hospitals in Jackson and Brookhaven.

About 200 homeless persons spent the night at an emergency centre set up at the National Guard armory in Hazlehurst.

Governmental and private agencies quickly moved into the area to care for the hungry and the homeless.

Governor John Bell Williams, on a tour of the stricken area, pledged state aid.

Survivors said an overwhelming roar and ominous darkness preceded the tornado.

Lonnie Haynie said: "When the lights went off we got on the floor and I got on top of my youngest child. The house was flattened over us."

"I knew what it was when I heard it," his wife Vera said.

Nothing remained of the house of Jack Smith, a laundry employee, but the brick pillars. Mrs. Smith's body was found 100 yards away in a pasture.

Gladys Perkins was standing in the ruins of her home when officers told her that her injured son had been reported dead in hospital.

McCutcheon Dies at 62

TORONTO (CP) — Former senator Wallace McCutcheon who gained a reputation as a financial wizard but whose political life was marked largely by disappointments, died Thursday at 62 following a stroke.

An outspoken man, Mr. McCutcheon received a Senate appointment in 1962.

Briton Will See Nasser

LONDON (AP) — A British government minister left for Cairo today seeking talks with President Nasser on the Middle East crisis.

The visit by Goronwy Roberts, minister of state in charge of Mideast affairs is the first by a member of the British government since September, 1965.

The United Arab Republic broke diplomatic relations with Britain in December that year over the British government's handling of the Rhodesian independence crisis. Relations were restored only last year.

Roberts left just a day after British-Iegen talks with Russia on moves for peace between the Arabs and Jews.

Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart delivered Britain's reply to Soviet proposals for a step-by-step peace settlement based on an UN resolution.

News Briefs

PARIS (AP) — Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky returned today to supervise South Vietnam's delegation to the Vietnam peace talks and said the Saigon regime is "vigorous and ready in the hope of achieving a just and lasting peace."

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard reported today that the passenger vessel Fairsea carrying 986 persons was adrift in the Pacific about 900 miles west of the Panama Canal Zone after a fire disabled her engines.

GENOA, Italy. (CP) — A 58-year-old warehouse worker poured alcohol over himself here today and set himself on fire in a suicide bid, probably inspired by the "human torch" attempts in Czechoslovakia. The man, Enrico Antoniotti, had no political motives.

WINNIPEG (CP) — A half-block area housing six shops in downtown Winnipeg was destroyed today in a wind-swept, pre-dawn fire. The blaze still was being fought five hours after the first alarm was turned in.

Czechs Honor Youth

'It's dreadful. Hit by a truck the day he quit smoking!'

PRAGUE (CP) — Thousands of Czechoslovaks, many sobbing, filed past the closed coffin of Jan Palach today while police moved into key positions to put down any anti-Soviet demonstrations.

The coffin of Palach, who set himself afire for the cause of freedom, rested alongside a statue of Jan Hus, who died at the stake in defence of truth in 1415.

Huge crowds gathered in narrow Celetny Ulice, the Ironmongers' Street, to enter the main building of Charles University where the coffin rested. Members of the university faculty stood near the catafalque.

A policeman opened a Bible and began reading, started sobbing and had to be helped away by companions.

Small children knelt and placed flowers near the coffin, adding after lay offerings to a profusion of floral wreaths.

The 21-year-old university student set fire to himself on Wenceslas Square Jan. 16, to protest the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia. He died three days later.

The coffin will be on view through Saturday morning. Then students planned a massive memorial observance in advance of private funeral services Saturday afternoon.

Student leaders said they expected 400,000 students in the capital for the ceremony. Prague radio said the leaders told the interior ministry they could not guarantee there would be no incidents.

The students made public appeals for a calm, dignified memorial. They said any violence could "entirely destroy our hopes for socialism with a human face," the motto of the liberal reform wave.

The coffin was placed in a sm.l courtyard in the Carolinum, the university's central building.

Behind the coffin was the national flag with black crepe attached to the top of the standard.

Students Abandon Buildings

PARIS (AP) — Some 250 student rebels withdrew quietly during the night from France's newest university after police battled other rebellious students for five hours in the Latin Quarter of Paris.

Despite the crackdown in the capital, riot police just watched at suburban Vincennes University, a model campus where students took over the administration building and communications facilities. Window curtains were set on fire in one meeting room but the damage was not serious. The last holdouts withdrew quietly about 4 a.m.

King's Top Aide Will Defend Ray

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A top aide to slain civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. has paid a jail cell visit to James Earl Ray, King's accused killer, and says he will aid in Ray's defence.

The move was backed by Rev. Ralph David Abernathy, King's successor as head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

"Brother Ray has asked me to defend him and I intend to do it," Rev. James Bevel told a meeting of about 50 ministers Thursday night after his jail visit.

Bevel said last week he was convinced Ray was innocent in the slaying of King here last April 4. Ray is scheduled to go on trial March 3.

In Atlanta, Abernathy said he viewed Bevel's action as a way of moving "non-violence into a new dimension in American life." The SCLC head added: "Rev. Bevel is speaking to the real issue—namely that it is not who killed Dr. King, but what killed him."

Bevel visited with Ray in the top-security cell on the third floor of the Shelby County jail, accompanied by Ray's lawyer, Percy Foreman.

Mystery Veils Man's Motive

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Top Russian security men were today still trying to unravel the riddle of a "schizophrenic" gunman who fired at a cavalcade of cosmonauts in the Kremlin Wednesday.

A two-paragraph report on the incident by the Soviet news agency Tass Thursday night said an investigation was under way.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda today carried the Tass report on the incident at the bottom of an inside page. The item was simply headed "Report." Pravda made no other reference to the shooting.

Mystery surrounds every aspect of the apparent assassination attempt.

Who was the gunman?

There was no official hint of his identity and a foreign ministry spokesman said only that he was a schizophrenic and gave no further details.

Unofficial sources offered contradictory descriptions.

Some said he was 40 years old, others said he was 20. One report said he was a policeman and another said he was a soldier.

Who was he aiming at?

The official version was that he fired at a black Chaika limousine carrying cosmonaut Maj.-Gen. Georgy Beregovoy, 47; Valentina Nikolayeva-Tereshkova, 31; her husband Andrian Nikolayev, 39; and Alexei Leonov, 34, the first man to walk in space.

But Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev and President Nikolai Podgorny were believed to be in a nearby vehicle in the motorcade.

No official source would say precisely where their cars were at the time of the attack.

Why did he shoot?

This was the biggest question today. Neither Tass nor the foreign ministry suggested any possible motive.

The Associated Press reported there was speculation that the gunman wanted to shoot Brezhnev and Podgorny, but they were riding in a closed car several places behind the limousine which was hit.

It seemed clear, The AP said, that the gunman was not aiming at the four newest space heroes, who were standing in an open car two cars ahead of the vehicle that was hit. They would have been easy targets.

Reports said there were five or six shots.

They were fired at the motorcade as the Soviet cosmonauts drove into the Kremlin in triumphant procession to celebrate Russia's latest space feats, including a spectacular space link-up between Soyuz 4 and 5 last week.

The long procession of black limousines had driven from Vnukovo airport, where Brezhnev, Podgorny and other leaders greeted the four newest Russian space heroes—Vladimir Shatalov, Boris Volynov, Yevgeny Khrunov and Alexei Yeliseyev, members of the Soyuz 4 and 5 crews.

After kisses and bear-hugs at the airport, the motorcade was bound for the Kremlin for a celebration rally.

Tears Streaming Down Face, Pueblo Captain Tells Court Terrible Tale of Tortures

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — The captain of the Pueblo says he confessed to spying after blood-chilling mental torture, and then tried to drown himself in a bucket of water.

Tears streaming and his voice breaking at times, Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher told a navy court of inquiry Thursday that North Korean finally broke him by threatening to shoot his crew, one by one in front of him, and surrounding the youngest sailor and saying they would start with him.

Bucher's account of the terror ended—at least for now—his public appearances. He goes before a closed session of the court today to give classified testimony, and will be followed, the navy said, by Rear-Admiral Frank L. Johnson, commander of U.S. naval forces in Japan at the time the Pueblo was seized a year ago.

After describing why he confessed, Bucher said Thursday:

"Sometime during the night I attempted to commit suicide by drowning myself, in a bucket of water in my room but was unable to accomplish this."

"Mentally, I was quite disturbed," he said, partly because of the embarrassment he thought his confession caused the United States.

The typewritten confession said Bucher was an agent of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency, that his ship intruded into North Korean waters and that he was trying to put South Koreans ashore.

"And I realized they (North Koreans) needed live shore more than anyone else in the crew for public appearances that I was afraid of and knew were coming."

"They made me kneel on the floor," Bucher said Thursday. He said a North Korean he nicknamed Super Colonel, or "Super C," seemed desperate.

"You have two minutes to decide to sign the confession or be shot," Bucher said he was told. "I spent two minutes on the floor and I repeated 'over and over: 'I love you, Rose, I love you, Rose.'"

Bucher's voice broke at this point and his wife, nearby, sobbed.

"At the end of the two minutes he asked me to sign," Bucher said. "I said I wouldn't. He told a guard at my side to move so when I got shot and the bullet passed through my head, he would not be hit."

"'Kill the son of a bitch!'" Bucher said a North Korean shouted. "The gun clicked but it didn't fire. I had fully expected to be shot. But when the slide was drawn back, presumably to insert another bullet, I did not hear any bullet hit the floor and I damn well knew it was a game they were playing."

Two more minutes went by, Bucher said, and "the officer said, 'He's not worth a bullet,' and told me I would be beaten to death.

"Two guards beat me to the floor and kicked me and worked me over real good. I lost consciousness after a few minutes . . . I asked to go to the bathroom . . . all I could urinate was blood."

Bucher said he was taken to another building and shown a tortured man strapped to a wall. "They told me he was a South Korean spy. He was alive . . . but had a compound fracture of his upper right arm with the bone sticking out. He was stripped to the waist.

"He had completely bitten through his lower lip. It was hanging down. His right eye had been put out. His head was hanging down. There was a lot of black matter running down his right cheek. He was under three spotlights. I do not remember leaving that building."

He said his captors told him: "That's what happens to spies, and you are spies, and you will get exactly the same."

"I passed out," Bucher said.

Bucher said he revived in his interrogation room.

"We will now begin to shoot your crew and shoot them in your presence until you sign," He said Super C told him. "And even then if you will not sign, I will make you sign."

"I was not prepared for them to shoot my crew," Bucher said. "I was convinced they would do it. They were animals. I was not prepared to go through things like that."

After signing a confession, "I was taken back to my room and a big plateful of food with egg and other goodies was brought to me . . . I did not touch it."

Loot Valued at $2,000

Two Youths Charged With Theft as Guns Uncovered

TRENTON — Two teenagers were being questioned by police here today after a chain reaction of bizarre incidents uncovered a cache of stolen guns and ammunition.

They are charged with theft of rifles, pistols, ammunition and gun cases valued at more than $5,000. The guns were looted during a break-in Jan. 17 at Kelly's Sport Shop on Belleville's North Front Street.

A small arsenal of pistols was discovered in a wrecked automobile stopped by police at Rossmore. Later, say police, a cache of firearms was found hidden in a barn behind Wight's farm home.

The chain reaction of incidents culminating in the arrests started at a Trenton car lot.

Police say an automobile was stolen from Wessa Motors on Front Street about 10.30 p.m.

Shortly after the vehicle pulled alongside two girls walking on Marmora Street.

During an ensuing struggle a firearm suddenly discharged twice.

Both men then drove off hurriedly, with one girl in the back seat.

When the car stalled on the town bridge over the Trent River, both men leapt out and dashed across the bridge, claim police.

They ran to the Front Street municipal parking area where they had parked a car, say police. The parking lot is next to the Wessa sales premises.

Enroute, they were spotted by a passerby who, suspicious of their hurried flight, took the licence number of the car as the men drove away.

He called police and the description of the vehicle was relayed to all municipal and provincial police patrols.

Road blocks were set up in the Belleville-Brighton-Trenton area.

About 11:30 p.m. an automobile tallying with the description of the wanted car was spotted by an OPP officer parked on the wrong side of Highway 14 south of Rossmore.

OPP Const. Jack Mallan said two youths were standing at the rear of the automobile with the trunk lid raised. He radioed for help and with the arrival of a second officer, searched the car.

Police say a check of the car revealed 17 handguns, most of them loaded.

Taken into custody, the youths were questioned by Belleville detectives.

A search party of provincial and city police then went to the Wight farmstead at Consecon with a search warrant and combed a hay loft.

Det. Lyle Davis said they found two double-barrelled shotguns, four rifles — valued at more than $1,000 — along with pistols, ammunition, gun cases and two cases of beer.

Plainfield Resident First Contributor

A Plainfield man has become the first to donate to the Belleville and area March of Dimes Campaign this year.

Leonard Vellemain of the Ontario Home for Mentally Retarded Infants at Plainfield, this week sent Mayor J. Russell Scott a cheque for $50.

Mayor Scott turned the cheque over to his wife, Marion, who is Chief Marching Mother for the local campaign this year.

In a letter of reply to Mr. Vellemain, Mayor Scott said "All the children of Belleville will be most pleased with your gesture from outside the city. The cash will be fairly well organized," Mrs. Morphy said, "but there is still a large part of the west side lacking in volunteers."

The area of particular concern is bounded by the north end of the city, East Moira Street, Strachan Avenue and Lane Avenue.

Both captains and canvassers are needed in this area. Canvassers are also needed in the Parkdale and Lewis Street areas.

Anyone wishing to assist in the March of Dimes campaign, Monday night, Feb. 3, is asked to contact Mrs. Morphy at 962-3216.

Crow Sighted

Has spring sprung or is the recent thaw just a ruse to get the groundhogs out of their holes a month or so early?

Evidently one crow in Belleville feels the warm weather is here to stay as it is lighted in a walnut tree behind the residence of Mrs. Olive Reid on Foster Ave. early this morning.

According to Mrs. Reid it just sat there and cawed for awhile and then flew away.

New Club Plans Ramble

PICTON (Staff) — The Prince Edward Snowmobile Club met last night to make plans for the remainder of the season.

There is only one member of the club who isn't co-operating and that is the weather man.

Planning rambles and meets is difficult with such unpredictable weather, said club president Terry Whattam.

The obtaining of insurance was discussed. This would eliminate the liability of the person who owns the land on which the club is riding.

One club meet passed — that there would be no drinking while on the trail.

The club will Jan. 28, at Point Peter, for their next excursion. They hope to be off by 7.30 p.m.

IN MEMORIAM

BONYER — In loving memory of a dear mother Emma Bonyer who passed away January 24th, 1967. Time heals the heart they say
But time can't heal the pain
For as her body proved,
Her spirit lives again.
Each time we see her picture,
Each time we hear her name,
"Don't cry, I'm only sleeping,"
She seems to whisper to me.
She is not dead, but sleeping,
In the arms of Jesus she lies,
Her memory is just as well,
Her love and kindness dwelleth,
No mother we loved so well.
—Always remembered by Velma, Harold and family.

DOYLE — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, William Doyle who passed away January 24, 1952.

Where he is gone,
Where all his pain and sorrow,
Will be no more.

God bless you dad, you were one of the best.
—Always remembered by wife Hazel and family.

SEED TALK
GETTING CORN BACK INTO PROSPECTIVE
... Is it time for a second look at corn?
Many Ontario farmers have been growing Canada Corn Belt hybrids. Quebec and Ontario acres in corn for the reason that they have found a new awareness of the high-yield possibilities of corn. Many of the progressive, enterprising and technologically sound program farmers in Ontario and Quebec are, a lot of farmers have discovered, growing corn for the dollars and cents it returns. Unfortunately the "cash crop" image of corn has been built on half the short ear yield records it claims. We hear about 125 bushel crops, but are not impressed. 75 bushels and the $1.40 market has been the backbone of many farm figures and yields. Corn is a specialty crop up, we feel that the profit picture is going to change drastically because it is time to get back into corn. There is no question, however, that the honeymoon is over.
On the other hand the stage is set for tremendous advances in corn yields. Hybrids are available, now that we know what a complete program is for fertilization, plant spacing and proper varieties can do for corn yields. Many farmers have yet to see their maximum yields and, therefore, have yet to learn the lessons of heavy fertilization and close spacing. Corn is a crop that likes to be crowded. That's fact, not fiction.
MORE ROOM AT THE TOP IS FORAGE YIELDS . . . A 5 ton alfalfa crop and a 10 ton grass mixture used to be champion yields. Now it is not unusual to get 7 tons of alfalfa and 8 tons of grass mixtures as much protein as from corn!
If we assume that forage yields will increase as much as corn has, then 10 ton alfalfa yields and 12 ton grass with 20% tons of corn silage or 24 bushels per acre is fairly sure!

Shortage of Foster Homes

Number of Children Under CAS Care Is Lowest in Years

The Hastings County Children's Aid Society, or the Family and Children's Service as it is now known, ended the year 1968 with the lowest number of children in care in many years.

The CAS director, Bruce M. Kerr, told county council this week that the organization started the year with a total of 145 children in care and ended it with 130.

Of this number Hastings county was financially responsible for 28.

By way of comparison, Mr. Kerr said that 15 years ago, in 1954, the CAS had 376 children under its supervision with the county being financially responsible for 100.

The 1968 budget of the local society, made up of the county, Belleville and Trenton, was $770,000 of which the province contributed slightly over 70 per cent — plus 100 per cent of the cost of caring for all children born out of wedlock. The cost of the CAS service to the county was $48,767.

By way of illustrating how the local cost of CAS services had decreased, Mr. Kerr said that in 1958 there were 112 county children in care with a cost to the county of $75,000.

"Can you imagine what it would cost to care for 112 children in 1969?" he asked.

Mr. Kerr emphasized the importance of the program of prevention services offered by professionally supervised and well trained staff which he said was paying big dividends.

He said the work of his society was assisted by the Hastings and Prince Edward Counties Health Unit, and the more recently formed Hastings Welfare Unit, and was looking forward to the kind of service the new Hastings county school board would be able to provide.

"If a program of psychological services is introduced into the school system at an early date, we as a social agency will have fewer problems and you as taxpayers will support fewer people in mental hospitals and correctional institutions."

Again prevention pays off," Mr. Kerr said.

Despite the fact that more group homes are being developed, the CAS director said individual foster homes were were still the backbone of the child care operation.

However, he said there was always a shortage of foster homes — not a numerical shortage — but of families with the patience, understanding and ability to care for disturbed children.

There was also a shortage of foster homes for teen-aged children with many people saying they "simply do not choose to accept the responsibility" of a teenager in their home.

Mr. Kerr said there was also an acute shortage of adoption homes in the province.

Mr. Kerr made specific mention of the number of unmarried mothers coming to the society for assistance and said the public was going to have to make it socially acceptable for these girls to keep their babies.

If this wasn't done, the CAS director said "agencies such as ours will soon be jammed full of children we cannot place and for whom you, your friends and neighbors will still have to provide financial support — and continue to support for years to come."

During last year 91 unmarried pregnant girls came to the society for assistance. Of this number 49 relinquished their babies to the CAS for permanent care, hopefully through adoption. Still another 45 sought help in obtaining financial assistance from the fathers of their expected children."

In urging a re-examination of the thinking regarding the social acceptibility of unmarried mothers keeping their babies, Mr. Kerr asked if he remembered that it was "is your daughters who are becoming pregnant . . . and is it your neighbors' sons who are impregnating them."

"These are not girls from foreign lands . . . they are your sons and daughters. And there simply aren't enough adopting parents to provide homes for the children being born out of wedlock today."

Knight To Head Planners

Horace Knight was elected chairman of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board at its inaugural meeting last night. No other member was nominated for the position.

All of the other positions on the board were also filled by acclamation with Zdenek Kvarda filling the post as vice - chairman. Members elected to the procedure and organization committee were Mrs. M. Orr, Horace Casey and Arnold Orr. Mrs. Orr will be chairman of the committee.

A new zoning by-law for the township of Thurlow was discussed at last night's meeting and the planning board recommended that no changes be made in the provision in the by-law for holding zones.

Holding zones are parcelled areas, left unzoned, where nothing can be built for any purpose until certain requirements are fulfilled. These requirements and the decision for the use of the land would be made at a later date by Thurlow Council.

Any changes that are ever to be made in the by-law must be made through Thurlow council and the Ontario Municipal Board.

The planning board can only make recommendations.

Gad! Is Housing Shortage This Chronic?

The housing shortage may be serious, but as yet home-owner standards have not been lowered — despite appearance of this scene in east Belleville. Ramshackle structure in foreground has nothing to do with realtor's sign. It's merely children's playhouse.

New Look Asked At Arena During Recreation Meeting

Belleville's 40-year-old memorial arena could come in for more than the normal sprucing up this year if the hopes of new members of the city recreation - arena committee are realized.

At yesterday's meeting, a sub-committee was appointed to inspect the Market Street arena and submit recommendations on what it was felt should be done.

Preliminary suggestions range from installation of heating units and possible provision of arena type tip-up seats.

And also a search will go out for a set of arena renovation plans acquired by the arena committee a decade or so ago.

Committee member Joseph Cox says he is not suggesting a major renovation program for the old arena, but "for his own sake" he would like to have a look at the plans.

Alderman Kenneth Soden made it clear, however, that he would be strongly opposed to any major recreational program for the old arena.

"It would be a waste of money and would kill any thought of a future new community centre," he said.

Mr. Cox reminded that in a democratic vote city property owners last autumn had turned down construction of a new arena.

"Not democratic," returned Alderman Soden who pointed out that the vote had been confined to property owners only. He felt that tenants also should have been entitled to express their opinion on the arena construction.

Here chairman Ald. Richard Ellis called a halt to discussion regarding the arena vote and a sub-committee composed of new members G. Cox, C. Belch and Mrs. J. Guthrie was named to view the present arena and bring in recommendations.

City manager J. R. Reynolds noted that between $60,000 and $70,000 had been spent in recent years in arena maintenance.

Any major renovation expenditures at the arena would have to be approved by city council.

Park Road Work Awaits Harbor Plans

Lines of communication between the various city boards and commissions are always a good thing.

And it's even better if there is some duplication of personnel in the membership of the boards.

This was emphasized yesterday at a city parks board meeting following a suggestion that the road leading to Victoria Park be widened just south of the CPR bridge.

Aldermaa Arthur Keegan said the narrow width of the present roadway was dangerous and suggested that it be widened to two lanes.

But another board member, Douglas P. Hurley, who acts as secretary treasurer of the Belleville Harbor Commission, said roadway widening at this point could interfere with plans the harbor commission had for development at the north end of the inner harbor.

Mayor J. Russell Scott, also a harbor commission member, noted that actually the commission had jurisdiction over all the waterfront east of the Bay Bridge and should be consulted in any development plans.

A committee of Aldermen Keegan and Ellis along with Robert Phillips and Donald Templeman was named to meet with the harbor commission regarding road development at Victoria Park.

Council to Discuss New Traffic Lights

Traffic lights at the intersection of Dundas Street, West, and the new CPR overhead leading to the Bay Bridge Road could soon be a reality.

Alderman Arthur Keegan said yesterday that the matter of lights for this intersection which has become a traffic bottleneck since the opening of the overpass, would be up for discussion at Monday's traffic committee meeting.

Since the opening of the overpass Prince Edward County residents have complained of lengthy holdups as they wait to get onto Dundas Street — particularly during the rush hour periods.

Installation of traffic lights at this point were in the over-all planning in the Dundas Street reconstruction program but were not expected to be put in until the three year program was completed.

Booth Charge May Be Discontinued

In addition to having a new name — Quinte Exhibition — the 1969 edition of the Belleville Fair — could have other changes as well.

In a move aimed at encouraging more fair displays, directors are toying with the idea of giving away booth display space — but charging booth personnel for admission to the fair.

If approved, this move would do away with issuing fair passes to booth personnel.

And there is also a move afoot calling for fair display booths not to be opened until one o'clock in the afternoon.

Directors explained that normally there is very little traffic through the fair buildings in the morning and consequently little point in manning the booths during the morning hours.

Under the new schedule fair buildings will be open from one p.m. until 11 p.m.

Anything Goes

When External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp attempted to address a University of Montreal student audience the other day he was interrupted by students who coughed, sighed, thumped desks and threw paper darts into the air. It was a minority group of some 40 students out of the 300 present. Yet it was indicative of the kind of situation described the other day by Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

Chief Crosbie said society has become so lax, oriented that it is losing all sense of individual responsibility. This sounds like a contradiction in terms, but the police chief explained it by saying that for every new product industry produces, laws have to be introduced. He cited laws to ensure proper operation of light motorcycles and snowmobiles, as well as "double standard" situations such as parents who flout liquor regulations becoming upset when their own teenage children are found intoxicated at a high school dance. He would like to see more publicity by both police and press to acquaint the public with lawbreaking among the city's youth.

Well and good — but has not the whole issue of discipline among young people gone completely out of hand? Corporal punishment is no longer "in." Today there is student power and the young, sensing their manipulation, are no longer in awe of parents whose own guidelines are either wanting or nonexistent.

Chief Crosbie was speaking at a home and school association discussion on discipline and he and Vincent Castellano of the Family and Children's Services of Hastings County agreed that rather than negative, corrective discipline of a child, the first approach to a problem should be to ask why the child behaved that way.

But surely there is more to discipline than finding out what causes bad behavior? Or is this what might be termed the new psychology — letting the child do what he pleases? It drew this comment from a parent: "Parents have been hypnotised by 'why.' They seem more interested in asking why than in moving to stop the bad behavior."

The result of course is a state of adolescent tyranny in which even those parents who desire to enforce discipline have difficulty doing so because of the growing permissiveness in all sectors of society.

Columnist Richard Needham of The Globe and Mail has summed it up well: "In the old days, people controlled their kids with physical penalties — the strap, a cuff on the ear. Today, the penalties are more inclined to be emotional — anger, sorrow, disappointment. Physical punishment left scars that healed, emotional punishment leaves scars that don't heal."

Doing It Yourself

There is a tatty old sign hanging over the upper bridge leading the hyphen. "Keep People Working — Do It Now." The sign has holes in it, and since the winter works program is now defunct, it would be a good idea to take it down.

In any event the sign has seen better days and the city would do well to take it down and replace it with something like: "You are now entering Beautiful Downtown Belleville." What drew the crowds to Disneyland, California, might do the same for the price of Quinte.

The sign does remind us, however, of the virtue of doing things for oneself. Here are some examples: In China, plans exist to fill universities with workers and peasants after sending masses of students to factories and fields.

It is one of Chairman Mao Tse-tung's ideas, and it even involves sending workers to a hospital for training in medicine and surgery. Crash courses at patients' bedsides, instead of poring over books, are said to have afforded trainees skill enough, they could take out an appendix after two months.

Well, that is the word from Peking, and more power to the jacks of all trades there. For our part, if we need an appendectomy we would rather have it done here.

Consider, too, the plight of the Israelis in trying to keep their French Mirage and Mystere jet fighters flying without spare parts service from France. The upshot of France's decision not to sell any more jets or parts to Israel is that Israel is now making the spare parts itself.

Here in Canada there is word of another interesting do-it-yourself experiment. It is happening at St. Catharines and involves students tutoring fellow students in subjects with which they are having difficulty. It is student power with a difference, and it is a wonder the idea has not been tried before. There is more on this at St. Catharines experiment elsewhere on this page.

Senate Disapproval

Heavy Going for Walter Hickel on Way to Interior Post

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — When fast-talking Alaska Gov. Walter Hickel flew into Washington in search of Senate confirmation as the new interior secretary he knew he was in for a tough time.

As far as true-blue conservationists were concerned, Hickel had a questionable reputation and they didn't care for the oil-company friends he kept.

Hickel, seated alone at an 18-foot table as he faced his 18 inquisitors of the interior committee, held his notorious temper in check, calmly explained away past transgressions and generally pictured himself as the greatest nature-lover since St. Francis of Assisi.

After four days of cross-examination, several Senators and many conservation groups across the United States were not convinced.

And so, when the rest of the new Nixon cabinet was sworn in Wednesday, the stocky, self-made multi-millionaire was not in the lineup.

The delay was seen as temporary, however, since a new president traditionally is permitted the cabinet of his choice. The stalling tactic was but a ploy to embarrass the governor and put him on notice that his work at the interior department will come under close Senate scrutiny.

With a long string of ill-considered remarks—"I'm against conservation for conservation's sake"—Hickel had provided much of the ammunition for the Senatorial attack.

But what concerned many Senators was not the occasional indiscreet slip of the tongue but the broader problem of whether Hickel could make the difficult transition from governor of Alaska to interior secretary.

The two jobs could scarcely be more different.

In Alaska, with little or no problem of air or water pollution, the whole thrust is toward opening up new land, development and tapping the vast oil and natural gas resources.

At the interior department, the secretary is dedicated to conservation, saving the parks and wilderness from industry's encroachment, preventing pollution and looking after the welfare of the Indian and Eskimo minorities. And he runs the oil import program.

Democratic Senator Edmund Muskie of Maine reflected the thinking of many when he asked Hickel, a Republican, point-blank whether in view of his long "intellectual commitment" to the oil industry—the natural enemy of the conservationists—he could be objective in his administrative decisions as secretary.

Hickel insisted he could. In fact, as the questioning petered on the former Golden Gloves champion seemed almost to be pleading for the committee's favor.

He promised to get rid of any financial involvement the committee thought might be in conflict with his position as secretary, even his $1,000,000 holdings in a natural gas distribution firm if necessary.

He even endeavored to divest himself of some of his present thinking.

"There are many things I'll reverse my opinions on if I get confirmed," he said.

High School Students Help Each Other Out

By Rudy Platiel in the Globe and Mail

ST. CATHARINES — "I think this makes us realize how difficult it is to teach," Suzanne Kavanaugh, 18, a Grade 13 student said with a smile.

Around her in the cafeteria of Grantham High School, students sat tutoring fellow students who were having difficulty with certain school subjects.

The volunteer tutoring program, organized by the school's student council, has been operating for more than three weeks.

Those who want help drop in to the cafeteria for an hour after school (Grade 9 on Mondays, Grade 10 on Tuesdays, etc.) and the school's best brains are available to help — free. Professional tutoring outside the school costs at least $2 or $3 an hour.

The volunteer program does not replace regular classes or interfere with the work of teachers, but it does take some of the workload off the teachers, said Michael Robertson, 16, a Grade 12 student who is helping to run the program.

Why would students seek out the help of fellow students instead of asking the teacher for help?

"Well, sometimes you might be half-scared of making a fool of yourself — of appearing like a moron and wasting the teacher's time," Robertson said.

"It's easier to explain what you don't understand to another student," said Dave Edwards, 17, president of the student council.

Rick Hscott, 17, who heads the tutoring program, said that initially there was an avalanche of volunteer tutors (between 30 and 40) but only a handful of students requested help.

With no one to assist, many tutors dropped out. The number of students seeking help has gradually increased and now the problem is to draw many of the volunteers back, Hscott said.

Principal John Roper, who gave enthusiastic backing to the program, said he feels it is at even the tutors are profiting from it.

"The best way to really get to know something is to teach it," he said.

The Apathetic Generation

Richard Needham in the Globe and Mail

Ellen Stafford runs the Fanfare book store in Stratford. She encounters a lot of the teenagers who are likely to Stratford Festival by their schools for the student matinees. She wonders about them. "In the main, they are a hollow-seeming lot, slack-jawed and dull - eyed. Why?"

She sees the possibility that the bored, vacant faces are only a mask. But (I'd ask) why wear such a mask? Why would anybody, young or old, feel it necessary to assume the appearance of death? What's wrong with showing enthusiasm — anger or joy or sorrow or any of the other emotions that make the world go around?

Ellen speaking again: "Apathy is the dry rot of not only the young people but a good many others in our time. Apathy, indifference, indolence, blackness of mind and body."

D., 35, works for a large Toronto company which hires many university students as summer replacements. She asks, "Are they dead, or do they just seem that way? Is this complete absence of enthusiasm normal?

Parents write me about teenagers who find school a drag, work a drag, home a drag, life itself a drag. What can you do about them? Have a war?

As I say, it's not just the young; the adults, many of them, are quite as dead. But the deadness of middle-aged people, if deplorable, is at least understandable; they're caught in the money-grubbing, security-worshipping system, they've had to turn their backs on life. But the young, I would hope, should think and life is open to them, and that they are open to it. A great many of them don't. I've seen their dead, sad faces, their creeping weariness, in high schools and universities all across Canada.

Bilingual Cornwall Fears Language Issue May Jeopardize Happy Relations

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

It was with mixed feelings that we learned Cornwall high schools are likely to be re-organized shortly along racial or language lines. On the one hand provision of instruction in French should be the right of those who are unable to benefit fully from English instruction because of a language barrier. But surely both racial mainstreams will lose something in any segregated approach to education.

One of the most pleasing aspects of Canadian life over the years has been the melding of Anglo-Saxon, French and other cultures at the school, social and community levels. We would hope the reorganization, if it comes about, does not divide the two main racial groups into separate camps — especially rival camps locked in a bitter power struggle.

Cornwall claims the reputation of being the most bilingual city in Canada. In effect this claim means the city has many residents who speak both of Canada's official languages. And this is a healthy situation. Healthy also is the fact that both major ethnic groups have been able to work together in harmony and with a common goal, the betterment of this community.

When the Ontario government announced it would permit the establishment of French language schools, surely this was in the spirit that instruction in English should be the basic rule in the province, since English is in large measure the language of commerce and communication.

It would be a mistake to sacrifice English instruction except in cases where its application is most difficult. Doing so could seriously limit the job opportunities available to graduates of such schools.

French instruction, yes. But let us not use this new government policy as a means of creating racial camps. Fewer schools be taught in the English schools and English taught in the French. A good command of both languages will enrich our young people both culturally, and in the respect they are likely to enjoy in the important job market. But if this is going to result in cases where we ask what happen if the Commonwealth were allowed to disappear from simple neglect.

Student Writers and the Four-letter Syndrome

Winnipeg Tribune

By and large the average Canadian is unaware of the depths to which many university student newspapers have been dragged by the small but energetic activist minority.

Except perhaps for the far-out hippie press and the ludicrous novel, nowhere is today's four-letter syndrome more evident. Student newspapers seem preoccupied with protest dissent, pot, sex, usually abnormal, tailored with lecherous, lascivious language.

Most university administrations have been at a loss to know what, if anything, could or should be done. But now the Board of Governors of the University of Saskatchewan has done something.

Whether it is right or wrong remains to be seen.

In effect, the Board cut off the guaranteed source of funds to The Carillon which circulates on the Regina campus. It's a board decided the university would no longer collect student activity fees which had at least in part used to finance student activities, including the newspaper. On the Regina campus the compulsory student activity fees had been $23.25 a year. As in virtually all universities in this country, students had been required to pay this mandatory fee whether they wanted to or not. Student activity fees had been collected at the same time as tuition fees, much as an employer deducts union dues under the check-off system. The money from the compulsory fees is handed over to the student union.

Thus the student newspaper and other student activities have a source of funds. In many cases it has given irresponsible editors and reporters a licence to do as they please, regardless of the feelings and desires of their readers.

As might have been expected, it was not long before someone on the Regina campus cried, "Censorship!"

The president of the campus faculty association, Dr. Reid Robinson, has charged the Board's action somehow is censorship of the press.

The Board's action may have been questioned as unwise, but it certainly wasn't censorship.

The Carillon is still free to publish whatever it likes. But no longer will it have a guaranteed source of income, raised through the compulsory university system. It will now have to stand or fall on its own responsibility to its audience, as is the case with conventional publications.

Up to now, The Carillon and other student newspapers have been "kept" publications. Now the editors will be exposed to an aspect of "freedom of the press" that they haven't thought much about. That is the freedom of the audience to refuse to buy or to subscribe to it.

C'Wealth Is Still A Vital Force

London Times

The Commonwealth is, after all, a respectable international body and has survived the test, even in political terms, may be far from exploited. The case for the Commonwealth as a bridge between rich and poor, between one race and another, between industrialised and agricultural states, is more familiar, and has not yet lost its force. Best way to put the case is to ask what would happen if the Commonwealth were allowed to disappear from simple neglect.

Look-ahead Rene Levesque Woos U.S. Economic Interests

MONTREAL (CP)—Business sources feel Rene Levesque has taken a shrewd step to quell alarm in the United States over his plan to break up the Canadian Confederation.

They see significance in the way the separatist chieftain pointedly expressed admiration for and confidence in the U.S. at a time when such declarations of faith are hardly in fashion among a radical segment of the world.

U.S. leaders may ponder from time to time if eventually they will be confronted with something like a cold-weather Cuba to the north if Mr. Levesque has his way and splits off Quebec from Canada.

But it is a long time since the fiery French-Canadian nationalist was termed "Castro without a beard" by a political opponent in the heat of debate. Those days he is attached more for his constitutional and economic theories than for his socialist views.

If it is true that President de Gaulle encouraged Quebec's independence movement as part of his global rivalry against the U.S. and the "Anglo-Saxons" in general, Mr. Levesque is making it clear he has no wish to offend the Americans.

"I am an American in the continental sense of the word," said the Parti Quebecois prophet of independence in an interview last week with La Presse, Canada's biggest French-language newspaper.

"He's already beginning to talk like a Quebec premier," said one business spokesman with grudging respect for the nationalist who first gained wide notice as a TV commentator and has never lost his journalistic flair.

"He's looking ahead."

Mr. Levesque did not shrink from pointing to the "detestable" side of the U.S., which he said is exemplified by the Vietnam war, racial scandal and economic imperialism.

His words came, too, in the context of asserting Quebec's need to increase associations with "francophone" countries not only in educational and cultural matters but also in technical and economic fields.

Nevertheless he emphasized: "It is not a matter for us to humiliate North America. We are Americans and as for myself, I have no desire to change . . . Some may not agree, but I admire the United States very much . . . If ever the bright side of America should emerge and take over—and this will come, because I believe that America will pull out of its present situation—then at the time the profit we may derive, from all points of view, will be just all belief."

No one suggests there was anything insincere or new about Mr. Levesque's declaration. However, it was not by proclaiming such beliefs that he became the darling of many Quebec nationalists, first as a provincial Liberal government minister and then as the founder of Parti Quebecois. His program calls for an independent Quebec in economic union with Canada.

Critics used to say that the late premier Daniel Johnson had three speeches—one for New York, to reassure American investors, one for Toronto, to reassure Canadians, and one for Quebec City, to reassure nationalists.

All this points, in the view even of some firmly anti-separatist French-Canadian businessmen, to a war that is waged in some degree in the bosom of each French-Canadian.

The desire for an independent state is gilded against the realities of living in North America. That such etnnic drives for independence is not confined to the French-Canadians is shown in such countries as Scotland and Wales.

But Quebec separatism in all its forms has been described as a b economically unfeasible dream after a prolonged study by La chambre de commerce de la province de Quebec. One official told a reporter of explaining in detail to a public meeting why this was so.

"Afterwards, a man came up to me," said the official. "He pointed to his head and said, 'here I know you are right.' Then he pointed to his heart and continued, 'here I'm not so sure'."

Sale of Property Refused by Council

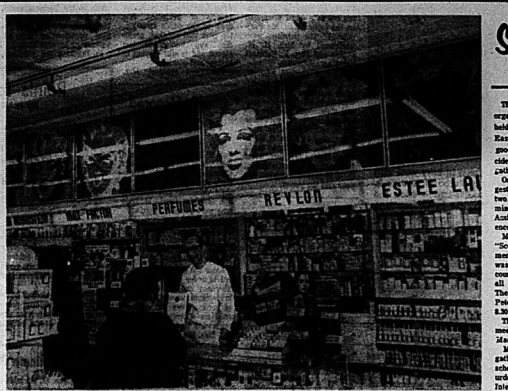
DESERONTO — With an eye to the future, Deseronto council is not going to sell off property which it owns at too low a price. Several offers for building lots were turned down at the council meeting early this week, and a second offer, this time for the old high school property, was also refused. The first offer made to the council at its meeting two weeks earlier had certain conditions attached and was refused, partly for that reason. Also, it was, and is, felt that the price offered is too low. Conditions were modified in the latest offer.

Housing is a problem, but the town is hoping for a housing development at the north end of town, but attached to the corporation.

Two steps were taken to move ahead the town's securing an adequate supply of pure water. The third and last reading was passed of the by-law for issuing debentures for $70,000 for the concrete base of the new water storage tower. Also, a by-law authorized borrowing capital to pay for the project until such time as the debentures are sold.

In the second place council authorized the execution of the agreement with Amalgamated Metal Industry, for the erection of the stand pipe water tower itself on the base now being installed. Work on this phase of the project is making progress, favored by the mild weather. Some of the concrete has already been poured.

The immediate question of concern is the setting of sewer rates for the town, and council is wisely leaving this matter largely to its auditor, John D. Lewars of Belleville. He is also meeting shortly with the council in a committee of the whole to bring them up to the minute on his findings and probably to reveal the proposed rates. Council members will probably have many questions for him, and may ask for further meetings before taking any definite steps.



Several matters of lesser importance came up for consideration at the meeting of the Deseronto Council early this week.

Mrs. Mabel Watters the Marching Mother for the March of Dimes this year was given permission to have the canvass carried out Feb. 3.

A bylaw was passed authorizing that crosswalks for pedestrians be designated. This is now a province-wide necessity.

A motion was passed that the Department of Highways pay one-third the balance of his 1968 road subsidy.

Councillor George Lyons pointed out that assistance is available from the Ontario Housing Corporation for assistance in making a survey for a housing development.

Drug Store Art Show

Pop art prints are displayed above Toronto druggist Manny Atlas in his pharmacy-cum-art-gallery. He says such pictures give customers a "psychological lift."

Scouting activities

The first meeting of the reorganized Cubmen' Club was held on Tuesday evening in Eastminster Church Hall. A good turnout o Scouters decided to hold regular monthly gatherings.

On hand to give a few suggestions for programs were two Trenton officers, Commissioner Bernard Fox and Assistant Commissioner, Clarence Whitman.

Mr. Fox spoke about the "Scout 68" program, and mentioned that his group was conducting a training course this weekend to which all local leaders are invited. The sessions will begin in St. Peter's School, Trenton at 8.30 a.m. this Saturday.

The next Scouters' club meeting is scheduled for March.

Mr. Dodge informed the gathering that the ski course, scheduled to begin last Saturday, had to be postponed. Interested parties will be kept informed of the new dates. A ski course is set for Feb. 22 Scout rally will be a hobby show. Each troop will be allowed to send four pulrols to this event.

Other courses planned for Scouts are a St. John Ambulance first aid course and a gun safety course. The first aid course is for boys 14 years old and over.

Sessions will begin the last week in Feb. The gun safety course is being conducted under the supervision of Police Chief Douglas Crosbie.

A Scout '68 training workshop for troop scouters will be held in Eastminster Church Hall on Jan. 31 at 7.30 p.m. Pack scouters will hold their session on Feb. 4 in St. Thomas' Church Hall.

The Venturer Company visited the Ontario Provincial Police headquarters last Wednesday. The boys led by adviser Rod Jones saw nearly all phases of police work. The troop, under the direction of Douglas Yates, visited the Wallbridge Rd. area for the purpose of constellation study.

This star-gazing activity is part of their scout work. Last Saturday the troop played hockey with the Third Belleville Troop at the OSD rink. The game ended in a 3-3 tie.

This Saturday the Fourth Belleville group is collecting pop and milk bottles to the area east of Herchimer Ave. The drive will be between the hours of 10 and noon.

Students Support Campaign

Youth in the city of Belleville will make a significant contribution to the annual March of Dimes campaign this year.

Campaign chairman, Mrs. Vera Morphy, said today that about 60 young girls from city schools have offered their assistance for the one night campaign Feb. 3.

Twenty-one student nurses from the Edith Cavell School of Nursing, 15 girls from Centennial Secondary School, 12 girls from Quinte Secondary School and ten from Moira Secondary School, all members of Keyette Clubs, have donated their time and energies to the campaign.

Cree Indians Thrive Despite Bitter Cold

ROCKY MOUNTAIN HOUSE, Alta. (CP) — Despite sub-zero weather, 150 Cree Indians spending the winter in the wilderness 84 miles west of here are thriving, says Chief Robert Smallboy of the Ermineskin band.

"Even though this is the coldest winter ever, we do not feel the cold," he said in an interview Thursday.

The Indians have turned their 40 horses loose on the nearby Kootenay plains to forage for themselves.

Bryan Espenchied of Calgary, president of the Western Canadian mission of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, has launched a campaign to obtain hay for the horses.

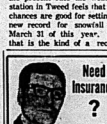
"We did not ask for any help," Chief Smallboy said.

The chief said hunting for game animals has been good but hunters are not killing all the animals as "we are trying to preserve our game."

Record Snowfall Hits County

53 Inches in Tweed

TWEED — From Nov. 1, 1968 until mid-January 1969, 53.10 inches of snow have fallen on the Tweed District, according to the Tweed Climatological station, just north of the village.



The average snowfall for this area is 65.61 inches from November 1st to March 31st. The record snowfall in the area, according to Gordon Fraser, at the weather office was back in the winter of 1959-60 when the total to March 31, (from November 1, the previous year) in that year was a deep 114.21 inches. In that season, however, the snowfall up to Jan. 11 was only 46.25 inches compared to the above given figure.

If the snow keeps falling at the present rate the weather station in Tweed feels that the chances are good for setting a new record for snowfall by March 31 of this year, 3rd that is the kind of a record that most residents would be happy to do without.

Low temperature to date in January was 18 degrees below zero on Friday of last week. The all-time low for the month, recorded at the weather station, was 33 degrees below zero on the Jan. 14 1957.

On Jan. 9, 19 . low was 30 degrees below zero.

Deep snow and cold weather are the two things welcomed by the members of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce who are planning for the annual winter carnival of Feb. 7, 8 and 9.

UCW MEETINGS

(COLLEGE HILL UNITED)

Blueprints for the New Year and taking inventory were the themes of the devotional part of the United Church Women of College Hill UCW. Opening the meeting with prayer, the president, Nellie Greenwood presided at a busy session.

Olive William's group was in charge of the meeting with Pat King, Jan Smith and Mrs. McCauley taking part in the devotionals. A sacred solo with self accompaniment was rendered by Aileen Blakely, who also played during the offertory.

It was reported three members were seriously ill, while members had also made 67 sick calls during the past month. The church visitation at Hastings Manor will be during the week of Feb. 16th to Feb. 22. At this time a letter of thanks for help at Christmas from the CMHA was read.

The treasurer's report for the year was heard and accepted. The kitchen committee reported a wedding to be catered by Marjorie Canonne' group in February. The annual UCW turkey supper will be held on Wednesday, March 12. Volunteers for posters were called for.

The congregational supper will be held on Wednesday Jan. 22, with the annual meeting to follow.

During the study period, Olive William's group met and spoke about the church study of China this year. She talked about understanding their ancient celebrations, their population of 750 million, and their present taking place. Mrs. Vessey showed slides of parts of China and its people and life in China today.

A social hour and refreshments were served while Jen Smith presented a contest on Bible people, and this was won by Jeanne Bailey and provided a good deal of interest.

The business included purchasing premium plants, and a bus trip in Feb. A committee was appointed to arrange the prize list for the flower show in the summer. The Stirling report was read as it appeared in the 116th annual boor. Articles of interest were read by Mrs. Grant Hubble and Mrs. Dennis Armstrong.

The next meeting will be held on Monday, Feb. 17, in the afternoon.

The hostess and her daughter-in-law provided the refreshments for the social hour, and Mrs. Archie Bailey voiced appreciative thanks.

Legion Activities

BRANCH 99 L.A.

A large number attended the first meeting of the year of the Ladies' Auxiliary, Royal Canadian Legion, Branch 99.

After the opening ceremony, Mrs. Frances Canning and Mrs. Hilda Brooks, flanked by the color party were initiated into the Branch.

At this time various chairmen gave their yearly reports. Banquets and euchres were most successful. Interesting accounts of sports, the bazaar, ways and means and other social activities were heard.

The Zone sports day recently held at Tweed was greatly enjoyed, especially when the No. 1 bowling team came in first and No. 2 came fifth. The two euchre teams tied with Marmora.

On Feb. 22 the Branch will be hosting the Zone Sports Rally. Registration fee is minimal and further details can be obtained from the sports officer, Elizabeth Huster.

A Valentine's dance is planned for Feb. 14 and promises to be the usual success as in other years. The hall will look particularly attractive as new drapes are being made.

Comrade Annie Haley was the lucky winner of the evening's draw.

The impressive ceremony of installing the new officers took place. Zone Commander Earl Brant assisted by president Ed Smith, Comrades Dick Kirby and Charlie Marriott conducted the installation. Past Zone Commander Jack Rashotte was unable to be present. Each officer was escorted to the front by Sergt.-at-Arms Marg Lewis, Edna Semark the new president was conducted up the aisle, flanked by Comrade Gwen Hughes and Dorothy Purdy, 1st and 2nd vice-presidents and the color party.

President Semark thanked all the members for their confidence. She stressed that comradeship and harmony were the important things to work for in the coming year. "By working together for the good of the Branch, ensures another successful year"; also co-operating with the men's Branch to help them in every way possible.

Comrades Hughes thanked the installing officers for coming and presented a gift to each as a token of appreciation.

Zone Commander Brant spoke briefly commending the Auxiliary on their efforts. President Ed Smith also gave a short interesting address.

The Auxiliary hopes to increase the number of bursaries and scholarships again this year. Over 1,000 applicants had to be turned down last year, so the Auxiliaries are making a special effort to raise more money, as two scholarships in memory of the late Provincial President Jessie Tompkins have been created.

The evening concluded with all the members enjoying a fried chicken dinner, during which Zone Commander Radcotte and vice-president Hughes presented gifts to outgoing officers.

Italian Designer Concludes Fashion Presentation

ROME (AP) — Designer Roberto Capucci made a triumphal return to his homeland Thursday night after seven years in Paris with his showing of spring and summer styles that wound up the eight-day Rome fashion presentation.

Capucci featured skirts and pants based on a four-square shape achieved by stitching four separate panels at the corners with sharply raised seams.

Redingotes topped square-legged, trumpet-flared pants in a look that was as dandified as regency costumes. Coat collars were high-cut and pointed in Napoleonic style.

Dress and jacket outfits had tunicy matchbox skirts and tight little jackets.

Capucci was the first designer in Italy to play the color game. His daring color combinations were at first a shock, then a delight.

Others followed his lead to make Italy famous in this field.

Capucci demonstrated Thursday night he has lost nothing of his skill by showing sombre wools.

His sombre stockings, black at the foot and working upward to white were the sexiest leg look we have seen at these shows.

Capucci chose pastel shades for sleeveless, silk-sided coats that were tied on over slim-fitting, long-sleeved dresses with high necklines.

Chiffon balloon dress that stopped short at the top of the thighs was freckled in multicolor dots and there were stockings to match.

He liked pale apricot and coral and lots of black and white.

University Women Discuss Prejudice

The University Women's Club of Belleville showed enthusiastic response in coming out to a panel discussion on the topic, "Who, Me Prejudiced?" The panelists were introduced by Mrs. H. M. Phelps and Mrs. F. Bellstedt acted as moderator.

The first speaker, Mrs. V. G. Castellano, having provided a definition of prejudice, went on to illustrate how general statements, made to cover ignorance in particular fields, reflect prejudice. Having worked as a Social Worker, Mrs. Castellano could vouch for the fact that, apart from racial discrimination, there is prejudice against the poor and the young.

The second speaker, Mrs. R. Sloss of the Salvation Army, tackled the religious aspects of prejudice. She drew to the club's attention, the fact that religious prejudice and intolerance has played and is still playing in history and politics.

The third speaker, Mrs. Brown, from Canada Manpower Centre, spoke on prejudice in the business world. She cited examples of capable women who had been denied opportunities and advancement because of sex.

In thanking the panelists, Miss Ruth Gaw emphasized one of the strongest points of the evening by remarking that she thought it significant that nearly all the questions had been directed towards Mrs. Brown. Who, us biased?

Growing Market in Mink Coats for Men

NEW YORK (AP) — Women may be wearing the pants this season, but men have taken over the mink coat.

Fashion's latest turn-about finds fur coats for men now hang in the closets of such normally conservative types as doctors, lawyers and stockbrokers.

When Joe Namath, quarterback of the pro football New York Jets, appeared in a $5,000 mink last fall, most men sneered.

Today, in all price ranges, men's furs are selling so well that stores are surprised.

A spokesman for Alexander's, which introduced furs for men this year and displays them in the women's fur department, said the new fashions sold so well that the store had to reorder.

Best sellers are calf and mink paw in rust, beige and black. Prices range from $199 for lamb to $1,500 for mink and sable.

"The real rugged, he-man type hasn't come in yet," said the spokesman, but, "We are getting a lot f professional men —doctors and dentists."

A similar report came from furrier Jacques Kaplan, who said he sold about 400 fur coats to men this season, about one-tenth the number of women's wraps he also sold this year. He predicted "within five years, we should sell as many coats for men as women."

"Everything sells—providing it is not too expensive," said Kaplan. He said most of his men's furs sell for between $500 and $1,500, but mink and seal cost more.

Expense apparently is no problem at Maximillian, where custom-made fur coats for men started at $2,800. A spokesman said 25 already have been sold.

Widow Gives Birth to Triplets

BARSTOW, Calif. (AP) — "Things are a little confused right now, but we're all fine, well and happy," says Betty Gallegos.

Mrs. Gallegos, 44, widowed last September, gave birth to triplets Saturday, and left hospital Wednesday with her three new sons, Kim, Kirk and Kit.

She now has 14 children.

The first problem: Finding a baby-sitter so she can resume her $275-a-month job as hostess in the officers club at the nearby Marine Corps supply depot.

She says, with a chuckle, the baby sitter should have plenty of experience—and steady nerves.

The sitter will take care of the triplets and also nine of the other children.

Pete Gallegos, 48, a pipeline worker, died in September after a heart seizure.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Egg and Chicken Dishes

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: One summer you mentioned Creamy Egg for breakfast at your cottage. I would like your recipe. — Alma McN.

ANSWER: Since Creamy Egg is one of the most delicate ways to serve them, I am pleased to have you ask.

CREAMY EGG (to serve 3 or 4)

¼ cup milk
¾ teaspoon freeze-dried chives (or fresh chopped)
three - sixteenth teaspoon M.S.G. (scant ¼ teaspoon) three-sixteenth teaspoon salt (scant ¼ teaspoon) shake of pepper (preferably white)
6 eggs
2 tablespoons butter

Into top of double boiler measure milk, chives, M.S.G., salt and pepper. Heat over simmering water until milk is hot. Break eggs, one at a time onto a saucer and slip into milk, stirring constantly until all are added. Constantly stir until mixture is softly set. You may remove double boiler from burner during last 2 or 3 minutes to prevent eggs setting too much. Add butter and stir in and serve with or on crisp toast.

QUESTION: A friend of mine the other night had for supper what she called Rusty Chicken. She had the recipe from your column but couldn't tell me how long ago. It was delicious. The biscuits had cheese rolled up in them. Hope you can get it for me. — Mrs. Irene H.

ANSWER: You nearly floored us. We did not give a dish called Rusty Chicken. Suddenly Shirley wondered if you meant Crusty Chicken and looked it up and sure enough that recipe calls for the rolled up cheese biscuits.

CRUSTY CHICKEN PIE (repeated from Oct. 29)

¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup flour
1 cup milk
1 cup chicken broth
2 cups diced chicken
½ cup drained cooked diced celery
1 cup drained peas
½ cup canned broiled sliced mushrooms
¾ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon lemon juice

Melt butter or margarine, blend in flour, stir in milk and broth. Cook until thick, stirring constantly. Add remaining ingredients, heat. Place in casserole. Top hot filling with cheese biscuits: make biscuit dough (see below), pat into rectangle ¼" thick. Sprinkle with 1 cup grated cheese. Roll as jelly roll. Cut into ½" slices. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. about 20 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

BISCUITS: Two cups sifted pastry flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder; ½ teaspoon salt, one-third cup cold butter or shortening about ⅔ cup milk. Sift dry ingredients into bowl. Cut in butter or shortening with pastry blender. It should be evenly cut into pieces about the size of large peas. Pour milk into centre of flour mixture. Stir until mixture leaves sides of bowl. Knead gently on lightly floured surface for one minute. Finish as above.

Successful Living

Happiest Persons Are Those Who Think Interesting Thoughts

By DORIS CLARK

William Lyon Phelps, in one of his widely-quoted writings, says:

"If the happiest person is the one who thinks the most interesting thoughts, we are bound to grow happier as we advance in years, because our minds have more and more interesting thoughts.

"A well-ordered life is like climbing a tower: the view halfway up is better than the view from the base, and it steadily becomes finer as the horizon expands."

Get the picture? For a happy life, keep interested. Widen your horizons.

Dear Doris: I am going steady with Joe and for the past year we have been going all the way. He says as soon as he makes it big we'll get married. I know he loves me very much. The trouble is I've met another boy (Frank) who fell in love with me and Joe doesn't know about it.

Frank wants me to quit going with Joe and go with him. I have been going with Joe for three years, since I was 15. Should I keep going with Joe (I don't think I love him) or break up? He is gone for six or seven months of the year, and wants me to be good while he's gone. — The Middle One

Dear One: What's the alternative to breaking up? Going with Joe for life because you gave yourself to him before you knew your own mind?

What you need is the gumption to look at your own feelings squarely and to assert yourself. Then I'll hope your decision is to go with no one exclusively until you've played the field and can find out what you really want.

Dear Doris: I am a young widow with two small children. My husband passed away three months ago.

My husband and I were very close to a male friend of his. All through our married life we treated him as one of the family because he was very lonely and he was also good company for my husband.

Now, he comes over Saturday mornings to visit and offer any help he can and I'm grateful and happy to see him. Honestly, he's like a brother. He wants to take us all to the hockey games, but I think people would talk. I don't want the children to be hurt by gossip and I also respect my dead husband.

When can a person be seen out in the company of a member of the opposite sex after the spouse's death? — Doubtful

Dear Doubtful: Well, we do not hold out for long periods of mourning like they used to. People are more realistic.

Some discretion is called for, but I can't see the occasional hockey game as beyond the pale. This man is a family friend: has been one for many years. our fatherless children will appreciate having a man around.

Doris can help you with that puzzling decision. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Ann Landers

'Forgive and Forget' Applies Both Ways

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read with interest the letter from the woman who stumbled over two very close relatives in the backyard — her husband and her sister. They were locked in loving embrace and the time was 5:00 a.m.

Your advice was "forgive and forget — and then forget what you forgave." Neat phrasing, Ann, but easier said than done. And now I am writing to ask, what should a husband do when he stumbles over his wife and his boss, in his very own living room — asleep, the both of them, on the sofa at 3:00 a.m.?

ANN LANDERS

True, I was not expected until the following day, but it's a fine How-Have-You-Been when a man can't go home without warning his wife in advance so she can clear the guy out.

Our marriage was a good one, or so I thought. We have three terrific kids — one in prep school and two in college. My wife doesn't want a divorce and neither do I. She claims Mr. X drove her home from a party and came in for a nightcap and they had too many.

My wife forgave me for a little affair three years ago and now she says it's my turn to be noble and considerate. Somehow I think a man is entitled to an occasional indiscretion but a wife should live by a different set of rules. Maybe I'm old-fashioned but this is the way I see it. Please back me up. Thanks. — SHAFTED.

DEAR SHAFT: Thanks for what? You are looking for support for a weak argument and you've rattled the wrong cage, Bub. My advice to a cuckolded husband is the same advice I give to the wife who has been cheated on — forgive and forget, then be big enough to forget what you forgave.

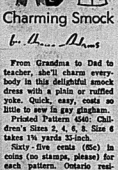
DEAR ANN LANDERS: Last night my husband and I went to a movie. It was not advertised as an adults-only film, but it should have been.

Five minutes after the movie started, a couple came in with two children. The little girl was about 10 and the boy was no older than seven. The parents sat in the middle and the children sat on either side. The boy was seated next to me.

About halfway through the picture the little fellow's head fell on my shoulder. The poor kid was asleep and I wasn't surprised. It was eleven o'clock. I didn't have the heart to wake him, so I just let him sleep.



What's the matter with parents who drag their kids to night movies — and in the middle of the week at that? There should be a law against it. Please say something in your column to let the imbeciles know it's wrong to do this to children. — OUTRAGED.

DEAR OUT: I agree wholeheartedly. Here's your letter and I hope the imbeciles see it.

These Two Crazy Ducks Wouldn't Go South So Conservationist Makes Conditions Bearable

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Two eggs last year have hatched a little irregularity in George Woodhouse's conservation program.

Two little irregularities, in fact — like a duck and drake.

It happened this way.

On a pond behind his Elmwood Avenue home George runs a wildlife protection-propogation program for the Belleville Fish and Game Club. It involves caring for injured birds and banding wild ducks to trace their migratory patterns in winter.

Not all the ducks migrate. Some opt to stick around the Woodhouse property. To facilitate caretaking George keeps them in a pen until Spring.

It eases problems endemic in duck care during a Canadian winter — like having to keep an ice-free pond.

This is the way it's always been — until this winter.

Then came this brace of mallards, hatched sometime during the spring among the pond wildlife. Came fall and George banded them — along with scores of other ducks preparing to migrate.

Came winter — and the pair refused to head south. Worse, they refused to be penned. Every effort to cage the duo of ducks laid an egg.

The birds proved as crafty as a fox — or maybe a couple of foxes, George quietly laments.

They knew all the tricks of the trapping trade and refused to be lured to any pen.

The ducks keep their lonely distance — from George and everyone else.

So, each day George must meander down to his pond armed with spike and axe and feed bag.

Since ducks take to water like — well, ducks — an ice-free patch must be kept laboriously open throughout the winter.

Almost each day the patch must be axed. Invariably, each night it freezes back over, so that George greets each new day with spike, axe and feedbag.

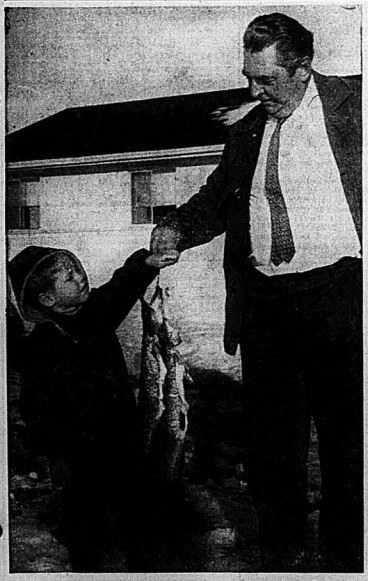
About twice a week, if winter temperatures are persistently low, the whole thing blows up in his face.

To ease his labors, George detonates a stick of dynamite under the water hole, to loosen rapidly thickening ice.

George, a city fireman, sees the humorous side of his problem. However, as an avid conservationist, he takes his task seriously.

"They're banded — and you feel a responsibility for them," he says.

It's Boom Time



Ice and water rear into plume as George Woodhouse dynamites pond. In extreme cold explosive helps guarantee ducks open water.

Visitors Not Exactly Welcome

Drake takes off as George and Lynn Woodhouse approach. With its duck mate it is still in wild state, wary of people — but nonetheless, refused to migrate. George must ensure both birds survive winter.

Water Is for Ducks

All this for two ducks? That's right, but as an avid conservationist George Woodhouse is happy to do it. Here, he chips away at ice to keep pond open for brace of mallards that didn't migrate. He is watched by daughter.

Admiring Afternoon Catch

Young ice fisherman five-year-old David Huycke of Frankford and "his good friend next door" Douglas Brown brought back this appetizing string of pike caught fresh through the ice on the river near the village eight miles north of Trenton.

Committees Appointed

Hastings Council Streamlines Procedures

Hastings county council is slowly but surely streamlining its council meetings and is getting away from certain time consuming aspects of council procedure.

One of the changes was introduced at this week's inaugural session when appointments to the many standing committees and other boards were covered in a single bylaw.

County clerk-treasurer administrator, Carl Bateman, said the change would speed up council procedure and avoid unnecessary cluttering of council minutes.

This year's appointments were as follows, with the first four committees to act as chairmen:

Roads and bridges — Carman Gibson, William McCrea, Kenneth Smith, Horace Casey, Russell Sills and Warden Donald Rodgers.

Homes for the aged committee — Earl Hurley, Jack M. Bush, Merton Hamm, Borden Forsythe and the Warden.

Finance and public property — Burton Morton, Donald Armitage, William F. R o s e, Delmont Card, John Wilkes, Ross Sprackett and the Warden.

ARDA committee — Edward Cunningham, S. J. Carr, Ray Shortt, Floyd Rowe, Leonard Walsh, Kenneth Fisk and the Warden.

Hastings county social services committee — Mrs. A. G. Allen, Mack Douglas and Allen Ketcheson.

Children's Aid Society — Mrs. A. G. Allen, Charles Gordanier and Albert Yader.

Board of health — William F. Rose, Kenneth Holland and the Warden.

Representatives on board of governors, Belleville General Hospital — H. A. Hamilton, Thomas Burnside, John Brown and Donald Rodgers.

Emergency measures organization — Gordon Willman and Donald Rodgers, Warden.

Planning and industrial — William Shannon, Earl Hawley, John Wilkes, Delmont Card, Gordon Willman, Borden Forsythe and Donald Rodgers, Warden.

Personnel committee — Kenneth Smith, John Brown, Jack Bush, Calvin White, Ross Sprackett, Donald Rodgers, Warden, and Carl E. Bateman, administrator.

Deseronto Reeve Donald Armitage was appointed chairman of the special convention committee named to make arrangements for this year's convention of the Ontario Association of Counties and Regions to be held in Belleville this fall.

Up to 500 people normally attend the convention, it was stated.

Other members of the committee are J. N. Brown, Thomas Burnside, William McCrea, Warden Rodgers and Carl E. Bateman, administrator.

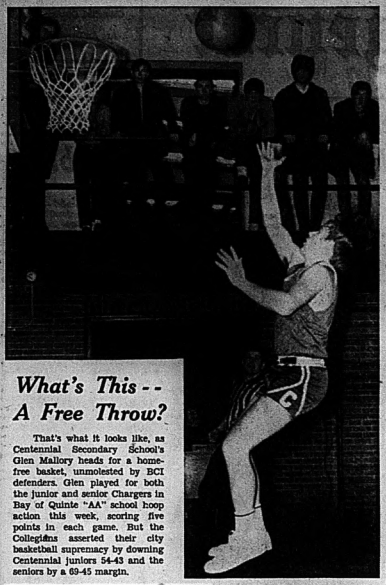
Campaign Planned to Raise Funds

Work Starts on Frankford Arena

By ELMER BONTER

FRANKFORD — When the new ice machine building is completed here the village's memorial to the late Dr. David McMullen will be two thirds completed.

So far the recreation centre has cost $98,000.



The rink building under construction by Murray Steel Structures of Belleville is to be finished by the end of Feb. It will cost $38,000.

Recreation commission chairman Kenneth Lawrence said today another $45,000 is needed if the centre is to be finished in accordance with the original plan.

Earlier this week the centre received a big lift from the Frankford Lions Club in the form of a cheque for $4,500.

Chairman Lawrence has called for all the residents of the community to be prepared to dig down in their pockets when collectors canvass homes, places of business and industrial plants in the near future.

When the ice making machine is installed and the arena is made available to the public the recreation commission hope to derive considerable revenue by renting ice time to teams in Trenton and Belleville and other parts of the Quinte area.

Mahovlich Nets Pair in Tie With Bruins

By SCOTT BUTTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

General managers Wren Blair and Emile Francis are back behind the players' bench and their National Hockey League teams are winning again.

Making his first appearance as a coach since Nov. 2, Blair guided Minnesota to a 3-1 victory Thursday night against Pittsburgh Penguins to halt the North Stars' winless streak at 14 games.

Francis, filling in for the ailing Bernie Geoffrion, watched his New York Rangers defeat Los Angeles Kings 3-1 to move into a tie for fourth place in the Eastern Division with Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit Red Wings.

Blair turned over the job of coaching the North Stars to John Muckler last Nov. 6. But under Muckler, the North Stars won only six of 35 games.

It was decided last Sunday to give the coaching job back to Blair, who directed the North Stars to a fourth-place finish last season in the Western Division.

Francis gave away the New York coaching job last summer, but has been forced into reclaiming it because of illness to Geoffrion. The former Montreal Canadiens' star was advised by doctors Thursday to take three weeks off to recover.

In other games Thursday night, Oakland Seals upset Montreal 5-3 and Toronto Maple Leafs edged St. Louis Blues 3-2. Philadelphia Flyers and Chicago and Detroit and Boston Bruins played 2-2 ties.

Minnesota got power-play goals—one in each period—from Claude Larose, Danny O'Shea and Andre Boudrias.

Charlie Burns scored before 3,936 fans for Pittsburgh, now tied for last in the Western Division with Minnesota and burdened with a four-game losing streak.

Scoring twice for New York was Rod Gilbert while Jean Ratelle picked up the other Ranger goal and assisted on Gilbert's two tallies. Ed Joyal scored for Los Angeles. A crowd of 16,177 watched.

Goals by Bob Dillabough and Gerry Ehman in the third period gave Oakland its victory before 15,821 at Montreal.

Bill Hicke, Carol Vadnais and Norm Ferguson collected the other Oakland goals. Replying for Montreal were Jacques Lemaire, Jacques Laperriere and Henri Richard.

The loss left the Canadiens, who outshot the Seals 37-27, five points behind first-place Boston in the Eastern Division.

Ken Hodge and Frank Mahovlich accounted for all the scoring as Boston and Detroit tied before 14,286 at Detroit. Mahovlich scored in the first period and again in the third for Detroit to bring his season goal total to 29.

Hodge scored two goals, his 23rd and 23rd of the season, less than three minutes apart in the second period for Boston.

The tie extended the Bruins' undefeated string to 12 games. Detroit has only lost once in its last 10 starts.

Boivin To Stars

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Leo Boivin, veteran National Hockey League player, was traded by Pittsburgh Penguins to Minnesota North Stars for defenceman Duane Rupp Thursday night.

The deal was announced after the Pittsburgh-Minnesota game. Neither Boivin nor Rupp played in the game, which Minnesota won 3-1.

What's This -- A Free Throw?

That's what it looks like, as Centennial Secondary School's Glen Mallory heads for a home-free basket, unmolested by BCI defenders. Glen played for both the junior and senior Chargers in Bay of Quinte "AA" school hoop action this week, scoring five points in each game. But the Collegians asserted their city basketball supremacy by downing Centennial juniors 54-43 and the seniors by a 69-45 margin.

by Maurice Switzer

It's been a banner year in sports for hassles between the men who play and the men who pay.

First, we had the Professional Golfers' Association loser members threatening to hold their own tourneys south of the border and even set up a new players' association over a dispute with sponsors.

Next, labor-management problems broke out on the U.S. grid scene, with players talking about mass contract holdouts until they got a bigger share of the profit pie being gorged by the National Football League club owners.

These days, talk of a baseball players' strike over a pension squabble monopolizes conversations with Florida spring training camps only a couple of months off.

And now we have a new group championing the rights of the working sportsman.

Mexico City's Association of Matadors and Its Subalterns Union have delivered an ultimatum to the management of the popular El Toreo bullring: more money or no ball.

The matadors, picadors, and other varied and assorted steer-carvers are crying in their tequila that they are not getting a cut in the increasing television revenues being raked in by fight organizers.

Dressed in their gaudiest finery, they staged a sit-down strike in their cars outside the El Toreo ring Sunday, forcing management to cancel the weekly carnage.

Rank and file members of the bull bushwackers so wean $4,900-$5,000 for about 40 minutes work.

But there are some vital details to be arranged before the matadors' walkout can be classified a bona fide labor dispute.

First we must decide whether or not the personnel involved are white collar workers or laborers.

Well, they are on salary, and as laborer would be caught dead wearing one of those silly, Mickey Mouse b.anies.

How about a name for the group?

Something like "Local Uno Dun Tres, International Association of Cape-Wavers and Sword-stickers" should fill the bull . . . make that BILL . . . nicely.

There's still so much to consider — overtime, pension plans, and holidays-with-pay — for the good matadors; health plans, group insurance, and funeral arrangements for the not-so-fleet afoot.

All this should take some time before the matadors are organized with Teamster efficiency.

But we're sure the bulls don't mind waiting.

McLeod to Pick Two Lines From Ottawa for Soviet Game

OTTAWA (CP) — The Russian national hockey team, with three wins so far this week, tackle the Canadian National team again tonight and the Canadians will make some changes.

After the Russians defeated Canada 8-3 in Victoria Wednesday night, coach Jackie McLeod said he would use two lines from the Ottawa-based Eastern Nationals for this fourth meeting. In the previous games, the Canadians leaned heavily on the Winnipeg-based edition of the nationals.

Russia defeated the nationals 4-2 in Toronto and 7-0 in Vancouver before taking the 8-3 win in Victoria. After tonight's game they go to Winnipeg where they meet the nationals again Sunday.

The Ottawa game starts at 8 p.m. EST.

Kingston Has Bid In For Additional Russian Games

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Henri Crochetiere, Quebec representative of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, said Thursday there is a possibility the Russian national hockey team will play two games in Quebec before winding up its current Canadian tour.

Crochetiere, also president of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, said he plans to leave for Winnipeg today to attend Saturday's semi-annual CAHA meeting, at which time a decision will be taken on 'the possibility of further games involving the Russians.

He said there is a chance Quebec will be given preference over Ontario for the exhibitions because the Soviet team already has played one game in Toronto and two games are scheduled for Ottawa—one tonight and the other Jan. 30.

Crochetiere said Quebec City, Sherbrooke and Shawinigan, Que., are the possible sites in the province for two games involving the Russians and Canada's Nationals.

Kingston and Kitchener also have put in bids to hold the additional games.

STAFF — The coming week will be a normal one for many people in Belleville, but for those parents and children it will the very special seven days of Minor Hockey Week.

This year the Belleville Minor Association has expanded to encompass 1,100 boys competing at town league and all-star teams in six age classifications ranging from tyke to juvenile.

B.M.H.A. president Hugh Sutherland says there are 100 people who have voluntarily contributed much of their time to minor hockey. "I think the parents should come out to the Arena this week and see the value of organized sporting competitions such as minor hockey, and give their support to their children's Minor Hockey Association," he added.

Much work has been done to make this weekend a special one for Minor Hockey in Belleville. A series of exhibition games has been arranged for Saturday and Sunday with house league all-stars teams from the East Hill and the West Hill opposing each other in the tyke, peewee, and novice divisions, while three bantam house league teams from Belleville will face house league opposition from Toronto West Hill in Belleville Saturday and four peewee house league teams will play Toronto West Hill in Brooklin Sunday.

NEW YORK (AP) — Weeb Ewbank, coach and general manager of Super Bowl champion New York Jets, will continue in both posts, it was announced Thursday. The terms and length of the contract were not disclosed. The stubby, 61-year-old Ewbank, has been with the American Football League club for six years. His last contract was for three years and called for an estimated $50,000 a year. It was to expire next month.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Andy Granatelli, who won a few battles but lost the war with car racing authorities over his turbine-powered machines, announced a new venture Thursday. He will use a Plymouth passenger car 318 cubic-inch engine in two Indianapolis racers, probably this year. He will also race the cars competitively in road races, something never attempted with this model engine.

REGINA (CP) — For the first time in 12 years, Ernie Richardson failed to make the Regina city playoffs leading to the Saskatchewan curling title. The five-time world champion lost 5-4 in an extra end to Harvey Mainke Sunday in his last chance to gain one of the six places allotted to the Regina curling club.

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos of the baseball's National League today unveiled the uniforms they will wear at all home games. The uniform is white with half-inch red, white and blue piping along the pants and sleeve edges. The club's emblem, a mod-shaped letter M, also is in red, white and blue and is on the upper left side of the shirt above the word Expos. The uniform number is in solid blue on the lower right side of the shirt and also on the back. Accessories such as stretch belt, sweatshirt and socks are also solid blue.

MONTREAL (CP) — Referee Bill Friday invoked a seldom-used rule Thursday night when he temporarily halted the second period of the Oakland Seals - Montreal Canadiens National Hockey League game with 54 seconds left to play. Rogatien Vachon, Montreal goaltender, was cut near the left eye by a shot from Oakland's Norm Ferguson and had to retire for repairs. He received four stitches to close the cut. Friday waved both clubs to their respective dressing rooms and tacked the remaining 54 seconds onto the third period, rather than delay the game further.

Speed Meet

Swimmers Make Splash at 'Y'

If you're one of those people who have trouble staying afloat in water, let alone swimming, then you'll be appreciative of the talents displayed at the Belleville YMCA Sunday afternoon.

More than one hundred swimmers will take to the water in great haste as the local YMCA hosts a Speed-Swimming Competition with teams from the Peterborough YMCA and the Kingston YM and YWCA.

Belleville will be represented by 25 swimmers who will face tough competition from 35 Peterborough and 30 Kingston swimmers. Unlike Belleville, both the Peterborough and Kingston clubs are members of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association and compete regularly in sanctioned meets.

Boys and girls from the ages of eight to 15 will compete at distances varying from 40 yards to 100 yards in the freestyle, backstroke, breast stroke and butterfly events. There will also be freestyle and medley relays for both boys and girls.

The meet will start at 1:30 p.m. and the public is invited to attend.

Mulroney's Sunoco Win Again

Mulroney's Sunoco continued to dominate the Gas House Hockey League last night, defeating cellar-dwelling Marysville 4-2 for their tenth consecutive win.

The second place Mustangs kept pace with Mulroney's by dumping the third place Wings 4-2 in the night's other game.

Casselman and Waite with a pair of goals each led Mulroney's to their win over Marysville. Milligan and Trick replied for the losers.

The Mustangs got single goals from Horwood, Sneddon, Sheridan and Holoway in their victory over the Wings, with single goals from MacDonald and Soules.

Striking It Rich

A perfect 450 score in five pin bowling is something all bowlers dream about but for Ted Burley, a former Belleville resident, it's a dream come true.

Ted attained perfection recently at Cornwall's Town Lanes in Ontario Hydro inter-league play rolling 12 consecutive strikes in one game.

A cheque for $100 and a free one - year pass to the Town Lanes were some of the rewards reaped by Ted for his perfect game.

Ted the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Burley of Burnham Street, Belleville, started bowling five years ago with an average of 85, but he now sports a respectable 209 average in league play.

BELLEVILLE LIVESTOCK

Trade was active and prices steady on most classes of livestock on Tuesday. Sales of fat steers and heifers were strong. Good cows were steady, common and medium cows were fairly active, just about equivalent to whatever the milk was like before it was dried and powdered — but here's the rub. A great deal of the powdered milk is made from skim milk or low fat milk. That's fine for some purposes, but with children it means that you are shortchanging them on calories.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes night sweats? — Mrs. L. C.

Nerves. Too many covers, or some chronic infection that has not been found yet, particularly if the lung.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all reader mail, but regrets that due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Choice veal calves were higher and medium calves were strong. Weaned pigs were higher and shoats were steady. Lightweight sows were higher, common and medium were steady. There is a strong demand for stockers and feeders.

Good steers 25 to 26.

Good heifers 22 to 24½.

Medium 20 to 22. Common 19 to 20.

Training Needed Before Hard Exercise

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Many times when a new sports season opens, the athletes' muscles get sore. What is it in the muscle that causes the aching? — M. S.

Two main elements are at work. One is the sheer stretching of muscles that are out of condition. The other is the presence of metabolites (chemical substances) that accumulate from the abruptly increased demands on the muscles.

Training, and more gradual increase in strain on the muscles, avoids this. Most athletes know this — or if they don't they soon learn that it pays to keep in shape rather than suffering through aches and pains.

There is a still better reason, though. Injury is much more likely when muscles are subjected to severe strain. This is more than a matter of overstraining the muscles involved. Ankles and knees can be damaged if put under too much stress before the muscles that support them have been toned up by use.

A good many of our skiing accidents would most certainly be avoided if ski fans would take pains to give themselves some conditioning and not rely to tackle the steep slope the first few times out.

Same thing applies to just about any active sport — and I'll certainly include the recently popularized sport of jogging. Smart joggers take it easy at first, jogging only short distances until muscles have perked up. Starting gradually can avoid turned ankles, foot injuries (you have a lot of important muscles in your feet) and even an occasional nasty fall. Besides that, the middle-aged (or older) jogger who starts in a big hurry at heart and lungs to get himself in shape gradually.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am sending 35 cents and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope for your booklet, How to Heal Peptic Ulcers and Keep Them Healed. Also, I have ulcers in my mouth and have had two doctors tell me that smallpox vaccinations will cure them. Do you think this is true? — Mrs. M. C. W.

I can't say that it is "true." All the same, I have heard of some instances in which it worked. Best answer I can give you is maybe, and that it works in some cases, not in others. No harm in trying it if you wish.

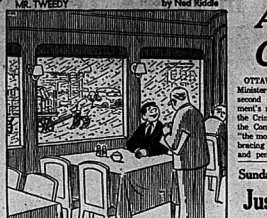
Dear Dr. Thosteson: I evidently missed your article regarding the difference between powdered milk and raw or other milk for babies. Which is better? — J. S.

Special problems (allergies, eczema, etc.) may require a special milk, but for general use, ordinary, homogenized, pasteurized milk serves very well. Canned milk, of course, is widely used in formulas for small babies.



When you say "raw milk," that raises my hackles. Raw milk is dangerous. Too many diseases can be transmitted. So be sure milk is pasteurized.

Powdered milk, after being reconstituted with water, is

"I'd like to change my order. I don't think I want the cold plate, after all."

Amendments to Criminal Code Called All-embracing Reform

OTTAWA (CP) — Justice Minister John Turner led off second reading of the government's massive amendments to the Criminal Code Thursday in the Commons by calling them "the most important and all-embracing reform of the criminal and penal law ever attempted at one time in this country."

The 38-year-old lawyer said the 120-clause bill dealing with abortion, homosexuality, lotteries, drinking drivers, guns and other matters was "of deep social significance which, in the course of time, will affect the lives of most of us, perhaps each of us, in varying degrees."

Eldon Woolliams (PC — Calgary North) sought to have the Commons instruct its legal committee to bring in four separate reports on the bill.

This would permit MPs who agree with some portions of the bill to reject portions they could not accept.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux ruled his attempt out of order. While it couldn't be done at this stage, he indicated it might be accomplished later in the bill's progress through the House.

Mr. Turner said the government side would battle all attempts to divide the bill. He added that he believed the bill was approved by the Canadian public in the spring federal election campaign and the ensuing Liberal victory in June.

David Lewis, NDP parliamentary leader, said his party might propose amendments later but would do nothing to block the cross-rails from becoming law. They were long overdue.

But at the same time he said they were rather inadequate and must be considered as only a starting point.

Mr. Turner made it clear that the government stood behind every clause of the bill, thus ruling out a free vote. In presenting the bill the government was "bringing the law into tune with the times."

Dealing with the clauses permitting homosexual acts performed in private by consenting adults, Mr. Turner said the government was not condoning such conduct.

Nor was it promoting abortion — it simply was permitting it under restricted circumstances where the mother's health might be in danger.

He said the amendments also meant "a tougher gun law." They tightened control over the availability and the use of firearms.

Amendments dealing with lotteries meant "local option within prescribed limits." The amount and extent of them would depend to a great degree on provincial authorities.

To fight "murder on the highways and to combat carnage on the roads" the government was setting up severe penalties for drinking drivers. Police could demand that drivers take breath tests if they have reason to believe that a motorist has been drinking heavily.

Mr. Woolliams rejected Mr. Turner's argument that the Liberals tested public opinion on the amendments during the June election.

"It was not part of the government's program to go to the people on matters of homosexuality or abortion," he said.

He also stressed that under the new parliamentary rules, second reading of a bill was not Approval in principle but rather a motion to send it to committee for detailed study.

"Second reading . . . has been downgraded and now is only a matter of procedure only."

Subjects raised under the bill were of great concern to the conscience.

"These must be given strict and reverential observation," he said.

"I want that kind of consideration, and the Canadian people want it so they can express themselves and their conscience in these separate and distinct matters."

Sunday School Lesson

Just Who Is the Sane One?

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

America is shape - conscious. Stout people squeeze themselves into restraining garments to try to achieve a slimmer look. Millions of people diet, both for health reasons, and to achieve a more flattering figure.

The Bible is shape-conscious too. It says, "Don't let the world squeeze you into its mold, but let God remold your mind from within." (Romans 12:2 A.M. Hunter's translation.)

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for January 26: "People Misunderstand Jesus," Mark 3:7-35.

Some people take on the shape of the standards around them. In order to succeed, or to be accepted, they let the world squeeze them into its mold. When the world says, "Conform" they conform. Others are like ships flying jets. They carry their own pressurized cabin with them. Their greatest pressures come not from outside, but from inside. Regardless of pressures to conform, they carry their own inner pressures that determine their outlook and conduct.

No one ever lived whose life was shaped less by world pressures, by the fads of the day, faith and convictions than Jesus. He simply didn't fit into the standardized patterns of His day. Most people coveted material success. Jesus denied Himself every material advantage to carry on His mission(Matthew 8:20). Most people demanded conformity to ancient laws. Jesus demanded conformity to inner principles (Matthew 5:21-22; 5:27-28; 5:43-44). Most people let their ideas be shaped by the people around them. What other people thought and did, they thought and did. Jesus, on the other hand, let His life be shaped completely by what He believed was God's will for His life.

And so people said He was crazy. In polite language, they said He was "beside Himself" (Mark 3:21). Or as William Barclay translates it, He had "taken leave of His senses." Even His friends thought He was letting His enthusiasm run away with Him. He was not showing good sense. He showed total disregard for His own security. He dared to challenge the power structure of His nation. And look at the people He picked to be His followers (Mark 3:13-19). Not a prominent, or well-known name among them.

His most outspoken critics said He was inspired by Satan. (Mark 3:22) Jesus pointed out that this was a silly accusation. Why should Satan inspire anyone to cast out evil spirits and attitudes from others? Satan wouldn't be in a civil war with himself. Jesus warned His critics not to become so obsessed or so insensitive to genuine goodness and truth that not even God's Spirit could get through to guide or forgive them (Mark 3:29).

Their reaction to Jesus was to be expected. After all, the world does not look with favor on those who refuse to let it squeeze them into its mold. And by any standard Jesus was unconventional in His words and deeds.

But who was crazy, Jesus or His critics? What kind of world still hasn't made up its mind. Jesus said, "Blessed are the poor" (Luke 6:20) The world says, "Blessed are those who strive to be rich." Jesus said, "Blessed are those who mourn." The world says, "Blessed are those who have a care in the world." Jesus said "Blessed are the meek." The world says, "Blessed are the powerful." Jesus said, "Blessed are those who hunger and thirst for righteousness." The world says"Blessed are those who satisfy their physical appetites." Jesus said, "Blessed are the pure in heart." The world says "Let yourself go." Jesus said, "Blessed are the peacemakers." (Matthew 5:6-9) The world says, "Blessed is a little violence now and then."

Which is right? Which makes more sense? Which makes for a better world? Perhaps the day will come when the world will begin to recognize the sanity of Jesus, and be held back from its own insane race to destruction.

The question is still with us. Who are the sane people today — the dissenters, or those who insist on maintaining the status-quo? Undoubtedly some of the dissenters have gone too far. The hippies revolt against conformity, and then turn around and conform in ridiculous ways to accepted hippy standards. If they are going to protest against materialism and war, let them revolt against uncleanness and violence as well.

One little men must not do. They must not look at good and call it bad, or bad and call it good. If we must have war, let's call it what it is — a work of the devil. Let's stop damning people who try to do good by calling them "do-gooders" and "bleeding hearts." Let's re-examine the words of Jesus. Maybe He is the sane one, after all.

Computer Just Dumb Machine

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Watching the amusing new ads by Peter Ustinov film, "Hot Millions," not long ago, I reflected that the computer is fast becoming the new scapegoat for human errors and failings. We combine a prodigious respect for the computer's power with a quiet glee at its occasional stupidity.

In the movie, Ustinov plays an embezzler who manages to beat the machine and make off with a million pounds it has written in cheques to some fictitious companies he has programmed it for. And the funniest scene in the picture is the panic way the computer is cracked — by a charlady who uses it after hours to warm up her "coppa tea."

We have begun to endow the computer with human attributes — a modern form of antique "animism," just as the ancients endowed the forces of nature with human spirit, and saw mischief in the wind or malevolence in the rain or anger in the thunderbolts.

But the fact of the matter is that the computer is just a dumb piece of machinery that is only as good or as bad as the people who program it and operate it. It is almost never the fault of the machinery itself; physical or electronic, malfunctioning is extremely rare in these machines.

What has happened in such cases, actually, is that the system engineering has been faulty — that is, the human being who designed the program has failed to anticipate the machine's dumbness in some area, and has neglected to build in provisions against an idiotic error that no living person could ever make. A computer can be no better or smarter than the people who program it; they must get the credit for its hits and the blame for its misses. But there is also another common reason for the frequent foul-up of the machine — a combination of human vanity and parsimony, which drives some companies to purchase an expensive computer and then put its workings into the hands of relatively untrained, inexperienced, and usually underpaid employes.

I know of one company that mainly for reasons of prestige, rented a computer at $15,000 a month, and then put two 18-year-old girl programmers in charge of it. When the whole operation broke down, the company blamed the computer instead of its own penny-pinching, which is about to become the latest form of corporate buck-passing.

Your birthday today: Your greatest opportunity is thought, and increased earnings and savings. Some relationships recede. Tested family ties endure and provide firmer psychic support. Today's natives are courageous, able and willing to defend unorthodox ideas. Those who live conventional lives do so by choice — no matter what they say about it.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): No matter how well off you are, today is associated with hard questions over finances. Squabbles are apt to grow into quarrels if you squander even small sums.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): The intensity of the arguments are out of proportion to the stimuli. Your judgment is not the best, particularly about travel or the need for the journey. Handle power tools and edged instruments carefully.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Put off all large moves. Wait until your deep intuitions tell you it is time, then do it quickly, gracefully.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Your wisdom is best on home affairs. Don't trust any move from other sources. Business travel does not go very well. Spend extra time getting matters squared away.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): There is no point in thinking you will get any work done today or tomorrow. Remember tension is created by unharmonious and causes illness. Rid yourself of anxiety with positive thinking.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Care is essential in signing contracts, purchase orders, etc. Mental indistinctiveness to detail is somewhat blurred. Use the evening to unbend.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Today marks an ebb in your cycle of achievement. Avoid signing any contract. If you make purchases, buy for cash. Save the carrying charges. Worry over a partner will accomplish nothing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Postponed travel or social arrangements are common this weekend. Encourage mate, but do not attempt early confidences on joint plans. The evening is for departures and may be full of controversy.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): An intimate suffers trouble in concerns; somehow it gets to be your problem, too. Re-channel your own energy. Get through the uphill going. If permitted, your intuition comes in bright to point the way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): People you care for may misjudge and run up extra expenses. Gambling is almost certain to have destructive results beyond sunlit lost. Save your money for better uses, better times.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your work now becomes energetic and encounters resistance. Correspondence and speech are of critical importance and have your most sophisticated efforts.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Home is a welcome retreat. Postpone journeys until Tuesday or later. Correct an error, quietly and sincerely, but expect no immediate response. For the time being withdraw from contacts with relatives, particularly in-laws.

Franco-Quebec Co-operation in Space Technology Forecast

PARIS (CP) — An unofficial prediction of increased Franco-Quebec co-operation in space technology was voiced here today following a tour of French scientific facilities by Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal and his visiting Quebec delegation.

One published report said negotiations between France and Quebec about a joint telecommunications satellite seem already well advanced.

Strengthened collaboration in a variety of fields is a central point of discussion in the lengthy talks with President de Gaulle and other French authorities on today's schedule for the Cardinal delegation.

The French chief of state considered the discussions sufficiently important to warrant postponing for 30 minutes the start of an engagement he has in the afternoon with Prime Minister Holyoake of New Zealand.

Paris is well aware that negotiating with Quebec over communications satellites pose thorny issues of federal-provincial relations in Canada.

Yet Cardinal's Thursday visit to the French space-research centre at nearby Bretigny was cited by the newspaper Le Figaro as proof of the interest both France and Quebec attach to the question of space collaboration.

Emphasis during the Bretigny visit was on demonstrations involving models of a French satellite now called D-2.

One prediction expressed in Le Figaro was that Quebec engineers and physicists might come to Bretigny and work with French colleagues on satellite development.

Quebec Teachers Strike by Mistake

QUEBEC (CP) — The first of a series of threatened rotating or spot strikes was staged Thursday by Quebec teachers following what school board officials said was a "union strategical blunder."

A spokesman for the suburban Ste. Foy Roman Catholic school board said that nine of 14 primary school teachers at the nearby Marguerite d'Youville school failed to show up for work Thursday morning.

He said the teachers had declared themselves on strike after a union leader made a mistake in the date on which the strike was scheduled to begin.

The teachers belong to the association of suburban Quebec teachers—one of 62 teachers' associations within the Quebec Teachers' Corporation authorized two weeks ago to stage rotating strikes in order to put pressure on the Quebec government in granting binding arbitration of the teachers dispute.

Negotiations for a new work contract for the province's 70,000 teachers have dragged on for the last 18 months.

Rotating strikes, which would close a few schools or even a few classrooms at a time, were scheduled to begin at the end of January or early in February.

Pearson Is Worried

KINGSTON (CP) — The crisis in the Middle East could escalate into a major conflict because of Russian indifference, former prime minister Lester Pearson said Thursday.

Mr. Pearson told a service club the danger of a major war is great "if one power has no interest in establishing stability in the Middle East, but is backing one side in a dispute."

Mr. Pearson is spending 10 days in Kingston as a guest of Queen's University.

During the current 17-day cold spell, students had to wear parkas and overshoes in class to keep warm, he said.

Quebec Minister Defends Action

Logical Result Of Past Moves

PARIS (CP) — Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal of Quebec said today he signed three letters exchanged with French officials Friday as "representative of the government of Quebec."

But he declined to describe them as "accords," and said they were the logical consequences of Franco-Quebec relations begun in 1961.

Cardinal also told a news conference that Acting Premier Paul Dozois denied making a statement that the education minister was not authorized by the provincial cabinet to sign any agreement with French authorities in Paris.

The minister said Dozois did this in a telephone conversation with Cardinal Friday night.

Cardinal said a file covering topics agreed on with the French during the current visit was prepared last year by the late Premier Daniel Johnson of Quebec and was studied by the cabinet before the education minister arrived in Paris Wednesday.

The three letters exchanged with the French dealt with agreed work on a possible Franco-Quebec tele-communications satellite, help from Paris for the new University of Quebec and increased promotion of French investment in the provincial economy.

Cardinal said he also brought with him two letters from Quebec—one from Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand for President de Gaulle and the other from Dozois for Debre.

The second letter was about proposed establishment of a French oil refinery in Quebec, Cardinal said.

He added that on his return home he will be bringing letters from the French officials for Bertrand, who has been ill, and the acting premier.

Cardinal said copies of the letters signed Friday already have been sent to Ottawa.

Asked about possible conflict between the satellite agreement and Canadian constitutional provisions governing federal-provincial jurisdiction in this area, Cardinal again emphasized the modern uses of telecommunications for purposes of culture and education—which are subjects under provincial jurisdiction.

He said too that the British North America Act now is 101 years old and the next federal-provincial conference on constitutional matters should deal with such considerations.

The Canadian constitution should be brought into line with the needs of today, Cardinal said.

Dealing with the agreement on satellite work, he said the letter exchanged with France was an accord regarding studies in view of such a project.

Any decision about actual construction would have to await completion of these studies, Cardinal said.

He spoke of what he called the impossibility of predicting the future in this respect.

Only the studies themselves would allow any decision to be made, the minister added.

Cardinal's statement today seemed to conflict with remarks made by Dozois in Quebec Friday night. He said that Cardinal was not authorized to sign any agreements with French officials in Paris.

He told reporters the documents signed by Cardinal and Debre may actually be letters of intent.

Road Toll Is Two

By Donald MacKenzie
Staff Reporter

Two are dead in the Quinte area and several injured as the result of a string of accidents last night, ranging from Brighton to Bancroft.

Dead are 17-year-old Catherine Fairbairn of Bancroft and a Toronto soldier whose name police are withholding.

Miss Fairbairn was killed early last night when she fell out of the car in which she was a passenger as it travelled along Highway 62 near Bird's Creek. She was then run over by a car coming in the other direction.

According to police a north-bound vehicle driven by Dennis Maxwell, 18, went out of control on Highway 62, went into the southbound lane and off the road.

Miss Fairbairn was thrown from the car when it struck a snowbank on the south side of the road. Almost immediately, a vehicle coming from the south driven by Paul O'Shaughnessey struck the girl.

It is not known yet whether Bancroft Provincial Police will be laying any charges. Police are still trying to determine whether or not the girl was dead before she was struck by the O'Shaugnessey car.

The second fatal accident occurred early this morning on Highway 401 near the Smithfield overpass.

Troops Patrol Prague

PRAGUE (Reuters) — Czechoslovak troops with orders to tions were on patrol in Prague crush anti-Soviet demonstrations today for the funeral of philosophy student Jan Palach who turned himself into a human torch to protest curbs on the country's liberalization program.

The troops were put on the alert Friday night after the government announced it has proof extremist elements might try to provoke disturbances during the funeral which was expected to attract more than 100,000 mourners.

The government moves followed a series of recent special precautionary measures which included the reinforcement of Prague police with outside units, and the stationing of police at key points in the city.

Palach, 21, died Sunday three days after setting fire to himself in Wenceslas Square in the heart of Prague. Since then he has become a symbol of national concern at restrictions imposed after Warsaw pact troops invaded Czechoslovakia Aug. 20.

Viet Cong Demands Saigon Form New 'Peace Cabinet'

PARIS (AP) — North Vietnam and the Viet Cong opened the first session of substantive four-party peace talks today by demanding that a new "peace cabinet" replace the Saigon regime and send a new delegation to the Paris negotiations.

The Viet Cong's National Liberation Front and the North Vietnamese delegation chiefs were the first speakers as the talks began at the International Conference Centre.

Before the meeting, chief United States negotiator Henry Cabot Lodge said the American "opener" would be proposed guarantees of the demilitarized zone which separates North and South Vietnam.

NLF Foreign Minister Tran Buu Kiem, speaking first, violently denounced the United States and the South Vietnamese governments as supporting "perfidious and cruel" policies. The Americans, he insisted, share up "tyrannical and bloodthirsty puppets" in Saigon.

Ambassador Xuan Thuy of North Vietnam was less violent in tone, but his demand for the end of the Saigon regime was couched in terms almost identical with that of the NLF.

Britain Favors Parley

LONDON (CP) — Britain has told France it is "basically sympathetic" to a meeting of the Big Four powers on the Middle East, but only under the umbrella of the United Nations, diplomats reported today.

The British reply to a French note sided with reaction by the United States to France's call for a Big Four peace initiative in the Middle East.

Diplomatic sources reported the French were told of Britain's attitude in a meeting between officials Friday and a formal note was to be handed over by the British in Paris.

Butane Blast Seen 90 Miles

LAUREL, Miss. (AP) — Eighteen tank cars loaded with butane gas exploded with a series of tremendous blasts early today, sending balls of fire and debris through a several-block area. At least eight persons were taken to hospital with burns and shock and 35 homes were reported destroyed.

One tank car was blown two blocks by the force of the explosions, set off when one of the tankers was derailed about 10 blocks from the downtown area.

Police feared another eight tank cars, part of the same shipment, might be touched off by the flames. Each held 30,000 gallons of gas.

Residents in Jackson, 90 miles to the north, said they could see the night sky light up when the cars erupted. Windows were blown out in a four-mile radius around the site of the blasts. Telephone service was disrupted in a wide area.

U.S. Navy Deserter Abducts 16 Servicemen in Hijacking Plane

MIAMI (AP) — Uniformed servicemen hijacked to Cuba by a deserter from the United States Navy said today their Communist interrogators badgered them.

Sixteen servicemen, most of them sailors assigned to the Key West navy base, were among 40 passengers Friday on the National Airlines flight from Key West to Miami.

Yeoman Johnny Coulter, 24, Vietnam veteran from Riverview, Ala., said one interrogator "started clapping his hands at me saying, 'You're a brave man! You're a brave man!' when I wouldn't answer questions."

"I just told them my name, rank and serial number," Coulter said.

David Jones, 24, navy jet mechanic from Dallas, Tex., said the interrogators alternated between hospitality and derision.

"They came in with cigarettes, coffee and Cuban sandwiches," Jones said. "It was just harassment and propaganda to get our hair down—the food and coffee and all.

"But it doesn't work like that with the military. It might work with civilians."

The young hijacker stuck a knife against stewardess Kim Tatum's neck four minutes out of Key West.

Another stewardess, Sue Morrill, 22, said, the "fidgety" hijacker told her: "I don't want to kill. I don't want to go to Vietnam."

Miss Morrill said he was young, with shaggy but not long hair and wearing tight slacks and a sport shirt. She said he seemed indecisive.

"He didn't necessarily want to stay in Cuba," she said.

"He just wanted to get out. He seemed to think that the Swiss embassy in Havana would give him political asylum."

She said he told her he was a 19-year-old American who said he deserted the navy six months ago at San Diego, Calif.

The Boeing 727 jet carried a crew of seven.

It was the eighth airliner hijacked to Cuba this year.

Mohawk Band Disputes 139 Year Old Lease

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

A spokesman for the Tyendinaga Mohawk band has laid the case for breaking a 139-year-lease on 200 acres of reserve land before fellow Indians across Ontario.

Former chief Melville Hill said Indians on his reserve are paid only 'bags of flour a year as rent for the land which contains part of the community of Shannonville. Each of the 900 band members profit by about four pounds of flour each year on the deal.

Mr. Hill said his band has tried to break the 999 - year lease, dating from 1830.

Mr. Hill spoke Thursday at the fourth day of a week-long discussion on changes in the Indian Act. He was his band's representative at the consultation where more than 20 Ontario bands were represented.

Chief Earl Hill, now serving his third term as elected band head, said this morning the 60 bags of flour are worth about $300.

"Shannonville Canners Ltd., the leaseholder, gives the flour to us each year for deposit in our granary. The council has to appoint men to distribute it to each band member and that costs us money," he added.

Government lawyers have given no encouragement to the band in its attempts to break the lease, Mr. Hill told the Toronto discussion group. The federal government has told the band the lease is valid and cannot be broken.

However, Paul Wall of Shannonville Canners Ltd., said this morning the matter was more complex that it first appears.

"The original lease was granted by King William IV and only the Privy Council of Great Britain can change it. The lease can be broken or altered only if my company and the Indians could afford to hire counsel to argue our case before the Privy Council in Great Britain," he said.

The lease, dating from 1830, was negotiated by Sir John Colborne, Lieut-Gov. of Upper Canada acting for the king, and Turton Penn, a Montreal merchant who owned a flour mill on the site.

The lease gave Penn the right to use 200 acres of land located north and south of Highway 2 and on both sides of the Salmon River. Rent was "30 barrels of good flour payable annually on Sept. 1." Although the lease went into effect in 1830, it was signed in 1835 and the first payment was made in 1836.

Under the terms of the lease the Indians retained their free fishing rights on the Salmon River and could "encamp on the unencumbered part of the land."

Over the years, residences and businesses have been established on portions of the 200 acres, most of them in the community of Shannonville. Deeds to the property are considered invalid by the Indians and Paul Wall agrees.

"Until about 1914 there was provision for the leaseholder to collect ground rent on the built-up portions of the 200 acres," he said. "But that fell by the wayside."

A canning factory was established in the old stone mill in 1929 and Shannonville Canners Ltd. has been in business on the site since 1957. The original mill building was torn down a few years ago following a fire.

Until it was razed, it was the scene of the annual flour distribution. Shannonville Canners now uses less than one acre of the land, Mr. Wall says.

The Indians claim many irregularities have arisen over the years.

"Land leased by the federal government is not supposed to be sublet," says Melville Hill.

"Under the terms of the lease no dumping is allowed. Yet a dump existed on the land a few years ago," says chief Earl Hill. "The lease should have been broken at that time."

He added that band Indians who own houses located on leased land in Shannonville are paying taxes to the township of Tyendinaga.

"They are paying taxes on land they are supposed to own tax-free, according to the Indian Act," says the chief.

Both the chief and Mr. Wall mentioned that the leaseholder is paying the $ 30 barrels of rental on behalf of all residents on the land, although the canning company now uses only a small part of the acreage.

"My company inherited a 139 year - old conundrum," says Mr. Wall. "If the lease were broken, it's a fine store while men would be affected —those living on the property and many who have established businesses there.

The company is legally prevented under the terms of the lease from paying cash rent instead of flour, or negotiating with the band for a new, more in line with today's land values."

The only satisfaction the Tyendinaga band can derive from the situation is the knowledge its case is unique.

The 999 year lease is the only one of its kind in Canada.

"Land around Eaton's store in Toronto was once leased under the same arrangement, but the lease was broken many years ago and no one can remember the circumstances," says Chief Hill.

He says his band is continuing its efforts to regain the land, but is uncertain now about what the next move will be.

Ups and downs of the Moira River water levels are being closely watched these days as spring-like weather thaws winter ice. Emergency measures director Angus Duffy surveys stream near Upper Bridge — sudden, sustained sub-zero weather could cause problems.

Cardinal Defends Actions

A reporter at the Paris press conference today quoted Prime Minister Trudeau as saying the Cardinal visit was only a social event and was destroying the unity of Canada.

"If my visit here was only a series of social events, it was not able to break up Canadian unity," Cardinal Villeneuve said.

"On the other hand, if I was only amusing myself in Paris, do you think I could have signed the documents I have signed?"

The minister also was asked to explain his Friday statement that "a point of principle" had been reached in Franco-Quebec relations.

"I wanted to say that at the end of seven years one now can state that Franco-Quebec co-operation is not a matter of pious hopes and that collaboration between the two countries has reached such a degree that it must continue."

In Ottawa, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp stressed the agreement could not be considered an international one because the federal government has jurisdiction over satellite communications.

But, he said, Canada would reserve judgment until it compares the Paris documents with a cultural agreement signed by Ottawa and France in January 1965.

The subject matter of two of the letter exchanges—French help for the University of Quebec and joint efforts to promote extra investment in the province by French businessmen —seemed at first sight unlikely to arouse heated controversy.

But observers in the Ottawa capital were quick to begin discussing whether Franco-Quebec studies with a view to creation of a communications satellite would re-ignite a familiar federal-provincial argument in Canada.

At issue in this controversy is whether the satellite, though defined by the signatories as for cultural and educational purposes, would compete with educational powers given to Ottawa in the field of communications.

French government sources said Friday night that the projected Franco-Quebec satellite, under the name Nemini, might be launched as early as 1973 from the French base in Guyana on top of a Europa II rocket.

Quebec technicians are expected in France in March, to join their French counterparts at the national space research centre, who would be charged with the conception and construction of the satellite, the sources said.

French authorities were quickly made aware of the strength of feeling in the English - speaking Canada over the reception given Cardinal and his party during their recent visit during their Paris visit—a five-day affair ending Sunday with their departure for London.

"Violent" was how one headline in Le Monde described the reaction of Canada's English-language press to the Cardinal's own Friday summation of Franco-Quebec relations was that they had reached "a point of no return."

"I am very happy about the stands we have reached in relations between our two governments," he said after an official lunch at the Elysee Palace with President de Gaulle.

Wartime Measure Is Big Business

OTTAWA (CP) — A wartime emergency measure has become a $50,000,000-a-year business for Prairie farmers and has the potential to more than double that in the near future.

In 1942 farmers were asked to grow rapeseed because the navy needed the oil and the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor had cut off the traditional supply.

During the next 25 years the acreage expended until now Canada is the world's largest export of rapeseed.

The 1968 crop from 1,052,000 acres will top 1,000,000 bushels and bring farmers about $2.20 a bushel. Unlike wheat and other crops sold through the Canadian wheat board, rapeseed puts instant cash in the farmers' hands.

But until recently rapeseed oil was restricted to industrial uses. Erucic acid made the oil undesirable as a food and left the mash after crushing too toxic for livestock feed.

Now the door is opening on a whole new future for rapeseed oil in the food field thanks to painstaking research at the federal agriculture department's Saskatoon research station by Dr. Keith Downey.

The breakthrough came in 1966 when Dr. Downey successfully produced 80 bushels of rapeseed free of erucic acid and interested Canada Packers in experimenting with it as a vegetable oil.

This year 10,000 acres were grown with the seed—named from the Spanish word for gold.

There were a number of other fairly godmothers in addition to Dr. Downey in the development of rapeseed as the Cinderella crop of the Prairies.

The first was Dr. B. M. Craig of the National Research Council who developed a gas chromatograph which could analyse the oil a thing in a time in less than half an hour. Previously several pounds of seed were needed for tests.

Another was Dr. Brian Harvey of the University of Saskatchewan who isolated the two genes that produce erucic acid.

And there was Saskatchewan farmer J. B. Douglas Ross, one of the pioneer growers of rapeseed in 1942, who continued to grow it and promote markets for it.

A number of food companies are experimenting with the erucic-acid-free oil and Dr. Downey is continuing his research program.

He believes he can make rapeseed even more competitive than soybean oil as a vegetable oil, as a high-protein livestock feed and as a base for such items as food substitutes as artificial meat.

Now that he has bred the erucic acid out of rapeseed he is thinking about what he can breed into it. He hopes to be able to increase certain proteins and amino acids that are important for livestock feeds.

An associate, S. H. Pawlowski, is working on cross-breeding rapeseed and mustard. "We've just scratched the surface," Dr. Downey says.

Emergency Group Keeps Sharp Eye on River

It might as well be spring along the Moira River.

Animated by recent rains and an unseasonal upsurge in temperatures, the river is rapidly draining its Quinte - district watershed into the Bay of Quinte.

Conservation and emergency officials are keeping a wary eye on the situation, nonetheless.

As yet, no threat of flood exists. Ice jams, let loose by continued warm weather thus far have been short-lived.

Ice dams, formed at various points in the city in the past week have been disintegrated by the rush of water and carried into the bay.

Not that flood possibilities are non - existent.

Being closely watched are the tributary up country creeks which carry the rural runoff of earlier heavy snows into the river.

Levels of the smaller water courses are now closely reports Quinte emergency measures organization director Angus Duffy.

And add Moira River Conservation Authority officials, a sudden, sustained thaw or sub-zero weather could drastically alter the picture.

Continuing cold weather could result in the formation of slush, which, piling against existing ice caps, could dam the Moira.

Belleville Boosters Await Decision on UIC Tenders

This could be a long weekend for Belleville boosters.

By this time next week the city should have some tangible indication whether it's to house the Unemployment Insurance Commission's Ontario regional offices.

The decision hinges on the opening of tenders Jan. 29 for a building to house the UIC operation and its 300 employees.

While no immediate decision will likely be made public, official reaction to the cost quotations may give an indication of what's to be expected.

For Bellevillians, it's been a long wait — ever since last fall when the UIC confirmed plans to relocate out of Toronto and its high-cost administrative environment, a favorable decision for Belleville could mean the biggest single economic boost in nearly 25 years.

Expectancy has been heightened by on-the-spot preparatory moves by UIC administrators in recent weeks.

Latest of these is a survey of local work force available.

One UIC official confirmed yesterday the relocation here — confirmed — would open jobs immediately for 50 new employees.

They would fill clerical, stenographic and typing posts.

Recruiting will follow traditional government practice. The jobs will be advertised locally by the Public Service Commission and applications submitted to local UIC officers for final processing.

Hazardous Driving Reported

An extreme drop in temperature along with snow flurries and high winds has created hazardous driving conditions throughout the Quinte area.

Melting snow and rain during the past few days has now frozen. In many spots where the snow has packed sections of the road the situation is extremely dangerous.

Winds gusting from a westerly direction at 25 to 40 mph are not helping visibility either.

Police in the area this country have been classified "dangerous".

It is expected that tomorrow should see a change in wind direction as well as a drop in velocity to around 20 mph.

The high expected for today is 31 degrees with an overnight low plummeting down to zero.

More and More Children Are Using Expanded Facilities at Belleville Library

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

This may be the computer-orientated age, full of space exploration and great scientific achievement but one thing has not changed — children still read library books.

According to Miss Jean Williams, head of the boys and girls library in Belleville, there are 3,300 children borrowing books.

A new section of the library, which opened last fall, has brought about a steady increase in the number of young readers.

Miss Williams revealed one surprising fact, however. She explained that during her years as a librarian, she has noticed a very peculiar trend among these future scholars.

"There is," she explained, a phenomenon known as summer and winter readers." Since the children's library cards are kept on file, it is an easy matter to figure out who are the borrowers, and when.

"It seems that there are certain children who only borrow books during the winter months. Others, on the other hand, take out books in the summer and reading seems to be their major occupation for the holidays."

The tremendous turnover in books can be traced back to a number of school projects which the children supplement by further reading.

Miss Williams noted there seems to be an increase in the number of projects the children are assigned. This in turn, starts the younger ers learning how to use their library at an earlier age.

What kind of books interest the younger set?

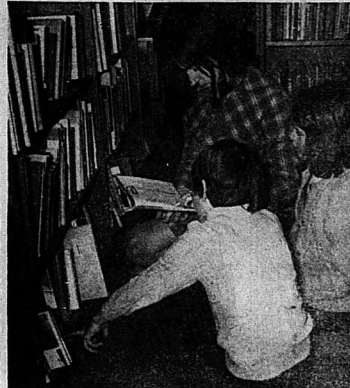
This is something that hasn't changed, either. Animal stories, mysteries and science books top the list.

Apparently, this regular feature has a hard core of faithful followers who come each week to hear their favorite tale.

"In this day of television, it is good to have stories told live. It establishes a certain rapport with the children and this is good," commented Miss Williams.

Sometimes the children act out the stories or get actively involved in other ways.

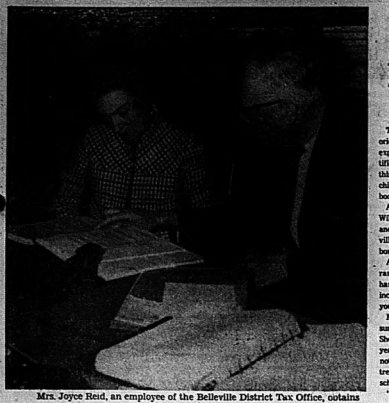
Another feature of the library is its "mounted picture service". The collection has more than 500 mounted scenes and these are available to teachers.



Miss Williams who has held her position for the past two and a half years said that the children are very good about getting books back on time and getting books back on time and

"Usually", she continued, "at least 75 per cent of the children that do come to the library know what they want. The other 25 per cent are often hesitant to ask for assistance but we try to be as helpful as possible."

The move to the new library was, in the head librarian's words, "really great."



With the increased space there are now more books.

There are 14,180 books in the Belleville boys and girls library.

I Think I've Found It . . .

For these two young seekers of wisdom and truth, it happens to be a matter of finding the right book. To help them in their dilemma, student librarian Susan Sweet does her best to give the girls some specific direction in their search.

Mrs. Joyce Reid, an employee of the Belleville District Tax Office, obtains some training tips from Clint MacDonald who will be directing the immediate assessment program until the end of July and income tax time.

Tax Reform Changes May Double Queries

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Speculation about various tax reforms and changes this this year will probably double queries by citizens who take advantage of information services, says Alvin Miller, public relations officer for the Belleville taxation office.

The Belleville office will again be offering information to taxpayers having problem straightening out their income tax returns.

When referring to speculation Mr. Miller meant various topics and articles circulated by the news media about taxation reforms.

He described it as "speculation — but not unjustified speculation."

There will be few changes in the taxation picture this spring as it comes time to fill out that T1 form.

However, one example of a proposed change is gift tax exemptions concerning a mistress or mistresses.

According to a newspaper article "mistresses, if there are not more than one, now are more expensive to maintain. The old gift tax exemption of $4,000 a year to any one individual has been cut to $2,000."

The article goes on to say that, "mistresses who could be maintained in some dignity at $4,000 a year will be shockingly underpaid at the new lower gift exemption of $2,000."

"But the old gift tax exemption of $4,000 was limited to one gift a year only. Other gifts were tax-free only if under $1,000. So with three mistresses each receiving $2,000 a year, the new proposals make it more profitable to work on the harem basis."

"In addition a mistress is not charged income tax on her gift unless she enters it as earned income."

Although many of the new tax proposals seem to have loopholes, the evasion tactics are not fool-proof.

One recommendation for estate tax evasion was "that a widow or widower in one of the 'non succession act' provinces should make a beeline for British Columbia on the death of the spouse."

"There's a loophole here with the new estate tax act for such an act would under circumstances avoid both the federal tax and also the B.C. succession duties which, amount to 75 per cent of the combined estate tax and B.C. succession duties."

"In other words a bereaved spouse coming from Sas-kat-hewan to B. C. would pay no estate tax in Saskatchewan, but on his or her subsequent death in B.C. would get a 75 per cent rebate to pay for B.C. succession duties which, if in trust, the province would not be able to collect."

It has also been suggested that widows live merrily on their tax-exempt estates. "so that when they die the tax collectors will find little meat left on the bones." A healthy annuity program would presumably do the trick.

But the majority of Canadian citizens do not have estates nor mistresses. What they do have, however, are savings accounts. And the greedy eye of the taxation department has not passed over this as a likely source for taxes.

At the end of April in 1968 Canadians had personal savings accounts in chartered banks with a total collective value of $11,125,000,000.

Interest paid on this amount was about $742,000,000.

Canadians also have another $2,000,000,000 in savings accounts in mortgage loan companies.

"Interest income from bonds, debentures, savings deposits or any other source is taxable and Canadians are supposed to include it in their income tax returns. During 1966 interest payments on bonds as well as bank interest declared in returns amounted to $554,000,000."

"It is obvious," the article explained, "that most of this taxable interest was paid on governments and other bonds. Here the owner has to complete an ownership certificate, a copy of which goes to the department of national revenue so that tax officials can check on the amount of interest received."

"There is no comparable check on interest received on savings accounts. The bank is required to make a return on interest of $10 or more paid into these accounts."

"This means that the deposits has kept at least $2,000 in his account for the full year — and few of us do that."

The article said that most of us ignore interest on saving deposits in making out returns with the assurance "that no one can double check on us."

"The Carter report proposal designed to close this gap was a 15 per cent withholding tax on savings account payments. This would provide about $100,000,000 in extra revenue and it is little wonder that the tax men are looking greedily at it."

It is speculation of the former that concerns Mr. Miller as far as queries about returns are concerned.

Again this year the Belleville District Office has planned for evening office hours and an open-line radio program series.

Tax tips in newspapers and on the radio are expected to clear the mud about tax returns.

Office hours will be extended from five p.m. until nine p.m. on Mar. 24, Mar. 25, Apr. 28 and Apr. 29.

Labor Council Submits Statement on New Plaza

Revamping of Belleville's downtown core commercial has stimulated little response among local developers, the Ontario Municipal Board is being told this weekend.

However, both downtown development and fringe — area shopping plazas are both possible the Belleville and District Labor Council says in a letter to the OMB.

The statement is being described in support of city hall's bid to rezone a North Front Street land blue now optioned as the site of a kingsize shopping plaza.

The letter ponders if any group of downtown merchants may oppose the rezoning application — scheduled for OMB hearing in the city Feb. 4 — and points to "the lack" of downtown development in recent years:

"The number of empty store fronts . . . on our main street is witness to this situation. We have on or near our main street a number of gaps, existing because stores were erected by fire and never rebuilt.

But Front Street redevelopment "and shopping plazas are both possible," says the BDLC letter.

"Those interested in Front Street development, particularly in the interests of our city, have been as evidenced, very slow to act."

Belleville has favorable economic potential and, the BDLC adds, the developer — Cambridge Leaseholds, of Windsor — would not finance the north end plaza — estimated to cost up to $3,000,000 — unless it had "some reasonable means of recovering the money.

The rezoning hearing, originally scheduled last November, has been twice postponed. On both occasions the OMB deferred the meeting at the request of Oshawa Wholesale, parent company of Towers Discount Department Stores — the big shopping complex on Belleville's western outskirts.

Three Day Convention Starts

A three day convention of Jehovah's Witnesses at Moira Secondary School in Belleville began last night with the traveling supervisor pointing out to the group that the Belleville rally is only a minute part of the entire organization.

According to Arthur Powley, Jehovah's Witnesses are now preaching in at least 200 different countries.

He said at the opening of the convention last night that each month saw over one and one quarter million witnesses preaching in almost every country of the world.

And the organization is also conducting more than one million free home Bible studies a month.

Keeping up the good work is a necessity according to Mr. Powley due to the extreme urgency of the troubled times citizens of the world are now living in.

He warned the witnesses to be diligent in preaching the good news of their faith for that reason.

The three day convention, which is open to the public, continues through today and Sunday and is open to everybody interested.

It will end on Sunday afternoon at three p.m. with a public talk entitled "God's Way Is Love."

Group Meets In City

How to build better fall fairs and problems relating to their operation will be topics under discussion when the Central Ontario Fairs Association (District 3) holds its annual convention at the Club Canara in Belleville on Feb. 6.

During the convention, the duties for district fairs in 1969 will be set and fair directors will be given the opportunity to get any beefs off their chests.

In the afternoon there will be a panel discussion on how better fairs might be built, the treatment of exhibitors and whether or not "official" openings for fairs are really necessary.

A guest speaker for the convention will be Edward Starr, director of the agricultural and horticultural societies branch of the Ontario department of agriculture and food.

Two Die In Mishaps

struck from behind a truck driven by 24-year-old Wayne Scalletta of Trenton.

Scalletta was driving a truck leased to the Department of Highways. He was uninjured.

The duty forecaster at CFB Trenton said that there was a blinding snowstorm at the time of the accident.

The unidentified soldier was killed instantly when he struck the privately owned truck.

In Belleville last night provincial police reported an accident on Highway 2 near the golf course which injured two and caused $1,500 damages.

The single car accident sent the driver, 21-year-old Marion Ada Butler of Cedar St., Belleville, to Belleville General Hospital with undetermined chest injuries.

Her year-and-a-half-old son, Michael, suffered facial lacerations.

The Belleville, Bancroft, Brighton and Napanee provincial police detachments all reported a number of other accidents but none causing serious injuries.

Highway conditions in the Quinte area accept some of the responsibility for the series of accidents according to police.

Winds gusting to 40 m.p.h. along with snow flurries and rain which has frozen with the extreme temperature drop, has made some roads extremely hazardous.

"It's quite risky to go out on those highways right now," reported the Belleville OPP this morning and Brighton OPP added the weather situation in their district to be getting worse.

Wayward Quebec

The latest round in the political infatuation of France vis-a-vis Quebec would be laughable if it were not so serious from the point of view of Canadian sovereignty, which has been snubbed once again by that arrogant old man — President de Gaulle.

Poor Jean-Guy Cardinal, Quebec's Education Minister, looks distinctly ill at ease in those pictures from Paris. Sitting at an ornate desk in the president's office in the Elysee Palace, Cardinal appears more like a lowly pupil receiving a dressing down from the boss than an honored representative of a visiting delegation.

Be that as it may, Mr. Cardinal and his delegation received full diplomatic treatment from the moment of their arrival in Paris. Later, at the palace, he heard de Gaulle speak of France as the "mother country" of Quebec, and of the establishment of direct relations between "New France and France, between Quebec and Paris."

"It is clear as day," said de Gaulle, "that the exchange of personal contact between our two Governments has the character of a striking and capital event."

Red carpet, blaring trumpets and squads of uniformed police officers, fleets of official cars . . . all were there for the visitors from Canada — or Quebec.

Once again de Gaulle, just as he did when he shouted "Quebec Libre" during his 1967 Expo visit, was condoning the idea of an independent Quebec. More than that, he was according the representatives of the province all the dignity of a State Visit. Giving the snub to Ottawa still more force, Canadian ambassador Paul Beaulieu was not invited to a dinner held at the Elysee Palace.

Increasingly, Quebec is playing the wayward offspring so far as the federal concept in Canada is concerned. If it eventually accedes from Canada — and it would come as no surprise if it does — then at least both Ottawa and Quebec will know where they stand. As it is, the Government of this nation is being made to look foolish on two fronts, here and in France, and is unable to do anything about it.

They Keep Busy

The reins of power have slipped from the hands of Lester Pearson and Lyndon Johnson, but it is unlikely that either is going to slip into obscurity.

Mr. Johnson, barely out of office, may be forgiven if he does take things easy for a while. At his Texas ranch the other day he walked "three or four miles," and went horseback riding with his "favorite girl," a reference to his wife Lady Bird.

Mr. Johnson may be excused also for saying he will miss the power attached to the presidency. After all, he has been in public office for 38 years, "but I hope to miss it — it hurts good," was his comment.

Meanwhile, Mr. Pearson, after more than 40 years in diplomacy and politics, is back at university — as a visiting professor at Queen's in Kingston. Dabbling in international affairs, Mr. Pearson is reported to have made an early hit with students with his "candor, lucidity and self-deprecating wit."

More than four decades ago, Mr. Pearson was a lecturer at the University of Toronto. Times were different then, and so were the styles, but the former prime minister was perfectly at ease among the beards and long-haireds and modishly-clad young women.

Mr. Johnson may be 71, but the word from Kingston is that some of the admiration students there have for him stems from the vigor and enjoyment with which he is approaching his new duties.

Pueblo Inquiry

The status of Commander Lloyd Bucher of the United States vessel Pueblo has taken an ominous turn. From all accounts Bucher had no choice but to surrender to North Korean gunboats which intercepted his vessel early last year. To have resisted, with communist guns trained on the Pueblo from all sides, would have been foolhardy. As it was, the ship had been fired on and hit by cannon shells and machine-gun bullets. One man was killed and several others, including Bucher, wounded. Now Bucher, testifying before a board of Inquiry, has been warned he may be subject to court martial for surrendering the Pueblo. In the circumstances, Bucher appears to be getting a raw deal. Without an armed escort and in the absence of any help from U.S. authorities in Japan whom he radioed for assistance, Bucher was in a tough spot. The vessel, though admittedly engaged on a spy mission, was in international waters at the time it was intercepted. That being so, responsibility for the way things turned out should be accepted by the U.S. government.

PM's Doubletalk Results in Communications Gap

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Four communication gaps remain between Prime Minister Trudeau and the public.

He keeps insisting he wants, as he puts it, "more and more public involvement" in national affairs.

He calls it "participating democracy."

And for seven months he has been trying to spark lively nation-wide debates on the big issues of defence and foreign policy, poverty and welfare, inflation and the economy, government spending — on all levels, municipal, provincial, federal — and taxes.

But apart from the playback he could be getting from pressure groups, special interests and individual axe-grinders, the dialogue with the public at large has been disappointingly — for him — muted.

Because he has made a public relations practice of going out to meet them face to face, he knows what the students want. But only some of them.

For even in this specialized segment of the population, he usually gets to hear only what the militants think, and not only can disagree with them, but involve himself in their spats.

The extremists being the stampers and shouters they are, it is not all that easy to tune in on what the serious students — those at university to learn and not just raise hell — are saying.

Except with the campus, communications, the way the prime minister insists he must have them, are not really working.

One reason could be the code of secrecy he clamped on cabinet with the blunt warning that any of his ministers who "leaked" word of what is said around the Privy Council table run the very real risk of a quick cut from the circle of power.

Caution is catching, and some ministers have learned their senior civil service advisers to clam up. They didn't care to hazard the danger of being fingered for blabbing by their deputies.

The result has been that oversecrecy has cut off much of the news flow out of Ottawa, and stifled rather than stimulated public debate on the issues Mr. Trudeau insists discussed.

Then, over-reacting to this silence, the prime minister has directed his ministers to speak up — on some things — with the differing opinions of the different members of the cabinet causing little more than public confusion.

Another reason for the lack of public communication could be the prime minister's uniquely personal speaking technique.

Striving to stir up public interest, he has been shooting-from-the-lip with deliberately provocative statements that are not always correctly interpreted and understood.

Philosophizing, he frequently talks in a stream of consciousness, careless of the impact of his words. And again there is some confusion.

A third problem has been the prime minister's failure — and that of the rest of the cabinet who tread in fear of him — to confide in his own parliamentary caucus.

So the five-day postal week and the raising of the mail rates exploded, without warning, like a bomb among the government's back benchers. The confusion was rebellion, and while it forced Postmaster General Kierans to give a little, the new shocks are still being felt among postal workers and public alike.

A fourth difficulty in prime ministerial communications has developed with press, radio and television.

No prime minister — not even John Diefenbaker — rode to power on such a wave of unabashed media affection.

Except for a cautious few who were not completely captivated, it was adulation all the way on the printed page and over the air.

And then, with this public relations honeymoon barely begun, the souring started.

Incident followed incident. There was the mystery — and the outright lying by some of his people — about his holiday destinations.

It put into question the credibility of the prime minister's office. This time there was no fibbing, just no definite information.

Secrecy again wrapped the meeting between the Quebec members of the cabinet and the billingualism boosting PM is one of them—and the English delegation from Montreal who came to Ottawa to protest against creeping French unilingualism in some suburban Montreal schools.

Then there were some heavy handed attempts by some of the prime minister's people to "manage" some of the news, and the frequent lack of briefing and backgrounding on government positions, policies and programs.

It all spells widening communication G-A-P.

"What this place really needs is a change of air."

A Look At Bachelors

Peterborough Examiner

There is something, after all, to be said for bachelors — although we do recall saying once in a fit of pomposity that a bachelor was like a pair of scissors — a fascinating object too good to throw away but of strictly limited use.

And we are inclined to review our feeling toward bachelors in the event that Mr. Trudeau is considering some kind of questionable martyrdom. In our experience bachelors tend to be amiable men, neat in their habits, gallant toward the opposite sex, and charming guests. And this is not necessarily because they are grateful for home-cooked meals; most bachelors we know are excellent cooks.

Nor are bachelors courtly because they regret their single state. We cannot think of a bachelor we know who has not turned down half a dozen offers of marriage from the dominant sex.

Police Do Fine Job

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

Officers of the Long Sault and Lancaster detachments of Ontario Provincial Police are to be congratulated for the restraint, patience and compassion they displayed Monday in dealing with the tragic situation along Highway 401.

Officers arrived on the scene between McConnell Avenue and Boundary Road to find more than 30 cars and trucks piled up in seven separate crashes because of heavy fog. Traffic was rerouted immediately to prevent further tragedy. Injured were sent to hospital in ambulances and the dead had to be pried from some of the vehicles.

Hardly a pleasant task, but the police handled the situation well. They deserve the commendation of the general public for a job well done.

Police say too often referred to in the context of brutality in the enforcement of law or are accused of lack of respect or concern for those whom they are pledged to protect. But such charges are generally false.

U.K. Curbs East-West Exchanges

Winnipeg Free Press

The howls emanating from the Soviet Union over the cancellation by Britain of important cultural exchanges is proof that the British gesture hurts. The boycott has registered and thus has served its purpose.

As The Guardian remarks: "It all goes to show that gestures are worth making." Nobody wishes to isolate the Soviet Union permanently. But as long as she remains in her unrepentant and aggressive mood, she must be shown that invasion and provocative manoeuvres of other nations' soil are deeply resented by the civilized world.

Conversational Barrier

Battle of the Sexes—from the Middle East to Toronto

Edmund Boyd in the Globe and Mail

Tradition is seldom burns stronger than when it guides behavior between the sexes. In public, when the actors are strangers, the form is almost rigid. Yet different forms prevail in different parts of the world and in different segments of society. Twice in my life I have been reprimanded for approaching a lady at a cocktail party with the intent of making conversation.

The first was in Iran when I was in the navy. Seven officers, including myself, had been invited to the home of an Iranian official. The room was bare except for a ceiling fan, a bar at one end and a row of hard chairs at the other. We were ushered in and our host introduced us with great ceremony to his colleagues clustered round the bar. Drinks were pressed into our hands and desultory conversation began.

No attempt at conversation was paid to five young women, beautifully dressed in European fashions, who sat primly apart on the chairs. My first drink gave me courage to stroll over and sit down next to one lavishly made-up beauty. "Do you speak English?" I smiled. She shook her head without looking at me. I tried again. "Parlez-vous Francais?" She nodded, still staring straight ahead. "Bon," I said, and offered to get her a drink. The coiffed head shook again, but I thought I saw a tiny smile. Encouraged, I proceeded on in halting French, but there was no response.

Suddenly, a heavy hand fell on my shoulder. Our host, looking darker than before, lifted me up and me quickly to the bar. "One does not speak to the ladies," he said, then immediately became pleasant again. Half an hour later the women rose and filed out of the room. They were the wives of the officials. Only that year had they discarded their veils, and this was the first time they had accompanied their husbands to a convivial gathering. One step at a time.

The other occasion was in New Zealand. My wife and I had been invited to a Christmas party, and were greeted at the door by host and hostess. The host led to the room, and gathered round the fireplace, telling jokes and talking shop, while his wife took mine in where the girls were talking mainly about babies. By coincidence we both tired of our groups at the same moment, and unobtrusively joined the other. Conversation abruptly faltered and was not restored until we had been gently, almost casually, led back to our own male and female groups.

In Le movie Zorba the Greek the men band together to taunt the attractive widow. Yet none will speak to her directly. Workmen on the streets in Toronto whistle and call to a pretty girl, but if she suddenly drops that detached air and says something to them, they dive for their shovels. A woman in an elevator in the morning to a stranger in if no one else is present, but in the presence of other females she will rivet her attention on the floor-indicator.

Unfettered communication between the sexes is certainly on its way. It has arrived in Sweden and in most high schools. But it is still a case of one step at a time.

Few Answer Questionnaire

Differences Between Clergy And Laity Worry to Anglicans

TORONTO (CP) — Anglican leaders have expressed disappointment at the response to a questionnaire circulated across Canada on the church's role in modern society.

The questionnaire was sent to some 7,000 Anglicans, clerical and lay, most of the latter active in parish administration or organizations. Replies were received from fewer than 500.

The survey showed that a majority of laymen and laywomen held that the church's primary purpose was "to communicate the Christian gospel to society" and "to provide inspiration and strength for daily life." The clergy upheld "worship" and "identifying and interpreting God's action in society" as the most important purposes.

At the same time, both clergy and laity saw issues involving social and political action such as hunger, poverty, youth problems, race relations, international affairs and housing as the great questions of today.

The traditional roles of the church ranked the highest for both clergy and laity, but few respondents felt the church should become involved in social or political action.

"The differences between clergy and laity over the church's primary purpose could be a cause of conflict and dissatisfaction within the church," said Canon Graham H. Tucker, consultant in lay training in the division of parish and diocesan services, commenting on the survey.

"Presumably those who answered the questionnaire see the church as providing motivation, compassion, etc., based on the gospel, but that the action and involvement must be done through other channels."

Recognition of the responsibilities of clergy, particularly in busy urban parishes, was noted in many replies, but there was considerable criticism of the ministry and with the conduct of parochial affairs. Lay respondents felt that high priority should be given to clergy training, with emphasis on youth and family life. Most of the replies favored establishment of more lay training centres in Canada.

"A new approach to laymen's work is needed—something to fire the apathetic types," wrote a churchwoman in the 45-54 age group. "We need a Robert Kennedy in the church just to stir us up, or a Trudeau."

Several clerical respondents noted the occupational distinction between the clergy and the laity. One reply said: "As long as the clergy personify the church, and as long as the laity are content to leave things this way, there is little hope for renewal. The clergy must be prepared to serve the laity so that the laity, as the church, can serve the world."

The survey indicated that most men feel men's organizations are irrelevant, out of date or dying out. On the other hand, women respondents gave a favorable rating to women's organizations in the church.

Two-thirds of the respondents preferred flexible, short-term groups organized around projects, instead of continuing men's and women's organizations. There was general recognition that the church needs to change, comments indicating that this referred to such matters as worship, and more democratic leadership and administration in parishes.

Conservative Women Learn System of Transmitting

CALGARY (CP) — Progressive Conservative women must learn to be a communications system for transmitting the party message to voters, the past president of the national Conservative women's association said Friday.

Mrs. Dorothy Harrison Smith of Kelowna, B.C., told women attending the annual meeting of the Alberta party, "All of us must broaden this communication to friends and neighbors."

The modern role of women's political organizations, Mrs. Smith said, is to promote the personality cult surrounding their leader.

"Presence day politics must cut across party lines if the message is to orient around the political party leader, rather than the party," she said.

"The message must be contemporary and the presentation dynamic."

Dr. Ruth Gorman, a Calgary lawyer who has been a legal adviser to Indians for more than 25 years, told the Conservative women that the Indian Act and the federal department of Indian affairs should be eliminated.

Dr. Gorman said the administration of Indian affairs should be transferred to the provinces with the federal government supplying the needed revenue.

Indian reserves then could become municipalities, he declared disaster areas and receive extra aid in welfare, industry, schooling and health services.

Dr. Gorman said this would be cheaper for the taxpayer and more efficient for the Indian.

Physicians' Wives Enjoy Hospital Tour

The physicians' wives of Belleville and district arrived at Education Hall, Thursday evening with interest, curiosity and a good pair of walking shoes to make their first tour of the new Belleville General Hospital.

The group was welcomed by the assistant administrator, Mr. John Rutledge who introduced the wives to guides for the evening. All staff members of the hospital Every level was covered and the doctors were in their special departments to answer the questions of 22 inquisitive women.

It was the general feeling among the wives that the hospital will be the "pride of Belleville" and could be summed up in one word — "great."

Coffee and refreshments were enjoyed in Education Hall, at the conclusion of a most interesting tour.

Japanese Fashion Show Steals Scene in London

LONDON (AP) — Madame Butterfly, plus daredevil cutouts exposing jewelled navels and hipbones, fluttered into fashion Wednesday in Worth's heavily Japanese collection.

The show, by American Hyan Booker, was the most exciting thing on the London fashion scene.

Wide obis ran through the collection like a signature tune. Skirts were about three inches above the knee, shorter than the new haute couture level, but a considerable comedown for Booker.

Long skirts and pants were delightfully spiced with their V slashes below the obi, on each hip and at the navel. A wrapover, kimono-style, was carried out in coat dresses, trouser suits and even formals.

Models were dagger-like gold hairpins stuck through knots of hair or at the centre of their obis.

Flat cartwheel hats the size of large parasols were worn straight on the back of the head.

Rising sun circles, in contrasting colors, were bejewelled beads, were plastered centre front or centre back on several models, and face veils of loop bamboo straws were another new wrinkle.

Red, navy, bamboo, lemon and honey combinations, black and white were pet colors, and there were nearly as many pants and culottes as skirts.

The all-Japanese theme was carried out in simple purity of line, with a background of Japanese music, Japanese costume dolls and an arch of cherry blossoms.

Well Educated Women Can Gain Acceptance

TORONTO (CP) — Women will only gain acceptance in Society on the same basis as men when they become fully competent and educationally equipped, Sylva Gelber, director of the federal labor department women's bureau, said.

Miss Gelber was speaking on the new role of women at a symposium on New mentality: Challenge to old values, arranged by the Jewish family and child services.

A call was released to the press in advance.

"Higher education at a higher level must be pursued" she said.

Some Canadian universities were beginning to revise courses in such a way as to facilitate the attendance of married women whose household responsibilities permitted them the time for part-time study.

The School of Social Work at the University of Manitoba and the College of Education had 'already taken steps in this direction. Other universities had to be pressed to follow suit.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

REDNERSVILLE W.I.

The Jan. meeting of the Redneersville W.I. was held in the Centennial Town Hall, Amelisburg. Celebrating the 50th anniversary of the Institute, approximately 70 persons enjoyed a banquet served by the Amelisburg United Church Women.

Charter members, Mrs. Roy Williamson and Mrs. Carl Booter cut the anniversary cake. A sing song was led by Miss Linda Peck, 12, a precision to the Amelisburg women for the banquet was voiced by Mrs. G. Roblin.

Vice-president, Mrs. Winston Pulver was in charge, and she opened the meeting in the usual manner. She then introduced the charter and life members, and the District president. The Districts president later brought greetings from the area.

Mrs. B. Peck read the minutes of the very first meeting of the Institute, and Mrs. A. Weese gave a report from the time of the first world war, and the work the women did for the Red Cross.

An exciting feature which was the climax to the meeting was the fashion show of wedding dresses from the year 1902-1965 modelled by young members of the community.

U.C.W. Meeting

(Bridge Street U.C.W.)

A colored sound film "The New China", authorized by the United Church as a true documentary, was shown at the general meeting of the ladies of the United Church Women of Bridge Street Church, on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. Wanda Sine, in charge of the program, gave an explanatory and effective introduction. She stated that the population of China comprises one quarter of the human family and westerners must study this year to cultivate an open mind by the following means:

think of contemporary China not that of ten, 20, 30 or more years ago;

perhaps be willing to accept something from China;

interpret political events in the context of "our faith in God";

assess exiting attitudes between Canada and China;

consider ways of influencing public opinion.

The members present were divided into four groups to talk over their impressions of the film.

Their assessments were reported by Miss Grace Kenny; Miss Gertrude Laiter, Mrs. Revill and Mrs. Loynes.

As a closing thought Mrs. Sine asked "Did we subconsciously or otherwise want China to be a poor country?

The meeting opened with a sing-song of familiar hymns by Mrs. Ken Bird and Mrs. T. Hutchinson hymn tunes, led Franklin.

Mrs. Kitcher led the worship service with the theme "Live with hope, even after accepting frustrations."

After the program the president, Mrs. J. S. Loynes, conducted the business meeting of reports, resolutions, budget for 1969, and a memorial to those members who had died in 1968, plus other items.

First Cradles Were Made Of Cast Iron and Wire

(Picture Credit: The Canada West Society)

The cradle illustrated was made about the turn of the century of cast iron and heavy wire. It was originally enamelled white and probably was complete with a ruffled valance and embroidered bed-clothes.

This type of swing cradle is a style item and variations are still being made, sometimes in wickerwork. A high swing cradle is only useful to rock small babies who can not turn over and wedge themselves on one side. It is usually a gift from fond grandparents to a first grandchild; expensive, lovely to look at, but not particularly practical.

One of the best-known examples of this style of cradle is the one made for the King of Rome, infant son of Napoleon Bonaparte. Winston Churchill was once ensconced in much the same sort, super-cradle, we for heirs of the Duke of Marlborough.

In 1851, a cradle identical in construction, but much more elaborate in detail was exhibited at the Great Exhibition held in London, England. M. Dupont of Paris France included, an angel at the foot of his cradle, either broken off or missing from the example the writer has seen. He also exhibited a cast-iron bed, with a frieze in "bas-relief" representing a hunting-party". His exhibit was praised for its design but the weight of the bed, (measured in tons), was objected to on practical grounds.

The more practical type of cradle, sitting on rockers on the floor has been known in this country since the earliest settlers arrived. In less elegant form you may find a swing cradle or "berceau suspendu" dating from the 18th century and of French-Canadian derivation. It is possible that a cradle may be found anywhere in Canada along the fur-trading routes.

Some berceaux are suspendus have slots cut in the side for a twofold purpose. They were fitted on the one hand to secure the child firmly in the cradle by bands and on the other they were threaded with a cord that led from the cradle to the bed so tired parents could rock a restless child without rising in a cold room.

The high swing cradle tended to flip and more practical versions were made closer to the ground. M. Dupont's exhibit represents a change away from wood construction. Unusual materials, papier-mache, was tried about the same time. In rough guidelines, wooden panelled cradles tend to be of the early 19th century or before. Plank-sided and hooded cradles tend to be turn-of-mid 19th century and larger, more open, turned rocker cradles tend to be of the 20th century.

Elegant and tippy empire-style sleigh cradles may be found of Quebec provenance. Quebec designs tend to be more interesting in style and more imaginative in design than their more staid English-inspired counterparts else where.

The cost of this cradle in 1890 was about $5 complete with bedding. It is not likely to be available now for much less than $100. Floor cradles start about $20 and price varies according to style.

Former Bellevillian Is Curator of Entomology at B.C. University

A VANCOUVER INTERVIEW

"A university is a stimulating and challenging place to work." — Thelma Finlayson.

* * *

Here is a clipping which has reached our desk, sent in by a kind reader. It concerns an interview with a former Bellevillian by Donna Anderson of the Vancouver Sun (Saturday May 4, 1968) which will be of much interest to the many friends of the subject who is none other than Mrs. Roy Finlayson. It reads as follows:

"Bugsi Ugh!

That's the reaction of most women to any form of insect life.

Not so for Mrs. Thelma Finlayson — insects have been her profession for the past 30 years.

Mrs. Finlayson is curator of entomology at Simon Fraser University and with the school of zoology there. The school, the first of its kind in the world, will open its doors for graduate studies this fall.

She is one of the eight members of the zoology group who came from the Federal Research Laboratory in Belleville, Ontario, six months ago to do research and to teach here.

In Belleville, our work was in a very specialized field," Mrs. Finlayson said, "and we felt that it should be shared with students.

I guess that you could call the group idealists. We were well-established there and left a great deal behind but we all firmly believe in the establishment of the school here.

When people think of pest control, they think of chemicals but our group has been trained in biological control," she explained. "Biological control is the control of pests through the use of living organisms such as parasites, predators and disease.

Insects have diseases that are quite specific and, in isolated instances diseases have been projected in large quantities and used in the same way as chemical controls, she said.

Mrs. Finlayson explained that the most important feature of the new school will be integrating all methods of control — chemical, biological and physical. "The general public is not aware that there is a world food shortage and we can't afford to waste time. We are attempting to do something about it through the control of pests."

Mrs. Finlayson is in charge of the collection of the pistol ogy group. Her particular field is with parasites and the study of immature stages of these insects.

A graduate of the University of Toronto with a bachelor of science degree with honors in biology, Mrs. Finlayson also studied at the Ontario College of Education with a view to teaching science.

"I never did teach though," she smiled. "I found research far more interesting. I used to spend eight hours a day at a microscope. I am constantly amazed at the beauty of insects and their perfection. I know most people think of them as 'those dirty things' but they are most fastidious about themselves. When you examine live insects under a microscope, you find they are constantly cleaning themselves."

Mrs. Finlayson was asked the reaction of people when they discovered that she dealt in bugs.

"Well, they are a little shocked at first and then they show a great deal of interest. I have just built a home here. I gave the location a great deal of thought because I couldn't come all this way across the continent and live without a view. I have a gorgeous view of the mountains."

At this point Dr. Bryan P. Beirne, director of the school came in the door and said, "Mrs. Finlayson is terribly modest so I don't suppose she told you that she is the author of 22 research papers." And, as he left he added, "she is an excellent cook, too."

Mrs. Finlayson commented that she loved the theatre but that she had been so busy since her arrival that she had had little chance to attend many performances. She worked with the National Ballet Guild for a number of years and is an honorary governor of the Dominion Drama Festival.

She has been working night and day preparing and planning lectures for the fall. And what social life holds in store for her, she admits one area of her career dismays her. "I'm just terrified to think that I must stand up and give those lectures."

Reader Wants Facts Re Ex-mental Patients

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: What I would like to find out is where I could get the facts as quickly as possible re ex-mental patients now on leave? (not in fact I rejoice about), but from my own observation feel they should be reporting to someone to make certain they are progressing.

This information is not so that I can take any action myself but so that an unorganized district will know what rights they have if any trouble should arise from such a person. — On Tacks.

Dear On Tacks: It seems some of us still fear the unknown — the mentally ill. Yet ex-mental patients can and do recover just as fully as physically ill ones. Once back at home and working, they continue to build themselves up — even as physical convalescents do.

Usually, for quite some time a mental visits an outpatient clinic regularly. Then the family doctor is the one to take over.

If you know of one who appears unable to manage, is not seeing any professional person, and seems to be headed for a relapse, talk to the family doctor. If you fear violence the police is your protector, as always.

Dear Doris: One of my friends didn't like her boy friend. She used to tell me that her boy friend was a dum stupid etc. When I asked her why she was going with him for such a long time, she told me that she didn't have any other choice, so something was better than nothing. She also told me that the last thing she would do in her life was to marry that guy. Now they are engaged.

Now my problem is, she liked one and expressed her liking in so many different ways and through different media. She also told me that all her friends were under the impression that I would marry her. But I didn't show any interest though I liked her very much and she is the only one yet with a place in my heart.

Now I am worried. If something happens in her married life, do I have to take the blame? — Sensitive.

Dear Too Sensitive: Who did you say was the dum-dum? She blated around. Raised the question of your marrying her. Said the other fellow was better than nothing.

Who do you think is to blame if she marries the wrong fellow?

Confidential to Fed Up: Did writing it all down help? I find myself wondering why you have endured so much for so long. Is there a part of you which enjoys being dominated and then grousing about it?

Reading between the lines I sense some fire, some resistance, some genuine desire for a better deal. You would have had a better deal long ago if you had expressed yourself to him, instead of to me. And he would have grown a more congenial personality.

Turning on him now may leave him bewildered. Some high class personal counselling by a trained social worker is very much indicated.

(Ask Doris for the information you need. If she doesn't know she'll find out from one of her consultants. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.)

Ann Landers

Mom Shows Interest In Questioning Teener

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a 14-year-old girl with average looks and a mother who is way above average when it comes to nosiness. Whenever a boy calls me on the phone, she has to know his name, his age, his religion, what his father does, where he lives, does he smoke, does he drink, does he swear, how long it his hair, how tight are his pants? Honestly, Ann, I could flip my gourd.

Guys call just to talk, not to ask me to get married. Do I owe my mother all these facts? I'll go by your answer. — PLAINVIEW PANIC.

ANN LANDERS

DEAR PANIC: Be happy your mother is interested. Some teen-age girls could be going with Jack the Ripper and their mothers wouldn't even notice.

A 14-year-old shouldn't mind telling her mother the name of the boy who called, his age and where he lives. The other information, such as what his father does, his religion, etc., is not, as they say in legal circles, germane.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please print this for the girl who cried her eyes out in print, feeling sorry for herself and all the other "plain" girls who stand around at dances. It seems nobody asks them to dance, so they just stand there talking to each other while the cute, well-stacked chicks get rushed off their feet.

Tell the babies that if they continue to travel in packs and stand together like a herd of sheep nobody will ever ask them for a dance, or for anything else.

A guy hates to ask a girl to dance in front of an audience. If he gets refused, he's sure to die on the spot. Tell the chicks to break it up and see what happens. — SHY GUY.

DEAR GUY: Your letter makes sense and I hope the wallflowers take the hint.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are beginning to hate our neighbors because of their dog. The animal starts barking about 8:30 at night and keeps it up until dawn. This horrible racket goes six months ago and it is driving us right out of our minds.

We have tried earplugs but they don't block out the sound completely. A few weeks ago we tried burning on the radio, but the radio keeps us up so this is no solution.

We own our home and used to love it Now we are miserable in this fair! What can we do about it? — OHIO SUFFERERS.

DEAR OHIO: Anybody who would tolerate all-night barking for six months is not playing with a full deck.

For heaven's sake, go to the neighbors and tell them their hound is keeping you up nights. They should take the dog to a veterinarian and learn why he barks for hours on end. If the barking cannot be stopped the animal should be sold or given away. The neighbors must know that all-night barking might be judged "disturbing the peace," in which case the law is on your side.

Word Processing Topic At Secretaries' Meet

The regular monthly dinner meeting of the Bay of Quinte Chapter of the National Secretaries' Association (International) was held on Tuesday evening, Jan. 21 at the Quinte Hotel.

Following the social period and dinner, the speaker for the evening was introduced by Mrs. Gabrielle Watkins.

Ray Kraszewski, the local sales representative for the I.B.M. Company, spoke on the subject of word processing, that is, the transferring of thoughts and ideas to the printed page. Mr. Kraszewski's talk was accompanied by a film entitled "Breaking the Production Barrier" which illustrates one of the newest innovations in electric typing devices, the magnetic tape selectric typewriter.

The mechanics of this machine are such that it can be programmed, through the use of magnetic tape, to retype material which has been fed into it from a regular electric typewriter. If additions, deletions or corrections are necessary, the machine automatically retypes the parts of the original manuscript which remain the same, and the only retyping required by the secretary is the actual additions or corrections. The result is, of course, a great deal of time saved which the secretary would previously have spent in retyping the complete manuscript.

Following a lively question and answer period, Mr. Kraszewski was thanked for his most interesting presentation by Mrs. Lena Dearborn.

The business session was conducted by Mrs. Verona Meades, president. A guest, Mrs. Sheila Kellett, was introduced to the members. Reports were received on the activities of the group and the members were informed that the study workshop to be held on Feb. 10 would deal with the topic "Parliamentary Procedure".

Miss Marjorie Crouse, chairman of the secretaries' week program, recommended that "Executive Night," when the secretaries arrange a special program for the benefit of their bosses, be held to coincide with "Secretaries' Day," i.e. April 23. It was also suggested that the regular April meeting be held at the home of a member.

Copies of the international bylaws, standing rules and procedures for the N.S.A. were distributed. It was noted that special emphasis would be put on attracting new members in Feb. and it was hoped that each member would be able to bring a guest to the Feb. meeting.

The evening concluded with the draw for the booster prize, which was won by Joan Wilson.

Variations with Wieners, Hamburg

By MAR MOORE

QUESTION: Without going into the ethnic preferences with you I buy hamburg and wieners in my grocery order every week. My family does not complain but privately I do. Please print some dish s using these that will give me some variety. — Alma W.

ANSWER: We chuckled. Do you think you are the only one Alma? Not by a long way.

SALISBURY STEAKS (with Onion Gravy — serves 6)

1 lb. ground beef
½ lb. bulk sausage meat
1½ cups cooked rice (see below
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
Onion Gravy:
3 cups water
1 package onion soup mix
2 tablespoons flour
Combine beef, sausage meat cooked rice, salt, pepper and eggs. Shape into 6 (or 12) slightly flattened little footballs. Place in greased baking dish and bake at 450 deg. Fahr for 40 minutes.

SATURDAY

Dinner Menu

Sparkling Grape Juice;
Crusty Chicken Pie (see Friday); Julienne Green Beans; Baked Custard with Canned Apricots; Coffee.

Serve with Salisbury Steaks with Onion Gravy: Heat 3½ cups water. Add onion soup mix and cook, covered, for 10 minutes. Mix flour with remaining ½ cup water until smooth; gradually stir into soup. Cook, stirring, until thickened. Serve in separate saucebowl.

NOTE: To obtain 1½ cups cooked rice, cook ¼ cup raw long grain rice in 1½ cups water, covered, until tender and all water is absorbed — starting it on high heat and when boiling, reducing heat as low as possible.

PICKELED WIENERS AROUND SCALLOPED POTATOES

1 lb. wieners (quartered — see below)
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1½ teaspoons salt
2 cups milk
2 cups sliced potatoes
1 tablespoon melted butter
½ to 1 cup grated Cheddar cheese

Melt butter in large saucepan; stir in flour and salt, then add milk slowly, stirring until sauce thickens. Add potatoes and heat, stirring, until the sauce boils again. Turn into a greased casserole. Drizzle melted butter over. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 45 minutes, or until potatoes are tender. Ten minutes before serving time cut wieners once crosswise and once lengthwise to give you about 40 "fence posts". Erect a picket fence by pressing a wiener around the edge of the scalloped potatoes — using a pointed knife to ease them in. You may have to crowd them, touching, if your baking dish is deep instead of shallow. Sprinkle grated cheese over all, return to oven to finish baking potatoes and heat wieners and melt cheese — about 10 to 15 minutes. Quite partyish.

Shulman Disguises Self to Get Into Inco's Sudbury Plant

SUDBURY (CP) — A million-dollar member of the Ontario legislature told Friday how he disguised himself in overalls, grew a two-day beard, sneaked into a main plant of the giant International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd.

Dr. Morton Shulman, New Democratic Party member of the legislature for Downsview-High Park, worked an eight-hour shift at Inco's Copper Cliff plant to investigate working conditions under which many of the firm's 3,000 employees work.

In an interview, Dr. Shulman said he found unsafe levels of sulphur dioxide in the air and described the plant as "exactly like Dante's Inferno."

He said he found it difficult to breathe as he climbed over machines and ladders and plans to report his findings to Mines Minister Allan Lawrence of Ontario.

"In fact, I think I'll ask the minister to come here and see for himself. He just wouldn't believe it."

D. A. Fraser, Inco general manager, said Friday he was unaware Dr. Shulman had spent Thursday night at the plant.

He declined to speculate about whether the intruder would be liable to a trespassing charge.

Dr. Shulman, author of the book Anyone Can Make A Million, said he passed the gate as "Big Mort," a $2,08-cents-an-hour metallurgical worker.

He said he felt "scared" as he approached the gate where two policemen checked workers' badges. The badge he wore was borrowed from a retired Inco employee and he said some Inco workers gave him advice on how to pass as one of them.

Sulphur dioxide is a poisonous gas which causes a gradual deterioration of human lungs," said Dr. Shulman.

"I don't know how he does it," he said as he trudged behind an Inco veteran. "I can't breathe in some of these places without a mask on but he can."

Surge in Price of Mining Shares Is Feature As Canadian Stock Markets Reach New Peaks

By GERALD CLARKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prices rose to new high ground on Canadian stock markets this week, led by an expanding surge in mining shares. The Toronto base metal index set an all-time high for the last 12 days, edged up 1.93 to 119.23. Industrial shares also touched records, although they were slightly below their best when markets closed Friday.

The Toronto industrial index gained 1.75 to 190.88 and the composite index on the Montreal and Canadian exchanges 1.34 to 197.93.

The mining group was spurred by at least six metal price increases announced by leading companies in the last month. There was also a wide assortment of exploration reports and rumors.

Among the big gains, McIntyre Porcupine rose 6 to 101, Placer 3 to 36, Bachelor 2 to 13¼, Hudson Bay Mining 2 to 80 and Consolidated Morrison $1.45 to $8.05.

Sherritt Gordon, the mostly heavily-traded mine, advanced 2¼ to 13 on 115,000 shares, more than $8,000,000.

Trading in Sherritt, which has been recommended by several large brokerage houses, reached a peak Thursday despite a company statement aimed at damping down activity in the market.

A spokesman said the company has not yet made a worthwhile discovery in its joint venture in Western Australia with Western Mining Corp., an Australian firm.

Speculators continued to buy the stock, and there were added reasons for firmly bullish opinions, that Falconbridge Nickel Mines was planning a takeover bid for Sherritt.

Cominco and Bethlehem Copper advanced Friday following the news that Valley Copper Mines Ltd., which they control, has found copper mineralization in an estimated 1,000,000,000 tons of rock at Highland Valley, B.C.

Other districts that have been feeding the mining market include the Wollaston Lake uranium area in northeast Saskatchewan, the Mont Laurier, Que., area where asbestos has also been found, and the Uchi Lake district near Red Lake, Ont.

Oil and gas paper rose were among the market's leaders, continuing their strong recovery from the 1968 lows. Dome Petroleum gained 2¾ to 14¾ and MacMillan Bloedel 1¼ to 33¾.

B.C. Forest, up 6 to 27¼, reacted strongly to a bid from Noranda Mines for 400,000 shares in the B.C. company. The offer, worth about $40 a share in stock and cash, was matched by B.C. Forest shareholders Thursday.

However, the outcome of the transaction was clouded by opposition from the majority of B.C. Forest's directors, who said among other reasons that the price was too low.

Western oils continued to edge up, although the Toronto western index fell 0.11 to 148.87 below its record of late last year.

Asamera jumped 6¼ to 30½ on news of an oil discovery in Indonesia where the company is a member of a seven-firm group. Triad Oil, the most heavily traded oil stock, was up 50 cents to 8.50 at J. C. Porter, president, said there have been no recent company developments or explanation news to account for the market activity.

Looking at immediate stock market prospects, analysts said the market's recent short should continue to boom until there is a decisive break in the metals group. But no news rumors and speculation will thrive for just as long as prices are going up.

But things may look different if the slump which hit markets briefly three weeks ago returns with more staying power.

William Janeway, the American economist and financial commentator, says "market jitters are real, and at the same time overdue and premature.

"We believe that some kind of rally is overdue, that it will be flashy when it develops, and that it may very well develop into another assault on the old highs."

But he says the financial fundamentals underpinning the market are continuing to deteriorate. "The time bomb is ticking. It's not about to go off right away. It's also not about to be defused."

The index at Toronto, western oils rose 5.19 to 347.18. Golds fell 0.38 to 240.39. Volume was 26,170,000 shares compared with 25,407,000 last week. Gains outnumbered losses by 515 to 308.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, combined volume was 9,137,000 shares compared with 10,278,000 last week. Gains outnumbered losses by 230 to 151.

J. H. Craig and Co's "go-go" index of 79 junior industrials, one of the main barometers of speculation, reached 221.8, its highest point this year. It rose three per cent this week.

Russian, Spanish Join Working Tongues

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Russian and Spanish joined English and French Friday as "working languages" of the Security Council.

In a way, this development is the outgrowth of a move by French-speaking countries including Canada, to get increased use of French by employees in the UN secretariat.

The development could have quite an effect on council meetings, as immediately became apparent when a statement in English by Max Jakobson of Finland, council president, was translated into French, then Russian and then Spanish.

That came after all delegations had heard simultaneous translations of Jakobson's remarks over earphones.

Conceivably, a situation now could arise whereby a statement could be made in the council in Chinese, then translated into four languages. If the statement was an hour long then delegates, who had heard simultaneous translations, would have to twiddle their thumbs for four hours while consecutive translations were made.

In actual practice, only the remarks of the secretary-general and the council president receive simultaneous translation. And a move was started Friday to compromise with these.

The attending of meetings by languages to Russian and Spanish means that all council documentation, including verbatim reports, must now be printed in French, English, Spanish and Russian.

Resident 90 Years Of Age

DESERONTO — "I have had a lot of tragedy in my life, but I have yet to feel sorry for myself. I refuse to destroy yourself if you do," such is the philosophy of Mrs. Mary E. Fin of Deseronto who was 90 years old Jan. 15.

Mrs. Pile lives with her daughter, Miss Florence Williams, or "Billy" as she is called. Next door lives her granddaughter, Mrs. Norman Kimmett, her husband and Robin, and also in Deseronto is another grandson and his family. Three sons, Hugh, Wilfred and Edward are deceased.

Mrs. Pile has 12 grandchildren, several great-grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. On her birthday, greetings came from all of them, as well as from nieces and grandnieces in Belleville. Many neighbors and other friends called during the day to extend congratulations.

Born on the Centreville Road near Newburg, Mrs. Pile went to Syracuse to work and returned two years later to work in the paper mill in Deseronto. There she met and married her husband, who was a paper-master. "My first home was in Tuscarora," she said. Her husband worked in the Don Valley paper mill for three years. They then returned to this area, purchasing a home in Newburg, where she lived until the death of her son eight years ago, except for three years when they lived in Point Anne, in the two of their sons who worked there. The depression sent them back to their home in Newburg.

She is a Bobby Hull fan, perhaps more so for the sake of his grandparents, who were their neighbors in Newburg. His father was born there. But Bobby does not forget his grandparents' friend, and always remembers her at Christmas time.

Mrs. Pile has a remarkable health record. She has never had a hospital patient and is seldom ill. Although everyone near her has had the flu this winter, she has not escaped. When asked to explain this she said, "I am strong because I have always worked hard. I can never be idle. That is why I am well and why I am 90 years old." She also believes in lots of sleep, however.

Much of her time is spent in reading, which she enjoys greatly, and occasionally television. She reads everything, and especially enjoys history. Her eyesight is excellent, and a slight hearing problem annoys her. She carries on a telephone conversation quite easily, however.

A devout Anglican, Mrs. Pile regrets that she is no longer attend church. But she has frequent visits from her rector and his wife, and receives communion at home.

Hard work, the ability to cry one moment, and laugh the next, an optimistic outlook on life, and an absence of self-pity . . . these are the secrets of Mrs. Pile's long life, she maintains.

Crack Battalion Sent to Choke Off Viet Cong 'Highway'

SAIGON (AP) — A crack battalion of United States paratroops has been moved from the immediate defence perimeter of Saigon to choke off a major Viet Cong infiltration route 30 miles north of the capital, American officers said today.

They said 800 men of the 3rd Brigade, 82nd Airborne Division, have been deployed along the Song Be corridor, which leads from Cambodia into War Zone D.

Intelligence reports indicate troops from the Viet Cong 5th Division have been moving south in the area and two Viet Cong sapper battalions — men trained in the expert use of explosives—already are in the zone, spokesmen said.

They threaten two of the biggest U.S. bases in South Vietnam—the U.S. Army headquarters at Long Binh, which contains huge stores of munitions and fuel, and the major American airbase at Bien Hoa.

The U.S. command also announced today the loss of its 1,000th helicopter shot down in combat but said the two wounded crew members were rescued by a second helicopter.

The helicopter brought to 999 the number brought down over South Vietnam since the war began. Ten have been shot down over North Vietnam. Another 1,315 helicopters are listed as lost to other causes such as mechanical failure, accidents and attacks or shellings on airfields.

The overall total of 2,316 represents at least a $578,500,000 loss.

By unofficial tabulation, 1,298 Americans have died aboard the helicopters that were shot down, another 933 Americans have died in helicopters lost to other causes.

The latest one to be shot down was on a reconnaissance mission 35 miles northwest of Saigon when it was hit by 50-calibre guns.

Headquarters also reported that an air force F-100 Supersabre fighter-bomber was shot down over South Vietnam, but the two crew members were rescued uninjured. It was the sixth fighter-bomber downed this week and the 332th warplane lost in combat since 1961.

Railway Unions Okay Pact

MONTREAL (CP) — The 70-member executive board of seven unions representing 22,000 railway shop-craft workers Friday unanimously endorsed a labor agreement reached earlier this week with Canada's major railways.

A union spokesman said terms of the two-year contract providing for wage increases, higher skill-differential payments and improved fringe benefits, would be submitted to the membership for ratification in about two weeks.

Announcement Monday of the agreement between unions and the railways came on the heels of another early railway-union settlement affecting 75,000 non-operating employees.

Los Angeles Mudslide Buries Man in Bedroom

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A huge mudslide smashed into a luxurious suburban Brentwood residence today, killing one man and for a time trapping six firemen who tried to rescue him.

The accident occurred as a fierce new rainstorm tore at California, bringing floods and mudslides and apparently contributing to a freight train derailment at Santa Barbara.

The victim, Michael Riordan, was buried beneath a sea of mud that broke through a hillside retaining wall and shashed into his bedroom, the Los Angeles fire department said.

The mud poured in so fast for a time were caught in a second flood of mud. They were dug out by other firemen. They were taken to hospitals with injuries described as relatively minor. Another man had a broken arm.

The victim died of suffocation, authorities said.

Damage to the house was estimated between $75,000 and $100.00.

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELEY
Manpower Counsellor

The local employment picture during the past week showed a labor demand which was much stronger for men than for women.

The majority of plants are operating near peak labor force strength. A few, it is admitted, have experienced temporary lay-offs. It has been noticed also that the number of additional employment opportunities in the construction field has been limited in recent weeks, no doubt influenced by the severe winter weather.

This is the time of the winter when there are a considerable number of persons seeking work, either of a casual or permanent nature.

You help yourself and your community when you schedule improvements to your home or place of business for the winter months. You will also find that winter is a good time for the installation, alteration or repair of plumbing or electrical and air conditioning systems. Repairs to walls, cupboard motors, household appliances and lawn and garden equipment also get good attention during the winter months. When all these jobs are taken care of this winter, you can leisurely enjoy the sunny days of spring and summer. The winter activity so created will help level out our employment picture over a twelve-month period, and contribute to the stabilization of our economy. Year round employment provides you and your community

The following employment opportunities are a sampling of some of the job vacancies for which there is a constant shortage of suitable and qualified persons. A number of positions are available for qualified applicants. Also, some positions calling for comptroller and cost accounting experience. Chemical plants are seeking professional electrical or mechanical engineers, as well as trained technologists. There is also a requirement for a professional engineering researcher. Other labor requirements call for experienced foreman and financial organizations, with maintenance vacancy in the surveying field. Floor moulders, a licensed automobile body repairman and painter are also in demand.

If interested in any of these positions, contact the Canada Manpower Centre at 324 Church Street, Belleville.

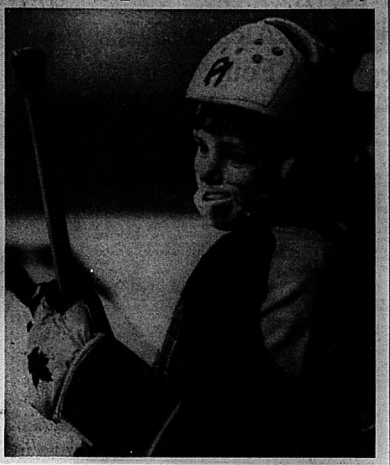
OBJECTS TO OFFER



T. N. Beaupre, chairman of the board of Forest Products Ltd., said in Montreal Friday he has "lots of objections" to an offer from Noranda Mines Ltd. to purchase 400,000 shares of the company's stock. He said in an interview the offer—one half-share of Noranda plus $22.50 cash for each share of Forest Products—is too low. Mr. Beaupre, also chairman and president of Domtar Ltd., told DOW Jones Monitor he meeting as soon as possible to consider the offer and make recommendation to shareholders.

B.C. Forest was traded heavily on the Toronto Stock Exchange Friday and closed at 27, down 1½, after rising as high as 41¼ during the morning. Noranda gained ¼ to 34¾.

Minor Hockey Is for People Like Pat

Like most boys involved in minor hockey, Pat Willman has other hats to wear, besides his hockey helmet. He's a big brother to fan club president and little sister Lisa as well as an intense observer and player at his weekly novice team's games. The eight-year-old is only one o: 1,100 boys involved in Belleville minor hockey, which is in the spotlight ever the next seven days — Minor Hockey Week across Canada.

by Maurice Switzer
Sports Editor

Pat Willman isn't exactly one in a million — he's one in 1,100, to be precise.

Each week, at least once, Pat and more than 1,000 Belleville boys of all shapes, sizes, and ages converge on the Market St. building that represents the hub of Belleville Minor Hockey Association activity.

For these 1,100 boys, their parents, and anyone interested in the welfare of our youngsters, the coming week has special significance.

Minor Hockey Week officially begins today in the big and little communities dotting this hockey-conditioned country.

For Pat and friends, it's just another week of fun at the rink. For the rest of us, it's a time to consider the value of people donating their time so that boys can learn something about sportsmanship, teamwork, and growing up.

We picked Pat to represent all the pint-sized puck-handlers in this city because he seems to show the desired effects of a minor hockey program — just a chance to play is reward enough for him.

Pat is in his third year of minor hockey — his first with a novice house league team — plays right wing, likes Bobby Orr, and sports a mischievous pair of dark eyes that can barely be seen above the arena boards . . . when he has his skates on.

Pat probably wouldn't tip the scales at much more than 60 pounds with a duffle-bag full of equipment on, and skates better at eight than many do at twice his age.

Like most of the boys in the minor hockey programs, Pat doesn't play quite the calibre of hockey needed on the all-star teams that represent Belleville in inter-city games.

He is also fortunate enough to have two parents who are typical of a breed of selfless minor hockey workers who donate hours of their time for the benefit of boys like their son.

Each Wednesday evening, around 7 o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Willman hustle Pat and brother-teammate Mike from their Chatham St. home into the family car and head for the arena.

Pat's dad coaches the novice team, while Mrs. Willman is official team statistician. (Pat has his one-goal year's scoring total at his fingertips for the asking).

Minor hockey for the Willmans is just what all the publicity brochures, pamphlets, and posters say it should be — a family affair.

The night I watched Pat play, he and his scrambling little mates lost their once-a-week outing 7-2.

But Pat and the others will be back next week.

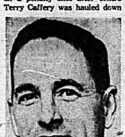
Russia Humiliates Nationals 10-2, Firsov Benched After Scoring Six

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Louis in his burn-of-the-month tour, the Harlem Globetrotters and the high school basketball team, Montreal Canadiens against the local all-stars.

These comparisons came to mind Friday night as the Russian national hockey team humiliated Canada 10-2 in the Canadian capital.

"This will not be the team that will represent Canada in the world championships," a stricken coach Jackie MacLeod said after the game.

The team was made up mostly of the Ottawa-based Eastern Nationals, bolstered by five players from the Winnipeg-based Western Nationals.



Since the Russians arrived in Canada last weekend, they have outscored various combinations of the Canadian national squad 39-7 in winning four straight games. There are three to go, the next in Winnipeg Sunday night.

In Friday's game, centre Anatoly Firsov scored the first six goals—two of them deflections off the stick of Canadian defenceman John Ferguson—then, mercifully, was benched for the last half of the game.

The crowd of about 10,000, including the Soviet diplomatic colony here, was enthusiastic at first. It was soon reduced to clapping politely whenever the hard-pressed Canadian goalie stopped a shot.

The Russians rolled up a 10 0 lead before Canada scored late in the second period. Three other goals came from Alex Motovilov, Evgeni Mishakov, Alex Maltsev and Alex Yakushev.

The first Canadian goal came on a penalty shot after centre Terry Caffery was hauled down by three Russians in a dash on their net.

JACKIE McLEOD

Caffery hit the side of the net in his first attempt on goalie Victor Konovalenko, then was awarded a second shot because Konovalenko had moved beyond the goal crease before Caffery crossed the blue line. Caffery put his second shot over the chunky Russian's left shoulder.

In the third period, Caffery set up Richie Bayes for the second Canadian goal.

The Russians scored their first eight goals on Steve Reay, then put two past western goalie Dave Clelland, who didn't have to contend with Firsov.

Firsov and two other Russians didn't dress for the third period when the Russians gave public notice that they had turned off the pressure by monopolizing the puck in their own end zone for about two minutes in a fascinating display of authority.

Coach MacLeod said that perhaps 10 of those who played Friday night will make the Canadian team for the world championship tournament. He said he wasn't pulling players off the ice when they made mistakes because he wanted to give them international experience.

The saddest moments came when Ferguson tipped in two of Firsov's goals.

In the first incident, Firsov placed a shot across the goalmouth and it flew in off Ferguson's stick.

In the second, Firsov, most valuable player in last year's Olympic competition, came down the left side alone and fired the puck in front as he skated behind the net. Ferguson was standing in front of the net and the puck, placed neatly on his stick, bounced in.

place away from the Kings. In one other Friday game, at Belleville, the Mo-Hawks bounced last-place Woodstock A's 9-1.

Taylor Notches Hat Trick

Mo-Hawks Trounce Alcans 8-1; Cut Aces Margin to Four Points

A hat trick barrage and a five-point night by centreman Bob Taylor carried the Belleville Mo-Hawks to an 8-1 trouncing of the Woodstock Alcans last night at the Belleville Arena.

The win enabled Belleville to move within four points of

BOB TAYLOR

Kingston, who lost 8-2 to Barrie last night, in the race for the top spot and last playoff spot in the eight team OHA Senior "A" hockey league.

The Mo-Hawks outshot Woodstock 22-16 in the opening period, 34-31 in the second and 53-41 on the game, which was a free-wheeling affair all the way.

Belleville grabbed a 4-0 lead in the first period, surrendered a second period goal to the Alcans, and came back to add four more goals in the final period to complete the rout.

Left winger Lorne O'Donnel opened the scoring for Belleville at 4.13 of the first period when he cruised down the middle, took Al Ferguson's perfect pass from the right side and fired a low drive past Woodstock netminder Brent Pennington.

Bob Taylor got the first of his three goals 40 seconds later when he picked up Ralph Plane's rebound from in close and fired a high shot into the Woodstock net.

Taylor passed the puck out from behind the net to Jones who hit the post and then picked up his own rebound to score and make it 3-0 at 8.22 of the opening period.

Taylor made it 4-0 for the Mo-Hawks with 13 seconds remaining in the opening period when he cashed in Jones' rebound from the edge of the goal crease.

Bob Tomchick got that one back for Woodstock with the only goal of the second period when he beat Mo-Hawk netminder Larry Holmes with a low drive to the corner.

Taylor completed his hat trick in the third period while George Godson, Wayne McConnell and Jack Wilton added single goals to run the final count to 8-1 in favor of the Mo-Hawks.

The big line for the Mo-Hawks was the Plane, Taylor, Jones trio with Taylor notching three goals and two assists, Jones a goal and two assists and Plane adding three assists.

The Mo-Hawks new line of O'Donnell, Godson and Ferguson performed well with O'Donnell picking up a goal and two assists, Godson a goal and Ferguson two well deserved assists.

Netminder Larry Holmes performed capably in the Belleville net and could not be faulted for the lone Woodstock tally.

The defence corps of Lionel Bobby and Greg Marchen and Wayne Brown and Jack Wilton played a solid game, breaking up plays effectively and leading many rushes up the ice.

The Mo-Hawks travel to Oakville Sunday night for a road game with the fifth place Oaks, a win for the Belleville crew would greatly improve the playoff chances of the sixth place Belleville club.

It's been cold at Outlet Park this winter and the ice has formed in banks along the beach area. The banks, formed by the pounding of waves on the beach, extend to a distance of 200 yards from the shoreline.

TV Reviewer Criticizes, 'The Lions Are Free'

NEW YORK (AP) — There were several moments during NBC's alleged documentary The Lions Are Free Thursday night when one wondered if he had not tuned in Daktari by mistake.

Theatrical licence and camera tricks are permitted, even welcomed, in fictitious action-adventure shows such as Daktari.

But when a special program is held out to be an account of a visit by a British actor to Kenya to check up on the well-being of some lions with whom he had co-starred a couple of years earlier, it would seem to be the better part of wisdom to stick to the literal truth.

The premise of The Lions Are Free was sentimental: Bill Travers, the actor, who had played an African game warden in a 1966 film, Born Free, and had made friends with seven lions during the production of the film, went back to Africa to see how the animals, after exposure to man, were getting along in their natural habitat.

All that was fine. But the documentary implied that the visit was made by Travers alone—to see George Adamson, the British game warden he had portrayed who lives alone with his animal friends in the wilds.

Obviously, Travers headed a working party—after all somebody had to go around finding all those reunion scenes. And when a couple of lions started roaring and pawing at the lioness close to Travers' automobile, the actor and Adamson scurried to safety inside the vehicle. But that left somebody outside with a loaded camera to catch the excitement.

At another point, Adamson was supposed to be hunting for a lioness who had just had cubs —and again somebody with a camera got there first to record the moment he found her.

None of this nature-faking was really necessary since the affectionate relationship between the animals and Travers and Adamson was unusual and interesting enough without manufactured gimmickry.

Particularly rewarding were shots of the trusting lioness with Adamson after she had given birth to two cubs when she permitted him to approach her and touch her babies.

The hour seemed padded by the usual shots of African animals and was interlaced with shots of Travers' wife, Virginia McKenna, worrying about him and the lions, at her home in England.

Government Could Aid Canada's National Team

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal action to get more of Canada's hockey strength into international competition is imminent, federal Health Minister John Munro indicated early today.

Mr. Munro said in an interview he will meet "hockey figures" shortly and expects to be able to make an announcement thereafter.

He had just watched Russia's national team trample Canada's nine 10-2. At a reception later, he said it "hurts a bit" to think that Canada used to be the teacher in international hockey.

The Russian visitors, politely rubbing it in, gave him a souvenir hockey stick after eight Soviet world and Olympic hockey championships—1954, 1956, 1963—1964, 1965, 1966, 1967, 1968. Burned into the stick were the names of great Russian players.

"Looking at all these signatures, I can't help but wish I had a few under contract here in Canada," Mr. Munro said.

Canadian Coach Jackie Macleod, shaken by the complete ness of Friday night's defeat, said his team is young and inexperienced. He added that "things are looking better" as a result of the interest of Mr. Munro and the federal government.

Knights Topple Toronto Marlies

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Don't look now but London Knights just might challenge Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series playoffs.

The Knights blasted Toronto Marlboros 4-0 Friday night to extend an unbeaten streak to six games and put them in contending position for the eighth and last playoff spot in the 10-team league.

They now have 35 points and are tied with Oshawa Generals for fourth spot. The Marlboros hold down the eighth spot with 33 points, three ahead of the pursuing Ottawa 67's who scored an important 6-3 win over Kitchener Rangers Friday night.

Other Friday action saw Niagara Falls Flyers edge Peterborough Petes 4-3 and Montreal Junior Canadiens clipping Oshawa 5-1 before 6,505 fans at the Montreal Forum.

In London, Gilles Gilbert handed 40 shots, 20 in a hectic third period, to register his first shutout of the season. Knights also fired 43 shots at Paul Hoganson in the Toronto nets.

Don Maloney, Clyde Simon, Brian Chinnick and Bob Roselle were the London scorers.

At Kitchener, Ottawa goalie Gary Doyle faced a 31-shot barrage from the Rangers who are mired deep in the league cellar. Bill Clement led the 67s with two goals while teammates Jean Potvin, Pierre Jarry, Murray Wilson and Doug Keeler each scored once.

Cam Newton, the Kitchener goalie, handled 45 shots before 3,964 fans.

Before 2,700 fans in Niagara Falls, the hometown Flyers took their narrow win despite a disputed Peterborough goal by Rick MacLeish that cleared the game 20 minutes while Flyers argued with referee Bob Nadin.

The dispute came when the goal judge did not turn on his light on a shot by MacLeish. Nadin had ruled the goal had gone in., Flyers' coach Paul Emms was handed a bench penalty for throwing his hat on the ice in protest.

Doug Brindley led Niagara Falls with two goals, the others going to Phil Roberto and Ross Webley. The other Peterborough goalie, Dave Roy and Craig Ramsey.

At Montreal, the Canadiens got goals from Rejean Houle, Robert Guindon, Richard Martin, Garry Connelly and Arthur Quequedi while outshooting the Generals 37-27.

Dave Iulkkinen scored the Oshawa goal.

Andre Dupont of Montreal opened a cut over the left eye of Terry O'Reilly of the Generals in a third period fight. O'Reilly then tangled with one of the linesmen which earned him a minor, a double major and a game misconduct.

Champs Rate Cheers

TORONTO (CP) — There were cheers for two new champions and tough competition for an old one at the Canadian figure skating championships Friday.

Roger Uumaa, 16, of Sudbury, Ont., and Julie Black, 12, of Sarnia, Ont., took the novice men's and women's titles by unanimous votes of the judges.

In the senior women's class, the tedious compulsory figures almost turned into an upset of defending champion Karen Magnussen, 16, of Vancouver.

She lagged behind in the first five figures and then turned in an outstanding performance on the last one, a 3-bracket. Linda Carbonetto, 19, of Toronto, last year's runner-up, and Cathy Lee Irwin, 16, of Toronto, who placed fourth in the senior singles last year.

Five of the seven judges placed her first after the last figure. After the fifth, Miss Irwin led with Miss Carbonetto second and Miss Magnussen third.

Point standings were 1059 for Miss Magnussen, 1053.2 for Miss Carbonetto and 1035.2 for Miss Irwin.

The close finish means that even small differences in the girls' free skating Monday evening may win—or lose—the crown. Compulsory figures and free skating each count 50 per cent in points towards the championship.

THE KNIGHTS NEEDED THEM!

If saddles hadn't been invented in France in the early Christian era, the bold knights of the Middle Ages could never have staged on their horses, let alone fought. Many of today's products are used by nearly everyone who likes to ride horses.

Once your family may have enjoyed riding, too, but if their new pursuits have left still-good saddles in the back of a closet (perhaps a horse?) behind, sell them with a Belleville Intelligencer Want Ad. It's just good horse sense to dial 962-9171 now!

Guyana Court Frees 18

GEORGETOWN (Reuters)—Eighteen of 28 persons charged with murder in connection with an abortive rebellion in southern Guyana earlier this month were freed in court here Friday.

When the 18 remanded appeared, charged with murdering five policemen and a civilian during the pitched battles, prosecutions director E. A. Ramo said charges against them were being withdrawn.

The secessionist revolt, led by white ranchers and Amerindian (native Indian) cowboys in the remote Rupununi district, was crushed by government troops and police four days after it broke out on Jan. 2.

All the freed prisoners, except British businessman Edward Gibson, 54, were whisked from the courtroom under armed guard and put on a plane for the Rupununi area.

Gibson, ill in a Georgetown hospital, still has to answer a charge of giving false information to police.

The 19 remaining accused will be held without bail until next Friday.

Warrants still are out for the arrest of 29 Rupununi residents on murder charges. The 29 have been granted political asylum in Brazil and Venezuela. Among the 29 are members of the Hart and Melville ranching families described by Prime Minister Forbes Burnham as leaders of the revolt.

'Too Much Acid' Foolish Phrase

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What foods have too much acid? My system has too much acid and I don't know what foods to leave out of my diet. J. F.

This phrase "too much acid," ought to be abolished, liked to many people like "my system has too much acid," it means absolutely nothing. Even when used somewhat more specifically, it usually doesn't mean much.

This column has commented on this before, and for quite a time I was gratified because the "too much acid" phrase largely disappeared from questions. But as the days passed, I suppose new readers and gain new ones — and of late the "acid" notion has been popping up again.

Women feel some sort of trouble with their hair or cosmetics, and beauticians or friends may reply glibly that "there's too much acid in your system."

People have various kinds of stomach distress and jump to the conclusion that it's "too much acid". Sometimes it may be that. A duodenal ulcer may benefit from the use of antacid pills to reduce the acidity of the stomach. Not prevent it entirely but reduce it. The stomach has to contain some acid to digest food.

Again, some other stomach distress can result from too little acid, and the answer is to treat the patient to restore proper acidity.

If the blood genuinely becomes too acid, that's a very serious condition. Just omitting some food or other cannot possible help. The patient needs detailed examination and tests, not some sort of diet gimmick.

Another much misunderstood notion is that acidulous or sour fruits or foods are going to "make the system acid." By and large, they don't. Citrus fruits, for a principal example, leave an alkaline — not an acid — residue after they are digested. That is true of many others.

J. N. doesn't tell me how he or she came to decide that the trouble was "acid in the system," but it's quite likely that it wasn't a medical diagnosis.

What J. N. needs is to pin down exactly what the complaint is and then find the proper cure. Guessing that it is "acid" and giving up some food or other isn't going to do a blessed bit of good.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is hair coloring dangerous? Some say it causes poisoning. Others say it causes health damage. If so, shouldn't women be told? — H. R. F.

Yes, I guess women should be told, but it would be better if they'd stop listening to every whacky old scare story that comes down the pike.

Hair dyes do not cause brain damage. Nor do they cause poisoning, with this exception: some skins are sensitive to certain kinds. Therefore smart beauticians use a patch test to see whether a client is sensitive before applying the various solutions used these days to make women look other than the way they really are.

I've heard these "poisoning" and "brain damage" stories for years but never found a scrap of evidence to support them except —as I just said — skin irritation is sometimes a problem.

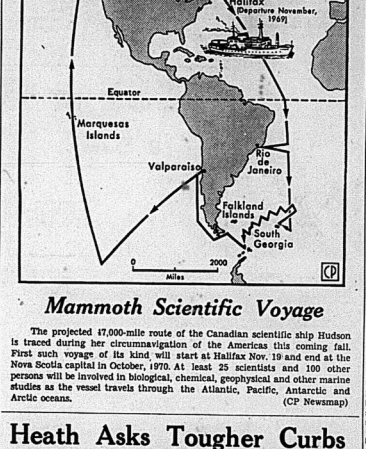
Note to Mrs. T. D.: Chores or St. Vitus dance, resulting from some cases of rheumatic fever, corrects itself spontaneously in a few years. It leaves no after-effects. (The rheumatic fever can, however.)

Belfast Bars Marchers

BELFAST (AP)—Forty-six would-be English civil rights demonstrators arrived in this Northern Ireland capital by boat today and police immediately banned their proposed six-mile march to the Parliament building at nearby Stormont.

The civil rightists, most of them Roman Catholic students at Oxford University, were met at the dock by hundreds of Protestant extremist Rev. Ian Paisley waving banners saying, "Oxford go home."

Paisley's closest associate, Maj. Ronald Bunting, told the students: "Welcome to Northern Ireland. We regret the bad land of friendship. If you brush it aside, we have the other hand to offer."



Meanwhile, Northern Ireland's Unionist party worked to close the split exposed by Friday's surprise resignation of Brian Faulkner, deputy prime minister and commerce minister.

Prime Minister Terence O'Neill promptly moved to install 46-year-old Roy Bradford as commerce minister bu: left the deputy premiership vacant.

Faulkner resigned charging that O'Neill had failed to maintain law and order and had been too soft to unite the Ulsonists behind English demands for a one-man, one-vote rule in local elections.

O'Neill replied that Faulkner's disloyalty undermined the strong government he was demanding.

Actor Queried 35 Hours

PARIS (Reuters) — French movie actor Alain Delon, looking tired and drawn, emerged from police headquarters here early today after 35 hours of almost continuous questioning on the murder of his bodyguard, Stephan Markovic.

What went on during the hours of interrogation remained secret.

After Delon left, a police spokesman told reporters keeping vigil outside the headquarters: "All I can tell you is that this long hearing may not be useless."

Then replies the actor gave us, by making some of the details clearer, will allow us to continue our inquiry and undertake fresh investigations."

Delon was called to police headquarters Thursday afternoon and placed in custody shortly afterward.

Under French law, police either had to release him or take him before an examining magistrate to be charged within 48 hours. His release came well before the deadline.

The body of Markovic, a young Yugoslav, was found on a garbage dump near Versailles early in December.

Since the discovery, French newspapers hinted at scandal involving highly-placed personalities, with talk of parties, possible blackmail and dope peddling.

Delon, and his estranged actress wife, Nathalie, had a series of sessions with police investigating the affair.

Delon was interrogated four times, once for 16 hours. His wife was once questioned for 36 hours. She also should have been interrogated by police while she is filming in Rome and said she could not fly to Paris.

Delon turned up at police headquarters Thursday sniffing and sneezing and complaining he had the flu. Between bouts of interrogation, his doctor gave him injections.

Heath Asks Tougher Curbs On Immigration

WALSALL, England (Reuters) — Edward Heath, Opposition Conservative party leader, urged the Labor government today to clamp even tougher curbs on colored immigration to prevent a flareup in racial tension in Britain.

The Opposition chief demanded new laws immediately to tighten existing checks on the flow of Asian, African and West Indian migrants from Commonwealth nations.

Heath warned in a speech that problems created by the problem were not here of the so-called "dark million" from Britain's former colonial territories could easily become worse.

He said fears and anxieties among Britons about the future influx of colored settlers will grow unless Prime Minister Wilson's government takes urgent action.

Jet Roars to Halt As Man Blocks Runway

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters) — As a huge DC-9 jet thundered down a runway at Sydney airport today, a man ran onto the tarmac, stopped in the centre and waited, silent and still.

The jet bore down on him. Still he stood waking.

The pilot of the Trans-Australia Airlines jet, which was making its take-off run bound for Melbourne, cut the engines and braked.

The airliner came to a halt a few dozen yards from the man.

Airport officials raced onto the runway and grappled with the man, but they hustled him into a truck and took him to a nearby police station, the jet, with its 64 persons aboard, turned round for a new take-off run.

Officials said the man, whose name was not revealed, was believed to have escaped from a Sydney mental hospital several days ago.

Bucher Says Pueblo's Crew Tried to Show Stories False

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — Cmdr. Lloyd Bucher says Pueblo crew members made hundreds of attempts to let people in the United States know that the spying confessions were phoney—but most were intercepted by their North Korean captors and followed by severe beatings.

This testimony by the intelligence ship's skipper was reported by a navy spokesman who briefed reporters on Bucher's five hours of closed-door testimony Friday before a navy court of inquiry.

Capt. Thomas L. Dwyer, chief of staff for intelligence for the commander of U.S. Naval forces in Japan when the Pueblo was seized a year ago, followed Bucher to the stand.

All of Dwyer's and most of Bucher's testimony Friday was described as classified information by the navy. Bucher had spent the previous four days in frequently anguished testimony in public. He was released from further appearances, subject to recall.

Dwyer resumes testifying at closed session today and is to be followed by Capt. Forrest A. Pease and then Rear Admiral Frank L. Johnson. Johnson was commander of U.S. naval forces in Japan and Bucher's superior at the time of the capture. Pease was his chief of staff.

In Washington, Senate Democratic leader Mike Mansfield of Montana and Senator Peter H. Dominick (Rep.-Colo.) talked of committee hearings into all aspects of the Pueblo capture.

Dominick said that the navy is trying to blame Bucher rather than the officials who derailed him the means to destroy the ship's secret equipment. He said he feels the armed services committee, of which he is a member, should have a hearing.

Capt. Vincent Thomas, information officer for the commander of the Pacific Fleet, gave reporters a briefing of Friday's testimony. He declined to elaborate on the classified material, other than to say it concerned the "mission and operation of the Pueblo."

The unclassified material, he said, included Bucher's testimony that the North Koreans discovered "hundreds of signals sent home by the crew to tell the United States their spying confessions were phoney."

He mentioned a now-famous photo, widely distributed by North Korea and supposedly showing contented prisoners who actually were giving a well-known signal of contempt.

"Cmdr. Bucher observed that after publication in the U.S. of the photo which showed crewmen making 'the internationally recognized gesture' the North Koreans reversed all their propaganda films, letters, etc., and discovered hundreds of similar signals" said Thomas.

It was at this juncture that the entire crew received severe beatings.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For Jan 26th

Your birthday today: Receptiveness is the quality which is important to develop. Circumstances bring insight into your own nature, so that next year you will have a simpler philosophy. Romantic activities lessen. Basic issues come to question. Today's natives usually spend much time in contemplation, seldom acting on impulse. Personal interests such as sports tend to be very important.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Put in a full, active Sunday with the conventional observances and social amenities. You may encounter a practical idea for improving your earnings and status.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Usually you get back only what you put forth, but this Sunday offers more than most. Friends are available for reunions. The only catch is that you must stop early to avoid overdoing.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): There are so many things to do and so many places to go it's difficult to settle on a direct path through this promising day. Take time to communicate with kin. Dispose relatives, and ease some odd circumstances, long remembered.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Good cookery, creature comforts are in order once you've done your regular share of the Sunday services. Gather about you some friends to share amusements. A light show would top it all off well.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Cheer up. Sunday is relaxed for the weekend and perhaps longer. Be yourself; make no particular effort to reveal great people around you. You find nearly everybody is quite real eager to meet you half way. Do your part.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Aside from the communal formalities of the day, you have plenty to do attending to your care of your health, meeting new people, and pursuing your romantic ventures in the evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct 22): Leisure time, which you usually don't have, may be available this Sunday. Use it wisely for meditation, prayerful thought. If you have the evening hours free, respond wholeheartedly to an overture of friendship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Family ties still exist for most of us. Renew yours this Sunday informally. Take your mate in hand ahead on the home chores.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Your temptation is to daydream then later be disappointed the fantasy has not come true. Experimentation in foods and drink can bring some unpalatable results; excess is seldom tolerable.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Extremes of taste turn out well along with experimental social customs, whimsical notions of furnishings and decor. Push ahead, using a new agile.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Career plans are covered vigorously all around you: get into the swim and do something about your own. Use your creative talent to find a more explicit way of producing sharper results.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Special windfall comes to your attention. Be ready to move quickly! Disregard your associates — they are not plotting against you, but doing something of childlike simplicity. Project your own schemes and get started collecting on them.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22—Nov. 21): Be sure the contract you sign has all your needs and rights set forth in clear terms. Handle equipment exactly as directed; even then expect some malfunctions on a day like this one. Schemes put forth by people you do not know very well are unrealistic.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Listening to people talk shop, you learn something profitable. Look into any news of opportunity. Spend the evening with an old romance. Dining.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your work finally demands further attention. Let the people who decide the awards know you have put forth special effort to get into the field and that you are in it for keeps.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): You have an unpractised talent for dealing with people on authority. Experiment with your own untested ideas in a few small areas and see how the results turn out. You will almost certainly experience shock.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Anything you say today is apt to be quoted out of context and twisted. Follow your intuition in any riddle — you really need to know what it is.

See how long you can keep your share of the cheer going. Get a bit ahead on the home chores.

'Issue of Individual Conscience'

Backbencher to Break with Government on Abortion Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — A Liberal MP has served notice that he intends to break ranks with his party colleagues and vote against a government bill that would legalize abortion under certain conditions.

The issue involved is one of individual conscience and goes "far beyond party lines or other man-made disciplines," Gordon Sullivan (Lo—Hamilton Mountain) told the Commons Friday.

"For this reason, I am opposing this proposed amendment concerning the law of abortion in its present form and intend to vote against this bill."

The Ontario member spoke as debate on the government's omnibus bill to amend the Criminal Code moved through its second day. The debate resumes Monday.

The bill would make abortion legal in cases where the mother's health or life is endangered through continued pregnancy.

In addition, it would permit homosexual acts between consenting adults; lighten up the law on possession of firearms; legalize lotteries, and make breath tests compulsory in drunk-driving cases.

The proposed Criminal Code amendments drew solid support from other Liberal MPs and from the New Democratic Party.

Gaston Isabelle (L—Hull) said that countries throughout the world have recognized the need for revision of abortion laws, though some have swung too far towards easy abortion. The proposed Canadian law took the right line. It was "permissive, not mandatory."

It recognized that it was up to doctors to decide whether continued pregnancy would endanger the mother's health, but there were in the best position to determine this.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) supported the bill but suggested that it does not go far enough. The government was taking "picayune" steps in reforming the law. Proposed changes were far from radical or revolutionary.

Mr. Sullivan said he does not believe it is morally right to "sacrifice one life to preserve the health of another person."

Health was defined by the World Health Organization as a state of complete physical, mental, emotional and social well-being, and not merely as the absence of disease and physical well-being.

"Surely it must be obvious to all that any doctor should legally adopt this definition of health, and we would then be faced under the present amendment with abortion almost upon request."

It was "unfortunate" that his opposition to the abortion clause meant that he would have to vote against all other clauses in the bill.

The government has refused to break the measure up into separate parts to be disposed of individually.

By adopting this course, said Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon), the government has placed MPs in a position "where they must vote for something that is repugnant to them."

"The question in abortion is simply one of destroying human life, whatever guise you want to give it," the Yukon member stated.

Mr. Nielsen denounced the provision for a compulsory breath analyzer, saying it means that a suspected driver must either take the breath test or be regarded as guilty. This attitude had "no part in legislation passed in a free parliament and a free country."

Bernard Dumont (Creditiste —Frontenac) said no bill on abortion has a place in a just society. "As Christians we cannot accept the theory that life begins only at birth."

Science had shown, on the contrary, that life began at conception.

Mark MacGuigan (L—Windsor-Walkerville) said that because the present abortion law is unenforceable, he has decided to support not only the abortion amendment but the entire bill.

Thousands of abortions are performed each year, some by respected doctors and in hospitals, he said.

Meetings with China

Canada Looking for Site for Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Friday the government is looking for a foreign capital where it can conduct face-to-face meetings with Communist China concerning a possible exchange of diplomatic missions.

He added in a Commons reply to David Lewis, NDP parliamentary leader, that an appropriate place for such meetings would be a capital where Canada and China have diplomatic representatives. No date has been set.

The site could be any number of capitals, including London and Paris but not, of course, Washington.

Mr. Trudeau said no plans have yet been made for an exchange of views with the new Nixon government on the China recognition issue and other matters of mutual concern.

The prime minister said in reply to David MacDonald (PC —Egmont) that he hopes some kind of relations could be continued with Formosa even if Canada and Communist China exchange diplomatic recognition.

Angus MacLean (PC—Malpeque) noted that External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp had stated Tuesday night in a CBC television interview that it was "quite possible" Canada would have to break off relations with Taiwan if it recognized Peking.

Mr. Trudeau made no direct comment on this.

Parliament to Hear Details

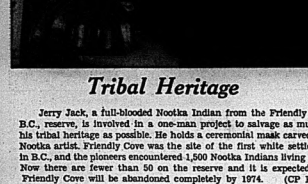
Housing Program Set for Presentation

OTTAWA (CP) — A wide-focus reform program for Canadian housing will be presented to Parliament Monday by the federal inquiry team led by Transport Minister Paul Hellyer.

Recommendations aimed at bringing Canadians a better housing deal—in cost, availability and environment—will be included in a report to be tabled in the Commons.

The report will propose changes in both public and private practices affecting housing in the fields of finance, technology, administration and the constitution.

To be implemented, the various proposals would require action by federal, provincial and municipal governments; public and private business and the building trades.



The seven-member inquiry team, which harvested complaints and ideas across Canada from September to December, is known to have concluded the prime problems of home scarcity and high costs should be tackled by manipulating existing systems rather than by any sharp, new departures such as massive infusions of public money.

To help families with low- and middle-range incomes buy homes, the team wants more flexibility in the system of advancing funds through mortgages, especially the government-insured loans made under the national housing act through the government's Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. or private mortgage companies and banks.

Thus, the recommendations are expected to include proposals for changes in the NHA to provide for mortgages in larger amounts—perhaps up to $35,000, instead of the present $18,000 limit—for repayment periods of up to 40 years in some cases, instead of the present 25-year limit and with more flexible interest rates.

The report was expected to propose free-floating interest rates on NHA mortgages instead of the present system whereby a ceiling rate is fixed quarterly according to the prevailing rate in long-term bond markets.

In the absence of hopes for more public housing funds in current stringent conditions, the report will look to means funds to provide more money for housing in the form of mortgages.

Tribal Heritage

Jerry Jack, a full-blooded Nootka Indian from the Friendly Cove, B.C., reserve, is involved in a one-man project to salvage as much of his tribal heritage as possible. He holds a ceremonial mask carved by a Nootka artist. Friendly Cove was the site of the first white settlement in B.C., and the pioneers encountered 1,500 Nootka Indians living there. Now there are fewer than 50 on the reserve and it is expected that Friendly Cove will be abandoned completely by 1974. (CP Photo)

Latin-American Ties Outlined in Government Report

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposals to strengthen ties between Canada and Latin America in the political, economic and cultural spheres were outlined in a government report tabled Friday in the Commons.

The 36-page report, prepared by a ministerial delegation which visited Latin America last fall, poses the question of whether Canada should apply for early membership in the Organization of American States.

However, government sources have indicated that Canada has no intention of seeking membership in the hemispheric organization at least for the foreseeable future. The OAS embraces the United States and all 20 states of Latin America except Cuba, which was expelled some years ago.

The report will be referred to the Commons external affairs committee and discussed with academics and businessmen in the developing review of Canada's foreign policy.

Award to Airlines Halted

Nixon Looks Closely at Last Minute Decisions by Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Nixon administration is looking closely at some last-minute decisions by President Johnson, but denies it is conducting a case-by-case search through Democratic files.

In one case, Nixon halted awarding new airline routes across the Pacific "for my further review and decision."

White House spokesman Ronald L. Ziegler said the administration also is looking into reports of a multi-million dollar federal grant to a railway made just before a Johnson cabinet official became the line's president.

Nixon is likely to be asked about both items at his first news conference Monday.

In a brief letter released Friday, Nixon ordered the Civil Aeronautics Board to hold up awarding of trans-Pacific air routes granted Dec. 18 to Continental and Braniff airlines, both of which employ former members of the Johnson administration.

The deadline for halting the permits was Friday.

Neither of the lines had been recommended for the routes by a CAB examiner and Ziegler was asked by reporters if numerous published charges of favoritism figured in the decision.

"I would not go beyond the president's letter," Ziegler said.

The federal grant involved $25,200,000 allocated by the department of transportation to the Illinois Central Railroad Dec. 27. Transportation Secretary Alan S. Boyd subsequently was named president of the line.

Drugs in Hospitals

Tighter Control Needed

MISSISSAUGA, Ont. (CP) — A coroner's jury Friday recommended stricter control of drug administration in hospitals after hearing that a woman died after receiving 10 times the prescribed dose of a heart relaxant.

The jury, investigating the Nov. 1 death of Vera Peel, 53, of Streetsville, Ont., said hospital and visual controls between nurse and doctor should be made standard to check a drug dosage before it is given to the patient.

The jury, which attached no blame in the death, was told that Mrs. Peel was admitted to Peel Memorial Hospital by Dr. Michael Dales who ordered 100 milligrams of Lidocaine, a drug to calm the heart, when he noticed an irregular heart beat.

Dr. Dales said the nurse loaded the syringe and he saw it before injection but noticed nothing wrong.

Mrs. Peel went into convulsions and died moments later despite attempts to revive her.

Dr. John Murrow, a Toronto heart specialist, said Mrs. Peel was given 50 cubic centimetres. 10 times the written order of Lidocaine.

The jury ruled she died of asphyxiation.

Police testified that the nurse left Canada for the United Kingdom in mid-November. She was not identified.

Sirhan Jury: Eight Men, Four Women

LOS ANGELES (AP) — People from many walks of life make up the jury for Sirhan Bishara Sirhan's trial on a charge of murdering Senator Robert F. Kennedy.

Is that good? Chief defence lawyer Grant B. Cooper was asked that question Friday by reporters after defence and prosecution agreed on eight men and four women.

"Yes. I wouldn't know what particular type of juror to choose in this case," Cooper said. "So the next best thing is to try to get a cross-section."

Deputy District Attorney David N. Fitts said he was pleased with the jurors: "They look all right to me."

Both prosecution and defence accepted the jury Friday, the ninth day of jury selection.

The jurors, all from Los Angeles or its suburbs, include a plumber, a truck driver's wife, a high school math teacher, two computer systems analysts, five employees of utility firms, a mechanic and a clothier.

Another defence lawyer, Emile Zola Berman of New York, told reporters the jury has "a fair run of minorities," including, he said, four apparent Mexican-Americans, a person of Italian extraction and a Jew.

Berman, himself a Jew, added: "Psychologically, minorities are deeply opposed to capital punishment. Being minorities, they've suffered insults and been looked upon as second-class citizens. I think they could identify with another minority, which Sirhan certainly is."

Judge Herbert V. Walker recessed proceedings until Wednesday.

New Regulations

Snowmobiles Can Operate on Shoulders

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's snowmobile regulations have been changed to allow them to cross and operate on the shoulders of all provincial highways except freeways, the transport department announced Friday.

Under the original legislation, which became effective last Nov. 1, snowmobiles were not allowed to travel along or across any highway except a few listed in specified schedules.

The amendment still prohibits snowmobiles on the travelled portion of the highway—the part used by cars and trucks. Snowmobiles "may travel on the shoulder or right-of-way, provided that they are operated as far away from the roadway as is practicable under the circumstances," the announcement said.

On those highways where they were permitted before, snowmobiles may still be operated on the roadway itself.

Persons operating snowmobiles on highways need no driver's licence, but must be at least 16 and carry liability insurance. They must produce evidence of insurance on request.

Freeways where snowmobiles are still prohibited are Ottawa Queensway, Queen Elizabeth Way, Highway 27 south of Highway 7, and highways 400, 401, 402, 403, 405 and 406.

Israel Irate as Nine Jews Executed in Iraq as Spies

California Home Slides Into Canyon

This three-bedroom, two-bath home in Tujunga, a Los Angeles suburb, is now only a pile of rubble after the sodden earth gave way and it slid into the canyon below. The owners, Ed. James and Bob Burke, got out of the house only 5 minutes before it started to slide. Nine days of rains have caused 86 deaths. (AP Photo)

Baghdad, Basra Hangings Public

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Israelis were shocked and angered today over reports from Baghdad that nine Iraqi Jews were executed for espionage.

Baghdad radio said today 15 Israeli spies, including nine Iraqui Jews, were hanged this morning.

Prime Minister Levi Eshkol was scheduled to appear before Parliament today to make a government statement.

Both Israeli evening newspapers, Maariv and Yediot Ahronot, carried the report of the executions under banner headlines.

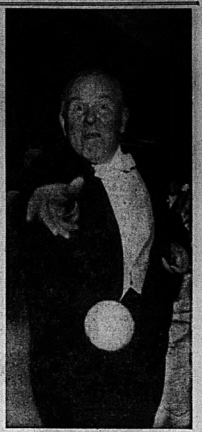
Israeli newspapers described the dawn hangings as cruel murders which followed a show trial on trumped up charges.

A Maariv editorial said the objectives of the Iraqi regime were to persecute and terrorize the remnants of the Jewish community in Iraq and to prepare the ground for trials of opposition leaders and those who headed previous regimes.

"The Iraqis will pay in full the price of this judicial murder," Maariv said.

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Fifteen Iraqis convicted of spying for Israel were hanged in the main squares of Baghdad and Basra at dawn today, Baghdad radio announced. Nine were Jews.

Baghdad radio said 200,000 people, shouting "Death to all traitors" took to the streets in Baghdad as soon as the executions were announced and converged on Liberation Square. Eleven of the bodies were hanging there, each wrapped with a poster bearing the text of his death sentence.



Four others were hanged in Basra, the southern port city.

They were convicted nearly two weeks ago by a four-man court. Their death sentences were approved Sunday night by President Ahmed Hassan El Bakr.

The death sentence of a 16th man was commuted to life imprisonment.

Dunnville Hotel Fire Toll At Least Two, Possibly Sixteen

DUNNVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Firemen and police today started a search through the ice-encrusted ruins of the Victoria Hotel to establish the number of persons killed in a fire Sunday — at least two persons are dead. The remains of the two were discovered in the rubble and police estimated the number of dead could be anywhere from eight to 16.

Police Chief R. G. Rowe said it was not known how many persons were in the three-storey building when the fire broke out at 2:30 a.m.

"It's not just how many were registered, but how many were visitors or guests at the time," the police chief said.

Search operations were suspended at darkness Sunday because of the danger of movement on the ice-covered debris. Firemen pulled down the facade of the 62-year-old building late in the afternoon and there were no walls left standing. The fire raged for 12 hours.

It is known that at least 43 persons were registered in the 50-room hotel Saturday night, but less than half of them have been accounted for.

Four persons are in hospital, one with serious injuries sustained when he leaped from a second-floor window to escape the flames. Names of the injured were not released.

Chief Rowe said it might be impossible to give an accurate count of the death toll before the end of the week.

"We'll have to pull the building down stone by stone."

The fire of undetermined origin also destroyed an adjoining Toronto-Dominion bank building on downtown Chestnut Street. The community of 5,500 is about 35 miles south of Hamilton.

Among those missing were several employees of the Legare Telephone Construction Co. who had been staying at the hotel while making equipment changes.

Traffic Mishaps Claim Four Lives

BRIGHTON — The wife of a well - known local businessman, fatally injured as she was collecting flower donations for a friend's funeral, was one of four people killed in weekend traffic accidents around the Quinte district.

Mrs. Hazel Boyce, died en-route to hospital at Trenton from injuries suffered when she was hit by an automobile during a snowstorm that hit the Quinte district Saturday.

She was struck on Young Street by a car driven by Dennis Davis, 25, of 36 Heber Street, Trenton.

The street was icy and snow may have impaired visibility of both Mrs. Boyce and Davis, said police chief Robert Thomson.

Daniel Conway, 51, of Smithfield, died when his car was struck by a westbound CNR 90-car freight at the Stoney Point Road.

Mr. Conway was returning from disposing garbage at the Smithfield municipal dump, near the level crossing. The impact threw him onto the tracks, carrying his automobile 2,000 feet.

William Glover, 45, of Toronto, was killed instantly Friday night when his car plowed into a highways department sander in the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway at Smithfield overpass.

Meantime, at Bancroft, provincial police today confirmed they had charged Dennis Maxwell, 18, of Bancroft, with careless driving following the death of a teenage girl Friday night.

Catherine Fairbairn, 17, died when, police say, she was thrown from Maxwell's car as it hit a snowbank on Highway 62. She was run over by an oncoming automobile.

Formosa Watchful

Canada and Italy Are Warned Of 'Steps' if China Recognized

TAIPEI (CP-AP) — Nationalist China has promised "further steps," without elaborating, against Italy and Canada if the two countries recognize Communist China.

The foreign office is waiting for replies from Rome and Ottawa to its protest against such moves.

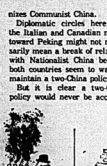
Friday Foreign Minister Pietro Nenni said Italy would establish diplomatic relations with Peking.

Last Wednesday External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Ottawa would soon approach Communist China to discuss similar recognition.

Sharp said that it is "quite possible" Canada would have to break diplomatic relations with the Nationalist Chinese if it recognizes Peking.

But in the Canadian Commons Friday, Prime Minister Trudeau said he hopes Canada could continue relations with Nationalist China if it recognizes Communist China.

Diplomatic circles here said the Italian and Canadian moves toward Peking might not necessarily mean a break of relations with Nationalist China because both countries seem to want to maintain a two-China policy.



But it is clear a two-China policy would never be accepted by either Nationalist or Communist China.

A spokesman of the foreign office said: "We are ready to take further steps against recognition of Peking if Rome and Ottawa fail to give us satisfactory replies."

He declined to say what was planned, but it is generally believed Formosa's first move would be to recall its ambassadors from Rome and Ottawa.

The Chinese Nationalists would not take the initiative to sever relations with any country until after that country has signed an agreement with Peking for diplomatic recognition.

Members of the foreign relations committee of the legislative Yuan—parliament—have urged the foreign office not to take any drastic action until Canadian and Italian intentions are clear. The committee has asked Foreign Minister Wei Tao-Ming to make a full report Tuesday.

Quebec Delegation Welcomed at London

LONDON (CP) — A reception featuring top members of the Canadian community in London has set the scene for a busy round of visits with British government representatives today by Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal and other members of his delegation from Quebec.

Hours after their arrival in London, they were meeting Canadian High Commissioner Charles Ritchie and officials of federal and provincial offices in the British capital at the Sunday night reception given by Quebec's delegate-general, Guy Roberge.

Before leaving Paris for Britain, Cardinal said the Quebec delegation's visit to France had helped strengthen the province.

"I hope the central government will understand that a strong Quebec will contribute (to) establishing a strong Canada," the minister said.

Sunday night, the talk at Roberge's residence in the fashionable Holland Park area seemed buoyantly good-humored after the hurried pace the Quebecers kept during the warm-welcome and top-level discussions in which they were treated by French President de Gaulle.

Officials from such London offices as those of British Columbia and the Canadian government travel bureau listened avidly as the Quebec visitors entertained with stories of the high-speed parade of cars in which they were carried from one Paris appointment to another.

Here their pace is far more relaxed and their appointments with a government officials mostly courtesy calls.

But the visit to the board of trade planned by Industry Minister Jean-Paul Beaudry will be a continuation of the effort he made in Paris to drum up more investment for Quebec's economy.

Scheduled to receive Beaudry was Lord Brown, minister of state at the board.

Ministers of state at the department of education and science and the foreign and Commonwealth office were to talk with Cardinal.

A British government dinner is to be given in the Quebecers' honor tonight.

Cardinal Within Mandate

QUEBEC (CP) — Acting Premier Paul Dozois said Saturday Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal acted within the mandate established by the Quebec government during his dealings with French government authorities at Paris.

Mr. Dozois, Quebec's finance minister, said Mr. Cardinal had left Quebec with a letter of intent expressing agreement "to continue to study the possibility" of a Franco-Quebec satellite for cultural and educational exchanges between France and Quebec.

The finance minister was quoted by reporters Friday as saying that the cabinet had not authorized Mr. Cardinal to sign a satellite agreement.

However, Mr. Dozois said he was first interviewed Friday by reporter Normand Girard of Quebec City Le Soleil about reports from Paris saying that Mr. Cardinal had signed a new agreement including a satellite agreement with France.

Mr. Dozois said:

"I understood the question to be whether Mr. Cardinal was authorized to sign an agreement for the construction and launching of a satellite.

"I answered that he was not authorized to sign such an agreement which would engage the government financially."

January at the Outlet

Snug as the proverbial bugs, two members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment enjoy a hot snack in their 10-man Arctic tent after completing a night patrol assignment Saturday, while the local militia unit underwent winter exercises at The Outlet. Left to right are Cpl. Rick Rolston of Picton and Pte. Harold Elliott of Belleville.

Wearing camouflaged arctic gear, members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment pull their sled through the deep woods of Oulter park on a weekend patrol assignment. The militia unit camped overnight Saturday in the provincial park as part of their winter training.

Hasty Pees Brave Weather

Approximately 40 members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment braved zero temperatures, high winds and snow flurries over the weekend as they went on winter manoeuvres at Point Petre in Prince Edward county.

Of course they were outfitted with Arctic clothing and camping equipment.

The execution of the manoeuvres was divided into five phases which started on Friday at the armoury when the men drew their equipment and received lessons on Arctic training and fighting from Sgt. A. A. Leblanc.

After being quartered overnight in the armoury the men moved out Saturday to the bivouac area and spent the afternoon familiarizing them-selves with the equipment and area.

Saturday night was devoted to patrol exercises. Five groups were sent out to practice techniques and patrolling. Persons picked as the enemy had to stick closely to a preconceived plan so that the proper patrolling techniques could be practiced.

Sunday morning was devoted to advance to contact exercises and radio procedures. A series of situations was presented which commanders at all levels might have to deal with during a war.

Fire orders and quick orders were also practiced along with the proper sequence of battle procedures.

Finally after a busy weekend the men broke camp and cleaned up the bivouac area before leaving. After an inspection by the park warden they returned to the Armoury to hand in equipment.

Dodds 21 Years in Office

Demille Heads Prince Edward Society

PICTON — Walter Demille of Picton was chosen president of Prince Edward County Agricultural Society at the annual meeting, Saturday. He succeeds Harold Bartman of Athol township who has held the office for two years. Charles Culmer, RR 8, Picton stepped up to first vice-president and Tom May, RR 8, Picton, was named second vice-president.

Phil Dodds continues as secretary - treasurer, having occupied the post for 21 years at office. He is currently director of Fairs in Central Ontario.

All living past presidents become honorary presidents under a new plan, they are: Sam Dodds, D. O. Reynolds, Willis Sills, Arthur McCormack, Leland Dorsee, Creighton Lockyer, Chris Lockyer and Harold Bartman.

Directors are Walter Demille, Charles Culmer, Tom May, Creighton Carr, Alex Mann, Alex Miller, Harry Gorsline, Tom Heath, Albert Copp, Howard Seeley, Charles Fletcher and Arthur Saunder.

Associate directors are, Arthur Corfield, Robert May, Alva Collier, Gordon Sheffer, William Wills, Harold Caldwell, Jack Lumley, Gerald Steenburgh, Ted Rutter, Jack H. Ward, David Hurry, Ivan Bell, Laverne Way, Brian Dodds, Les Vickery, Ted Storms, Gordon Callan, Roland Morden, M. J. Blackwood, Murray Leachy, Ralph Richards, Mrs. Charles Fletcher, Mrs. Thera Falconer and Miss Margaret Hayloch.

Also made honorary presidents were George Hess, MP, Norris Whitney, MPP, County Warden George Foster and Mayor H. J. McFarland.

Officers for the women's section will be named at a later meeting.

Mr. Demille is manager of the Legion Hall and well known through his exhibiting of horses at fairs and as the owner and driver of race horses.

Appreciation to retiring president Harold Bartman was voiced by Creighton Lockyer, and the fact he had started as a junior farmer representative sparked a decision to attempt to have more junior members take an active part in staging the fair.

The secretary was commended by Tom May on the detailed reports he had prepared on all aspects of the 1966 fair's operation and felt much of the financial success was due him.

A committee is to meet with county council to discuss proposed improvements to the fair grounds this year. The grounds, and most of the buildings are owned by the county but the Agricultural Society undertakes the responsibility of their maintenance and improvement, with the county paying up to a maximum of $2,000. The society receives $5,036.22 on buildings and grounds during the past year with $2,700 of this cost being covered by government grants, the society thus contributing $936.22.

It was stressed that the fair grounds are maintained, not just for the fair purposes, but as a year-round recreation centre for use by residents and organizations in all parts of Prince Edward. There are facilities for hockey, curling, softball, horse training, field sports and such on the grounds.

All directors agreed, however, that if the fair did continue on a Sunday, midway shows and gambling games would be closed. Midway rides would operate and any events would be between the hours of one p.m. and five p.m.

Fair directors noted that the complaint from the Ministerial Association was the only one received, while many others had expressed appreciation of last year's Sunday fair.

In recent weeks Belleville city council and several delegations of guest from the Belleville agricultural society to hold their fair on Sunday if necessary.

Sunday Operation

Ministers Oppose Fair

PICTON — Prince Edward County fair at Picton will not be held on a Sunday this year unless weather forces cancellation of events during the preceding two days.

If bad weather does force cancellation consideration will be given to extending the fair to Sunday.

The county fair directors decided on the Sunday "emergency" fair date at Saturday's annual meeting following receipt of a letter from the Prince Edward Ministerial association expressing deep concern over any form of entertainment that would violate the sanctity of the Sabbath.

The association felt that fair booths could not be classed under the category of Sunday sports and requested that no future fairs be held on Sunday.

Fair Secretary Phil Dodds was instructed to write the Ministerial Association pointing out that unusual circumstances had caused the fair to be held on Sunday last year and that in the sudden decision no thought had been given to the midway operation.

Last year an overnight flood forced cancellation of the Saturday program and it was decided to hold the horse show and leave exhibits in place on Sunday.

As a result of the Sunday operation the fair benefited to the extent of $1,300 but most directors felt sufficient work was involved in staging the fair three nights and two full days.

As far as directors were concerned there was no criticism of the Sunday fair operation last year. The horse show was the finest ever seen at Picton and the grandstand was filled to capacity for the show for the first time in years.

Fair dates set for 1909 are Thursday night, Sept. 4, and Friday and Saturday, Sept. 5 and 6. Sunday was left open for later action if weather forces cancellation of events to that day.

Trenton Council Will Discuss Several Controversial Issues

TRENTON — Trenton council will be dealing with some controversial issues tonight in what looks like a marathon session.

The Eric Hardy report, the old post office, and the news media will all come under discussion this evening.

A general government committee report will be putting forth recommendations concerning an application made by Councillor Eric Hardy to revamp the town's administration.

The committee, under the chairmanship of Councillor Stanley Ketcheson, has studied a report by Mr. Hardy in a closed session and the councillor has stated that the committee's recommendations will be made public tonight.

And the fate of the old post office should receive adequate discussion as the subject has also been included in three closed sessions and statements will be made public tonight.

Public criticism of closed meetings seems to have given council an impetus towards publishing a format for informing the public of just what is going on at council meetings.

Councillor Paul Tripp had previously labelled closed meetings as "the proper way to do business" and added at the last council meeting the press is informed immediately afterwards on what went on at caucus sessions.

However, this has not been the case.

Closed meetings concerning the Eric Hardy report, the post office, and a caucus meeting two weeks ago — the calibre of which the public has not yet been informed — tend to refute Councillor Tripp's remarks.

As a result, under the heading of resolutions on tonight's agenda, there is an article labelled "press release."

Applicants for Position Interviewed

PICTON (Staff) — The Prince Edward County Board of Education has interviewed four more applicants for the position of director of education.

According to E. A. Sheett, board administrator, one more applicant will be interviewed tonight, bringing to 11 the number of applicants called in for personal talks. There were 19 applications for the position.

Mr. Sheett said appointment of the county director of education was expected within the next two days

Cold Hits Quinte Area As Winter Returns

Winter came winging back to the Quinte district during the weekend — abruptly breaking a two-week basking period of spring-like weather.

The cold snap came in on a flight of snow Saturday that covered the southern end of the district with a two-inch blanket.

Temperatures dropped accordingly, sliding below zero by Sunday night.

Coldest spot in the district was Bancroft where an overnight low of 18 degrees below zero was recorded.

In the Belleville - Trenton zone the mercury dipped to five below.

However, warmer trends are on the way — along with some snow.

Temperatures tonight in the Belleville area should go no lower than five above, rising Tuesday to a high of 30.

About two inches of snow is forecast for tomorrow.

Crash English Course Offered To Newcomers in Quinte Area

A miniature tower of Babel swings into operation every week night at the adult education centre on Wallbridge Crescent.

But instead of being a decisive factor as in the Biblical original, the multitude of languages in the modern counterpart is a unifying force.

Immigrants from as many as 22 linguistic backgrounds are united in a common purpose — the conquest of English.

Most achieve victory in a crash 15-week, total emersion course.

Take the case of the young Portuguese mechanic unable to practice his trade in Canada because of the language barrier. After six months in Canada and graduation from the course he has passed his written and practical examinations for a class A mechanic's papers and found employment.

Motivation is the key to the newcomers' rapid success in learning English agree teachers Mrs. Joan Coyea and Mrs. Enid Peters.

"There is no discipline problem with adult students and no struggle to attract and keep their attention," says Mrs. Peters.

The course is toughest for Greek immigrants. Before they can learn the language they must master the letter of the English alphabet — radically different from the Greek letters.

E. J. Buckley, co-ordinator of the Ontario adult retraining program, supervises the English for new Canadians course.

W. H. Karn of the Canada Manpower Centre arranges the education for the 38 or 39 students enrolled.

Most of the students work and those who don't are potential members of the Canadian labor force. The course is conducted every week night at the Wallbridge Crescent centre between five and 11 p.m.

"The purpose of the course is to put newcomers into the employment picture as soon as possible," says J. R. Staveley of Canada Manpower here. "The sooner they are integrated into community life through the ability to speak and write English the better it is for them and for all citizens of our country."

English classes for immigrants have been held in larger centres for some years but this is only the second year of operation in Belleville.

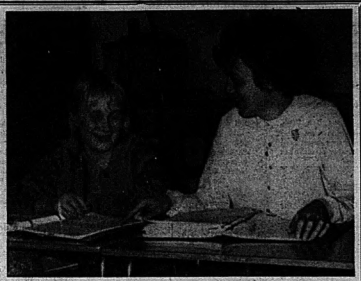
Most of the students enrolled speak two languages, some as many as four, and a few have taken high school English courses in their homelands. Neither of the teachers use any language but English in their classes.

The system used is the audio-lingual method, now beginning to be used in Ontario high schools for teaching French.

Together, teachers and pupils mount a four-pronged attack on each English word and phrase on the course of study.

The students hear, see, write and pronounce each new phrase almost simultaneously.

"This month is January," Mrs. Coyea says as she writes the sentence on the blackboard.



"This month is January," choruses the class in unison as they write the sentence in their notebooks.

"Long, tiresome, repetitive, but effective," Mr. Buckley describes the method with admiration for both teachers and pupils.

"Enriching and rewarding" is the way the teachers see their role.

To an outsider the atmosphere of the classroom seems charged with excitement as each student's face glows with dawning comprehension of a new phrase.

"I have learned as much from my students, each with many different cultural backgrounds as they have learned from me," said Mrs. Coyea.

Family Affair

Mrs. Jarmila Frydl and her 11-year-old daughter Milena compare notes in the English for new Canadians class at the adult education centre. Mr. and Mrs. Frydl arrived in Canada from Czechoslovakia in November and enrolled together in the course. When her father is working evenings at Black Diamond Cheese Company, Milena, a student at St. Michael's Academy, sits in for him and shares her mother's books.

Protection Agreements Renewed

TWEED — The Elzevir Township met for their mid-January meeting, with all members present. Council took the oath of office at this time, administered by the clerk.

Many items of interest were covered by the Reeve and councillors of importance to the municipality. He then asked for the co-operation of the council in administering the township affairs for the next two years.

It was decided that fire protection agreements with Tweed Village and with Madoc Township be renewed; also that Ken Deline be reappointed as caretaker.

Rent for the Township Hall is to be $30 to be paid in advance to the treasurer, and that $10 be allowed for cleaning hall after each rental except where conditions do not warrant cleaning up or after township meetings.

The council objects to having hunting camps or other similar structures erected on any township road allowance and that Department of Lands and Forests be notified of this decision. The following appointments are to be made: Fenceviewers, Livestock Evaluators and Poundkeepers, Arthur Robinson, Ed Reavie, and Frank O'Rourke were named for these appointments.

At this time the ballots from the municipal election were destroyed.

Trend in Milk Processing To Fewer Establishments

The trend toward fewer and larger commercial establishments has been evident for many years in all sectors of the economy but nowhere is it more evident than in the dairy industry.

Between 1961 and 1966 the number of commercial dairy farms in Ontario declined by 19.4 per cent to 21,000 and that of regular milk distributors by 27.3 per cent to 338.

The December dairy report of the Ontario department of agricultural and food, shows that of the 187 dairies processing fluid milk in the province over one half (53.6 per cent) of the processed volume was shared by only 6.4 per cent of the larger dairies while 68 per cent of the smaller dairies accounted for only 13 per cent of the processed milk.

On a regional basis the smaller dairies represent a lower proportion of the total than in any other part of the province.

Larger dairies, on the other hand, are more common around the metropolitan areas, with 12 of the largest dairies located in Toronto and the remaining six in Windsor, Ottawa and London.

Forty three of the 187 dairies processed less than 100,000 pounds of raw milk during September and 85 between 100,000 pounds and 499,999 pounds. Forty seven dairies processed between 500,000 and 3,500,000 pounds, while 12 purchased more than 3,500,000 pounds.

There is also a trend on the part of the smaller dairies to discontinue local processing of milk.

With such dairies milk is transported in bulk to a larger dairy for processing and bottling.

At one time all dairies in Belleville processed their own milk. Now only Reid's Dairy in the city's west end processes and bottles its own milk.

Producers To Meet

Members of the Quinte Maple Association will hold their annual general meeting in Bloomfield at the Baxter Factory Hall on Feb. 4.

Experts will speak on a variety of topics of interest to maple syrup producers. These included economics of operations, classification of sap and syrup, marketing and prices and new technical developments.

The Quinte Maple Association includes the counties of Hastings, Prince Edward, Lennox and Addington and Frontenac.

Picton Society Shows Surplus

PICTON — Prince Edward County Agricultural Society enjoyed a successful year financially, according to secretary - treasurer Phil Dodds.

Receipts during the year had totalled $28,637.07 with expenditures of $24,316.71 for a gain of $2,340.36. There had been a balance of $3,619.08 from 1967, making a balance at the end of the year at $5,960.04. Though grants receivable amount to $1,602.00.

The treasurer pointed out that these would be used in the operation of the 1969 fair. Similar grants had been included in the 1968 report for the previous year.

The society paid a total of $8,536 in prize money, including $1200 for commercial features, $605.25 on junior clubs, $1165.25 on entertainment, $972 on horse races and $900 on general labor.

Prize money included $1811. on horses and $2153 for cattle.

Special mention was made of the ticket selling at gates by Collegiate students under supervision of John Hardon and M. J. Blackwood, and the assistance as horse secretary of Margaret Haylock.

The fair president also expressed appreciation to the many donors of special prizes, the directors and others who contributed hundreds of hours of their free of charge, radio CJBQ for coverage and the county council and town workmen for their support.

The county fair has come from bankruptcy 25 years ago to one of the leading rural fairs in Ontario, being rated Class 'B' and recognized for its outstanding exhibits. In this period, the society has not only revived the fair and used it to promote agriculture, but has made it possible to erect the building now used as an arena and other sport facilities on the grounds. It has an investment of its own on the grounds in excess of $100,000 and is entirely free of debt.

Assembly Held in City

"Love marks all of God's dealings with man," said Arthur Powley, minister of Jehovah's Witnesses from Toronto at the semi-annual district assembly held at Moira Secondary School on the weekend.

Following the theme "God's way is love," Mr. Powley explained that "when God placed Adam and Eve in the garden of Eden, He was not stingy with them. He gave them an abundance of food, plus a beautiful home in which to live."

Mr. Powley accused many of the human race of not appreciating His love.

He predicted that soon the kingdom established by God and under the rulership of Jesus Christ would move against all wickedness and eliminate it completely.

"It will then be instrumental in instituting a paradise on earth in which there will be no sickness, suffering or death.

Industrial Prospects

Belleville's Industrial Commission, for long a target of public dissatisfaction and plagued in recent months by differences within its own membership, as well as with the Mayor and Council, is showing promise of better days ahead.

The Commission moves into 1969 with a completely new membership under Gerald Joyce, city alderman and realtor, and word from Fred Deacon, acting chairman of the 1968 body, that there are prospects of four major industries being established in the city.

According to Mr. Deacon, a total of 400,000 square feet of new industrial development is in various stages of serious negotiations. The prospects include an international food manufacturer, a training school for a national service industry, and a heavy goods industry.

If any, or all, of these industries become a reality it will be a vindication of the work of a body that has been a frequent target of criticism. An industrial commission is only as effective as the business interests it attracts to the community, and it will be the responsibility of the new commission to continue the task of bringing such enterprises to Belleville. Where possible too, so long as it does not jeopardize any negotiations with industrial prospects, the public should be kept informed of the commission's progress.

The establishment of new industry of necessity means the servicing of sites to accommodate them. That means water and other facilities, lack of which has often meant the difference between an industry coming here or not.

Ulster's Crisis

Northern Ireland's civil rights crisis has taken another turn with the resignation of Deputy Premier Brian Faulkner. In a letter to the Prime Minister, Captain Terence O'Neill, he said he was quitting in protest against the Government's decision to set up an Independent commission of inquiry into the recent disturbances in Ulster.

For long one of the most influential members of the Northern Ireland cabinet, Mr. Faulkner's resignation is a blow to the solidarity of the ruling Unionist party, and to the current reformist policies of Captain O'Neill aimed at improving relations between the Protestant majority and Catholic minority. It follows the recent dismissal of Home Affairs Minister William Craig, also regarded as a hard-line Unionist opposed to any radical change of policy.

Although only in his late forties, Mr. Faulkner is a veteran of some 20 years in Ulster politics. He was only 27 when appointed Minister of Home Affairs and at the time was the youngest to hold cabinet rank in Britain.

Prime Minister O'Neill meanwhile, has vigorously defended his policies. Along with recent events, however, the Commerce minister's resignation represents a loss of confidence in the Government, and indications are there may be a general election.

January Days

The weather is playing strange tricks these days. It is a dubious distinction late in January to have the temperature soar to 40 degrees or so. This is the kind of weather that breeds colds, flu and sundry other ailments of that delicate organism, the human body. Now, however, we have the real thing again, with low temperatures, snow and all. From spring back to winter, just like that.

Of course a cold, that every other old-fashioned malady would not be a cold today without being dressed up in the terminology of the age. Nowadays it is referred to in terms of "the upper respiratory tract."

Whatever the weather though, and whatever the terminology, a cold has to run its course. We are not great believers in taking the ailment lying down, unless it is of the full-blown influenza variety that brooks no argument and one is compelled to take to one's bed.

If a person is suffering from no worse than a common cold, then fresh air and exercise are probably as good a remedy as any. Fix on the other hand if something with which the patient should not trifle. Bed, aspirin and plenty of liquids are the remedies in this instance.

Flu seems to hit older people hardest, but no one, whatever their age, is immune. Recently, a 28-year-old woman died in Toronto from complications arising from flu. And in Napanee the death of a 14-year-old girl from similar causes has been reported.

Starvation Still Rife

'Biafra Lobby' Gains Strength in U.S.

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — With a belated but sudden thrust, American public opinion is hammering away at the government to do something about Biafra. But not too much.

The fact is that with Vietnam still on its hands the new Nixon administration is no more likely to over-react on Biafra than the former Johnson administration.

But the late-blooming "Biafra lobby" is an amazing specimen in American politics in that it has brought together extremists of the right and left, northerners and southerners, blacks and whites in the cry for relief for food-short Biafrans.

There's no doubt that the lobby's letter-writing campaign influenced many of the 53 senators who this week signed a resolution calling on President Nixon to provide more aid and aircraft for the starving people caught in the Nigerian civil war. Nixon responded with nothing more concrete than a call for an urgent and comprehensive study of the situation.

Aside from such moral victories, the lobby's actual effect so far has been small.

It earlier put pressure on the state department until the department approved the sale of low-cost transport planes to the international relief agencies. Although this was hailed as a victory, in fact a political dispute between the International Red Cross and Equatorial Guinea, base of the Red Cross airlift, blocked the sale—and the supplies to Biafra.

Perhaps, as The Washington Post said in a recent editorial, the reason the lobby has not been more successful is "the refusal of so many well-meaning people to accept the political implications of their humanitarianism."

The president State Secretary William Rogers and the senators who signed the Biafra resolution are all well aware that the U.S. cannot step up relief assistance without acknowledging that such assistance also helps the Biafrans' political cause.

For many the two are inseparables. To feed the Biafrans is to encourage Biafra's rebellion against Nigeria, a country with which the U.S. has diplomatic relations.

Greenland Witnesses 'Shoot-Out'

Windsor Star

It's customary to think of Greenland as a place where men, and probably women, too, keep their cool. But climate apparently is not necessarily linked to coolheadedness, so we had the baddest that occurred recently in that far off land.

Four gunmen terrorized a small community of the Arctic Circle.

That they got their comeuppance from the populace, specifically from the settlement's three policemen, shows that even there right will triumph, given a chance.

One is tempted to hope as much for Montreal, Detroit and other crime-plagued spots. Perhaps, though, the secret of success really lies in the tactics Greenland applied. Not long after firemen turned their hoses on the intruders they surrendered.

Mixed Blessing

Detroit News

The minikirt as a safety device?

Yes, asserts a traffic expert in Bournemouth, England.

Maj. Fred Cook says the lights of automobiles easily pick out the knees of girls in minuskirts. He adds that fluorescent garters would help even more to save the lives of pedestrians.

So much for the minikirted, fluorescent-gartered female pedestrian who is crossing in front of a car. But look at it from another angle, Major. Supposing the walking along the dark walk with those legs and garters flashing in the dark. What happens then to auto traffic as drivers glance away from the street to look at the passing show?

Obviously, advantages are cancelled out by disadvantages.

As we see it, the minikirt is sufficient reason for its own existence. Major. You need not make up frail excuses.

Ocean Exploration

Victoria Daily Colonist

A greatly expanded program of ocean science and technology recommended for the United States by a special presidential commission could be a costly undertaking. The program would include new explorations for minerals and other undersea riches, greater efforts to help fishermen, curbing of ocean pollution and maintenance of coastal quality, and further tapping of the food resources of the sea for the hungry peoples of the world. All of this, according to the commission, would cost $10 billion by 1980 alone, double the rate of present U.S. outlays in these fields.

The proposals, a report from Washington suggests, could be a "hot potato" for the new Nixon administration. There indeed is debate on whether President-elect Nixon will have much or any interest for new expenditures on the domestic front even if the fighting in Vietnam draws to an end.

It must be a consideration, however, that the onlooking world sees the United States spending billions on exploring the barren moon, and potentially more billions on an anti-missile system which advances the nuclear race with Russia.

"The alternative to war making and to spacemanship is to explore the sea and to develop its potential resources," Dr. Arnold Toynbee wrote in an article recently. It is undoubtedly a more fruitful alternative, and this fact must have its weight with the new president.

Lunch Among the Muscovites

Scott Young in
The Globe and Mail

On this Sunday afternoon in Moscow when lunchtime seemed to have come and gone without anyone paying attention, I reacted with alacrity when three of our Russian friends suddenly went into a conference and emerged from it to have their spokesman ask, "Would you like to eat at a restaurant of the type that Muscovites themselves use?"

In a few minutes we were on our way. I could see a number on the place when we arrived, but it was about No. 41 in Old Arbat St., and was a state-operated cafe specializing in Georgian food and called the Orion. The door was almost indistinguishable from others in a long unbroken row in a fairly old district.

The restaurant seated 50 or 55 at hardtopped tables set with padded chairs.

A small jazz band was bashing away on saxophone, bass fiddle, drums and an electric piano.

The musicians were young and intense. They played with their backs to the window in precisely the space that would be taken up (as it was later) by a table for four. Most of the music was American. We seemed to be the only non-Muscovites. Vodka and the strong but mild tasting Georgian wine were flowing freely, as well as bottled beer. In one corner a young man with a rugged face was almost asleep; it looked to be from drink. This was a big evening for the establishment and attractive Oriental girl with him obviously deserved a better. She sat in a sleepy state after dinner on a lazy afternoon.

All the other women in the place had their hair done and that women have when they want to look attractive: a gay and well-coiffured look. And woman, Moscow-style, is a credit to her sex. One waitress was in her twenties, dressed in a short, black dress with black stockings or pants hose and a little white pinafore. Two others were more the Mother Russia type, older. A bent old lady with a kerchief on her hair moseyed around and picked up plates as the band surrendered the piece called Perdido. Everyone spoke loudly above the din and the ruddy-faced man in the corner woke up long enough to clink glasses with his girl.

Shortly after, they left and I noticed as their plates were removed that neither had touched his shashlik, the Russian specialty of meat cooked on a spit. I thought this a great pity, but I guess she wanted to get him home before he dropped off altogether.

New York—a City of Fear

A View of New York —
By Joyce Carter in
The Globe and Mail

This city is tearing itself and its people apart. Everywhere you walk—and you are warned not to walk much — there is panic at the idea of what would happen if the ghetto rebellion coalesced, or all the students rioted, or all the muggers came out the same night.

Every couple of blocks you see another person—sometimes a child — with a police dog on a short, brutal chain. And your cabbie will tell you — with as much humor as he can muster — that he knows the mandatory plexiglass screen between him and you won't stop a bullet, but it might deter a passenger from grabbing his wallet.

The New York accent grows shriller every year. And the stranger — to the manager hustling rises. I saw a wretched old panhandler on the street. Curtly rejected by an expensively-tailored young man, he spat in his face. The young man spat back. As if it was the most natural thing under heaven, and they walked past each other wordlessly.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Ottawa became the capital of Canada 111 years ago today—in 1858. Four other cities—Quebec, Montreal, Kingston and Toronto—had been in the running but Queen Victoria chose Ottawa because of its location, away from the U.S.-Canadian border and at the time safe from attack.

1878 — Inventor Thomas Edison was granted a patent for his incandescent lamp.

1938 — The Honeymoon Bridge at Niagara Falls collapsed before being damaged by an ice jam.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—officials at Algiers announced the first German counter-attack against the new Allied beachhead in Italy had been thrown back; British planes attacked 12 ships in the Aegean Sea, sinking three of them; RAF bombers attacked northern France without loss.

Number of Murders Shows Increase Since Death Penalty Lifted

Kingston Whig-Standard

Having decided on a five-year trial of limited abolition of the death penalty, this country is now in the process of assessing the first results of its decision.

The statistics of the first six months of this trial are not encouraging. They show that the murder rate, and the number of killings during other criminal acts, have increased.

The figures which told this story were released by an NDP Member of Parliament, Barry Mather, one of the early advocates of a trial period of abolition of the death penalty. After a long Parliamentary battle, legislation was passed on December 29, 1967, abolishing the death penalty for all killings, except those of police and prison guards, until December 29, 1972.

At Mr. Mather's request the Dominion Bureau of Statistics furnished figures providing one criterion by which the experiment may be judged. The number of murders was 181 for the first six months, compared with 122 in the first six months of 1967.

The DBS figures show that the murder rate rose to .008 per 1,000 of population and seven and over, from .007. There was an increase in the number of suspects in the 20-30 age group. The number of victims in the age group 50 or over and under 20 also rose.

As Mr. Mather pointed out, the fact that these figures cover such a short period deprives them of any special significance in assessing the efficacy of the abolition of capital punishment. The important thing, according to Mr. Mather, is to follow the statistics carefully during the trial period. If they show an increase in the number of cases and the rate, then the experiment should be reconsidered, according to Mr. Mather's reasoning.

Of course there are many who will not consider the evidence in the issue of capital punishment judging the matter on entirely different grounds. If it should happen that the figures continue to show an increase in murders after the end of the five-year period we can expect the opening of this emotionally-loaded matter, with little hope of a more satisfactory outcome.

Indian-Eskimo Leaders To the Fore in Alaska

Tundra Times

An editorial from a newspaper owned, controlled and edited by Alaska Indians, Eskimos and Aleuts.

Our governments, both national and state, should by now begin to realize that having native leaders, or those the leaders pick for assistance, is of assistance at important conferences can be necessary forces to arrive at well aimed goals in solutions of problems peculiar to the native people of Alaska.

The demonstration of this was dramatically brought out last week in Sitka when the Alaska congressional delegation held a meeting on native education in Alaska.

Here what had seemed to be fuzzy-footing around on the part of the national and state officials on getting around to implementing the regional high school concept in the state was forcefully and surprisingly brought to a head at the two-day meeting at which time it was decided that something will be done in getting off the ground at last toward realization of the regional high school system.

As a general rule, the native leaders enter into conference with well-defined goals and directions. The problems that plague the native people are well known to them. They should know because many of them have experienced those problems themselves and this knowledge has proved to be an invaluable asset in seeking solutions.

This fact should be recognized once and for all that the best approach in the complex native shortcomings is to call for full participation of their leaders in the exchange of ideas for solutions.

The native people of Alaska have come to find out that detached information, even by so-called experts in Washington and Juneau, falls short in delving into the core of problems. This, we believe, has been one big reason why solutions fall short no matter how well meant they might have been.

This fault, or shortcoming, should be unequivocally and succinctly recognized by the national government and the state government. Proceeding with full consultation of native leadership on the particular native problems can help, by far, to hasten solutions to knotty and perplexing native situations.

Increase in Terrorist Action Charged by South Vietnam Note

SAIGON (CP) — South Vietnam today claimed that North Vietnam ordered guerrilla troops to step up terrorist activities in Saigon to help the political demands of the Paris peace talks.

In a note to the International Control Commission the foreign ministry said North Vietnam ordered an increase in terrorist activities because of the failure of a guerrilla winter spring offensive.

The note said the guerrillas were told "to step up their terrorists and rebellious activities in Saigon and in various South Vietnamese provinces in order to meet the political demands of the Paris talks."

The note also charged that North Vietnamese regular and auxiliary forces in South Vietnam killed 241 civilians, injured 859 more and kidnapped 124 others in December, 1968.

The ICC, comprising Canada, India and Poland, was set up to supervise the 1954 Geneva agreement ending the Indochina war.

Saigon police arrested two women believed to be members of a Viet Cong group planning to blow up a power station. Police sources said a bomb which was to have been used in the attack was seized.

North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops launched a dozen attacks on Southern Allied bases and other installations during the weekend, bearing out the predictions of U.S. military analysts that the Communist command would increase its operations to boost its negotiating position in Paris while the new administration is still settling down in Washington.

In three battles northwest and south of Saigon, U.S. and South Vietnamese forces reported killing 177, U.S. losses were nine men killed and South Vietnamese casualties were one dead.

A South Vietnamese soldier was killed Sunday when a rocket grenade was fired into a Saigon civil defence office. There were ground assaults on the U.S. air base and a South Vietnamese police station in Phan Rang on the South central coast, and two rocket and mortar attacks on an American infantry base 40 miles northwest of Saigon. Southern Allied casualties were reported light.

Vatican Denies Persistent Report Bishops Have Refused Papal Red Hats

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Reports of a postponed consistory, the arrest of two American priests and a proposal for a schism in Holland underlined the continuing ferment in the Roman Catholic Church.

The Vatican's official spokesman called it "stupid," but reports persisted Sunday that Pope Paul postponed a winter consistory after two or three bishops turned down a cardinal's red hat because they differed with his policies.

The reports, carried in some French and Italian newspapers, said the issue most likely to cause any churchman to reject elevation to the College of Cardinals would be birth control. A wave of dissent has rocked the church since Pope Paul published his encyclical last July reaffirming the church's ban on mechanical and chemical contraceptive devices.

"There is no truth to this," said the Rt. Rev. Fausto Vallaine, the Vatican's official spokesman.

But a Vatican source said a consistory to fill vacancies in the College of Cardinals, which now is down to 102 members, definitely was in the making in December and had been expected to be called this month. It now is expected between Easter and June, the source said.

One account said Pope Paul changed his mind after 40 well-known theologians published a request for changes in the conservative Vatican Curia, the central administration of the church.

Pope Paul has called two consistories in his 5½-year reign, the last on June 26, 1967. It increased the number of cardinals to a record 118.

Among the leading candidates for red hats now are three arch bishops whose posts are normally filled by cardinals—Most Rev. Paul Gregoire of Montreal, Most Rev. Terence Cooke of New York and Most Rev. Francois Marty of Paris.

In Cleveland, Ohio, two priests were arrested Sunday and suspended from clerical duties after they led a procession up an aisle of St. John's Roman Catholic Cathedral and tried to conduct an unauthorized mass. The priests, who were charged with trespassing, were Rev. Robert T. Begin, 30, the nephew of Bishop Floyd Begin of Oakland, Calif., and Rev. Bernard L. Meyer, 31. Father Meyer was carried out of the church by police.

In Amsterdam, four Jesuit priests assigned to work among students asked their 1,200 parishioners Sunday if they are prepared to break with the Vatican over the requirement for celibacy among priests. The four set a March deadline for the Dutch students to decide whether to set up a dissident organization if the celibacy rule is not relaxed.

One of the four priests is Rev. Jos Vrijbarg, who announced his decision to marry last year, although he has never publicly named the girl or set a date. Ninety per cent of the Amsterdam student parish have voted to maintain him as pastor after his marriage, conceding that he would only preach and not celebrate mass.

But Rt. Rev. Theo Zwartkruis, bishop of Haarlem, refused the compromise, saying it would conflict with the celibacy rule.

Father Vrijbarg's three supporters are Rev. Jan van Kilsdonk, an outspoken man who in 1965 was summoned to the Vatican to explain his practices in Eucharist services in the parish Rev. Ven der Stap and Rev. Huub Oosterbuis.

Father Van Kilsdong said he and his colleagues want to remain in the Jesuit order and would be prepared to maintain contacts with the Dutch hierarchy if the dissident group is formed.

Sunday night Bishop Zwartkruis cautioned the four rebellious priests that breaking with the church of Rome meant "surrendering something irreplaceable, the communion with the other local churches."

"One local church cannot do without the other," he said in a television speech.

Labor Policy Needed Construction Industry Told

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's construction industry was told Monday to get its labor relations in order or face the prospect of losing work.

R. J. Wismer, superintendent of construction for Algoma Steel Corp. Ltd. of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., told the Canadian Construction Association's 51st annual meeting that a "gradual paralysis" already is creeping over the industrial scene.

He warned that some companies already are starting to take over new construction work, using workers who are outside the building trades unions, in an effort to keep costs down.

Among the problems facing the construction industry in its labor relations are:

—Demands for "unreasonably high wages, fringes and overtime."

—Costly delays resulting from illegal strikes over a variety of issues.

—Increasingly poor productivity and poor workmanship and unqualified workers supplied by the unions.

—Artificial restrictions in union agreements.

He suggested the industry adopt a unified labor relations policy, covering as much of the country as possible.

Council of Women Urges Government to Appoint an Ombudsman

OTTAWA (CP) — The National Council of Women of Canada has urged the federal government to appoint an ombudsman.

The resolution was contained in the council's annual brief to the government, represented today. The council includes about 1,800 organizations and claims to represent about 700,000 persons from all provinces.

Also high on the list of new resolutions — a member presented in previous years have been reiterated — are suggestions for tax reforms.

The council says the married woman's position in the tax system should be carefully re-examined before a family unit for taxation purposes becomes an integral part of the country's taxation structure.

-The family unit for taxation purposes, it explains, would combine the earnings of husband and wife and require them to pay tax on the aggregated income. "In most cases this would mean that a married woman would be paying a higher tax than a single woman would on the same income."

The family unit idea reflected the attitude which regarded a married woman's work as peripheral and not in the same category as work performed by other members of society.

"Such tax disincentives would be an undesirable infringement of the human right to employment without discrimination."

The council also wants the government to increase to $2,500 the income tax exemption for all citizens 65 years of age or older.

(Under the present system, persons aged 70 years or over in 1969 receive a $500 exemption in addition to the regulation $1,000 exemption for all persons, a spokesman for the national revenue department said. A person 65 years old or older but not 70 in 1968 who did not receive the old age security pension could claim the $500 exemption. The 1968 pension cut-off was age 67.).

The council says that the budget speech of Oct. 22, 1968, which eliminated estate taxes on estates left outright to one spouse from the other makes "a gesture" towards implementing previous council submissions.

But it is not happy with the reduced exemption on estates. "The whole policy of taxing estates seems to us a tax on thrift." The exemption had to be greater than $30,000 and a re-examination of estate tax revenues had to be undertaken.

"Although gifts of any amount may now pass between husband and wife free of gift tax," the council says in its brief, "we regret that the income from such gifts must remain in the hands of the giver. This seems a needless complication."

In another area, regulations under the Adult Occupational Training Act had to be expanded to make special provision for the sole parent by allowing part-time or flexible study schedules and making further assistance available for the necessary child care.

The council also made a bid for advanced information of approaching vacancies on government boards and commissions so that it could prepare a roster of "qualified women of experience willing to serve" for consideration of the appointing body. It wants to ensure that competent women are not overlooked.

More staff, funds and facilities had to be provided the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in order that a greater amount information be gathered on working women and those preparing for employment.

The council urged the government to establish a broad research program to find solutions to air pollution problems and indicated its support for Canada's role in United Nation's peacekeeping operations.

Sales Good Following Fashion Showings

ROME (AP) — After a lively week of spring and summer fashion showings, Italian designers report lively sales too. Many buyers are still in town working over their orders before leaving for the Paris collections.

Sales are more than satisfying since this is the so-called "low season" for couture. Fall-winter leaves are always more important and attract more attention.

Valentino is top favorite among the buyers.

At Mila Schon, it had been reported, erroneously, that buyers had to guarantee orders to the value of $10,000 before being allowed to see the collection.

"I certainly heard nothing about it," said Molly Ballantyne of Ogilvy's, the Canadian fashion store, a long-time buyer of Schon clothes.

Buyers admit though that several Schon styles are for the private customers only.

Patrick de Barentzen has decided he will no longer sell his original models for reproduction by a store's workroom.

Accordingly - he has severed his contract with Oberlech's of New York who up till now have bought his clothes to copy them line-by-line for the store's own import show.

In its place, de Barentzen has signed up to sell to Bergdorf Goodman in the New York area. He has made the same arrangement with Marshall Field in Chicago, and Ogilvy's in Montreal.

The important difference is that le Barentzen will make all the copies in Rome and ship them out to the stores.

Eastminster U.C.W. Hear Talk on "Magic Circle"

Fred Deacon was guest speaker at the January meeting of the Eastminster U.C.W. and spoke on the topic "Magic Circle".

Although the first presentation on the 'Magic Circle' was made two years ago, for the majority of the ladies present this was the first time they had viewed the slides and heard, at first hand, the proposed re-routing and renovations needed to make the 'Magic Circle' come true. Since women do the greater percentage of purchasing, they are vitally interested in the downtown shopping area, and in bringing into that area new and larger stores. The availability of parking areas and the ease with which one can make use of these areas is another concern of the busy homemaker of today, and the proposed scheme seems to have met this problem.

Mr. Deacon informed the women present that due to fire loss and little rebuilding in the downtown area, assessment was down; therefore making a considerable loss in tax dollars; however, rebuilding and encouraging new firms to build would put more tax dollars into the city treasury and lighten the homeowner's tax bill. A few years ago the Belleville Chamber of Commerce became worried about this situation, and with the help of others "The Magic Circle" was put on film and paper.

Mrs. Mildred Graham introduced Mr. Deacon and Mrs. Trudy Shug thanked him for coming and allowing the women to see and hear this comprehensive downtown study.

The president, Mrs. Evelyn Throop opened the business portion of the meeting and led a lively discussion on renovations to the existing kitchens.

Mrs. Lois Clarke and Mrs. Mildred Graham led the devotions on the theme "A Word Spoken in Due Season".

The "Blue" group served refreshments.

Centenarian Tends to Be A Swinger

OTTAWA (CP) — When the capital's cheeriest centenarian received a telegram recently on her 100th birthday from Prime Minister Trudeau she chuckled and said: "He's lively."

Mrs. Mary Taylor should be a good judge. Tending to be something of a swinger herself she lived it up at a family party New Year's Eve until 4 a.m.

One of the reasons she is so active is her belief that "hard work never hurt anyone."

The former Mary Ann Walker was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, where she once had her own dressmaking business and came to live with three daughters in Canada in 1952.

Ann Landers

School Love Affair Need Not Be Told

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Must a girl pay the rest of her life for a love affair she had in high school? I loved Rod and he loved me. I gave myself to him willingly and happily when I was 17. He didn't talk me into it. I wanted to belong to him completely. The gift of my virginity was the ultimate proof.

We grew apart when Rod went to Notre Dame and I went to the University of Michigan. Four years have passed and Rod is now married to another girl. I am engaged to marry a very fine young man.

Yesterday Rod came to me and asked if I had told my fiance about us. I said, "Of course not." He replied, "Well, I've told Eunice and I insist that you tell Eugene. Otherwise your life together will be based on a lie."

Ann, I am not a tramp and I never was. I know now I made a big mistake. But I don't want to tell my fiance. Do you feel I am being dishonest? Eugene and I started to be intimate a few months ago. He never asked me if there had been others and I never told him. Please tell me what to do. — BAMBI.

DEAR BAMBI: If Notre Dame Big Mouth wanted to bare his soul to Eunice, fine and dandy, but it was mighty rotten of him to include you in his "True Confessions."

Keep quiet. People who marry should be willing to accept one another as they are. Case histories are for physicians and biographies are for historians.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The girls I date always compliment me on my promptness. They say they appreciate it, but they are never on time. What's the matter with people anyway?

I've always prided myself on being prompt. If I'm unexpectedly detained and it appears that I'm going to be late for an appointment, I phone and say so. This is simple courtesy — plain, everyday manners. Why don't people give me the same consideration? I spend half my time waiting. It's maddening.

Tell me, Ann, am I the only prompt person left in the world? — TIME ON MY HANDS.

DEAR TIME: No. There's me.

Unfortunately I can offer no solution to this dilemma because it's awfully hard to remodel your friends according to your own specifications.

One protection against "The Late, Late Show" is to make arrangements whenever possible to have your friends come to you. In that way you can stay busy until they arrive. When picking up a tardy girl friend for a date, I suggest you take along some reading material and relax and enjoy it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 16-year-old girl with kissing problems.

Al's kisses are so heavenly they are like you see in the movies. The trouble is he is a sort of a rat. Cal is a great person, considerate and sweet, but kisses like my 56-year-old uncle. Hal is the grooviest, but his kisses are like a vacuum cleaner. Analyze, this, please, one at a time. I'm — ZONKED.

DEAR Z: Drop Al. Train Cal. Turn the vacuum cleaner down to low.

All the Classics for Only Ten Cents

By DORIS CLARK

Ten cents for a library card and the world's classics become yours! — At least long enough to know whether you want to buy one.

What's a party, make a pudding, decorate a room, cut a rug? Get a book about it.

What's more, public libraries give much thought to keeping up to date on what's available. If you know of a new theme that has been written up, and it comes well recommended, your librarian will consider your request to put it on the shelves.

If you have eyes to read with, you can grow in stature and love of life.

Dear Doris: For a number of years I have been pulling out my hair and cheeking it. I am a teacher, 23 years of age. I stop sometimes but the habit always comes back.

I have a tendency to be quite nervous and I used to twitch a lot. At times I feel rejected and inferior, although I am quite attractive and have friends easily.

I hear other people do this and eventually stop, but why don't I stop? — Bewildered About Many Things.

Dear Bewildered: The problems in the part of your letter not included here, suggest some of the reasons for hair chewing. It is similar to nail biting, head banging, finger tapping. It is a tension-releaser, albeit i distasteful one.

The tensions come from the boy friend problem, and your discontent with yourself. Some people get rid of the tightness with a hammer — on wood. Or with a racket on a tennis court. Or with fingers on a piano.

Better choose your own kind of recreation and go at it with a will. Even when you think you are exhausted, you can get relaxation and a second wind by bestirring your physical self. When you do find the sport or hobby that is right for you, your hair will stay where it ought to without any conscious thought on your part.

Dear Doris: Lately, catering to a Christmas social party, we had some members argue over how to set the tables. The argument was where you put the teaspoon at a tea when you set the tables with only cup an' saucer and tea plate. Some say it goes on the saucer. I say no; that at all settings it should be on the napkin on the plate.

So we would like your good guidance on setting up for a bridal banquet or other banquet, or for social teas. This would settle it without hurting any fellow members. — Not Sure.

Dear Not Sure: There's more than one way to set up for tea. If this is a sit-down-at-the-table tea or dinner, the napkin may go at left of plate with teaspoon at extreme right of place setting. Or it may be on the saucer with the cup.

If tea is a stand-up, walk-around affair, tea service is at one end of buffet table, with the pourer. Each tea tray is surrounded with cups on their saucers, and a small teaspoon on the right of each saucer.

When setting up for a banquet, dinner fork goes on far left of plate, with salad fork or dessert fork on the right of the dinner fork. Knife is to right of plate, with dessert spoon to its right, then soup spoon, if any.

Twiggy Wears 'Wet Look'

LONDON (AP) — Legs that look all wet are the latest look, were launched by Twiggy at the Ritz Hotel

Her shiny, "wet look" tights come in purple and green, as well as the traditional colors.

The slim British model said: "I got a lot of my ideas from them in America. They have such gorgeous colors there."

The tights, to be put on the market in March for just under $2.60, are really a two-in one garment, with elastic panty-girdle top. Some have flowers up the side or a retil-point stripe. Most are plain.

Bare-body belts — gold plated chains centred with a pearl, and to be worn next to the skin with bare midriff fashions, on the beach with bikinis, or simply under your clothes — are the brainstorm of Paris House, the costume jewellers. The house also showed boot bracelets, to be worn over boots at the ankle, at a spring and summer show.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Sloppy Joes Easy to Prepare

By MARY MOORE

Appetites and ages figure strongly in this recipe for Sloppy Joes. I think it would be safe to say they will serve teen-age people generously.

Here's the story: Rashly I asked my Junior Hi-C pupils if they would like to present a play. Everybody wanted to be in it. Norman Backhouse of the Players' Guild generously offered to direct our fifteen-year-olds and his wife Tricia to be make-up artist. We practised for two months and finally "the smash Broadway hit 'Video Christmas'" was presented to thundering applause to about two hundred mothers, fathers, aunts, uncles, brothers and sisters.

Now if you have a play you have to have a "cast party" afterwards. So while the cast washed the glasses leftover from selling cider during intermission I doled out Sloppy Joes. They are easy to prepare and young cooks can do the whole job for a party for their friends.

SLOPPY JOES (serves 24 generously)

3 lbs. ground chuck beef
1 two-third cups bread crumbs (2½ slices)
1½ teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon oregano
¼ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
½ teaspoon M.S.G.
1 onion cube
1 cup boiling water
1¼ cups cold water
1½ cups ground (or finely chopped) celery
1 ground (or finely chopped) green pepper
¾ cup ground (or finely chopped) onion three 6-oz. cans tomato paste
½ cup cold water (second amount to rinse out tomato paste cans)
two-thirds cup catsup
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
24 hamburg buns, split

To simplify preparation I measured all ingredients in order given into an outsized baking dish. I used my 10" diameter x 4½" deep corningware buffet server. This was big enough to give me room to mix all ingredients by hand thoroughly. I wiped down the sides, covered it tightly with foil and baked it at 400 deg. Fahr. 1¼ hours. It was then ready to scoop onto split hamburg buns and serve. But I chilled mine overnight and took it to the church on the night of the play and heated it in the church kitchen oven at 200 deg. Fahr. while the play was in progress. Some of our young people ate them out of their hands protected by a napkin, others ate them from plates with a fork. Note to those on no or low fat diets: please notice that these Sloppy Joes call for no fat at all. The buns do not require buttering.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I thought I was giving Terry a dog of cough medicine, but I was so sleepy, I picked the wrong bottle out of the medicine cabinet. It's lucky it was nothing worse than the medicine I had for the flu."

Nurses are trained to check a medicine label three times — once as they take the bottle off the shelf, again before they administer a dose, and the triple check when they replace the container on the shelf.

Never give a dose of medicine without checking the label. It it's the middle of the night, wash your face with cold water and be sure you're wide awake before you pour out a medicinal dose of any kind.

Mexican-American Community Wants Better Portrayal on TV

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Following the lead of Negro groups, two organizations claiming to represent feeling in the Mexican-American community have petitioned the film and television industry for a better portrayal of their people.

First it was the Mexican-American Political Association, an activist group which issued a blast about stereotype Mexicans in films. Next comes the culture-oriented Latin American Civic Association.

The latter group, headed by Al Ortega, a commissioner of the board of public works in Los Angeles.

"We want to work with the industry to help create a better image of the Mexican-American and also to bring about more participation of our people in films," said Ortega.

Ortega said that his people complained that Mexicans were most often portrayed as bandits of the Pancho Villa type and Mexican women were cast in undignified roles.

"What we want is to be shown for what we are: An important part of America," said Ortega. "For example, taking part in the foundation are architects, lawyers, engineers, people of talent."

He added that the foundation hopes to secure a federal grant to help train young Mexican-Americans for acting and other work in the film industry.

Ortega said his group has been having meetings with industry leaders and they have been receptive.

A spokesman for the Motion Picture Association, representing the major companies, commented:

"The Mexican-Americans are doing the same thing the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People did five years ago. In some ways they are right, in some ways they are wrong.

"There is no question that as in the case of the Negro, the Mexican-American has not been well enough represented in films. Unfortunately there are not enough roles that call for them. But perhaps we can help that situation. We have been meeting with the Mexican-American community to see what we can do."

The spokesman said meetings have gone well with the foundation, but not with the Mexican-American Political Association.

Leaders of the latter, he said, "seem interested only in militance."

In its blast against the film industry, the Political Association had declared:

"We do not want to be left out of your films, but we don't want to be stereotyped. We are not greasers."

The charges drew some support from Michael Blankfort, president of the Writers Guild of America. In a letter to screen writers he said it was wrong to charge them with prejudice or indicate writers could control the production process. Blankfort added that the Mexican-Americans were "correct in that most of us are not sufficiently aware of their very presence in the American scene."

"Although occasionally Mexican-Americans have been portrayed as detectives or doctors in one or more of our television segments, by and large we have not given them thought: We have been unaware."

The Return of CBS's 21st Century Shows Complex Scientific Advances

NEW YORK (AP) — One of the nice things about mid-winter television is the return of CBS's 21st Century. The show explains the most complex scientific and mechanical advances so that the average person can understand them and even makes the explanation interesting.

The season premiere Sunday concerned the broad subject of simulation. For a half hour it showed men pretending to conduct a space war by pushing buttons that controlled imaginery spacecraft zooming around the sun. Men safely on the ground simulated the flying of aircraft which were still on the drawing board. Men practiced landing on the moon's surface and walking around almost weightlessly as if they had reached there.

The film, made in laboratories and on proving grounds, was instructive and fascinating. Walter Cronkite, the program's host, seemed to be having as much fun—simulating landing a plane, turning a back flip when pretending to be a moon-stroller —as the audience.

CBS's Children's Film Festival was another returning show this time with a series of three short fantasies, all without words. They told of a French boy's affection for a merry-go-round horse, his dreams about a model airplane and his earth for his lost dog. Kukla, Fran and Ollie again served as host and explained each film—after each was over. It would have helped young and adult viewers had the explanation come in advance.

Down on the Farm on NBC Saturday night was a loving and nostalgic look at the disappearing "family farm"—the chores, the kitchen, the fields, the fairs. It compared that life with the mechanized farm factories of today and tomorrow.

The hour was carefully researched, loaded with statistics but the hard facts were so adroitly served up along with the warm and lofty sentiments about being close to the joys of nature that it was pleasant viewing.

Bowell Teams Best at Volleyball

Both the junior and senior boys and girls of Sir McKenzie Bowell Public School won all their sets Saturday as Sir McKenzie Bowell swept all four titles, the junior boys and junior girls and the senior boys and senior girls, at the Belleville Senior Public School Volleyball championships held at Centennial Secondary School Saturday afternoon.

Sir McKenzie Bowell dominated the tournament and overwhelmed King Edward Public School which finished in the runnerup spot in all four divisions.

Harry J. Clarke came in third in the junior girls competition while Queen Alexandra was fourth and Queen Elizabeth fifth.

Queen Alexandra finished third in the junior boys division, ahead of fourth place Harry J. Clarke and fifth place Queen Elizabeth.

Harry J. Clarke came in third in the senior girls division and fourth in the senior boys class, switching positions with Bowell champions who were fourth in the senior girls and third in the senior boys division.

Belleville Public School Physical and Health Education Supervisor Walter Cochrane convened the tournament in which 18 fifteen recreation teams took part as a total of 270 Grade seven (junior) and Grade eight (senior) students competed in the afternoon-long competition.

Volunteers Are Needed For Torchlight Parade

TWEED — Floats and persons willing to take part in the opening night of the Winter Carnival torchlight parade at 7.30 p.m. Friday evening, Feb. 7, will be warmly welcomed by David Morton, vice president of the Tweed Chamber of Commerce, who sponsor the annual event Feb. 7, 8 and 9.

Floats, bands, horses, torchbearers, persons willing to wear clown suits, and just about anything and anyone who can contribute to the parade are needed. The theme this year is "Winter Fun for Everyone" and could include snowmobiling, skiing, hockey, curling and figure skating.

He is hoping for a large representation from the snowmobile groups, since there are so many snowmobile clubs in the immediate area, as well as many snowmobile dealers.

Clayton Langevin is in charge of the radio control committee, and will be working closely with Mr. Morton and Police Chief Robert Roy in arranging for traffic control.

The Kiwanis pancake breakfast, a popular feature at past winter carnivals, will again receive top billing on the Sunday morning program of the Winter Carnival weekend. The crowd attending the pancake breakfast at last year's carnival was much larger than expected, and as a result, the participate in charge of the event were limited "eaters on the house and home." Approximately 600 persons enjoyed the breakfast last year.

Radio Station CJBQ will broadcast from a temporary studio set up in the offices of the Tweed News, beginning at 7 p.m. Friday until 9 p.m. that night. The two way radio equipment will be used by the parade committee in conjunction with other Citizen Band radio owners to co-ordinate the parade, and other winter activities.

Wings a Delight To Olympia Crowds

By SCOTT BUTTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Fans at Detroit Olympia could be excused for believing that this season's edition of the Red Wings is one of the best in the National Hockey League team's history.

Although the Red Wings are tied for third place in the Eastern Division with two other teams and are 12 points out of first, they have not lost at the Olympia since Dec. 19.

The Red Wings stretched their unbeaten streak at home to 12 games—nine wins and three ties—Sunday night by edging Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2.

The line of Gordie Howe, Frank Mahovlich and Alex Delvecchio accounted for all the Red Wing scoring and continued to be the hottest threesome in the NHL.

Howe scored two goals and assisted on another by Mahovlich while Delvecchio gained three assists before a crowd of 15,347—the largest Detroit crowd ever to watch the Wings.

In other games Sunday, New York Rangers edged Montreal Canadiens 3-2 Philadelphia Flyers downed Pittsburgh Penguins 5-3, Boston Bruins edged Minnesota North Stars 4-3, Chicago Black Hawks trounced Los Angeles Kings 9-3 and St. Louis Blues defeated Oakland Seals 3-1.

Saturday, the Red Wings defeated Oakland 5-3, Toronto blanked Pittsburgh 2-0, Montreal beat Philadelphia 6-3, New York shut out Chicago 3-0, Boston took St. Louis 4-0 and Minnesota nipped Oakland 3-2.

Sunday, Howe scored his 22nd and 24th goals of the season while for Mahovlich it was No. 21.

The Maple Leafs put final-period goals from Norm Ullman and Floyd Smith.

At Boston, 14,639 watched the Bruins, beaten only once in 21 games, increase their Eastern Division lead over second-place Montreal to seven points.

Phil Esposito, the NHL's leading scorer, got a goal and two assists for the Bruins while Johnny Bucyk, Ken Hodge and Johnny McKenzie scored once each. Claude Larose scored two goals for Minnesota and Ray Cullen one.

Esposito leads NHL scorers with 73 points on 30 goals and 43 assists.

Linesman Pat Shetler suffered a severe cut near his right eye and was taken to hospital where he will be kept for observation. Shetler was trapped between Minnesota defenceman Bob McCord and Boston forward Wayne Cashman and all three fell to the ice.

FRANK MAHOVLICH
Now has 21

Doctors said Shetler apparently had suffered no damage to the eye.

New York won on third-period goals by Jean Ratelle and Vic Hadfield—both with Jean Beliveau of Montreal serving a major penalty for spearing.

Yvan Cournoyer and Beliveau scored first-period goals for Montreal and Hadfield had a second-period tally for New York.

Beliveau was given the major for spearing Phil Goyette.

St. Louis increased its winning streak against Western Division teams to 17 and its lead in the division to 17 points with its victory against second place Oakland before 13,788 at St. Louis.

Gary Sabourin, Frank St. Marseille and Jim Roberts scored for the Blues. A goal by Brian Perry at 2:34 of the first period cost goaltender Jacques Plante of St. Louis his shutout.

Three goals by Kenny Wharram before 18,666 at Chicago helped the Black Hawks halt a five-game winless string. Other Hawk scorers were Gilles Marotte, Doug Mohns, Dennis Hull, Bobby Hull, Jim Pappin and Pit Martin. Los Angeles marksmen were Bill Flett, Gord Labossiere and Lowell MacDonald.

Dick Cherry scored twice in the final two minutes to help Philadelphia gain a come-from-behind victory against Pittsburgh.

Other Philadelphia scorers were Forbes Kennedy, Andre Lacroix and Jean-Guy Gendron. Wally Boyer, Billy Dea and Ken Schinkel scored for Pittsburgh.

Tarasov Writing Hockey Novel; Still Author of Nats' Misfortune

WINNIPEG (CP) — Coach Anatoly Tarasov fiddled with his notebook while his Russian hockey team was burning Canada's national team 4-3 in an exhibition game Sunday night.

His preoccupation with a notebook during Russia's current tour, he told reporters after the game, is in the cause of his next book—Hockey of the Future.

Hockey of the Future may be on Tarasov's mind, but his counterpart in Canada, Jack McLeod is more interested in hockey of the present, especially after his team's fifth consecutive loss to the Russians.

The Soviet team again showed superiority in every aspect of the game Sunday, meeting the Canadians at every turn and breaking up plays before they got started.

But Tarasov, who got two goals and an assist from Aleksandr Maltsev and singles from Anatole Firsov and Evgeny Mishakov, said he was only "90 per cent satisfied" with his team's victory.

McLeod said he hoped "Mr. Tarasov will allow me to be also 50 per cent satisfied with my club's display."

Canada got goals from Gerry Pinder and Fran Huck, the flashy forward whose relentless forechecking was a big plus for the Canadian cause.

McLeod, who picked up six players from the Ottawa-based nationals to complement his Winnipeg team, said he plans to use the same lineup for a second game in Winnipeg Tuesday.

Tarasov didn't appear to have lineup problems as he rested two of his more seasoned stars, Vlacheslav Starchinov and Boris Mayorov. But injuries to two other players may change that situation.

Defenceman Victor Kuskin left the game late in the contest with undisclosed injuries and Alexsy Ionov left in the third period after absorbing a hard check from Ken Stephanson.

Canada had set the stage for a hard-hitting game from the outset, but it had little effect on the pinpoint passing of the Russians.

The teams came out of the first period tied 1-1 but Russia scored two more in the second period, both by Maltsev, and held a 3-2 lead going into the final 20 minutes.

Nine of the 15 minor penalties were assessed against the Russians, but Canada couldn't mount a concerted attack even with the man advantage except near the end of the first period when Huck scored with two Russians in the penalty box.

Victor Zinger was rarely tested with difficult shots on the Russian net in stopping 21 drives while Wayne Stephanson played another steady game for Canada, making 26 saves.

NEW YORK (AP) — Detroit Tigers, who overcame a 3-1 deficit and won the World Series, were named 1968 Team of the Year Sunday in the annual Associated Press year-end poll. Down three games to one and given little chance of overhauling St. Louis Cardinals in the seven-game set, manager Mayo Smith's Tigers turned the World Series upside down by winning three consecutive games — the last against the incomparable Bob Gibson.

Who Foots the Bill?

WINNIPEG (CP) — Members of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association want to be relieved of the financial burden of Canada's national hockey team.

But newly-elected president Earl Dawson of Rivers, Man., said during the weekend that the CAHA wants to retain its position as governing body of all amateur hockey in Canada.

Dawson said the executive agrees with a recent proposal by Health Minister Munro to set up a separate corporation to handle the national teams, one based in Winnipeg and the other in Ottawa, to put the operations on a sound financial basis.

"But we want a clear understanding about the position of the corporation and the CAHA if the transfer takes place," he said in an interview outside the closed meetings.

He said a meeting on the proposal is scheduled Feb. 3 in Ottawa. A committee set up by Munro's amateur sport task force includes two CAHA and two NHL representatives.

Hawks Cause Senior Stir

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Galt Hornets and Barrie Flyers continued their battle for first place in the eight-team Ontario Hockey Association senior series during the weekend, but seventh - place Belleville Mohawks are causing a stir at the opposite end of the standings.

At Galt Saturday, the Hornets bounced Collingwood Kings 6-2 to climb back into the lead, one point ahead of the Flyers. In one other Saturday game, before 3,500 fans at Kingston Interplace Woodstock A's gained their sixth win of the season with a 4-2 upset of the Aces.

The loss left the sixth-place Aces in danger of losing the final playoff position as the Mo-Hawks Sunday continued their late-season drive. At Oakville, Belleville downed the Oaks 4-2 and edged within two points of Kingston.

In another Sunday game, at Orillia, the Ottawa Nationals continued their partial schedule by posting an easy 7-3 win over the third-place Terriers.

THE CAR BUYER'S PROBLEMS

DRUGS AND DRIVING

Got a cold? Be careful. The remedy you take for it could cost your life unless you use some precaution.

Medical and police authorities are beginning to suspect a well-known component of cold and hay fever remedies — antihistamine — as the hidden cause of accidents where the driver suddenly is overcome by drowsiness and falters or fall asleep at the wheel.

Antitussive, another common drug found in cough mixtures, has a generally depressive effect, since its job is to act as a sedative for cough irritations. Used beyond recommended doses, it dangerously reduces the general awareness of drivers in situations where they must be keenly alert.

Authorities studying the subject have come up with an interesting sidelight on alcohol. Instead of sobering a subject, a cup of coffee is almost as bad as another drink. The coffee enters the stomach and causes alcohol there to empty into the blood stream more rapidly, increasing intoxication.

Drug researchers stress that drivers should never exceed recommended dosages of cold and hay fever remedies or any pain killer. And if they continue to feel drowsiness and blurred vision following their use, they should consult a doctor.

One final thing to bear in mind is that accidents occuring where the influence of drugs can be proven may well lead to a police charge. Today's new cars are silk-smooth, powerful and beautiful. With a little common sense caution we can all stay alive to enjoy them.

Defending Champ at 16

Western Title Hopes Riding on Karen's Performance

TORONTO (CP) — West Coast skaters Sunday took two crowns in the Canadian figure-skating championships and kept the contest from becoming an Ontario rout.

Favorites Louise Lind and Barry Soper of Vancouver won the junior dance and Paul Fisher of Victoria came from behind for a surprise victory in the junior men's title to end the strength of faultless free skating.

Western hopes in tonight's senior finals rest on the free-skating performance of Karen Magnussen, 16, last year's women's champion. She has a narrow margin over Toronto's Linda Carbonetto and Cathy Lee Irwin after compulsory figures.

Miss Carbonetto, last year's runner-up, trails by less than .67 points with 1053.5 to Miss Magnussen's 1059 and is known as a formidable competitor in free skating.

The 1968 champions in senior pairs and dance have retired and Canada's skaters Sunday moved into commanding positions to fill the vacancies.

Anna Forder and Richard Stephens of Port Perry, Ont., won a unanimous vote of seven judges for first place in the pairs on a preliminary round worth 25 per cent of possible points.

Mary Petrie and Robert McAvoy of Toronto are second and Nancy and Steven Dover, a Toronto sister-brother team, are third.

In the senior dance, Donna Taylor and Bruce Lemis of Toronto will enter the finals with a unanimous vote of the judges and a .484 points lead from dance tests Saturday and Sunday that counted 60 per cent toward the title.

Second are Mary Church and Tom Falls of Toronto, Hazel Pike and Phillip Boskill, also of Toronto, hold third.

In the senior men's division, defending champion Jay Humphry holds a comfortable lead in points and a unanimous vote of the judges after the compulsory figures. Both West and East claim Humphry because he started skating in Vancouver, but now trains in Toronto.

Free skating tonight at Maple Leaf Gardens will decide all four senior championships. Sunday there was standing-room-only for the 500 spectators at North Toronto Memorial Arena.

Sunday was a day of triumphs —and hard skating—for Miss Petrie. Besides placing second in the preliminary round of the senior pairs, she and McAvoy won the junior pairs title with a difficult program of combination jumps and spins. She is 17 and he is 23. They skated for Ottawa before coming to Toronto to train.

Runners-up were Sandra Bezic, 13, and her brother Val, 16, also of Toronto.

Saturday Miss Petrie's free skating pulled her ahead of Vancouver's Mary McCaffrey, 16, to win the junior women's crown. Diane Hall, 17, catapulted to third place from sixth with a free-skating display that most judges rated between excellent and flawless.

Paul Fisher's upset in the junior men's singles Sunday was the surprise of the championships. The 19-year-old from Victoria placed sixth in the compulsory figures, but turned in a faultless performance of high jumps in the free skating.

John MacWilliams, 17, of Toronto placed second and Ron Shaver, 17, of Hamilton came third in a scramble for first place that was decided by a complicated system of judges' votes and not by points.

In the junior dance, the victory for Soper and Miss Lind was a triumph of smooth skating and sentiment. Miss Lind's blonde good looks and their image as college sweethearts made the 20-year-old pair favorites with the crowd.

Second were Brenda Sandys, 22, and James Holden, 24, of Toronto. Beth Rakbosky and Richard Dowding of Toronto placed third.

In the weekend's only novice event, Judy Cserah, 14, and Keith Caughill, 17, of St. Thomas, Ont., defeated Linda Rae, and Kevin Cottam, both 15, of Victoria for the novice dance title. Patricia LeMasters and Stephen Pfiffer of Toronto were third.

Sheehan Turns Trick As St. Catharines Continue Winning Ways

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If you need a reason to explain why St. Catharines Black Hawks are the class of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, don't look any further than Bob Sheehan.

Sheehan is the Boston-born centre who played the last two seasons with Hadfax Junior Canadiens, scoring 50 goals in last year.

He joined St. Catharines this season and has been a powerhouse, sparking the club with his prolific goal scoring and tenacious checking.

Sheehan picked up three goals and three assists Sunday night to spark the Hawks to an 8-5 victory over Ottawa 67s. He now has 41 goals this season and his Black Hawks lead the 10-team league with 53 points on 22 wins and eight defeats.

The Hawks, who lead second-place Montreal Junior Canadiens by two points, have lost only 10 games.

Canadiens stayed in contention Sunday night by whipping Toronto Marlboros 5-2 before 17,015 fans at Montreal Forum.

In other Sunday action, Peterborough Petes clipped Hamilton Red Wings 5-3, Oshawa Generals edged London Knights 5-4 and Niagara Falls Flyers thrashed the hapless Kitchener Rangers 9-0 before 3,813 fans at Kitchener.

At St. Catharines, the Hawks overcame a 3-1 deficit before 2,806 fans, scoring four times in two minutes and five seconds.

Dick Tarnstrom and Dennis Giannini each scored twice for the Hawks with Bob McMahon adding one goal. Ottawa's scoring was divided among Bryan McSheffrey, Murray Wilson, Gord MacCormick, Doug Keeler and Conkiy Forey.

Robert Guindon scored two goals to pace Montreal with team-mates Marc Tardiff, Rejean Houle and Richard Martin getting the others.

Frank Hamill and Gord Davies got Toronto's goals, Hamill's coming in the third period when Toronto was playing a man short.

Peterborough's win was overshadowed by the announcement just before game time that Trevor Conn, the Petes' team captain, will be lost for the season. Conn aggravated an old knee injury in a game Thursday against Niagara Falls.

Rick MacLeish sparked the Petes before 1,207 Peterborough fans with two goals. Rick Cunningham, Paul Perras and Ron Stackhouse got the others. Hamilton marksmen were Ron Climie, Dave Gilmour and Lee Carpenter.

At Oshawa, the Generals outshot London 38-29 as the Knights' six - game unbeaten streak was broken. Scoring for Oshawa were Bob Stewart, Ivan Boldirev, Fred O'Donnell, Tom Foscroft and Terry O'Reilly. Replying for London were Neil Nicholson, Gerry Bradbury, Bob Channell and Clyde Simon.

Niagara Falls Flyers outshot Kitchener 45-23 as they ran roughshod over the last - place Rangers. Doug Brindley and Don Tannahill each scoring two goals.

Goalie Dave Tataryn made key saves in the second period to salvage his second shutout of the season.

CAHA Unhappy

Campbell Petitioned For Age Limit Change

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association executive has sent a telegram to Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, asked for a change in the junior age limit.

The telegram, unanimously approved at the semi-annual CAHA meeting Saturday, asks that players be eligible for junior play if they are under 21 on Dec. 31 of the playing year.

The age limit now is under 20 at Dec. 31.

Gordon Juckes, executive secretary of the association, said after the closed sessions that the CAHA never had been happy with the lower age limit but previous attempts to change it had been unsuccessful.

Earl Dawson of Rivers, Man., who was elected president of the CAHA Saturday, said exploratory talks on the matter likely will be held in about a week.

In other business, Juckes said $20,200 has been given the CAHA by the NHL to be distributed to a number of senior and intermediate clubs who have lost players to professional ranks. Some of those clubs which will receive payments are Drummondville, Sherbrooke, Victoriaville and Granby, all in Quebec, and Welland, Galt and Windsor in Ontario, and Lacombe, Alta.

It also was decided that the time is not yet right to hold a national junior B playoff. But provincial associations were authorized to conduct cross-branch playoffs with financial help from the CAHA.

The meeting adopted a three-point policy for future appeals.

All votes will be taken by air mail with each branch given seven days to make its decision. Each branch must declare itself, whether it is for or against the appeal, or wishes to abstain.

If a ballot is not received with, in seven days, then the guilty branch will be approached immediately and given 24 hours to make its decision. If the vote is not received in that time, it will be taken among those branches which answered.

The CAHA also received a trophy to be awarded annually to the best intermediate team in the country. The name of the trophy will be announced later.

Signing 'O.J.' Could Be Tough For Buffalo

NEW YORK (AP) — The pickings will be easy for Buffalo Bills at the outset of Tuesday's pro football draft. After that, O. J. Simpson's apparent employers-to-be could run into double trouble:

—Getting Simpson's signature on a Buffalo contract.

—And finding a top flight quarterback to complement the brilliant all-purpose carrier from Southern California.

With the American and National football leagues' third combined draft session due in 36 hours away, it's a foregone conclusion that the Bills will make Simpson the No. 1 selection.

Then they'll have to meet the Heisman Trophy winner's price —more than $500,000, says his business manager.

Chuck Barnes, president of Sports Headliners, Inc., said last weekend he and Simpson have a figure in mind in excess of the $600,000 bonus-salary package given Danny Anderson by Green Bay Packers in 1964.

"We're not talking about anything as long term as 10 years," Barnes said. "I don't think O. J. wants to play football that long. He is interested in going into social work."

Quarterbacks might be at a premium in the two-day draft session, during which 442 college players will be selected over 17 rounds by the 16 NFL and AFL clubs.

Buffalo has the top pick because its 1-13-1 record last season was the poorest in either league.

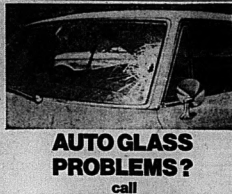
Aussies Clean Up

BRISBANE (Reuters) — Australians completed a clean sweep of major events in the first Australian open tennis tournament today.

Wimbledon champion Rod Laver took 95 minutes to beat Spanish professional Andres Gimeno 6-3, 6-4, 7-5 in the men's singles final for the winner's purse of $4,950.

In the women's doubles final Australians Margaret Court and Judy Tegart scored a straight sets victory over Billie Jean King and Rosemary Casals of the United States 6-4, 6-4.

Laver and Roy Emerson beat fellow professionals Ken Rosewall and Fred Stolle 6-4, 6-4 in an all-Australian men's doubles final, cut from the best-of-five sets to the best-of-three because of darkness.



Darkness also forced abandonment of the mixed doubles final, so finalists Fred Stolle of Australia and Anny Haydon Jones of Britain split first and second prize money totalling $1,760 with Marty Riessen and Margaret Court of the United States.

Gimeno picked up $2,530 consolation money in the men's final.

The winning men's doubles pair received $1,375 each.

In the women's doubles the winners' prize was $715 each and the runners-up received $385 each.

Aces in Sight

Mo-Hawk Hopes Boosted by Wins

OAKVILLE (Staff) — Belleville's Mo-Hawks used the weekend to make a molehill out of Kingston Aces' points mountain in the race for the OHA Senior A sixth and final playoff berth.

Last night the Mo-Hawks travelled to Oakville and bounced the fourth place Oaks 4-2 with a strong team effort and some outstanding work by netminder Larry Holmes.

The win, coupled with Kingston's 4-2 home ice loss to the last place Woodstock Akrans Saturday night moved the Mo-Hawks to within two points of the Aces in the battle for the sixth and last playoff spot in the eight - team Senior loop.

Belleville with an 8-1 home win over Woodstock Friday night and a 3-3 tie with league - leading Barrie Flyers last Sunday has picked up five points in the last three games on the slumping Kingston club who dropped an 8-2 decision Friday night in Barrie in addition to Saturday's loss to Woodstock.

The Mo-Hawks opened the scoring at 2.35 of a scrumbly first period when centre George Godson picked up the rebound from Jack Wilton's point shot and drove the puck past Oaks' netminder Harold "Beat" Hurley.

The goal came with the teams playing five aside as a result of an altercation between Mo-Hawk centreman Bob Taylor and Oak defenceman Brian Pryce which occurred at 6.11 and delayed the game for 15 minutes.

The two players were assessed a total of 24 minutes in penalties and order was not achieved until a policeman sat between them in the penalty box.

Belleville netminder Larry Holmes prevented the Oaks from tying the score at 9.35 of the opening period when he kicked out Terry Holmes' hard drive to the short side of the net.

Holmes made another big save at the 13.50 mark of the period when Oakville centre Bob Pole broke in alone, only to have Holmes make a stretching save with his left leg.

Holmes was very sharp early in the second period and prevented Oakville from scoring, allowing the Mo-Hawks to take a 2-0 lead at 4.41 when centre Bob Taylor won the draw at a faceoff and the puck came back to defenceman "Wiener" Brown whose slapshot from just inside the blueline beat Hurley.

The goal came just three seconds after Oakville defenceman Don Currie drew a minor penalty for tripping Mo-Hawk winger Al Peeping.

The Oaks got that one back 13 seconds later when Charlie Cipolla tipped in defenceman Brian Pryce's shot from about eight feet out.

Ron Riley got the eventual winning goal for Belleville at 7.19 of the middle period when he picked up Brown's pass off the boards, sped up the ice, switched wings, faked the defenceman and beat Hurley with a 25-footer from a slight angle.

Left winger Lorne O'Donnell notched an insurance marker for the Mo-Hawks at 8.31 of the final period tipping in George Godson's passout from behind the Oakville net.

Netminder Larry Holmes, who has allowed just six goals in the Mo-Hawks' last three games, deserved a large share of the credit for the win, kicking out 33 of 35 Oakville shots which came his way.

Mo-Hawk defenceman "Wiener" Brown was a standout and picked up a goal and two assists before leaving at the end of the second period in order to be back in Belleville for a midnight shift at work.

The playoff hungry Mo-Hawks practise tonight and are then off until Friday night when they are host to the Barrie Flyers in a nine o'clock game at the Belleville Arena.

Host CFB Rinks Nearly Sweep Quinte Mixed

TRENTON — Rinks from the host Canadian Forces Base curling club nearly made a clean sweep of honours in the seventh annual Bay of Quinte Mixed Bonspiel over the weekend.

CFB Trenton rinks won three of the four in the spiel, which drew 64 entries from as far away as Deep River, St. Catharines, and Toronto.

Rod Keech's CFB foursome of he and his wife Norma and Jim and Bernice Campbell carted off top honors in the main event and the Alexander Keeding Trophy.

The Keech crew beat out Marty Eisner's CFB rink for the Quinte Mixed crown.

Second event winners of the Carling Bowl were another CFB Trenton foursome of skip Jim Hope, Jo Hope (vice), second Derek Palidwar and lead Evie Locke. Runners-up in the event were Bob Wartman's Napanee entry.

Preventing a host club grand slam was Bill Riley's Quinte Curling Club rink, who beat out George Steele's CFB foursome for the Jafferty-Smith Trophy and third event honors. In addition to skip Bill, the Riley foursome consisted of wife Jean (vice), Bill Johnson (second), and lead Joyce Johnson.

The third of four events won by the host club was the Bill Bidwell Trophy. Earl Beck, with wife Gladys and Sid and Ellen Braine over Neil Lambert's Napanee rink. The Birbeck win was good for the Fox Cartage Shield.

THE KNIGHTS NEEDED THEM !
If saddles hadn't been invented in France in the early Christian era, the bold knights of the Middle Ages could never have stayed on their horses, let alone fought battles! Today saddles are used by pearly all who like to ride horses.
Once your family may have enjoyed riding, too, but if their new pursuits have left still-good saddles and other equipment (perhaps a horse!) behind, offer them with an Intelligencer Want Ad. It's just common sense to dial 962-9171 now!

Palach Sympathizers Dispersed

Czech Police Enforce Get Tough Edict on Demonstrators

PRAGUE (CP) — More than 30 young men and women were being held by police today following a tough new government crackdown on demonstrations.

The Czechoslovak interior ministry announced they were arrested Sunday night because they "attempted to create provocations, shouted anti-state slogans and attacked the public security officers."

The arrests came as several hundred students tried to take candles and flowers to a statue of King Wenceslas in the heart of Prague in tribute to Jan Palach, the 21-year-old student who burned himself to death to protest the Soviet occupation. He was buried Saturday.

About 200 police brusquely dispersed a first parade in Wenceslas Square. Then, when a second wave of youths tried to reach the statue, police used nightsticks to break up the crowd.

About 20 youngsters were arrested and bustled away in buses.

As one of the youths was clubbed, the crowd surged around the police, shouting "Russian stooges!" and, "Gestapo!"

"We are just following orders," one policeman explained.

"Your duty is to be humane," a student countered.

Although the Czechoslovak leaders allowed a somber procession of about 100,000 mourners for Palach Saturday, they ordered that demonstration ended by midnight Saturday night.

When the youths tried to gather at Wenceslas Square Sunday, the police quickly showed that official tolerance was over.

About 100 police used tear gas to break up a crowd of 2,000.

One student who produced a portrait of Palach from under his coat was grabbed and escorted away. Other students tried to divert police attention while their companions dashed up to place candles on the statue.

A dozen officers mounted an all-night guard to prevent anyone from putting up new candles or signs.

Observers said Czechoslovak leaders seemed aware that if they do not succeed in maintaining order the alternative could be military government.

Communist party chiefs are becoming more and more committed to tougher measures against demonstrations which are basically anti-Soviet.

Authorities in Slovakia also banned all demonstrations for Palach because, they said, extremist elements were trying to exploit the situation.

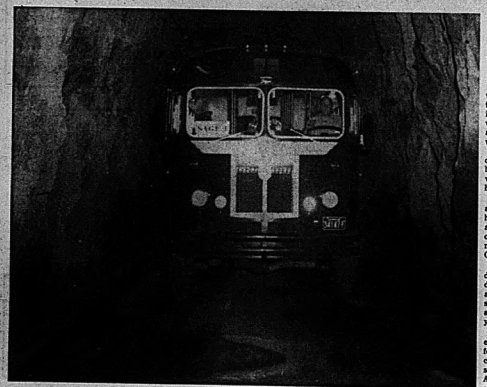
Palach, a philosophy student, set fire to himself Jan. 16 and died in hospital three days later.

Since then there have been 16 other attempts at self-immolation.

A Czechoslovak brewery worker who set fire to himself in Pilsen a week ago died Sunday.

But the interior ministry said personal and family rather than political reasons were behind the chain of suicide attempts.

In Italy, where there have been three days of anti-Soviet demonstrations to express support for Czechoslovakia and to honor Palach, Pope Paul spoke of the self-immolation.



"We cannot approve of the tragic form of this testimony, but we can treasure its value," the pontiff said at his weekly appearance in St. Peter's Square. He said the burnings were "tragic episodes . . . which carry to a supreme degree self sacrifice and love for others."

Vatican police tried to prevent students from displaying pro-Czechoslovak signs, and one student was cut on the forehead in a scuffle.

One sign read: "Pope Paul VI, please pray for the Czech martyrs and for Czech liberty." Another said: "Christ is being crucified in Prague."

A group of Czechoslovaks in London asked Prime Minister Wilson to urge the United Nations "to negotiate the immediate withdrawal of Soviet occupation forces from Czechoslovakia."

Their letter was submitted at Britain's official residence, 10 Downing Street, by four girls and three boys in Czechoslovak national costumes. About 1,000 persons took part in the orderly demonstrations.

California Is 'Disaster Area' As Storms and Floods Kill 86

LOS ANGELES (CP) — The weather bureau today predicted that rains striking Southern California for the last nine days would let up by Tuesday, ending a period of storms and floods which have left 86 persons dead.

With the worst apparently over, about 9,000 Californians began returning to whatever was left of their mud-caked homes.

Most of them had been evacuated from foothill areas where homes were destroyed, damaged or threatened by flooding or mudslides from the several mountain ranges paralleling the California coastline.

President Nixon Sunday night declared California a national disaster area, releasing federal assistance to the badly hit southern section of the state after the worst storms in 31 years.

Six thousand persons were evacuated from their homes before a furious weekend storm climaxed a week of rain, and some outlying suburbs of Los Angeles were still cut off from all but helicopter contact.

Twelve persons met a gruesome death in oozing mud which smashed glass sliding doors and suffocated them in their beds early Saturday morning. Bodies of missing persons were still turning up in boiling creeks and storm sewers.

Of those listed dead, 52 were killed in traffic accidents on slippery freeways and roads and 17 persons were drowned.

Four children died in their burning homes when their parents couldn't reach firemen because telephones lines were knocked out.

The storm, which dumped 34 inches of rain in some portions of the state, left $25,000,000 damage, by Gov. Ronald Reagan's estimate, and some major health problems.

Sewage disposal plants were destroyed or damaged in some communities and water lines to other communities were out of commission. In hillside areas, residents were warned not to drink tap water without first boiling it.

Nixon and Reagan declared the state a disaster area, making federal and state funds available to help pay for the mammoth task of cleaning up and to provide low interest loans to businessmen and homeowners for rebuilding their properties.

The relief funds will go to Los Angeles, Ventura, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, Fresno and Tulare, Inyo, San Bernardino and Riverside counties.

The storm knocked out telephone communications, halted railroads, and washed out roads including the Pacific Coast Highway, a major north-south route. Seven major bridges were washed out in three counties, and there were warnings that the banks of rain-shocked flood canals could still give way and spell new destruction.

Although the sun appeared in parts of the state Sunday, rain continued in isolated areas and more residents were evacuated by helicopter.

Researcher Says U.S. Should Capture Moonlet

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. S. Fred Singer, long prominent in space research, says the United States soon should adopt a new goal of sending astronauts on flights past the planets—with possible seizure of a Martian moon.

The flights, which he says could be achieved within the next 10 to 15 years through improvement of space techniques and materials already developed, would last two to three years each. And he suggests they might even involve bringing back one of the moons that orbit Mars.

And he is dubious about extensive exploration of the earth's moon.

Singer is deputy assistant secretary of the interior. He has presented his space views in a series of talks before scientific groups.

In the program he envisages, the astronauts would not attempt to land on the planets. That is a goal for the more distant future.

But Singer believes a single 700-day mission could pass Mars and Venus and launch probes into their atmospheres, orbit Mars long enough for a probe to pick up material from the surface and deliver it to the spacecraft, fly close to comets and asteroids, and launch probes to Jupiter and beyond.

Scientists are particularly interested in the two moonlets that orbit Mars. The moons are so small that they probably never have experienced volcanic action.

The moonlet Deimos has a diameter of about five miles and Phobos is about twice that-size.

Singer says it is possible, technically to blast Deimos out of its present orbit and send it into orbit around the earth, where it could be explored at leisure—or it could be brought down to earth.

Commons Won't Sit Tuesday As Committee Work Piles Up

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons starts a four-day week schedule today but there'll be no rest for the MPs on the fifth day.

Donald S. Macdonald, government House leader, said last week the regular Commons session will be cancelled Tuesday to allow MPs to tackle the large number of bills that have been sent off to committees.

Under the new rules which came into effect Jan. 14, bills now are given second reading in the Commons and then sent off to one of 17 committees for detailed study.

Formerly, second reading was debate on a bill's principle and this stage of the Parliament process usually was the longest.

Eldon Woolliams (PC — Calgary North) observed last week that the second-reading stage had been "downgraded." His point was that much of the heat of debate would take place in committee where MPs would be free to move amendments and concentrate their speeches on each clause of government legislation.

So far in the resumed session there have been 17 pieces of legislation which have gone through second reading. By leaving Tuesday free of House work, the government gives committees a chance to buckle down to the heavy workload.

The parliamentary week starts off today with continued debate on the wholesale amendments to the Criminal Code.

Wednesday the Commons will switch over to a motion to supply the government with funds it needs to meet its budget commitments. This debate allows Opposition MPs to tackle the government on policy.

So far, the debate on the Criminal Code changes hasn't had the intensity expected. But Conservatives have made it clear they'll continue to fight to have the bill broken into four sections.

This would allow them to vote for sections they approve and against those they dislike.

The clauses allowing abortions where the health of the mother may be endangered; those wiping out offences for homosexual acts committed in private by consenting adults, and another compelling motorists to take breath tests under certain conditions have drawn the most fire.

Cost $2,500,000 to Collect $3 Million Overpaid Jobless

OTTAWA (CP) — It will cost about $2,500,000 to recover $3,000,000 in unemployment insurance overpayments during the 1968-69 fiscal year, the Unemployment Insurance Commission estimates.

The commission, which began a "a full-scale program against fraud and abuse" last fall, announced some of the results in a news release today.

It said it detected $259,200 in overpayments in 1967, the year investigations in December and disqualified 3,709 persons.

By December, 1968, overpayments detected amounted to $136,700 after investigation of 12,400 claims and 2,693 persons were disqualified.

The commission had 184 investigators on the job in December, 1968, compared with 148 a year before.

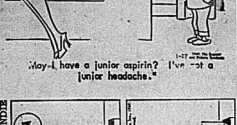
The December results, using a combination of new investigation methods and an anti-fraud publicity campaign, indicated that the goal of cutting losses would be achieved.

The commission expected to establish $3,000,000 in overpayments during the current fiscal year, which ends March 31, compared with $2,000,000 in the 1967-68 fiscal year.

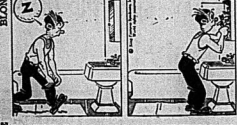
The objective for the 1969-70 fiscal year is $5,000,000 and the commission expects to make 500,000 investigations then.

Kierans Gives Mail Statistics

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada's post office department has one foot in the space age and one in the rural 19th century, Postmaster-General Eric Kierans said Friday.



His topics at a news conference ranged from Canada's planned communications satellite which he said "could pull this country together" to obsolete post offices "like the one 'n which the only customers were the postmaster and his family."



The postmaster-general said about 1,500 of Canada's 8,000 post offices are being closed down at the rate of about 100 a month.

"About 800 of these have sales of less than $500 a year which is pretty bad considering we have to pay the postmaster about $1,400 a year," he said.

Most of the areas affected can be serviced by extending rural routes. It means only areas where this is not the case no post offices will be closed.

He said the cost-cutting and modernizing program would make about 2,000 jobs a year obsolete, but most of these employees would be relocated.

Strictly Personal

No Shame in Psychiatry

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Drew Pearson's recent "disclosure" that Richard Nixon had gone to a doctor who may or may not have been a psychiatrist at the time, and who may or may not have given him psychiatric help, struck me as a complete reversal of what our attitude should be on the subject.

Nixon's blunt denial that he sought psychiatric advice may or may not have been true — what is sad is that any man in high public life in America today would feel forced to make the same denial, for fear of being labelled as "unstable."

Yet, in a civilized and rational society (which is perhaps asking for too much), we would insist that our leaders check-ups, just as we insist that they have regular physical check-ups.

There would be no shame attached to this; indeed, it would become a part of civic virtue for all public leaders and decision-makers to submit voluntarily to psychiatric examinations, for everyone is a little kinky and could benefit from some objective advice if not from treatment. If Lincoln's melancholia had been lifted a little bit, who knows how the course of history might have changed.

I would like to believe that Nixon is complex enough and troubled enough and sensitive enough to have sought such aid if he felt he needed it, Rather than inspiring doubt in his capacities, it would add to the respect for the man. The truly sick people are those who grimly cling to the fiction that nothing at all is wrong with them.

Of course, we should be reluctant to submit to the tyranny of psychiatric standards as much as to the tyranny of any other discipline: for psychiatrists are capable of disagreeing as much as any other doctors within the same specialty. But, at least, gross abnormalities could be found — and secret pockets of sickness could be cleaned out before they have time to infect the whole personality, as they did with Woodrow Wilson.

It is an embarrassing reflection upon our national naïveté that the Drew Pearson story, true or not, drew such a heated repudiation. Our still primitive aversion to any psychiatric probing accounts for incalculable thousands of private tragedies a year, not to speak of the public injury done by men in high positions who are in far more desperate need of help than the executives they direct, order, sentence or condemn.

It is not the obviously psychotic who pose a threat to society; it is the apparently sane, the plausible, who suddenly break from the strain of being able to tell their troubles to nobody at all.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For January 28

Your birthday today: Your experience in the coming year runs into the extremes (which today's natives generally prefer). Much is to be given away, and good riddance. Emotional crisis, if permitted to develop, is more readily understood now because it becomes easier to talk about. New relationships (other than purely intellectual) should be explored. Today's natives rarely all have unusual ideas and long-range plans, and in many cases, high skill at a specialized activity.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): The choices you make today will have permanent impact. Pay close attention. Physical fitness programs are favored.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Reorganizing your budget is likely to take some of your attention. The problems of older people come in for a share of time and effort. Health seems improved.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Good counsel is at hand if you will be careful in checking on who is who in the field. Put chores away early where you left off yesterday; any replanning runs an amenable course. Older people may be of considerable help.

LIBRA (Sept. 22 — Oct. 22): Pragmatism is the order of today. If it works, keep and use it; if it does not, cut it goes quickly. Your opinion is sought out. Keep private any family changes or other developments not yet accomplished.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22 — Nov. 21): Early, interesting ideas come back to you. Gather your friends around you this evening and exchange ideas. Retire at a reasonable hour.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Future plans, particularly for travel and changes of residence, are favored. Make ready. Spend the evening perfecting the basic plans, but do not commit yourself in details.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): There's no point in rushing; you have a mountain of details to dig through. Perhaps somebody could help with preliminary sorting of what is yet to be done. Stop early enough to avoid fatigue.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Creative projects may be creeping at snail's pace, but they are being perfected. Your approach becomes more practical. Carry on.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Deep intuition can lead through to new sources of ideas. If these sources are fully exploited, no real material problem remains in this life. Several activity involving intellectual types is promised in the evening.

New Artificial Gravel Proves Ideal Barrier

By RAY STAPLEY

Until recently, as our network of highways gradually took form across Canada, engineers bulldozed and blasted their way through bush and rock. Gravel, cement or asphalt served for the final surface and the job was finished. Little or no protection was offered for the unhappy motorist whose vehicle goes out of control and heads for the ditch. Another method of highway construction is far more sophisticated and much is being done to protect the luckless driver who suddenly loses control of his vehicle. Cement safety piers are being replaced with metal units that break away under heavy impact. Safety abutments are positioned far away from the roadway and guard rails are being used in more and more application. Extensive research is being carried out to establish just where guard rails are needed. In Canada, guard rails are usually constructed of wooden posts with wire cable or sheet metal attached but something new and revolutionary is in the works.

The following is an interesting article from the Public Services Division of British Leyland Motor Canada Ltd.

"Imagine crashing at more than 50 m.p.h., not once but half a dozen times, without injuring yourself or even feeling your car. Impossible? No.

"The answer is synthetic gravel. Just demonstrated to motor race chiefs and Government road research scientists in Britain as a new type of safety barrier for dangerous bends and the central median of high speed roads.

"Artificial gravel, developed by Britain's Lytag Company for making lightweight concrete for multi - storey buildings, has now assumed a new and unexpected role in highway safety.

"For Lytag synthetic gravel, completely fireproof and weather resistant, has been found ideal for preventing overshooting on tricky roads and motor racing tracks.

"It is efficient in this safety role that other tests for catching aircraft have already been successfully tested at the world famous Royal Aircraft Establishment in Farnborough. The idea used fireproof artificial gravel at the ends of runways to stop an overshooting airplane.

"The Lytag gravel works rather like a net to stop a car or plane — without causing damage.

"In the crash test for cars, a medium-size Austin family sedan, travelling at 54 m.p.h. was stopped in 54 feet, a deceleration of 1.7g, without any injury to occupants.

"After undergoing the same test many times the car was found to be perfectly roadworthy and in a completely undamaged condition, says an official report.

"Lytag lightweight concrete is only two-thirds the weight of natural aggregate concrete but equally strong. But when not made into concrete the artificial gravel, which can be graded, can just be spread on the ground to stop wheeled vehicles.

"In either ¼ or ½ inch particles it is impossible to drive either a wheeled or tracked vehicle over piles of the product, which often looks far more attractive than fences and steel barriers."

NOTE: Letters from readers with car problems are most welcome, but please include: Year and model, number of cylinders, mileage, standard or automatic transmission, power equipment, brief outline of previous repairs, and a self-addressed envelope.

Government's Cultural Agencies Told Their Work Dangerous

VAL-DAVID, Que. (CP) — Gerard Pelletier, secretary of state in the Trudeau cabinet, Saturday warned directors and representatives of the federal government's cultural agencies of the "dangers" inherent in their work.

Speaking following a two-day meeting of the agencies' management in this Laurentian community 42 miles northwest of Montreal, Mr. Pelletier said these bodies must be sensitive to public opinion.

"I don't want to say that you should be at the mercy of, or totally dependent on, public opinion, but I believe that public opinion can be led — it must be sometimes — without offending it."

One of Mr. Pelletier's aides said this warning was directed especially at the CBC, the National Film Board and the Canada Council.

Mr. Pelletier assured his audience that the federal government would continue to respect and defend the freedom of its cultural agencies but said his department, which is responsible to Parliament for its activities, "has no illusions about the dangerous charter of your activities."

Kierans Declares NATO No Longer 'Worth While'

NANAIMO, B.C. (CP) — Canada's membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization "is not worth while," Postmaster-General Eric Kierans said Saturday night.

Speaking at a liberal fund-raising dinner, Mr. Kierans said NATO may have been the appropriate answer to a particular threat in 1948, when it was formed, but as a continuing institution "it is something else again."

"... it has become a self-justifying deterrent against a non-existent military threat.

"NATO's existence guarantees that of the Warsaw Pact; each needs the existence of the other to justify its own existence."

He described NATO and the Warsaw Pact, the counterpart mutual defence agreement of the Iron Curtain countries, as "two military bureaucracies leaning upon each other for reassurance."

"The question now becomes: Given the limitations imposed upon us by membership in NATO and also the scope for initiative that still remains, is that membership worth while, is it the best choice we can make?

J. J. Greene Suffers Mild Heart Attack

TORONTO (CP) — An aide to J. J. Greene, federal minister of energy, mines and resources, said Sunday that Mr. Greene suffered a mild heart attack Saturday and is under doctor's care at St. Michael's Hospital.

The 49-year-old Liberal member of Parliament for Niagara Falls suffered a mild heart attack in Montreal last Nov. 21. He went home after treatment for a period of rest and resumed his Ottawa duties on a half-day basis when Parliament resumed sittings Jan. 14.

In an interview last week in Ottawa he said:

"I'm trying to work my way into a slower norm.

"But I find it hard not to go like hell. The first few days I was back I got involved in this and that and it sort of closed in again, and it gave me a bit of a jar."

He added: "If I can't do it, I'll just have to quit."

In an interview Saturday, Howard Clarke, president of the Niagara Falls Liberal association, said the association executive hopes Mr. Greene does not quit.

He said the association would be willing to go along with anything Mr. Greene wishes to do.

"Joe Greene is a hard, dedicated worker, but perhaps goes at his work too hard."

Major Problem Aid to Needy

KINGSTON (CP) — Finance Minister Benson said Saturday that the major problem facing Canada is the commitment to help increase the standard of living in developing nations.

Mr. Benson told about 40 students attending the four-day conference of the International Association for students of Economics and Commerce that Canada will have to spend money on developing nations or we will have the world blown up in our face."

In earlier business the delegates, from 11 Canadian universities across Canada elected Brian Puckington, 23, of Sir George William University in Montreal, as president for a second term.

Priests Arrested At Mass

CLEVELAND (Reuters) — Two Roman Catholic priests were arrested and charged with trespassing Sunday while conducting an unauthorized mass at St. John's Cathedral.

The priests, Rev. Robert T. Begin, 30, of St. Gregory's, and Rev. Bernard Meyer, 31, of St. Agatha's, joined a group of people inside the church who were protesting the Vietnam war, what they called "racism" in the parish and the failure of the church to adopt more modern methods.

Both priests were arrested and told to appear in Cleveland municipal court today.

Police Say Pensions Mishandled

TORONTO (CP) — Charging mismanagement of their $35,000,000 pension fund, Toronto policemen Sunday demanded a voice in the fund's administration.

Constable Syd Brown, president of the 3,200-member Metropolitan Toronto Police Association, said after a special meeting attended by about 1,000 policemen that several demands will be presented to city council and the police commission.

Constable Brown said an aspect which caused concern among policemen is that 93 per cent of the fund is invested in Toronto municipal bonds and debentures which return an interest of only five per cent.

"If more of the money were invested in blue-chip common stocks and in mortgages, the return would be about double that," Constable Brown said.

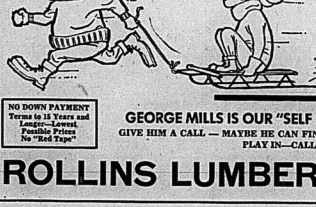
A HOME OF YOUR OWN - by ROLLINS

A Labor of Love...



As we rejoin Charlie and Ethel, we find them busy painting the walls in the Master Bedroom. They are living in their own home now, which Rollins 'Self Help' plan helped them to build. And they don't mind the work at all! Charlie says that he doesn't get the least bit tired and Ethel considers the finishing of their own home a real "Labor of Love".

But...

They Don't Work all the Time

Charlie and Ethel have a big back yard on the lot that George Mills helped them locate. They often take time to enjoy their spacious property. At the apartment building they were in before, there wasn't any big back yard to play in. Now they really appreciate the spaciousness and privacy of their own property.

Jews Fear Trials

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel told UN Secretary General U Thant Monday another group of Jews is threatened with execution in Iraq. Israel's ambassador to the United Nations, Joel Barromi, conveyed the information, and Thant said he would look into the report immediately.

After the Iraqi government announced that nine Iraqi Jews and five other Iraqis were hanged Monday for spying for Israel, Iraqi Information Minister Abdullah El Samarrai told a news conference in Baghdad that 65 other persons would be brought to trial soon on charges of spying for Israel and plotting against the Iraqi government. Barromi in his warning to Thant possibly was referring to members of this group.

Israel denied that those executed Monday were spying for her and said their only crime was being Jewish.

Thant expressed fear that the executions would upset UN efforts to achieve peace in the Middle East.

30-hour Battle Fought

SAIGON (Reuters) — South Vietnamese supported by air and artillery strikes killed 320 North Vietnamese troops in a 30-hour battle in the central highlands that ended Monday, a government military spokesman said today.

He said 51 South Vietnamese Rangers were wounded in the fighting which began Saturday morning 25 miles northwest of Pleiku city and 15 miles from the Laotian border.

Charred Corpses Found in Ruins

DUNNVILLE, Ont. (CP) — Firemen and work crews toppled the walls of the Victoria Hotel Monday as the search continued for bodies in the ice and frozen ashes of the three-storey hotel.

Fire Chief Malcolm Bowden said work crews found two charred corpses Monday, bringing to four the number of dead since an explosion and fire ripped through the 50-room hotel early Sunday.

All the bodies recovered were too badly burned to be identified.

Police Chief George Rowe said Monday only two persons have so far officially reported to police they were registered in the hotel in this town 30 miles southeast of Hamilton.

The hotel's register was lost in the blaze. Police estimate 43 persons were registered. Names of the missing have not been released.

Traps for Hijackers Urged on Airlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Federal Aviation Agency says it is being flooded with suggestions from an aroused public on how to deal with the increasing number of airline hijackings.

One of the strangest suggestions calls for installing a trapdoor in the cockpit. Once a would-be hijacker entered, the pilot could open the trap and send the air pirate plummeting to his death.

Some other ideas:

Build a double-door cockpit entrance, trap the hijacker between them and fill the space with gas. Or shoot would - be hijackers with a tranquilizer gun.

Another popular solution is for the United States to provide free transportation for anyone who wants to go to Cuba, where most hijacked planes are taken.

And then there's the ultimate solution: "Have the Cuban national anthem played over the public address system of the airliner just before takeoff. Arrest anyone who stands up."

Ontario Urged to Reach Agreement With France

TORONTO (CP) — A provincial government committee studying French culture in Ontario Monday recommended that Ontario conclude agreements with Quebec, France and other French-speaking communities in the world.

The 18-month study, which made 107 recommendations to Education Minister William Davis, said that this and other changes could mean "certain sacrifices" for both English- and French-speaking Ontarians.

But it added that only by such means could the 650,000 Franco-Ontarians be given the place in Canadian society they were guaranteed at Confederation.

"We don't have enough resources to pull ourselves up by our bootstraps," committee chairman Roger St. Denis said at a news conference. "We don't mind going to France if we can find help there."

Mr. St. Denis said he hoped for more regular and frequent aid from Quebec and suggested English Ontarians might want to reciprocate by giving a hand to English-speaking minorities in Quebec.

Mr. Denis said the report is not aimed at "shoving French down anyone's throat." But he said preservation of French culture in the province would be easier if a large number of English-speaking Ontarians were interested in learning French and were interested in French matters.

The committee, set up in 1967 by Premier Robarts, put a high priority on a recommendation that the Ontario government establish a Franco-Ontarian council to operate a cultural promotion service.

The council would have the same legal status as the Ontario council for the arts, and would have its own management and budget and be directly responsible to the premier.

Quinte Liberals On Ottawa Visit

By HARRY MULHALL, Staff Reporter

OTTAWA — A band of Quinte-district boosters are in town here today hoping to fire federal enthusiasm in an audacious vision of their home region's future.

That future — as they project it — would utterly transform the Quinte area, socially, economically.

It envisions:

An international airport. Catering to the age of the superjet and supersonic traveller, it would be situated on the lonely Lake Ontario shoreline of Prince Edward County.

A new, planned city. In part housing the workforce created by the air terminal, it could be built along the Trent River, north of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway.

Both projects are outlined in a brief which was presented to transport department officials here today by members of the Prince Edward - Hastings Liberal Association.

For Other Stories
See Front Page
Second Section

The document fairly runs over with futuristic supporting ideas — not the least a proposal for a gambling casino exclusive to air passengers that could rival Las Vegas in clientele volume.

For all the dazzling proportions of the projects, the brief is no dream sequence.

It falls into line with current federal thinking on the future.

Already, the government has decided not to expand the Toronto international airport. A new location must be found for a super jetport and today's Quinte bid is part of a current promotion scramble by Ontario communities.

As for the planned city, the new community concept was first proposed by Transport Minister Paul Hellyer.

It also is the surprise of the local brief.

The airport proposal has been public knowledge for months. In fact, it was first mentioned at the liberal nomination convention selecting a candidate for the 1967 federal election.

But the planned-city project was not publicly unpackaged until the brief was outlined to reporters just before its sponsors were Ottawa-bound.

The new city is projected as a suitably radical twin idea for the airport project.

Emphasizes the brief: "Wherever the new airport is built, it will act as a magnet to draw new industry, and before long a new city will be growing around it helter-skelter. For this reason, it is only reasonable to plan both the new airport and the new city for the same general area. In this way the department of transport can maintain control of the entire development and avoid the complete chaos that could result."

The city site selected by the brief's boosters is a corridor five miles wide, 15 miles deep, on either side of the Trent River and Trent Canal.

Quinte Global Village?

William Menzies pinpoints project he and others hope might bring international environment to Quinte district. Today, brief bidding for Lake Ontario jetport is being presented to federal government.

Hydro Awaits Rotating Strikes

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Officials of the Eastern Region of Ontario Hydro at Belleville don't know just how the rotating strike of Hydro employees scheduled to commence Feb. 3 will affect this area.

"We can't just say yet what the plan is," stated Norman Manning, public relations officer for the Hydro's Eastern Region which has a total of 1,442 employees in the area extending from Port Hope to the Quebec Border and south to the Josephs power plant on the Ottawa River.

Of the total number of employees, about 1,230 belong to the Canadian Union of Public Employees which has voted to go on strike to support demands for a new work contract.

More than 85 per cent of the 8,900 employees of the provincially - owned electric power commission voted in favor of the strike action.

The plan of the strike action is to disrupt Hydro management but not service.

The union has promised to

Paisley's Aides Beat Off Police

BELFAST (CP) — Followers of Rev. Ian Paisley today defied a policeman's attempt to take Northern Ireland's militant Protestant leader into custody.

Paisley opened the front door of his Belfast home and the officer tried to enter to arrest him. Three men suddenly appeared and a scuffle, punctuated by the sound of breaking glass, broke out. The officer left the house and drove off.

The burly, bull-necked Paisley and his chief follower Maj. Ronald Bunting, commander of the Protestant Loyal Citizens of Ulster, were sentenced to three months imprisonment in March Monday for unlawful assembly during recent civil rights clashes in this protestant-dominated state.

They were both allowed bail to enable them to appeal, but at a rally of his supporters in Belfast Monday night Paisley said he was ready to go to jail immediately.

Paisley and Bunting were given a hero's welcome by 2,000 supporters at the rally.

Paisley is leading a campaign to oust Prime Minister Capt. Terrence O'Neill, who is already fighting a leadership battle with former deputy premier Brian Faulkner, who resigned Friday.

McKeough to Answer Questions from Floor

Regional government is not expected to be introduced in the Quinte district for at least three years, but area municipal officials and residents are going to have the opportunity of putting questions to municipal affairs minister Hon. Darcy McKeough on the subject.

Quinte riding representative Dr. R. T. Potter has arranged a public meeting at Club Cascades for Feb. 19 at which Mr. McKeough will answer questions.

Dr. Potter says that letters will go out to all Quinte riding residents and to members of councils, boards and commissions, inviting them to attend the meeting.

Following an opening talk by Mr. McKeough, the meeting is expected to be thrown open for questions.

At last week's county council meeting Hastings MPP Clarke T. Rollins said he had been assured by Mr. McKeough that regional government would not be introduced in this area for at least three years.

But already a special committee of county council has been named to study aspects of regional government.

And last week Belleville Mayor Dr. J. Russell Scott sought to set up a comparable committee to study the regional government with the county.

However, the mayor's recommendation was tabled to allow council members to first confer with city administration officials to get ideas on what form regional government should take.

The provincial government has decided to use several criteria as guidelines in designing regional governments. Five of these guidelines were set out in the report of the Ontario committee on taxation and the government accepted them as entirely valid.

These criteria are:

● A region should exhibit a sense of community identity based on sociological characteristics, economics, geography and history.

● A region should have balance of interests so that no one group or interest can completely dominate the region.

● There must be a financial base adequate to carry out regional programs at a satisfactory level.

● The region should be large enough so that local responsibilities can be performed efficiently by taking advantage of economies of scale.

● Regional boundaries should facilitate maximum interregional co-operation.

However, additional criteria have been adopted by the government. These are community participation and where possible community acceptability.

The government promised that while it must accept final responsibility for any regional government legislation, it would work with communities in developing specific proposals.

Expert Returning To Do New Report

TRENTON — Eric Hardy will be coming back to Trenton this year to make a survey of the town's administration and the price tag for his services will be $5,000.

Council last night passed a resolution to hire the consultant to make an administrative survey of the town and hinted at a possible economic survey.

Councillor Stanley Ketchenson, who has been studying the matter in committee for the past two weeks, said Mr. Hardy will return officially to study the town's administration. Economics also might also come under discussion.

"We expect that Mr. Hardy will come here sometime in February", said councillor Ketchenson.

In an earlier letter to council Mr. Hardy outlined those areas of the town administration he would concern himself with, but this letter was not made public.

A preliminary economic survey recently saw Eric Hardy labelling the town's administration as "lacking in paper qualifications".

But no one seems to know just what changes will come as a result of the upcoming survey.

"I have no idea what changes will come", said mayor James MacDonald. "but I guess that we might be getting more staff".

Area Pets Delivered Home COD

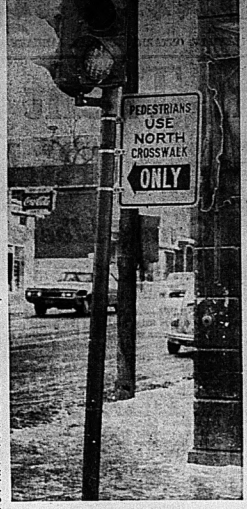
TRENTON — Trentonians who have their dogs picked up by the Quinte Humane Society will have their pets delivered back to their homes for the current $10 fine.

Council Gerald Weaver informed council of the move which came as a result of a complaint lodged by Councillor E. M. Parker at the last council meeting.

Councillor Parker said he believed it was too much to ask a Trenton resident to drive all the way to Belleville to pick up his pet.

Since last September the Society has been looking after animal control in Belleville and Trenton. The group operates from a Belleville office.

He believed that some compensation should be allowed for this inconvenience.



This changed last night when Councillor Weaver announced that in the future any Trentonian who has his pet snatched will have the animal delivered on payment of the regular $10 fine.

They Heed Not

Pedestrians Read But Do Not Heed

Habit is sometimes a difficult thing for people to overcome.

At least it seems that way for pedestrians crossing Front Street at the Victoria Ave. intersection.

In the past pedestrians have been accustomed to using both walkways leading across Front Street from both sides of Victoria Ave.

But to allow more freedom of movement for vehicles turning left off Victoria, members of the traffic committee felt it would be better if only the north walkway was used and directional signs were erected.

Judging from the reaction, people are reading the signs, but according to city engineer Wilbur Purcell at yesterday's traffic committee meeting, the signs are being "completely ignored."

But police chief D. T. Crosbie is taking a philosophical view of pedestrian unwillingness to co-operate.

"We'll have our beat men do a little educational work," he told the committee.

Homeowners Fight Complex

TRENTON — Trenton's proposed apartment building has met with objections even before it has gotten off the ground.

Council last night heard W. G. Weston, a lawyer, speak on behalf of 23 homeowners in the immediate area of the complex. The residents claim the building will lower property values.

"My clients feel council's move to go ahead with the rezoning of land to allow construction of the apartment is precipitous and was not given enough consideration," stated Mr. Weston.

Two weeks ago council heard an application from Thomas Fleming to take option to have the land rezoned to allow the 60-unit apartment to be constructed.

Mr. Fleming was acting as agent for the J. Scaletta Real Estate firm which owns the land.

Council agreed at the time to have a bylaw ready by which they would advertise their intent to go to the Ontario Municipal Board with the rezoning application. This advertising period would be of three weeks duration and it is then that objection would be heard.

Board to Report

TRENTON — Trenton's representatives on the new regional board of education have suggested they make reports to council on affairs at board meetings which affect the town.

Council last night approved a suggestion by Ralph Weaver and Mrs. Jean Hutchison by which they would make a report to council concerning board activities related to the town.

The report will be made on the second council meeting of June and the first council meeting of December.

Mr. Weston stated his clients knew of the legalities involved but emphasized they felt council should take another look at its decision to go ahead with steps which would lead to a possible rezoning.

"The parking lot and traffic which will result will have a detrimental effect on property values in the immediate area of Sidor subdivision", claimed Mr. Weston.

However both Mayor James MacDonald and Councillor E. M. Parker reaffirmed council's stand when they agreed that there is a need for this type of building in Trenton and, as a result, the application will be put to the OMB.

But the bylaw, which was to be ready tonight, was delayed as Clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry said he did not have the completed written bylaw from the town solicitor.

Mr. Larry stated that once the bylaw is received it should then be discussed by council. It is expected the bylaw should be ready by next council meeting. It is then that the three-week period will begin in which objectors to the $500,00 project can officially complain.

McNeill Appointed As County Education Head

PICTON — John H. McNeill, principal of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute, has been selected as director of Education for Prince Edward County at a salary of $15,000.

Mr. McNeill was informed of the appointment last night after the county board of education chose him from 19 possible applications and he will take over his new duties tomorrow.

Mr. McNeill came to Picton one and a half years ago to become principal of PECI from Ft. Frances where he was principal of a 70 teacher secondary school.

The 32 year old director was born in Janetville and graduated from Lindsay Collegiate High School in 1935.

He taught elementary school for 10 years, the last few years of which he acted as principal.

During this period Mr. McNeill worked on his bachelor's degree which he later received from Queen's University.

Then it was off to Timmins High School to teach history and English which eventually led to specialization in guidance counselling.

Continuing his education, Mr. McNeill received his master degree in education from the University of Toronto. He served as head of the guidance department at Sault Ste. Marie High School and held the position of director of guidance at Royal York Collegiate in Etobicoke from 1953 to 1958.

He accepted the position of vice - principal at Delhi and from there held three principalships before coming to Picton in 1957.

New Press Policy Made At Trenton

TRENTON — Trenton council last night established a policy set for press releases are concerned.

It was affirmed last night that all releases to the press media will come only from either Mayor James MacDonald or Clerk-comptroller O. W. Larry.

The move follows public criticism of the high number of closed council meetings which Trenton council has been holding. Trenton Times Klaney has expressed concern over these meetings. He feels that some of the personality clashes in the committee meetings.

Last night's move was labelled by Mayor MacDonald as one which would "continue to attend good relations with the press."

Ireland Replaces Murray As C of C Head

Fifty-three weeks after he was installed as president of the Chamber of Commerce in Belleville Hugh Murray stepped out of the chair last night in favor of the new president Jack Ireland.

It was the annual Chamber of Commerce meeting held last night at the Hotel Quinte where the induction of the 1969 officers and directors of the Chamber took place.

Judge J. C. Anderson presided over the official induction ceremony.

Bringing congratulations to those present at last night's meeting and to the new and old officers of the chamber were Les Grills, MP for Hastings, Dr. Richard T. Potter, MPP for Quinte and Belleville Mayor Dr. J. Russell Scott.

* * *

In his remarks to the guests past president Murray pointed out the highlights of the past year.

"All of the committees were very busy last year," said Mr. Murray, "and they did get a lot done."

* * *

Highlights of the year included a course in retail management in conjunction with Loyalist College and the department of education, the distribution of thousands of promotional pamphlets as well as action that was taken on dockage facilities for Belleville and recommendations on the Quinte water pollution problem.

Mr. Murray asked the city fathers to "help and assist the Chamber of Commerce."

"There are very few people who don't benefit from the Chamber's activity," he finished.

In accepting the chair, Jack Ireland recognized the "great responsibility" on his shoulders as president of the Chamber of Commerce.

"Mr. Murray has put the prestige of this organization at the highest level it has been for 103 years," said Mr. Ireland.

"And I pledge to you to do all in my power to maintain this high level."

Mr. Ireland presented past president Murray with a plaque recognizing his outstanding service as president of the Chamber. Mrs. Murray was presented with a bouquet of red roses.

For A Year Well Worked

Outgoing Chamber of Commerce president Hugh Murray stands beaming beside his wife at last night's annual meeting of the Chamber. Mr. Murray was presented with a plaque by incoming president Jack Ireland who also presented Mrs. Murray with a bouquet of roses.

Economics Affect Distance

There are distances and there are distances.

It may sound rather confusing at first but the guest speaker at the annual Chamber of Commerce meeting last night, F. M. Helleiner — associate professor of economic geography at Trent University, emphasized the difference between distance and distance.

Economic distance opposed to Euclidian distance, that is, "Take the distance from Belleville to Guelph and Belleville to Gravenhurst." Mr. Helleiner told the group. "They are not the same distance away."

"On an Ontario road map both cities are equi-distant from Belleville "but take the economic difference and see how much they vary."

"You'll find that Guelph and Gravenhurst are not the same distance away," he said.

Economic geography is constantly changing, he said, "and the economic distance between places is getting shorter."

He used the MacDonald - Cartier freeway as a "flexible example of economic geography which we mold through our own decisions."

"The Canadian Forces Base in Trenton has brought Belleville closer to Cyprus than any other place in Canada. "Where historically the problem has been distances — in the future the problem will be proximity," he claimed.

In relating his speech to the Chamber of Commerce Professor Helleiner said the city councils and Chambers of Commerce could no longer make decisions without considering the areas around them.

"Is the Chamber of Commerce in Belleville still planning and making decisions according to their shape and Euclidian geography or are they striving to equal the economic geography?" he asked.

He was thanked and presented with a gift by Jack Ireland.

Blindness Is A Dual Tragedy

Blindness represents not only personal tragedy but economic loss. This was the theme of an address to Rotarians yesterday by Arthur J. Gosselin, assistant historian of Bell Canada and an authority on the problems of the blind.

Stating that up to three-quarters of the causes of blindness are preventable, Mr. Gosselin stressed the necessity of safety measures in plants where there was any possibility of employees being struck by flying objects. Safety glasses, for instance, should be worn, he said.

He cited the case of an employee who has cost the company $30,000 in compensation. Now as an incentive to safety, the company has a "wise owl club" made up of members who, by adhering to safety measures, have been saved from injuries.

Mr. Gosselin said the club has nearly 200 members who could have cost the company more than five million dollars in compensation had they been injured.

According to the world health organization, of the three billion people in the world 11 to 15 million are blind. Of these, about a million are children.

In North America and Western Europe two people in every thousand are blind. In the rest of the world the figure is twice as high, and in the Middle East and Africa six to 10 times as high.

Trachoma, an eye disease caused by poor hygiene, is rife in these regions. But it is also common among Indians and Eskimos in the far north in Canada.

One in four people in North America have defective sight, before the age of 20, said Mr. Gosselin. About 420 North Americans go blind every week, or 60 every day.

At least one-third of the world's blind are of working age. In Canada alone, the total economic loss through blindness and other eye malfunctioning costs approximately $100,000,000 annually.

Mr. Gosselin also noted there are nearly 25,000 people registered with the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

Every year in Canada and the United States up to 400,000 eye injuries occur, necessitating absence from work.

Two Quinte Area Youths Face Eighteen Charges

TRENTON — Two teenagers appeared in court here today to hear 18 separate charges read against them.

The youths, Dennis Arthur Mountenay, 16, of 296 Nixon Avenue in Wellington and Keith Richard Wight, 17, R.R. 1 Consecon, were arrested on Thursday night.

When police investigated they found 17 handguns in the trunk of a car.

Police also report finding two double-barrelled shotguns, four rifles, along with more pistols and ammunition when the Wight farmstead in Consecon was searched.

Total value of the guns is estimated at $2,000.

Both youths face a charge of abduction, two charges of assault with intent to steal, four charges of theft, one charge of breaking and entering, and one charge of possession of an offensive weapon.

The case has been remanded until Feb. 4. Both are in custody and bail has not been set.

Awarded Scholarship

Neil Miles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph C. Miles, Belleville, has been awarded the Adele Stracey scholarship for four years of achievement as a student in the faculty of medicine at Queen's University.

Five scholarships, worth $2,000 each, were granted to Queen's medical students this year.

Mr. Miles, who will graduate in 1970, is attending Queens and is with the resident intern staff at the Ontario Hospital. A life long resident of the city, he graduated from Quinte Secondary School.

Global Unrest

This is the age of rebellion. Lately the focus has been on religious strife in Northern Ireland, with the Roman Catholic minority there complaining they are being denied their full civic rights by the Protestant-dominated government.

Now unrest has spread south into the Irish Republic. In Dublin last week more than 1,000 demonstrators clashed with police during a demonstration against the city's housing shortage. As in Northern Ireland the agitation has religious overtones, this time involving dissension between factions within the Roman Catholic church, the dominant religion in the republic. Younger Jesuit priests, Dublin reports say, have become increasingly militant in demanding that the church hierarchy speak out against the republic's social ills.

Religious strife is not new to Ireland. The fresh element lies in it being linked with social disquiet over standards of living. And as if the problems of the Irish were not enough for the usually stable British Isles, over in London unrest is brewing among young men planning to enter the church.

Described as a revolt of theological students, the unrest came to the fore in a manifesto issued by men from six denominations at a meeting called by the Student Christian Movement. The protest, which went to the heads of more than 100 theological colleges, said in part: "We feel isolated from almost all aspects of modern society."

One of the main complaints of many students is that they feel their training has little relation to such issues as race, poverty, injustice and political turmoil. Undeniably, this is where the action is, and it is not surprising the new crop of students believe that in courses of study which have been the norm for many years they are not being fully prepared for the realities of today's hectic world.

Male Styling

Katherine MacGillivray, public relations director for the Allied Chemical Company Ltd. of Canada, says she is all for color, novel styles, long hair, beards and moustaches for men.

Mrs. MacGillivray suggests there is nothing effeminate about colorful clothing for men. Her point is a heroic one, but one has only to consider the audience — the grey-suited gentlemen of the Belleville Sales and Ad club, as well as similar groups — to realise that the color spectrum does not admit of any great variation where the male of the species is concerned.

By the same token one has only to look at those who do step out of line in male fashions, wearing their hair long and sporting the sort of clothing favored in more unconventional circles to realize there is a dividing line between sartorial masculinity and what borders on the foppish and effeminate.

Color on the fashion scene is mainly a feminine preserve. So too is variation in style. Men's clothing may be dull, but then perhaps that is in the nature of the beast — conservative and unimaginative in such matters. Still, a man can make an impression with good grooming, bewhiskered or not, without having to resort to avante-garde styles.

Cousteau on Pollution

Pollution has been discussed on many fronts and by many people — but by none with such knowledge of the marine life threatened by pollution, or so influential in the sphere, as underwater explorer Jacques-Yves Cousteau.

Speaking recently at Long Beach, California, Mr. Cousteau said pollutants threaten to destroy the sea before man can tap its natural resources.

"The sea is going to be of enormous use to man and we have hardly begun to exploit its riches . . . but we are destroying it with all kinds of waste-chemicals, oils and biological pollution."

Cousteau has spent much of his life in ocean research and his words carry particular weight. We hope his warning will serve to reinforce the efforts being made around the world to curb the filth that threatens the great natural resource represented by the oceans and the fresh water supply of the world.

CBC's Davidson Fails to Rid Network of Political Bias

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation had its new president for just about a year.

He is George Davidson, the ex-manager's mandate. He supposedly wonder-working secretary of the Treasury Board who had top a select staff of all talents, best in the entire federal civil service, in the East Block.

Nearly 30 years a federal civil ity minister, the government's top trouble-shooter, George Davidson was expected to work similar wonders in the CBC.

So what has been happening? Nothing that doesn't suggest that far from taking over at CBC, the new president himself has been taken over.

The publicly - owned broadcasting corporation, currently costing the taxpayers an hourly $154,300,000, continues spending money as if there is no tomorrow . . . example: It cost six times more for the CBC to cover the Olympics in Mexico City than to finance the Canadian team at the games.

Official figures provided for Parliament:

Cost of the 178-member Canadian Olympic team: $380,000.

Cost of the 108-member CBC Olympic staff: $2,280,000.

And primarily, the CBC was there to cover the Canadians.

What this means is high, wide and handsome spending, hasn't the new president changed?

Well, for starters, it's said that CBC probably is becoming bored with it long since, parliamentarians, Liberal, Conservative, Creditiste and the Quebec independents, have been warning that the French network, radio and television, is controlled by the separatists.

Andy Laurenson, who as former state secretary was "responsible" — as the saying goes in Parliament — for the CBC, said and keeps saying the same thing.

And now, Montreal Liberal MP Jean-Pierre Goyer, parliamentary secretary to External Affairs Minister Sharp, declares quite flatter - of - factly, that separatist control is so complete that the news on the staff of the CBC French network, is not, or won't use it to promote the ultra-nationalist cause of a "Free Quebec" which Mr. Goyer are "untouched."

Another investigation — CBC has been charged with for many years has amounted to a confusing open - and parliamentarily made - by files for the Canadian network.

If it is not so, then the CBC is missing what amounts to an invitation to deny it through legal action — with the publication of the names of some of the staff allegedly involved. They could sue.

And what else remains the same within the CBC?

Don't look now, but the old gang is back: Patrick Watson and Tommy Ambrose of those inflammatory "Seven Days" programs Parliament investigated in 1963 quietly killed.

Ontario John Robert Madison, in his days as a Liberal MP to former Prime Minister Pearson, spent every Sunday night through some 30 weeks monitoring "Seven Days" and found:

On religion: Twenty - two of the program's 30 items were "sarcastic, antagonistic and bitter" with the CBC "in Canada into the Christ" its ultimate extremism.

On business: Of 46 items, 39 "criticized" and "condemned" the commercial, financial and professional community.

On record: All 30 items "played up bitterness, extremism, vicimism, with the emphasis on the destructive" elements of the problem.

On drugs: Two programs devoted to the problem "stressed some within the CBC?

the delights of narcotics and ignored the perils."

On the United States: Of 89 items, 81 were anti-American.

On Communism: On 15 different programs Red China and Red Russia were "idealized."

On politics and the Queen: Fifteen of 16 items put low and order "in a very bad light."

On the federal government: Forty-eight of 49 items were "destructive, indicrediting all political parties and many of their personalities."

Where is the new president, assigned by CBC "to clean-house-ing!" Alive and captive of the corporation.

Not only has CBC swallowed its new boss, it is busy digesting him.

How so?

Asked if he and his executives would use all means to keep the networks operating in the ever-present danger of a strike, CBC heads are quoting him as saying: "Oh my goodness no, it would mean us crossing the picket line."

"His name is Benson — he's spot-checking to make sure nobody took anything with them."

'Warranties Suspect' Says U.S. Investigating Committee

Montreal Star

According to Betty Furness, chairman of a special presidential task force on appliance warranties and service in the United States, many warranties on major appliances are "more garbage than guarantees." The committee's 217-page report, released last week, catalogued numerous examples of deceptive practices and unfortunate purchaser experiences.

One case noted by the Federal Trade Commission, for example, told of a dishwasher "designed so that the motor became watersoaked and burned out at the month interval." No doubt the warranty, if there was one, had already conveniently expired. For as FTC chairman Paul Rand Dixon said, "all too frequently" a warranty is a "legal shroud under which effectively camouflages a lengthy list of disclaimers and limitations upon the seller's obligations."

Our attention is drawn to these findings because many of the major appliance manufacturers whose products were examined by the U.S. group are also marketing goods in this country, and because concern about warranties has already been voiced here but not yet translated into effective legislation.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford admits that consumers in Canada do not have adequate information about the goods they buy. Last fall, in recommending that laws on false advertising be enforced by the federal, rather than the provincial governments, the minister hinted at a shakeup in his department, protection against fraud and deception, and better warranties as a specific area.

Many companies have lived up to their warranties, replacing or repairing without charge products which are defective; some have even acted after the guarantees technically expired. But many others just shrug their shoulders and say "too bad." We hope Mr. Basford will soon be able to translate his fine-sound ing theories into practice and enumerate instances in which his department has taken action on the matter.

Letter to the Editor

Church St. Tough On School Bus Drivers

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

After reading the remarks in Your paper of Marion Andrews and W. Hanthorn I can agree with their feelings toward the school bus situation in Belleville.

As the driver of one of the buses concerned I was very disturbed to learn that we were not to be allowed to park on John St.

As Mrs. Andrews and Mr. Hanthorn have already pointed out, with the increase in business in the downtown area and the hazards to bus drivers, one has to wonder what situation that driver has brought about.

Certainly, it cannot be said that it has relieved any traffic congestion. On the contrary, the one long traffic on the more-travelled Church St. only makes more confusion and frustration for motorists, who have both my sympathy and respect for the patience they have shown with their shifty bus ride their owner when they must surely feel the stripping their gears.

If one wanted to be broad-minded one could admit that the students with cars (and motor bikes, weather permitting) now have more accelerating space on John St. which at times would make the "Indianapolis 500" resemble a soap box derby.

I don't feel that one should be too put out by Mr. Hanthorn's idea as John St. seems to be "off limits" to patrolling police except when they are requested to perform a specific duty.

Likewise the officer on the beat, whom Mr. Hanthorn suggests about his sometimes difficult task, carrying out the duties given to him by his superiors.

I am reminded of a meeting of the Intelligencer staff when an employee of the Intelligencer was our guest speaker, and gave a very interesting account of the operations of a daily paper.

Following the discussion which followed he was asked if it was necessary for the newspaper to print articles that in some instances embarrassing for the person or families concerned.

In his answer he was the feeling of the newspapers, that the public should not be deprived of the news, but to please the feelings of so few. To this I agree, and in comparison I don't feel that the few people who do not wish us to park on John St. should be allowed to dominate the situation to the school bus drivers, (perhaps others?) and several hundred students whose plight has been met with a "take it or leave it attitude."

After driving a 40 foot school bus over this obstacle course for now have, it seems I can hear it moan:

My clutch is burned. My gears are stripped.
Direction? I've lost track.
I feel like I'm S.O.L.
Oh John St., TAKE ME BACK.

R. ADAMS,
Consecon.

Police Praised

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Miss MacFarlane and I wish to thank the Belleville police department for the courtesy extended to us at the time of our automobile accident in Belleville on January 10 of this year.

This was a very unnerving experience for us both, of course, and was made much easier by the kindly Police Officers assigned to the scene. If these men are representative of your Department, which I am sure they are, then you have a force of which you can certainly be proud.

JOHN HARDING,
Gananoque.

Public Schools in B. C. In Need of Overhaul

Vancouver Sun

Vancouver residents are faced with the appalling prospect of either paying enormous increases in school tax or suffering a drastic cutback of educational services.

These are the inevitable alternatives if the provincial government persists in applying cheap and arbitrary standards to the financing of the public school system.

The great hoax of the government's position is that it is supposed to equalize educational standards and opportunities throughout the province. In fact it denies both. It is ridiculous to assume that the requirements of the Public School Act. It is already too late to expect instant cure for an overcrowded, underfinanced school system and for overtaxed and underprivileged citizens. But it is up to the government to make a good start.

Unmarried Mothers

Washington Correspondent
Carl T. Rowan in The Vancouver Sun

Of all the woes of this many-troubled society, few involve more misery and more concern for more people than the pregnancy of an unmarried high school girl.

Yet some 94,000 U.S. families will face embarrassment and heartbreak this year because one of their unmarried teen-age girls bears a child, according to estimates of the health, education and welfare department.

These girls and their babies will add to an already staggering burden under which the various units of government are spending more than $3 billion a year, and this is some 1,000,000 dependent children and 1,300,000 parents.

Women on the March

The Globe and Mail

The Women's Liberation Movement is on the march and its leader, Marilyn Webb, was talking in pretty aggressive terms in Washington at the weekend.

She catalogued some of the indignities inflicted on her sex:

"We are oppressed . . . our minds have been permanently drugged . . . the media controls our thoughts . . . we are victimized by having no control over our bodies."

But the worm is about to turn (having retained that much control) and the consequences for the male-dominated Establishment are almost too awful to contemplate. By means, which Miss Webb (36) cleverly left us to guess at, she promised "we will watch the whole male society disintegrate at our feet".

Small wonder the world we live in, with one half of the oppressed crying for integration, and the other half crying for disintegration.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Jan. 28, 1969 . . .

The Franco-Prussian War came to an end 98 years ago today — in 1871 — with the formal surrender of Paris. It marked the end of the first all-out clash between a newly united Germany and France — a struggle that was renewed in 1914 and again in 1939.

1870 — The ship, City of Boston, sailed from Halifax with 191 aboard and was never seen again.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today — in 1944 — the United States government released a report on Japanese atrocities on 36,000 Allied troops it said the Japanese had deliberately made allegations of starvation, whippings and shootings and the denial of medicine; the Argentine government severed financial and commercial relations with Axis and Axis-controlled countries; Russian troops took Lyuban, it virtually breaking the German grip on the Leningrad-Moscow rail line.

Militia Approached

Czech Conservatives Seek Support to Upset Reforms

PRAGUE (CP) — Leaders of Czechoslovakia's conservative Communist faction beat the woods for domestic allies today in the showdown struggle shaping up with the liberal leaders still in control of the ruling Communist party.

Sources in the liberal camp said the conservatives, annoyed at the impact of the Russian-led 200,000 Soviet occupation troops, are sounding out the Czechoslovak army and the militia to find out where they stand.

The liberals have the solid backing of the key unions, the cultural organizations and the students. Although the sources said the conservative leaders have drawn no definite reaction yet, the liberals were said to be far from optimistic about the outcome of the power struggle.

A speech by Alexander Dubcek, Deputy Premier Lubomir Strougal, made public Monday night, called for the militia to help the Communist party "overcome these hesitations, disorientation and disintegration tendencies."

Speaking at a militia rally, Strougal urged "all-out efforts to weaken extremists, especially rightist forces." He said a firm stand must replace an "attitude of passivity, opportunism, skepticism" within the party.

The party's policy-making presidium met until Monday night to "assess the general political situation" and issued a communique warning that "new provocations" were expected.

The presidium blamed demonstrations in Prague and other towns Sunday, the day after Jan Palach's funeral, on "hooligans" and "anti-Socialist groups" who it said "tried to aggravate the situation and terrorize peaceful citizens."

Police arrested about 200 persons trying to take candles and flowers to the Wenceslas Square Sunday in tribute to Palach, the 21-year-old student who committed suicide by fire last week in an anti-Soviet gesture.

Police charged and quickly dispersed the group. Lighted candles and a Czechoslovak flag which, somehow, were placed at the foot of the statue of King Wenceslas were taken away by police.

There were more confrontations between youths and police on St. Wenceslas Square Monday, the scene of Palach's suicide. The police briefly withdrew their guard at the statue of Czechoslovakia's patron saint. But the police returned in force to disperse new crowds that came to place candles at the spot where Palach burned himself to protest the loss of freedoms under the Soviet occupation.

Prague remained tense as new reports came in of attempted self-immolations in the wake of student Jan Palach's suicide by fire.

The latest was a 17-year-old boy in Cheb, close to the West German border. He suffered second-degree burns Sunday before rescuers put out the fire. It was not known whether his motive was political.

Meanwhile, informed sources in Prague dismissed speculation that Alexander Dubcek, 47-year-old Czech Communist party leader, was having private talks with Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin.

The speculation arose from the fact that both Dubcek and Kosygin have been out of the public eye for some days.

The sources explained that Dubcek had been suffering from influenza and was still ill. In Moscow, officials said, Kosygin is resting after a mild ailment.

A Union spokesman said in an interview "We are charging Hydro with discrimination against union activity and interference with rights under the Labor Relations Act."

He said the 30 men from several Ontario locations had received suspensions ranging from one day to more than a week, because of the company's work-to-rule program which has been in effect for more than a month.

Cambridge Offer Library in Plaza

Cambridge Leaseholds Ltd. would consider providing space in their proposed North Front Street plaza for a new and library branch if it is desired by the city library board.

Alderman Arthur Keegan, member of the Parkdale Community Centre Board says he has been approached by area residents for a branch library in that district.

He points out, however, that even a branch library can be costly, and suggests the branch might be included in the proposed North Front Street plaza.

The alderman quotes George Elliott, representative of Cambridge Leaseholds as saying that his firm would "go all out" in drafting plans for inclusion of a library in their proposed plaza.

The Ontario Municipal Board hearing on a zoning change to allow the North Front Street plaza is scheduled for city hall on Feb. 4.

Completion to the proposed plaza has been entered by Oshawa Wholesale and Towmby Centre Board says he has been approached by area residents for a branch library in that district.

ANAF Ladies' Auxiliaries Hold Convention

This past weekend the Ladies' Auxiliary of the A.N. and A.F. was host for the Ontario Provincial Command quarterly meeting and this year the event was particularly significant on the occasion of its 25th year.

Many delegates and visitors from the 16 out of 22 auxiliaries present from Delhi to Otawa arrived Friday afternoon and a dance for their entertainment was provided Friday evening. A time of fellowship and renewing acquaintances was enjoyed until the "wee" hours of the morning.

The presidents of the various Ladies' Auxiliaries and the executive of the Provincial Command met at 10 a.m. Saturday morning in preparation for the afternoon session. At noon a luncheon and tea we e enjoyed which included a 25th anniversary cake cut by Mayor Russell J. Scott assisted by President Alice Storms of the host auxiliary and Mabel Galbraith. Also present at this time were J. Browning, first vice-president and W. Ford, second vice-president of the men's unit. The local unit president D. Burns was unable to attend due to illness.

Mayor Scott addressed the gathering and wished the event every success. He also praised the A.N.A.F. Units and Auxiliaries for their work with veterans and their families and mentioned his personal experience of co-operation with the local unit and the assistance they have been to the City of Belleville. Duke of Edinburgh first vice-president John Browning and the Ontario Provincial Command president Lou Murphy also spoke briefly, at this time

During the afternoon session which commenced at 2 p.m., three local members A. Storms, M. Dracup and G. Fitzgerald were presented with life memberships by the Ontario" Provincial Command auxiliary president Ella Smith. These are given after ten years of active and devoted service in furthering the cause of the Auxiliary. The local group has ten life members, six of these are charter members and include A. Browning, M. McKenna, M. Ford, B. Smith, M. Galbraith and E. Lundberg. Other life members are E. Buckley and A. Storms.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in settling outstanding business.

A hot roast beef buffet dinner was enjoyed at 7 p.m. and a number of prizes donated by local merchants were drawn following the repast.

To conclude the evening a variety of entertainment arranged by J. Fitzgerald and J. Gannon including records, skits and humorous items provided an evening of fun and laughter.

President Alice Storms was commended for the time, effort and hard work she put forth in co - ordinating such a successful event.

A bright and lively panel, composed of (from left to right) Dr. Elizabeth Scott; Father Cummings of St. Michael's Church; Walter Cochrane, P.H.E. of Belleville Public Schools; and Walter Beevor, P.H.E. Department Head of B.C.I. discuss family life education. Their audience was Quinte Area Elementary School Teachers present at a dinner meeting held at Eastminster United Church Monday evening.

Panel Discussion Centres On Family Life Education

By LINDA GELDART

A large gathering of Quinte area elementary school teachers met at Eastminster United Church Monday night to listen to an enlightened panel discussion on the concep-. meaning and scope of family life education.

Members of the panel made individual contributions to the program, led by Rev. Father Cummings of St. Michael's Church, who introduced the topic.

Father Cummings spoke about the need to educate youth, citing as evidence teenage marriages, the high percentage of marriage and family breakdown. Using these facts, he indicated that adolescents have "not sufficient guidance in both their physical and psychological needs."

"The goal of family life education is a person who accepts and values his total self — his behavior, and his value system. Ultimately, it is a person who can communicate with others, and who can listen to and be concerned about others."

He also explained to his audience that this type of education is based on a Christian philosophy of the family, and a Christian philosophy of man's existence.

He traced the different role and composition of the family today, and what this role means to children. Any program development of family life education depends upon the family life already begun in the home.

Essentially, the program is one, according to Father Cummings, that is "a partnership of home and school," developing emotionally stable children and adolescents, providing knowledge of the many aspects of sex, and to develop attitudes and standards that will inter-relate to society and the individual.

He concluded by emphasizing, "we must always remain open and willing to improve as we go along, realizing that there will always be new methods, new understandings and new needs to be met."

Speaking next was gynecologist, Dr. Elizabeth Scott who spoke on the role of parents and the community.

Reminding her audience that "this whole idea arose mainly as the result of a community need and community anxiety," she went on to talk about the "sexual renaissance" in America.

"It is our task in so-called sex education, to help children and adolescents to direct their sexuality successfully."

"Some parents feel — and rightly so, that sex education is their job. It is — and they do it to a large extent whether they like it or not."

Dr. Scott delved further into the topic by saying "few parents or teachers are adequately informed or sufficiently secure to engage in free and open dialogue with youth in matters of sex, especially when questions of standards, personal behavior and moral values arise."

While maintaining that sex education is the responsibility of the parents, Dr. Scott suggested there is a need for help from the schools, churches and youth organizations.

No matter what, children will learn what they want to know. "Put," asserted Dr. Scott, "it is up to us to see that they learn the right things, the right way, instead of gathering often garbled and inaccurate information from their peers."

The next part of the program consisted of an extremely candid and informative film entitled, "parent to child about sex." The film dealt with various right and wrong attitudes many parents have concerning the sex education and curiosity of their children.

Walter Cochrane, P.H.E. Supervisor of Belleville Public Schools addressed the teachers on various program suggestions and possibilities for Hastings.

P.H.E. Department Head of B.C.I., Walter Beevor, explained the existing programs in Ontario, mainly in the Toronto area.

Although society tolerates freer sexuality, it is really confused as to what sex really is "Our conception of sex is limited and narrow," he said.

Family life education touches every aspect of sex — not only the biological, but the psychological, too.

Mr. Beevor explained the various programs that could be implemented at the various levels in the schools.

"Hastings county must develop inservice education programs, work-shops and seminars, if a program is to be implemented," he continued.

On February 3, the Hastings County is to officially receive the panel's recommendations, on a family life education curriculum for the county.

At the end of Mr. Beevor's talk, a lively question period followed.

Women Judges Could Be Appointed to Superior Courts

OTTAWA (CP) — Mrs. S. M. Milne of Winnipeg, president of the National Council of Women of Canada, said Monday Prime Minister Trudeau told a council delegation the government is considering appointment of some women judges to superior courts.

Mrs. Milne headed a delegation of about 25 council members who earlier in the day presented the organization's annual brief to the Prime Minister. Nine cabinet ministers also attended the 1½-hour meeting in the Parliament buildings which was closed to the press. The council includes about 1,800 organizations and claims to represent about 750,000 persons from all provinces.

Later at a news conference, Mrs. Milne said both Mr. Trudeau and Justice Minister Turner mentioned the possibility of appointing more women judges.

Mr. Trudeau had also said Canada had a long way to go before discrimination in employment opportunities on the basis of sex was eliminated. Some barriers were in the mind and it was difficult to legislate against people's attitudes.

He had said that in an age when skills were more important than muscle, there was more scope for the particular talents of women. In a properly balanced society there would be an adequate use of woman-power.

Mrs. Milne said the Prime Minister indicated a "talent bank"—a roster of capable, competent women suitable for appointment to, for example, vacancies on government boards—would be helpful.

Mr. Trudeau had also said the government was planning to investigate the idea of an ombudsman, one of the recommendations submitted this year by the council.

Revenue Minister E. J. Benson "wasn't committing himself" on recommendations dealing with taxation.

In its brief, the council said it strongly believes that the married woman's position in the tax system should be carefully reexamined with a family unit for taxation purposes becomes an integral part of the country's taxation structure.

The unit would require husband and wife to pay tax on their combined income.

The worship theme which was a "word spoken in due season — how good it is" was conducted by Mrs. Milton Grills and Mrs. Gerald Harrington.

The mission study on China was introduced. Political and economic conditions in China today were discussed and how they affect the rest of the world. This study will be continued during the year.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Carman Frost and Mrs. Gerald Harrington, and a social hail hour was enjoyed.

Male Student Nurse Often Mistaken for A Doctor

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP) — A male student nurse has to get used to being mistaken for a doctor.

Michael Rowland, 21, says some patients think he's a doctor and others look askance at him and demand a woman nurse.

He is a third-year student at Stratford General Hospital and president of the Southwestern Ontario Nursing Association, which represents 2,000 student nurses.

"Often patients ask me why I don't go into medicine," he said. "But to me a doctor's life is not his own."

He says he prefers nursing even though his studies, first for an RN and then for a degree at a university nursing school, will take "almost as much time as for a general practitioner."

Under his direction, the nursing association is establishing a scholarship for new students and trying to bring new unity to Ontario nursing associations.

Area Snowmobiling Attracts Large Number of Visitors

MARMORA — Already Marmora is receiving enquiries from as far away as Brockville and Toronto for accomodation and information regarding snowmobile trails around this area.

Members of the Marmora and District Snowmobile Club have been working long hours to clear the trails of brush and have them in good condition for the visitors

Objectives of the local club are to encourage snowmobilers to respect private property, curb noise in residential areas, and to operate their machines in a safe, courteous manner.

Another item discussed at last week's executive meeting, was provision of a crest for members. Students of Marmora schools are being invited to compete in a contest for a design for a crest using three colors and 4" diameter. Prizes will be awarded.

Woman Chairman of Board

OTTAWA (CP) — Winning the chairmanship of the Otawa public school board is a woman's business.

But if you're Mrs. Eileen Scotton your chances are mighty good.

Mrs. Scotton was re-elected board chairman early this year by drawing high card. She won the post a year earlier by drawing the longest straw. The draws were required to break a 6-to-6 vote deadlock on each occasion.

This year school trustees voted secretly three times, but remained deadlocked between Mrs. Scotton and David Stuart, another contender. Then the deck of cards was brought — perfectly legal under a board rule.

Mrs. Scotton drew the 10 of clubs. Mr. Stuart picked the bottom card in the deck but this was disallowed He then drew the seven of spades, leaving Mrs. Scotton winner.

A year earlier the board used the longest straw device to break the deadlock. Mrs. Scotton won but a trustee suggested that in future playing cards be used.

Bras Stolen

VERNON, Calif. (AP) — Six Los Angeles area men were arrested in the theft of 10,000 pounds of brassieres. The arrests followed a tip that $7 to $18 bras were being offered for sale at $1.85 each. The 500 cases of bras, valued at $134,000, were in a truck trailer stolen from a freight yard.

A Good Father Has A Host of Variations

By DORIS CLARK

What makes a good father? Is it the fellow who changes a diaper with aplomb, who provides taxi service at the drop of a hat, or a five dollar bill at the outreach of a hand? Is it the Head of the House who rules with iron hand, or the easy-going indulgent type?

Think a minute before you rule out — or in — any of the above, for a good father has a host of variations.

What about the Dad who can't be classified in any of the above, but is a pal you can talk to about any old thing that crops up? And who backs up Mom when it comes to rules and curfews? — Who has the time — or makes it — to go for a walk with a little fellow who needs a friend?

Take your pick. Fathers come in all sizes and kinds. With a little seasoning any one of them can do the baby chores as needed. From where I sit the Papa Par Excellence is the one described in the third paragraph.

Dear Doris: You seem to so readily accept information on all sorts of requests. I wonder if you could help me. I would like to procure materials and designs for making hot pot stands (trivets). I see them advertised from time to time and they appear to be small glazed tiles set in a sort of honeycombed frame. Thought I could also make wall plaques out of these same materials if I knew where to purchase them.

I am a widow, and although I hope to be eligible for a pension in a few months, I could perhaps make a little extra money by making and taking orders for the above. Owing to the fact that I am caring for my mother, who is 91 and cannot be left alone, I need something to keep my hand in the evenings. — Idle Hands.

Dear Idle Hands: In leafing over a handcrafts catalogue, I find a woven basket trivet, and a mosaic tile trivet on a metal frame. Can a reader guide us to other kinds?

Keeping contented and occupied calls for ritualistic ingenuity when one is homebound with an elderly relative. Would you like our pen pal club list, or something about the World Topics organization?

Do remember to get relief and time out regularly. Your mental health as well as your mother's depends on your not going stir-crazy.

Confidential to Grandmother: It seems to me the whole thing gets pretty thin and meaningless when you never get a thank you for a Christmas gift or birthday gift; and never a return present. Grandchildren who are not taught to write a little note to express thanks are simply being cheated of good manners, in my book.

If you still want to keep in touch, why not write yourself a reminder — to be unearthed ahead of next Christmas — that you'll send one family gift and let it go at that?

Points for Parents
By MARY BRYSON

Teacher: "I'm sure Susie will like it here. And I hope you will be able to come to the parent - teacher meeting next week."

Mother: "I'm not going to join the P.T.A. until next year. I'm really too busy trying to get everything settled in our new house. Moving is so disorganizing for a family."

Father: "Let's go to the P.T.A. meeting next week. We'll get to meet the teachers and some of the parents of Susie's new friends."

Mother: "It will be a good chance to learn more about her new school."

Children will feel more at home in a new school if their parents also become involved with the parents and teachers there.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Tasty Soup for Chilly Days

By MARY MOORE

You never complain when I boast, so I'm throwing modesty to the winds and frankly claiming this soup is so good you can serve it to guests from your soup tureen as the main course. Along with it I served fresh from the oven Light Brown Bread (see Thurs.) almost too hot to hold and slice on the bread board with a saw-edged knife right at the table.

This is soup weather and this soup has lots of protein in it with the ham or bacon and the beans being a protein vegetable. Do not feel you are undermounting your family. My crowd all had two big bowls and ate a whole loaf of bread with sweet butter.

My guests were Jane Lindsay and Norman Backhouse Guild. You see my Junior Miss C group was putting on a play and these wonderful amateur "show biz" folks offered to direct and make-up our fifteen-year-olds. Proceeds for play are for our organ fund and amounted to $255.00.

TUESDAY

Dinner Menu

Sloppy Joes (see Mon. — divide recipe by 3 to serve 8); Creamed Cauliflower; Green Beans; Relish Tray: Celery Hearts, Olives, Dill and Carrot Sticks; Gingered Canned Pears; Coffee.

EMEMS BEAN SOUP

1 lb. navy beans
10 cups cold water
1 lb. shank end smoked ham (or bacon end or ham bone)
2 teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 chicken cube
1 large carrot cut into tiny ¼" dice
2 large outer celery stalks chopped finely
1 large onion

In the soup pot in a cool place soak the beans in the cold water 2 or 3 hours (or overnight). I cooked mine for 4½ hours. So if you want yours for dinner at six put it on to cook after lunch. Add the ham shank or bone or bacon in one piece, salt, pepper, ox cube, carrot dice, chopped celery and onion and simmer gently covered for 4 to 4½ hours stirring 2 or 3 times. Lift out the meat and cut it into little slices to be served on top of the soup when you have ladled it into the soup bowls. Discard any rind and bones.

This makes a large potful of soup and if you have any left-over refrigerate it. It is quite thick so when you serve it at a future meal you can dilute it with milk.

Please clip this recipe and file it in your soup file.

Nylon Sari Cool Attire

OTTAWA (CP) — Chakilah Jalaluddin of Calcutta, India, is experiencing her first winter in Canada. And that can be pretty cold, especially if a main wardrobe is a nylon sari.

Mrs. Jalaluddin, the attractive former member of a provincial legislature 12 miles from Calcutta and deputy minister of social welfare in her home province, is having to make many adjustments to her new life in Canada.

As well as looking after her four-year-old daughter, Azra, and doing her own housework for the first time, she is making new friends and speaking constant English.

Her Ottawa life, she said in an interview, is all new and different. "But my husband likes his job as an economist with ARDA the Agricultural and Rural Development Agency and that is important now."

Mrs. Jalaluddin was born the daughter of a government worker who became a politician. A deputy minister of agriculture, he died suddenly and his college-educated daughter was asked to run for election to his seat in the legislature.

"My sister was studying medicine in London and my brother was too young, so the Congress party chose me. It was so surprised."

Although she won the by-election with a 42,000 "sympathy majority," she went on to win two more elections on her own.

In 1961 she also gave up studies towards her master's degree and married a graduate of the London School of Economics who was at that time assistant manager of a shipping company.

"I seemed to manage my double life pretty well. My husband only made faces when I became unusually busy as deputy minister of social welfare. In India this job is an elected one not held by a public servant as in your country."

Mrs. Jalaluddin has travelled widely and is well informed on world events.

She admires Prime Minister Indira Gandhi as a woman but wishes she were "bolder" as a leader of her country. "This may come with experience as she is very intelligent."

Ann Landers

A Letter to Men Who Drink Too Much

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please, please print this letter for the benefit of men who drink too much too often.

Boys: You are lousy lovers when you are drunk. Your wives find you revolting and disgusting. Also inadequate. When you come home from a party smashed out of your mind, please forget about romance. When you roll in dead drunk from a lodge meeting or from a poker game — or whatever it was — please don't wake up your wives and make silly suggestions. It is annoying to be jarred out of a sound sleep and she will not appreciate your sudden interest in her.

ANN LANDERS

This sort of thing happens to me at least twice a week and I am sick of it. My husband doesn't remember a single thing the next day and telling him does no good. He doesn't believe it. So, dear Ann Landers, be kind and publish this letter in your column. I want to tape it to my husband's shaving mirror. Thanks much. — KLONDIKE KATE.

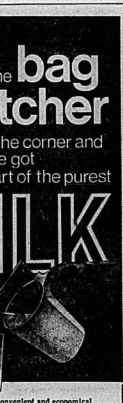
* * *

DEAR KATE: Here's your letter and I hope His Majesty takes the hint. You can bet your bottom dollar his shaving mirror won't be the only one that is decorated this morning!

* * *

DEA RANN LANDERS: In 1964 I began to date a man who came to work for our firm. At first he showed very little interest in me but I "grew on him," he says, as time went on.

In 1966 we became engaged. I am now 31 years of age, he is 36. I've been wanting to get married and start a family before I get too old. Whenever I bring up the subject he says, "Don't rush me."



Two weeks ago I insisted on setting a wedding date. I told him I was tired of waiting. He then announced that he is not good enough for me and that he has decided to "set me free."

There are rumors around the office that he has been pinching the new filing clerk behind the coat lockers. Before you tell me to dump him, please remember that I love this man in spite of his faults and I have invested five years in our future. Advise me, please. I am sick at heart. — TEARS ON MY PILLOW.

DEAR TEARS: Stop mourning the loss of this heel. A man who would take five years of a girl's time and then decide he's not good enough for her is probably right. He's not. It's funny, though, how these guys who aren't good enough for you always wind up good enough for someone else. Pity the girl who gets him. He's N.G.

Canada Backing NATO Fleet Plan

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada joined in a secret NATO agreement last year in support in principle the concept of an emergency North Atlantic fleet which could intervene quickly in crisis situations, informed sources said Monday.

NATO's Atlantic Command headquarters at Norfolk, Va., is to draw up plans for such a contingency force and then submit them to alliance members to determine how many ships each would be prepared to provide.

It is understood that the command's plans have not yet been completed and that consequently the Canadian government has not been required to make any decisions so far.

Canada gave its support to the principle of an emergency or "call-up" fleet at a time when the government was saying it had made no new NATO commitments.

Informants explained that there was no new commitment in the sense than Canada did not agree to provide more warships or other forces for such a fleet.

An emergency fleet would comprise ships already committed to the alliance by various NATO members.

Canada now contributes 20 warships, including the aircraft carrier Bonaventure, to NATO's Atlantic Command.

The new plan envisages a quick-reaction fleet of up to 50 ships.

Informants declined to speculate how many ships Canada might earmark for an emergency fleet on the ground that the whole project is still classified as secret.

At the NATO meeting of defence ministers Jan. 16, Canada said it would not participate in a NATO Mediterranean naval force.

At the Jan 16 meeting, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux joined in a NATO declaration that member countries must maintain "a firm basis of military strength" and provide funds to support the "measures measures" being taken to strengthen and improve the alliance's forces.

Harmon then shot his hole-in-one.

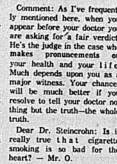
STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Patient Did Not Tell Doctor Of Occasional Funny Fits

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Would you believe it? For almost a year I went to our doctor every few weeks keeping the truth from him.



I could have saved myself the expense of all kinds of X-rays and tests if I had only told him, "Doctor, I have funny fits every once in a while. Last week I lost control, fell and broke a tooth."

But I didn't tell. Just said I was nervous. I was afraid to tell because I didn't want to be sent to a mental institution. As we have two young children, my husband came with me a few weeks ago. He described my spells to the doctor, because he was afraid I might injure our little boy and girl in one of my spells.

The doctor said "Why didn't you tell me? It might have saved you a lot of unnecessary grief. Let's take an electroencephalogram."

Sure enough, the brain-wave-tracing showed I've had a minor degree of epilepsy right along. The doctor put me on Dilantin and some other pills. I now feel like a new woman. Never felt better. I get around like the 28-year-old that I am, instead of feeling like a 60-year-old.

My reason for writing? Just to other readers of this column will tell the doctor the truth. It may save them a lot of unnecessary suffering. — Mrs. H.

By Dr. P. J. Steincrohn

Comment: As I've frequently mentioned here, when you appear before your doctor you are asking for a fair exam. He's the judge in the case who makes pronouncements on your health and your life. Much depends upon you as a major witness. Your chances will be much better if you resolve to tell your doctor nothing but the truth—the whole truth.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is it really true that cigarette smoking is so bad for the heart? — Mr. O.

Comment: My personal experience in practice supports the view that smoking is an enemy of arteries. Most doctors agree. In a recent study of 202 consecutive, well-documented cases of coronary artery disease, in Military Medicine magazine by E. C. Jacobs of the Health Service of University of Maryland, the ratio of occurrence of this disease in smokers to nonsmokers was 100:1.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is it possible to have German measles twice? — Mrs. U.

Comment: Possible but not probable.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am sensitive to house dust. Although I have been given immunizing injections of house dust I have not improved. Is there a reason? — Mrs. U.

Comment: Sometimes hypo-sensitization is ineffectual if a stock house-dust extract is used. Is your doctor using an extract made out of your own house dust?

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is it true that gallstones occur more frequently in men? I thought women. — Mrs. N.

Comment: You are right. More often in women in a ratio of about 4 to 1. Although overweight seems to be an important cause, pregnancy seems to be the one common factor in the history.

'Nose Picking Set' Halts McGill Meeting

MONTREAL (CP) — About 150 flag-waving students, chanting socialist slogans, Monday forced cancellation of the first open meeting of McGill University's board of governors.

Dean Maxwell Cohen of the law faculty called them "the nose-picking set."

The students, many of them members of a group called the Socialist Action Committee, climbed up the stairway to the sixth floor of the university's administration building and refused to let the meeting proceed.

The students were protesting, among other things, the board's omission on its agenda of the student housing problem.

Principal H. Rocke Robertson asked the students to refrain from interruptions and allow the meeting to "get on with business."

His plea was met with anti-administration slogans and chants of "ban the board".

New City Along Trent River Would Be Sequel to Jetport

The Quinte district could house Canada's first wholly-planned community — and a basic formula for its establishment already exists.

The concept of a new-age urban beauty spot is the surprise twin in a Quinte-boosting brief bidding for a future International Jetport on Lake Ontario and presented federal authorities in Ottawa today.

Location of a new city along the Trent River would be a natural sequel to local siting of the air terminal, claims the document, sponsored by the Prince Edward-Hastings Liberal Association.

The proposal envisions a city north of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway, bordering the Trent River.

Among other benefits it would provide spacious living for the work forces that would follow the settlement breakthrough caused by the airport.

The proposal is not so radical as it might appear. It also is finely timed.

A new, totally-planned city recently was revealed as a pet project of one of the most practical driving forces in the federal cabinet — transport minister Paul Hellyer.

Aesthetically, the local Liberal formula fits the ideals of such a plan. The Trent River is one of Ontario's beauty spots.

Economically, it is centrally sited — and its needs could be partially serviced by another project hinged to the airport proposal — a deep-water harbor at South Bay in Prince Edward County.

The brief locates the new community in a five-mile corridor 15 miles deep on either side of the Trent waterway.

Land in the zone now sells for $100 an acre. Likely, by this time government plans would be ready to roll, the tag would be up to $1,000. Total federal purchase cost would be $100,000,000.

Landowners would receive government bonds with a three per cent interest rate, to be cashed only when the government needed the land.

As the community developed the government would exercise possession rights and resell it for homes, business and industry.

The brief believes by that time purchase price would have rocketed to $25,000 an acre — thus handing the government a tidy profit to offset costs of municipal service installations. In turn, this would reduce local tax burdens for new community dwellers.

The brief also cites these local basic advantages for a planned city of the future:

● Unlimited fresh water available from Lake Ontario and ideal land conditions for surface and sewage drainage.

● Abundance of gravel for construction with adjacent cement plants at Point Anne and Picton. These could easily supply building needs at low transportation costs.

● Easy communications — main highways and rail lines are adjacent and after-urban air links could be available through CFB Trenton, Mountain View or Deseronto.

● Main hydro lines already are in the area and a giant new generating station is to be built near Napanee.

● Harbor facilities are available along Lake Ontario while a new harbor at South Bay could easily facilitate any Great Lakes vessel.

Transport minister Hellyer has already surmised such a planned community must be built along the Great Lakes, recalls the brief.

The only feasible area is between Windsor and Kingston, it claims, and adds:

"If we narrow this down to the point that deep harbor facilities will have to be available . . . the only protected harbor is at South Bay in Prince Edward County where we have already suggested that the new airport be built."

Gambling Casino Would Rival Las Vegas Empire

Location of a super jetport in the Quinte district is no gamble for the federal government, Prince Edward-Hastings Liberals feel.

Not so sure a bet, however, is one proposal offspring of the project — an international gambling casino.

In fact, it's the one point of dissention in the brief promoting the local Lake Ontario shoreline as the site of a new international airport.

Liberals on the committee drafting the document presented today in Ottawa, disagreed on the wisdom of citing the casino proposal.

Those opposed to it were party members from the eastern Bay of Quinte area, including Picton lawyer William S. Lane revealed when releasing the brief. (Mr. Lane is also chairman of the committee which drew up the brief.)

"I know there will be some controversy over that idea in the county," admitted Mr. Lane.

The Prince Edward representatives did not favor the proposal.

However, the brief "is a democratic idea and we allowed it to stay in," he added.

Actually, the casino would have no direct influence on surrounding local society. Its patronage would be solely international — accessible only to passengers in transit.

While there may be no precedent for such an establishment, a sound business example exists — Las Vegas.

Thousands of air travellers — including Canadians — reroute themselves through the U.S. gambling mecca regularly, say enthusiasts of the casino proposal.

A government - supervised operation would attract many U.S. tourists who would likely stay over to enjoy other area recreation attractions.

The brief even explores the possibilities of luring capital from U.S. money mogul Howard Hughes, who now controls much of Las Vegas' hotels and gambling centres.

"If Mr. Hughes could be persuaded to invest in this airport complex at the site we have proposed, this area could become a great tourist attraction rivalling Las Vegas," claims the brief.

"This would not affect our own citizens as this area could be easily sealed off for air passengers in transit and U.S. citizens only.

"This influx of American dollars would go far to offset the millions of dollars spent by Canadian citizens every year in Florida and Las Vegas."

Jetport of Future?

William Menzies Man With Airport Vision

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Every airfield has a name.

But, one detail omitted from brief today boosting the Quinte area as an international jetport centre, is a name.

However, if the move to make a multi-million-dollar air terminal part of the Quinte scene ever succeeds, there's one name that may be remembered — William Menzies.

Bill Menzies is among the delegation of Prince Edward-Hastings Liberals in Ottawa today, hopeful of attracting federal attention to their project.

Location of an international air terminal on the Lake Ontario shoreline of Prince Edward county is a Menzies inspiration.

It was Bill Menzies who first animated widespread interest in he scheme using it as part of a pitch for the Liberal candidacy in the riding at its 1967 general-election convention.

He didn't win the nomination — and the Liberals didn't win the local election — but the Menzies idea caught on.

A committee was formed to draft a summary of the scheme, and today's Ottawa visit is the culmination of that effort.

In brief, the brief, presented to Peter Bonardelli, executive assistant to Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, suggests:

Site of the jetport would be the shoreline of South Marysburg Township at Long Point. Safety and strategic location are prime factors.

In a semi-deserted area, it rules out the threat of flights over large urban sprawls. Its landing and takeoff patterns would be over water — also an inflight safety advantage.

The location is located to serve both the U.S., Toronto and Montreal regions by feeder airlines, road or rail.

Noise and other irritation factors to local residents would be minimized. This could escape round-the-clock traffic, with resulting profits to the airlines.

Smog — caused by air pollution over populous centres — would also be absent. Fog and smog cost U.S. airlines $75,000,000 last year.

Helicopters now being developed could carry metropolitan-bound passengers to their destinations in the same time it takes to battle big-city traffic.

The brief concludes: "If the present traffic congestion and soaring real estate values in our large cities continue unchecked, they will strangle themselves in their own problems within 10 years. The federal government can lead the way in decentralization by building this airport in this area."

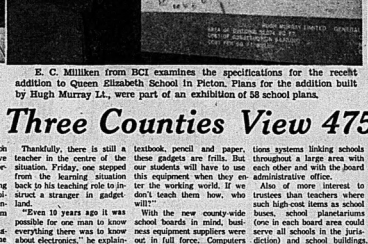
Explained in such terms, the conception seems suddenly practical.

For Bill Menzies the project has been obviously practical for years.

He's no novice. A wartime flyer, he has lived in the area for the past 14 years as a hydro station operator, and never has lost his enthusiasm for aviation.

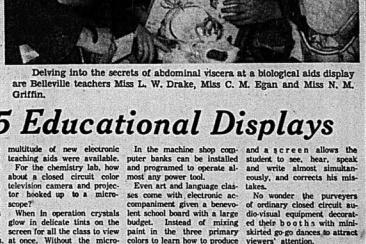
He's also confident the experts would agree with the practicality of the plan.

"If they let the experts, the planners, choose between all various sites, they will say this is the logical site."



It may be years before a decision is made. Present projections see Toronto airport facilities as adequate until 1983. A government decision on a new site is not expected until 1975-76.

Still Bill Menzies is convinced the South Marysburg site is the "logical spot for a trans-Atlantic terminus," no matter what name it goes by.



Today's committee is headed by Picton lawyer William S. Lane and includes George Cunningham, Amelisburg treve and Don Joss, Belleville businessman.

Teachers from Three Counties View 475 Educational Displays

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Teachers from Hastings, Prince Edward and Lennox and Addington Counties plunged into a Rube Goldberg world of technology Friday — all in the name of professional development.

That all the teachers seemed relatively unfazed by the experience is a tribute to the unflapability of the modern pedagogue.

Secondary school students in the three counties were given a holiday Friday as their teachers attended the sixth annual Canadian education showplace at the automotive building, exhibition park, Toronto.

There they viewed teaching aids displayed by 475 exhibitors — everything from pencils to a planetarium, film strips and floor coverings.

To the old fashioned educationist, separated from the classroom by the gap of a generation, the occasional booth of a book or pencil distributor was a reassuring sight in the sea of multi-media individualized instruction, computerized, tabulated, ungraded, video-taped and tape-recorded technology.

Thankfully, there is still a teacher in the centre of the situation, Friday, one stepped from the learning situation back to his teaching role to instruct a stranger in gadgetland.

"Even 10 years ago it was possible for one man to know everything there was to know about electronics," he explained. "Now, technology has moved ahead so fast no one can know everything. Hence, these professional development days and exhibits to give us an idea of what is available to help our students."

"To the graduate of the little red school house with its textbook, pencil and paper, these gadgets are frills. But our students will have to use this equipment when they enter the working world. If we don't teach them how, who will?"

With the new county-wide school boards in mind, business equipment suppliers were out in full force. Computers of all kinds, designed to help consolidate business and administrative functions formerly carried out by smaller boards were prominent among the displays.

They ranged from machines to speed up getting out the payroll to inter-communications systems linking schools throughout a large area with each other and with the board administrative office.

Also of more interest to trustees than teachers where such high-cost items as school buses, school planetariums (one in each board area could serve all schools in the jurisdiction) and school buildings.

Floor plans and specifications for 56 new Canadian schools were shown. Included in the exhibition were drawings of the recent addition to Queen Elizabeth School in Picton.

For the trustee who thought his school had everything a multitude of new electronic teaching aids were available.

For the chemistry lab, how about a closed circuit color television camera and projector hooked up to a microscope?

When in operation crystals glow in delicate tints on the screen for all the class to view at once. Without the microscope it costs about $10,000, but a black and white set comes at half the price.

For the physics lab an automatic, electronic piece of equipment has been invented to illustrate every principle or hypothesis on the course of study.

In the machine shop computer banks can be installed and programmed to operate almost any power tool.

Even art and language classes come with electronic accompaniment given a benevolent school board with a large budget. Instead of mixing paint in the three primary colors to learn how to produce the secondary colors the art student can mix his hues by buttons projecting three primary color disks on a screen.

A language lab enables a student to learn English or a foreign language on his own at his own speed. A button-dotted console with earphones and a screen allows the student to see, hear, speak and write almost simultaneously, and corrects his mistakes.

No wonder the purveyers of ordinary closed circuit audio-visual equipment decorated their booths with miniskirted go-go dances to attract viewers' attention.

It was left to the Canadian Association for Children with Learning Disabilities to pull the showplace into perspective with the distribution of yellow buttons.

They were enscribed: "Happiness is a teacher who understands".

Big Guns Ahead of Scoring Pace

Hull, 'Big M' Share Goal Lead While Esposito on Points Rampage

MONTREAL (CP) — The big names in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race this season are well ahead of their pace of one year ago.

Statistics released by the league today show Phil Esposito, Boston Bruins high-scoring centre, currently in the lead with 73 points, including 30 goals and a league-leading 43 assists.

Esposito's total is 19 points more than Stan Mikita of Chicago Black Hawks had at this time last season while leading the race.

Mikita himself is ahead of his own output of one year ago, but his 58 points—he had 54 at this time last season—puts him fourth now, 15 points behind Esposito.

Chicago's Bobby Hull is currently second with 65 points, including 31 goals, which ties him with Frank Mahovlich of Detroit Red Wings for the lead in goals. At this point last season, Hull was second with 52 points, including 34 goals.

The third-player now is Gordie Howe of Detroit with 64 points, one place higher and 17 points better than last season. Howe also has 24 goals, two more than one year ago.

Esposito was third in the race at this time last season with 50 points.

Alex Delvecchio of Detroit is in fifth place today with 54 points, the same as Mikita's total last season.

At this point last year, the West Division's scoring leader was Andy Bathgate, then with Pittsburgh Penguins. He had 40 points, while the goal-scoring leader, was Ray Cullen of Minnesota North Stars with 19.

Centre Red Berenson of St. Louis Blues had eclipsed both these totals today with 51 points, including 21 goals, which places him eighth in the over-all list behind Ken Hodge of Boston and Jean Beliveau of Montreal Canadiens, each with 52 points.

PHIL ESPOSITO
Sets Torrid Pace

There are also more 20-goal scorers now than one year ago.

In addition to Esposito, Bobby Hull and Howe, Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer has 28, Hodge has 26, Norm Ullman of Toronto Maple Leafs has 24, while Dennis Hull and Jim Pappin—both of Chicago—have 22 and 21, respectively.

Last season at this time only Bobby Hull, Mikita, Esposito, Ullman, Howe, Mike Walton of Toronto and Boston's Johnny Bucyk had 20 goals or more.

There have been more goals scored this season in the first 282 games played compared to last year—1,612 to 1,534.

The greater number of goals is also reflected in the goaltending averages for most teams, but not in the St. Louis figure.

Jacques Plante and Glenn Hall of the Blues lead the net-minding race with a combined average of 2.04. This compares with the 2.19 average Toronto's Johnny Bower and Bruce Gamble had as leaders one year ago.

Plante and Hall continue as dual shutout leaders, each with five.

Hawks' Golden Jet Adds to Trophy Tally

NEW YORK (CP) — Bobby Hull, Chicago Black Hawks scoring machine, Monday was named the 1969 winner of the Lester Patrick Trophy for outstanding service to hockey in the United States.

Hull, who has scored 50 goals or more during three separate National Hockey League seasons, also holds the season record of 54 goals. He will receive the trophy at a dinner here Feb. 18.

The muscular left winger has been named to the NHL's first all-star team seven times during his 12 seasons and was a unanimous choice of Eastern Division sports writers for the first left wing position this season.

A native of Point Anne, Ont., the Chicago star scored 50 goals in the 1961-62 season, 54 goals in 1965-66 and 52 in 1966-67.

Hull, 30, won the league scoring championship in 1959-60, 1961-62 and 1965-66, the Hart Trophy as the league's Most Valuable Player and the Lady Byng Trophy for outstanding sportsmanship combined with superior playing ability in 1964-65 and the Hart Trophy again in 1965-66.

Hull has a career total of 445 regular-season goals.

The trophy is in memory of the former New York Rangers' general manager and coach.

Hull was selected by a committee which included Clarence Campbell, NHL president Bill Wirtz, president of the Black Hawks; Bill MacPhail, vice-president of Television network sports of the Columbia Broadcasting System; Anthelm, sports editor of Newsweek magazine, and Jack Griffin, sports editor of United Press International.

Lack of Player Talent Expansion Roadblock: Campbell

SEATTLE (AP) — Lack of player talent probably will delay further expansion of major league hockey until 1972-73, Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, said Monday.

Campbell tossed a little ice water on Seattle's chances of getting an NHL franchise because of the size of the Seattle Coliseum but said he was impressed with the Coliseum in Vancouver.

"I told them it looked like a very good place for an NHL team," he said of a visit to Vancouver Friday night when that city's Western Hockey League team drew 13,301 fans.

Campbell said Seattle's 12,300-seat Coliseum is a minimal-sized facility.

Soviets Add Pair

SHERBROOKE, Que. (CP) — Henri Crochetiere, president of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association, said Monday the Russian national hockey team, currently on a cross-Canada tour, has agreed to play two games in the province before returning to the Soviet Union.

Crochetiere said the Russians will meet Canada's national team at Quebec City Feb. 2 and will play at Sherbrooke Feb. 3 against either a group of all-stars from the Quebec Senior Hockey League or Sherbrooke Beavers of the same league.

The Russians had the first game of their current tour scheduled against Canada's nationals at the Montreal Forum Jan. 17. It was first postponed to the following day and then cancelled when the Russians failed to arrive in Canada in time to fulfill the engagement.

Gordie Howe's HOCKEY

Did you know the shafts of hockey sticks are made of ash?

Do you know why they are made of that wood? I'm not trying to play 20-questions in this column, but I did stumble upon something that to me is interesting. It's that shafts are made of ash because ash is a hard, tough wood yet it is also elastic. In other words it won't take a set. The blades of hockey sticks are made of rock elm because it is a hard, hard wood.

From the firm that supplies the Detroit Red Wings with hockey sticks, I learned, I also found out something else interesting, at least to me. It's that ash is getting very scarce and within a couple of years it may be necessary to switch to something else for the shafts of hockey sticks.

It develops that most of the good ash comes from the United States, and the owner of the equipment supply firm said that because of this the hockey sticks made in the United States are superior to those made in Canada.

He explained that furniture manufacturers in the United States are bidding now for all the good ash and paying the top dollar. He also said that stick manufacturers in the United States are buying what is left and that Canadian manufacturers are unable to get top quality ash.

What's the solution?

Well my man from the equipment firm answered it this way:

"There is a firm in Finland that is now sending sticks to the United States and they are using a laminated shaft. There is a layer of ash, a layer of birch, a layer of ash and so on. It's a sandwich shaft - - - or laminated."

Nice Albeit is now buying one of the sticks from Finland and so far he likes it pretty good.

The equipment man also said: "There is one Canadian manufacturer I know who has ordered 500,000 of the laminated sticks from a firm in Finland.

A top grade stick in the United States sells for $5.50 and the stick from Finland is slightly cheaper.

Part of the shortage of ash is blamed on the boom of hockey in the United States. "Just take the Detroit area alone," the equipment man said. "There are more youngsters playing hockey than baseball - - - and there are new rinks going up all over."

The Wings do their bit in creating the shortage. We use from 1,100 to 1,200 sticks a season and, I understand, we are one of the easiest clubs in the National Hockey League on sticks.

That's something, eh?

Magnussen Loses Title

Toronto Girl Cuts Mean Figure for Crown

TORONTO (CP) — "This was my only chance," said Linda Carbonetto after she took the Canadian women's senior figure-skating championship from Vancouver's Karen Magnussen with a masterful display of free skating Monday.

The 19-year-old Toronto girl swooped to the title with a polished display of high jumps and difficult combinations. The triumph came on her third try. She was runner-up last year and placed fourth in 1967.

Miss Magnussen, 16, the defending champion who held a thin edge in points after the compulsory figures competition, looked tense. She fell attempting a double axel jump and faltered on another.

Cathy Lee Irvin, 16, of Toronto, placed third.

Miss Carbonetto's performance was one of the evening's three crowd-pleasers in the singles.

David McGillivray, 19, of Toronto, last year's runner-up in the senior men's title, also turned in a near-perfect series of triple jumps, loops, splits and spins. None of the seven judges marked him lower than 5.7 on a scale that runs to 6.

But Jay Humphry, 20, also of Toronto, bettered McGillivray's showing to keep the title he won last year. He said afterward he made "one bad error and two little errors," but his jumps, including a triple toe wally, appeared effortless.

Third was Tuller Cranston, 19, of Toronto.

Ontario couples took the pairs and dance crowns to make the four senior titles a sweep for the east. Vancouver claimed all four in last year's finals because two cities count Humphry as their own. He started skating in Vancouver, but now skates out of Toronto.

Donna Taylor, 17, and Bruce Lemle, 23, of Toronto won the dance title with calm, matched footwork and a unanimous decision of the judges.

Mary Church, 21, and Tom Falls, 20, also of Toronto placed second. The crowd broke into boos when the judges marked Falls and Miss Church low for the infractions. Their fast-stepping program of dips and lifts delighted the crowd, but included acrobatics the judges ruled illegal.

Hazel Pike and Phillip Boskill, both 21, of Toronto placed third.

Miss Taylor was taken to hospital after her performance for stitches in a small kg cut she received from another competitor's skate in the warm-up.

"The nurse recognized me from my picture in the paper," she said when she returned. "She brought it in to where the doctor was stitching me up and he started asking all sorts of questions about Linda Carbonetto and Karen Magnussen and what was the difference between pairs and dance."

In the pairs—where acrobatics are the main ingredient for victory—the title went to Anna Forder-, 17, and Richard Stephens, 20, of Port Perry, Ont. They were 1968 runners-up.

Mary Petrik, 17, and Robert McAvoy, 23, of Toronto placed second to make the week of skating a triumph for Miss Petrie. She took the junior women's title Saturday and won the junior pairs with McAvoy Sunday.

Sandra Bezic, 12, and her partner Pal, 16, of Toronto, were junior runners-up, placed third.

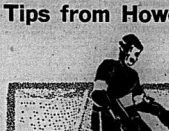
The top three finishers in each event will compete in the North American championships at Berkley, Calif., Feb. 6 to 8.

The team for the world championships at Colorado Springs, Colo., Feb. 25 to March 2 will be the top two in men's singles, women's singles and dance, plus one entry in the pairs. The number on the world team is determined by Canada's placing in last year's world competition.

Midgets Win Four Straight

Blake Kerr's Imperial midgets continued their new year's resurgence Sunday night, defeating Kingston Huskies 5-2 in an exhibition game at the Belleville Arena.

The victory was the fourth in a row for the Imperial midgets, who are playing exhibition games before entering the Ontario playdowns Sunday, February 2nd, with a best two out of three series against the Trenton midgets.



The Ontario playdowns start Sunday night in Trenton and resume here next Tuesday night at 8.15 p.m. as the arch - rival Trentos and Belleville teams vie for the right to meet the winner of the Cobourg - Peterborough series in the second round of the Ontario playdowns.

Terry Meagher and Clifford Janitsch each added two goals for the Imperial midgets in the win over Kingston Huskies, while Bill Bunnett added a single goal for the winners.

Ricky Meagher and Clifford Janitsch of Belleville were named the first and second stars of the game, respectively, while Johnson of Kingston earned the third star.

The streak is comprised of a 6-1 win over Alex. a 5-5 shutout of Wellington, a 12-1 romp over Kingston Lakeshore, and Sunday's 5-2 win over Kingston Huskies.

Tips from Howe

Every goaltender knows what it's like to stop a "hot one" with his glove hand; it stings.

Goalies should catch pucks the way they would baseballs. Let the glove hand give a bit when the shot hits it, for remember the referee is standing where he can see all the action around the net.

The goalie could score against himself if his glove with the puck in it is behind the goal line after he's cushioned the shot by drawing back. Embarrassing, eh?

Note too, the goalie has lifted one foot; that is dangerous. Every player needs both skates on the ice as much as possible to keep his balance.

Forum Turnstiles Spin Gold

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Forum, reconstructed last summer at a cost of almost $9,000,000, is being turned into a virtual gold mine by spectators.

In a nine-day span to last Sunday night more than 125,000 people filled through the turnstiles to see hockey games of all types. There was only one night — Jan. 20 — when hockey wasn't played in the building.

Attendance figures could have easily reached 140,000 had the Soviet national hockey team played its scheduled game against Canada's national team Jan. 18.

More than 15,000 spectators were expected to see the game, cancelled when the Russians failed to arrive on time.

National Hockey League game tickets range from about $7 to $2 and a ticket to a junior game costs $2.50 to $1.

Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League drew the largest single-game crowd during the flurry of hockey games —Saturday night when they downed Chicago Black Hawks 3-1 before 18,292 fans.

The renovation increased seating capacity of the Forum to 16,500 and capacity including standees to 18,300.

Montreal Junior Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association enjoyed a prosperous week at the gate. They played four home games and drew a total of 52,719 fans.

The Junior Canadiens have drawn more than 100,000 spectators in 18 home games so far this season.

At Gliddiners' game, featuring some of the top NHL stars of former years, took in the small-est crowd during the nine-day period.

A total of 5,900 spectators watched the Western Oldtimers beat their Quebec counterparts 5-3 in a benefit game Sunday, Jan. 19.

Bantams Face Big Test

The Belleville Kinsmen bantams captured the All-Ontario championship last year. What can they possibly do for an encore?

Well the Kinsmen bantams are off to Port Huron, Michigan Friday to compete in the seventh annual International Silver Stick Hockey Tournament.

A championship at this North American Finals Tournament would be a remarkable feat, even for a team such as the Kinsmen bantams' who last won 30 games, lost three and tied one this year.

Belleville will compete in the Class "AA" division for teams from cities with a population of over 15,000.

The Kinsmen will play Brantford at 7.40 p.m. Friday in the first round of the tournament. All games are "one game — sudden-death" knock outs.

Over 60 teams will vie this year for honors at Port Huron Michigan in peewee "A" and "AA" and bantam "A" and "AA" divisions. Teams from over 100 miles are housed in private homes by members of the Port Huron Minor Hockey Association. Over 600 boys are housed each year.

Nixon Draws Democrats' Praise After First News Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon, coming out of his first news conference with high marks, launched a major effort today to win friends in the Democratic-controlled Congress.

Most of today's schedule was devoted to meetings with congressional leaders of both parties.

Nixon's maiden news conference as president Monday drew high praise from Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana and Senate Democratic Whip Edward M. Kennedy of Massachusetts.

"He did very well," said Kennedy.

Mansfield said he was favorably impressed with the "tone, the tenor, the frankness" of responses by the president who marked almost exactly one week in office when he went before live radio and television in the East Room of the White House.

That was the general impression, too, of the more than 450 news media personnel who attended—a record for first news conferences by newly elected presidents.

The president said the Paris peace talks were "off to a good start" and that the United States planned what he called new tactics there.

"We believe that those tactics may be more successful than the tactics of the past," the president said without further elaboration.

He also indicated a possible move away from the Johnson administration's approach to Arab-Israeli tensions which were based on letting the two sides work out their differences with some kind of United Nations mediation.

"I believe we need new initiatives and new leadership on the part of the United States in order to cool off the situation in the Mideast," Nixon said.

"The next explosion in the Mideast, I think, could involve very well confrontation between the nuclear powers, which we want to avoid."

Perhaps most startling of the presidential pronouncements was the emergence of what appeared to be a new Nixon theory of U.S. military strength.

"I think 'sufficiency' is a better term, actually, than either 'superiority' or 'parity,'" Nixon said in what appeared to be some second thoughts about his election campaign charges the United States faced a security gap.

On other subjects, Nixon said he was against admission of Communist China to the United Nations, favored the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, indicated he was opposed to wage-price freezes as a means to curb inflation, and promised to propose a "major" legislative program.

Nixon also said he favors direct talks with the Soviet Union on curbing the output of new missiles on both sides of the Iron Curtain.

Three Developments Expected At Parley on Vietnam Peace

PARIS (AP) — U.S. and South Vietnamese officials anticipate three developments from North Vietnam and the Viet Cong in connection with the Paris peace talks.

If they are right, then the Americans and their South Vietnamese allies can expect some difficult moments on the battlefield and at the conference table. But they believe North Vietnam also may be preparing a diplomatic retreat.

The U.S. and South Vietnamese sources give this assessment of the intentions of the North Vietnamese and the National Liberation Front:

1. Hanoi and the Viet Cong will try to inflict some form of military embarrassment on the U.S. and South Vietnamese forces in Vietnam while the negotiations continue in Paris.

There are signs of such preparations in the field, but the sources do not anticipate that the blow will be as heavy as last year's Tet offensive. They believe the attack will be aimed primarily at increasing the American public's distaste for the war.

2. Hanoi and the Liberation Front will use the Paris talks as a forum to enhance the NLF's status and its claim to be the legitimate power in South Vietnam.

This will be the kind of verbal attacks on the Saigon regime that were delivered by the NLF during last Saturday's opening session of the full-dress talks. One ranking official said he expected "the other side's propaganda broadsides to play a prominent role in the negotiations for some time."

3. Meanwhile, North Vietnam may begin preparing its own people for an agreement which falls short of the victory promised for so long by the Communist leaders.

South Vietnamese officials put more emphasis on this than the Americans do. The men from Saigon point out that they consider to be a significant change in the terminology used by Hanoi's negotiators.

One source said that when the preliminary talks between the United States and North Vietnam began last May, North Vietnamese delegate Xuan Thuy referred to the Saigon regime as the "ngay quyen," the Vietnamese expression for "enemy power."

After President Johnson's bombing halt last Nov. 1, Thuy called the Saigon regime "nha cam quyen," or the "administration."

At last Saturday's session Thuy referred to his Vietnamese opponents as "chinh quyen," an expression meaning the South Vietnamese "state," the informant said.

Strictly Personal

Definition of A Gentleman

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Antics with Semantics:

I resigned for reasons of policy: you quit because of a disagreement; he was fired for poor judgment.

Beauty and the Beast: A "beast" is any man whose wife is using him for divorce; a "beauty" is any woman who consoles him during this period.

The difference between a "dope sheet" and an "investment guide" is about $50 a copy.

I "over - indulged" last night: you "tipped it too much"; he "got gassed."

A "gourmet" is usually little more than a glutton festooned with charge cards.

Frank Moore Colby once defined "a gentleman of the old school" as "a man who hasn't made love to his wife in five years and is prepared to shoot any other man who tries to."

I am "serious"; you are "solemn"; he is "grim."

"Risk capital" is capital invested after all risk has been minimized in every possible legal and extra-legal way.

You might do better if I got another name that didn't sound so much like turning marital relations into a form of annual inventory.

Likewise, "educational television" cannot flourish until it finds a name for itself that is not redolent of institutional dullness.

The connotation of some words often turns into the opposite of their denotation: as an example, "edible" denotes whatever is fit to be eaten, but it connotes that which is barely fit to be eaten, and to call a certain food "edible" is to mark down its gustatory value.

"Genealogy" is a perverse preoccupation of those who seek to demonstrate that their forbears were better people than they are.

A middle-aged person today is someone who remembers when "gay" meant "merry."

What we stiffly call "hegemony" when the Russians do it is what we call the "Monroe Doctrine" when we do it — namely, the practice of protecting our customers from our competitors.

My favorite semantic flight of fancy for the month comes from the 7th-grader who defined the French phrase "pas de deux" as "the father of twins."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For January 29

Your birthday today: Most of this coming year will involve a fresh start, novel approaches, many changes. The last two months will be less hectic, make use of the understanding gained in the first 10 months. Today's natives tend to seek a universal viewpoint and can take advantage of generalizations even where specific attention is more productive.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Neglected affairs should be moved up to first priority, not to expedite the disposal of all things which have little or no original purpose and serve no new use. Have a relaxing evening at home.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): The tendency is toward quiet, steady effort. Your chances of getting caught up with clerical chores are better than usual.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): No point in getting upset over paper work. Stay away from the idea that you are desperate for relocation; you aren't really. Try to get early rest; then if you're wakeful later, practice a little simple yoga.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): If you can resist the temptation to be a bit overbearing with your cronies you stand to gain greatly from experimenting in leadership in candid terms.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Business advertising or some exhortation along similar lines is favored. The results must be counted as long term sometimes with long delayed reactions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You can virtually write your own ticket this morning. Slow down in dealing with seemingly important strangers. It is not too early to think about future travel.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): The extravagant gesture tempts you; resist it. The sense of being tested tends to create nervous tension. Major faultfinding is an unnecessary social custom to be avoided. Entertain graciously this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Make your own itinerary if you can; leave open the chance of letting people know where you are going. Your basic ideas lack the moderation provided by mature companions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Review your insurance coverage. Are you protected for fire? Research is awaiting. You must burrow to get to the results you are looking for.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Today provides a chance for a total rest. If you are weary of seeing your associates steadily try to arrange to take a few days off for a change of environment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): When you get to your quarters in the evening, give some thought to how you will revise and improve your home life. A new appearance will be attractive to others.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Much profound and conservative advice comes to you; your responsibility is to make use of it. Understand the characteristics of things you need to establish a neat home.

Dief Sees Spirit of Lawlessness Widespread

OTTAWA (CP) — A "spirit of lawlessness" and contempt for police officers is becoming epidemic in Canada, former prime minister John Diefenbaker warned the Commons Monday.

In his main statement on proposed Criminal Code amendments, the 73-year-old veteran Conservative spoke only briefly on the bill, concentrating instead on the dangers of crime, pornography and civil disobedience.

"Never in my lifetime have I felt that degree of fear regarding current conditions that I feel today," he said.

Among other things he called for more police officers and for launching of a national crusade against the spirit of lawlessness, which would reduce the country's moral fibre if it were not checked.

Mr. Diefenbaker spoke as the House went through its third day of debate on second reading of the Criminal Code amendments.

Debate then was set aside at least until Friday. Today the House will recess to permit concentrated committee work, and Wednesday and Thursday will see the first trial of the new "opposition days" system.

Debate on the Criminal Code bill Monday continued to concentrate on sections dealing with homosexuality, abortion, lotteries and drinking-and-driving law.

Again there was evidence that divisions on individual aspects of the bill are cutting across party lines.

Liberal Ralph Stewart (Cochrane), for example, said he agrees with all the bill's 120 clauses except the one on abortion.

This section, permitting abortion when the pregnancy is likely to endanger the woman's life or health, is "opening the door to abortion on demand," he said.

Conservatives R. G. L. Fairweather (Fundy-Royal) and Robert McCleave (Halifax-East Hants) joined in a cutting attack on the section permitting governments to conduct or authorize lotteries.

Mr. Fairweather, former attorney-general of New Brunswick, supported other aspects of the bill, however, and said he would not resist it because of his objections to the lotteries section.

He said abortion should be a decision for the woman, rather than for the "politician or priest."

And he also indicated support for a provision which would legalize private homosexual acts between consenting adults.

The subject is not a pleasant one but calls for sympathetic consideration, he said.

Many MPs were receiving letters indicating a nation ready to deal with the homosexuality problem was on the road to hell. But he was ready to take that chance.

NATO Policy Queried

OTTAWA (CP) — The opposition assailed the government Monday for what it described as a two-faced policy on NATO.

It put questions to Prime Minister Trudeau on speeches by Postmaster-General Eric Kierans and Defence Minister Leo Cadieux, the former advocating withdrawal from the NATO, the latter continued participation in the alliance as essential.

Robert McCleave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) described the government's policy as "push-me-pull-you."

Edward Broadbent (NDP—Oshawa-Whitby) asked whether the government will remain half in NATO and half out.

Mr. Trudeau said Mr. Kierans and Mr. Cadieux were pating forward "thesis" and "antithesis" in the context of a debate.

The government would have to make a "synthesis" of all points of view which all ministers could "gladly support."

Mr. Trudeau said in reply to a Commons question by George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings) that Mr. Kierans was not stating government policy.

But he declined to say that Mr. Cadieux was stating government policy.

Mr. Trudeau said both ministers were expressing points of view and getting Canadians to reflect on these very important matters.

Gerald Baldwin, Conservative house leader, described Mr. Kierans as the "military expert who doubles in brass as postmaster-general."

He asked how Mr. Trudeau distinguishes between cabinet dissension and participatory democracy.

There was no reply.

Mr. Trudeau said the government will publish a white paper on the subject and said that he is anxious to hear the opposition speak with one voice.

Mr. Broadbent described Mr. Trudeau's remarks as Marxian dialectics.

Percy Noble (PC—Grey-Simcoe) asked whether the government's "kite-flying" is confusing Canada's friends in NATO.

There was no reply.

NEW SARANAC ALFALFA Highest Yielder Of All ...

Saranac is the best of a whole class of alfalfa varieties known as "Finnish Types" including Du-puits Alfa, Glacier and Meps. This relatively new breed is much more vigorous in the seedling and after-cut recovery stages and matures earlier making it ideal for silage, haylage or green chop systems. Saranac outlives them all because it is more winter-hardy and resistant to bacterial wilt.

Saranac should be used on at least a part of the hay acreage on any farm if only because it matures earlier and therefore spreads the harvest just a little better. It grows well with Saratoga Brome and also in mixtures with Ladino and Creeping Orchard.

We sell it in our EARLYLAND MIXTURE and also in special mixtures to suit your own preferences. Visit us soon and let us help you program your future forage crops.

Housing Basic Right

Big Changes Urged In Hellyer Report

List of 47 Reforms Proposed to House

OTTAWA (CP) — A new housing policy for Canada proposed Wednesday by a federal government inquiry aims to make home ownership earlier through a list of 47 reforms that would shake up present financial, technical and legal systems.

"Every Canadian should be entitled to clean, warm shelter as a matter of basic human right," the housing inquiry headed by Transport Minister Paul Hellyer declares in a report tabled in the Commons.

The changes urged for both governments and private business range from no-down-payment mortgages to removal of the federal tax on building materials, from new regional housing authorities to a special tax on speculative land sales.

For Other Housing Report Stories See Page 5

The glossy, 40,000-word report says the immediate aim should be a wide choice of homes—including continued emphasis on single-family houses—within a target of 1,000,000 new dwelling units in five years.

To generate the estimated $20,000000,000 of investment needed to meet the minimum five-year target, the report says the federal government should use everything short of compulsion to insure that private lending institutions keep up the flow of funds.

Federal authorities should organize a system of regular consultations with the institutions—banks, mortgage and insurance companies—to seek at least informal commitments to meet housing-fund needs.

To help bring home ownership within reach of middle-income and low-pay families, mortgage loans should be bigger, more flexible in their terms and even arranged so virtually no down payment is required by families without cash.

Serous consideration should be given to changing the National Housing Act so governmentinsured mortgages from private lenders and the government's Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. could be issued in amounts up to $30,000 with longer repayment time, variable interest rates and lower down payments on purchases of existing houses.

It suggests the present periodically-adjusted fixed ceiling on NHA mortgage interest rates—now fixed by formula at 9¼ per cent—should be abandoned in the hope the rate will fall.

London Jew Knifed

LONDON (Reuters) — Shots were fired and a Jewish demonstrator was stabbed in a rooftop struggle at the Iraqi Embassy in London during an all-night vigil for nine Jews hanged as Israeli spies in Baghdad.

Thousands of British Jews milling about the embassy cheered as two men in leather jackets hung two blue and white Israeli flags from a parapet 80 feet above the street.

Then suddenly the men scrambled and several shots were heard. One of the men was seen struggling with an attacker.

Minutes later he appeared in the street and collapsed into the arms of a reporter, saying: "Those Iraqi bastards have got me"

The man, believed to be an Israeli national, was taken to hospital with a knife wound in his side. Police said his condition was not serious.

Police said the injured man and his companion said they were approached by two men on the roof of the embassy. Shots were fired and a struggle took place, after which the attackers fled. A knife was found in the street.

Embassy officials removed two flags bearing the Star of David.

The demonstrators held a torchlight procession which began at a silent vigil. A special orthodox service of prayers for the Jews executed Monday was held 20 minutes before it was scheduled in an effort to calm the chanting crowd.

The demonstrators shouted "storm the embassy" and "Nazi, Nazi" as police held back some protesters attempting to rush the embassy.

The Iraqi ambassador to Britain, in a letter published in The Times today, said critics of the executions in Baghdad were misinformed martyrs of spies who worked against their homeland.

Two More Jets Land in Cuba

MIAMI (AP) —Two U.S. airliners made landings in Havana under hijackers' commands Tuesday as January's toll of pirated commercial aircraft soared to 16.

An Eastern Airlines jet, hijacked Tuesday night with 105 passengers and a crew of eight aboard, returned to Miami early today. The crew told of being ordered to Havana by three Negroes in "typical hippie dress" and alligator shoes.

The 20 passengers and crew members aboard a National Airlines jet hijacked over the Gulf of Mexico Tuesday morning returned to Miami later in the day, leaving in Havana two men who said they were fugitives from a California prison.

Hydro/Silent About Talks

TORONTO (CP) — Talks between Ontario Hydro and Local 1000, Canadian Union of Public Employees, resumed today in an effort to head off a series of rotating strikes planned by the union to start Monday.

The two sides met Tuesday before W. H. Dickie, chief Ontario labor conciliator, but Mr. Dickie made no comment on the progress of the talks.

De Gaulle Fears 'Bloody Chaos'

PARIS (Reuters) — French President de Gaulle said today that unless the Great Powers took joint action in the Middle East the situation there would inexorably develop into "bloody chaos."

De Gaulle, speaking at a weekly cabinet meeting, reiterated his call for Great Power cooperation to work out a solution to the Middle East crisis and to ensure its application, Joe le Theule, secretary of state for information, told reporters.

Iraq Charges Israelis Are Massing for Attack

From AP-Reuters

Iraq accused Israel of massing its troops to attack the 20,000-strong Iraq force stationed in Jordan while in Iraq itself a new mass spy trial was reported under way.

Baghdad radio, in a broadcast monitored in the Lebanese capital of Beirut, said the new trial began Tuesday behind closed doors. It said the defendants were accused of working for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

The broadcast did not mention the number of defendants, but London sources said earlier that 25 persons, 13 of them Jews, would be tried by Iraq's revolutionary court on charges of spying and sabotage.

In Baghdad, Information Minister Abdullah Salloum al-Samarri told a news conference that Israeli forces were preparing to attack Iraq's forces in Jordan in reprisal for the public hanging of 14 persons including nine Jews convicted of spying for Israel.

The Israelis were enraged by the executions, and their government denied the victims had been spying for Israel.

The executions also provoked varying degrees of condemnation in several capitals.

"This is a purely internal affair with no room for intervention by any other country," Samarrai said in the trials.

He invited foreign correspondents to visit Baghdad and follow the forthcoming trials.

Those executed Monday received a fair trial and others who had been accused, including several Jews, were acquitted, he said.

Samarrai stressed the government was exercising a legitimate right to defend itself against internal subversion, pointing out that Iraq was still in a state of war with Israel and never had signed any armistice, truce or ceasefire agreement with the Jewish state.

Baghdad radio meanwhile continued broadcasting telegrams of support for the government's action and Samarrai said people in Iraq wholeheartedly supported the action. He also said that the government gained the backing of the people as a result of the decision to hang the spies.

Iraq already has announced its forces are in a state of military readiness for any Israeli reprisal.

Pope Paul said today the executions caused dismay and abhorrence in the world. The fact that nine of the victims were Jews aroused the suspicion that racial motives were involved which should not exist among civilized nations, he told pilgrims at his weekly general audience at the Vatican.

In Canada, the government said it was seriously concerned at the execution of the 14 men.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said in Ottawa that the executions were the kind of events which retarded and diminished the prospects of a lasting settlement in the Middle East.

Sharp said he had received messages from many Canadians over "these disturbing events—events which most surely outrage public opinion everywhere."

Viet Cong Plans Truce

SAIGON (CP) — The Viet Cong today announced a seven-day ceasefire for the Tet lunar new year beginning Feb. 15.

But the South Vietnamese government, caught by a major guerrilla offensive with many troops on leave during a similar truce last year, said it would delay a decision on its own ceasefire plans.

A government spokesman said that any ceasefire by government forces would certainly not run as long as a week.

Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky said in Paris Monday that government forces would stop shooting—for a few days beginning Feb. 15.

The lunar new year, Vietnam's most celebrated holiday, falls this year on Feb. 17.

A Tet truce last year had just begun when the Viet Cong attacked more than 100 cities and towns including Saigon in their biggest offensive of the war.

Although the government is expected to call some sort of ceasefire, it undoubtedly will try to avoid the wholesale relaxation which left its forces at 50 per cent strength or less when the enemy struck a year ago.

The anniversary of last year's offensive comes this Friday, and there has been speculation that the Viet Cong may attempt some action within the next few days to mark the occasion.

Exactly as Forecast

Freezing Rain Ices Highways

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

The weatherman was right on the ball!

Yesterday morning when the temperature was still down around the zero mark, weather forecasters said there would be rain in the Quinte district before the day ended.

Exactly as forecast, the freezing rain commenced about 8.30 last night and before mid night roadways and automobile windshields were covered with a coating of ice, making driving conditions hazardous.

Over in Prince Edward county, a number of cars slithered off the pavement on the road to Wellington and this morning a number of school bus cancellations were reported in the Brighton and Campbellford areas.

As far as could be learned, however, there were no cancellations of buses running to Belleville schools, although rural roads were reported to be in a slippery condition.

No serious accidents as a result of the ice covered roads were reported by police.

One motorist reported road conditions more slippery before midnight yesterday evening than they were this morning.

This morning digging ice from ice covered windshields was a first requirement for motorists before starting out for their jobs.

At the city water filtration plant precipitation of one tenth of an inch of rain was reported.

"It seemed like a quarter of an inch on windshields, but converted to water there was only one tenth of an inch of rain," said the filtration plant worker.

Jetport Sponsors Return With Federal Interest Assured

With federal interest assured, sponsors of a plan to site an international jetport in the Quinte district now are serving in on local government.

Copies of a brief outlining the jetport scheme plus a twin planned-city project will soon be scrutinized by members of all Quinte municipal councils.

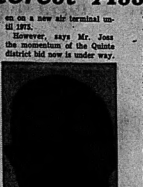
The document was formally presented to transport department officials in Ottawa yesterday by a delegation of Prince Edward-Hastings Liberals.

Later, the Quinte boosters expressed themselves well satisfied with the initial impact they made.

"I think they were impressed — our concept is the best presented so far," reacted Liberal riding association president Don Joss.

Clearer indications of senior government reaction may be available in the near future.

Mr. Joss said federal officials promised to contact the delegation "in a few weeks' time."



The airport project — sited along the Lake Ontario shoreline of Prince Edward County — was presented to Peter Bonardelli, executive assistant to transport minister Paul Hellyer.

Copies of the scheme detailing a new city along the Trent River, north of the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway, were passed for study to Lloyd Axworthy, transport officer in charge of the minister's planned community concept.

Yesterday's Ottawa visit publicly launched the Quinte district as a serious contender in the multi-million stakes symbolized by a new jetport. Other municipalities already are in the race — notably Whitby — since the federal government announced recently it would not expand Toronto international airport.

For the contenders it's a long-term competition. Toronto facilities are believed adequate until 1983. No government decision may be taken on a new air terminal until 1973.

However, says Mr. Joss the momentum of the Quinte district bid now is under way.

DONALD JOSS

What is necessary is to keep up the impetus.

The committee which drew the brief now is able to turn its attention to grass roots support — and enlightening local councils on their proposals is the necessary first step.

In coming days, scores of copies of the brief will be despatched to municipal offices.

But activities won't be restricted to the local level.

Already plans are under way for an on-the-spot survey of the Lake Ontario site by national representatives of the travel and tourist industry.

This may take place in late spring — possibly May — and Mr. Joss says that time federal officials also should be ready to join an inspection tour.

Expand Malton Says Council

TORONTO (CP) — The Metropolitan Toronto executive committee expressed concern Tuesday that limited expansion of Toronto International Airport could lead to a relocation of area industry associated with air travel and aircraft production.

It decided to launch a campaign for full expansion of the airport following reports of industry's concern Metro has not fully recognized the possible consequences of limited airport expansion.

G. Allan Burton, president of the Metropolitan Toronto Industrial Commission, Monday urged political leaders in local municipalities to convince the federal government of the need for an expanded air service.

He told the commission's annual meeting that 60 per cent of overseas traffic originates in Toronto but only 12 per cent of the flights.

He said several airlines are anxious to give direct service between Toronto and other parts of the world.

The committee agreed Tuesday that all organizations, including the area's aircraft industry, should be given an opportunity by Metropolitan Toronto to submit arguments concerning the airport's future.

Transport Minister Hellyer announced Dec. 20 that $60,000,000 will be spent this year and in 1970 to complete limited expansion of the airport.

The announcement came after strong opposition from residents in Mississauga, where the airport is located, and neighboring Etobicoke to the move sweeping expansion program.

Teens Have More Accidents

Compulsory Driver Training Foreseen for Youth in Three Years

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

At least one area insurance agent foresees compulsory driver training for young adults in the near future.

Douglas Whitley, a Trenton insurance agent, said "I don't think it will go three years before driver training is introduced in Ontario."

His said tests had already been conducted by Queen's Park as to the feasibility of compulsory driving training.

Statistics supplied to insurance agents recently have shown drivers under the age of 25 have more accidents and that most of the mishaps are of a more serious nature than in other age groups.

A release says that there were a total of 103,000,000 drivers in the United States last year and that there were 64,500 driving fatalities. These figures are comparable proportionately in Canada.

Of the total number of drivers in the United States 21,500,000 are under 25 years of age. This age group qualified for 21,700 of the fatality total comprising 33.7 per cent of all traffic fatalities for that year.

And according to Mr. Whitley, one thing that has cut down these figures is proper driver training.

He said graduates of this type of course have a far better appreciation for others on the road.

A course such as this, he explained, makes trainees and instructors more aware of the temperament of students on the road.

Teenagers obtain better mental attitudes as a result of the instruction, he said.

Mr. Whitley said, however, that it is only about 12 per cent of the age group under 25 that is causing the greatest problem.

He said that most of the training courses were in the area schools and the attitude of teenagers coming out of these courses "is excellent."

"I think it's a good thing," he said.

Jack Allin, a Belleville agent, couldn't agree more.

"We find the boys who have had driver training courses are less prone to accidents."

Insurance premiums would bear this out. Upon certification of completion of a driving course teenagers receive a 10 per cent reduction in premiums.

Mr. Allin also feels teenagers should start to drive when they are 16, at least technically speaking.

The premium minimum for a 16-year-old driver is $286. When he becomes 19 it drops to $151. If the driver doesn't begin to drive until 19 his premium is $233.

There is one stipulation, though. Mr. Allin says it is better for 16-year olds to graduate from a driving training school.

He blames the accident rate of the younger set on the fact they don't realize there are "300 horses under the hood." He described teenagers as a little too daring and having a heavy foot.

"Cars, in my opinion are too powerful for younger drivers."

Donald Barrett, also a Belleville agent, feels that younger drivers have more accidents because they have more opportunity. In other words, they are out more often at night.

"I think that in some cases 21 is too young to drive," he said. Yet, there are 18-year-olds with the maturity necessary to handle the responsibility of driving.

Clarence Fuzzen, another Belleville agent, looks at the situation where a parent buys his son or daughter a car.

"The teenager feels the car is just the latest item in a long line of toys given to him since he was riding a tricycle," he said.

"If a kid buys a car himself, he takes a certain amount of care," Mr. Fuzzen says.

Mr. Fuzzen also feels single drivers cause more accidents because they haven't been "settled down" by the marriage factor.

"Twelve per cent of drivers under 25 are responsible for one third of the accidents."

DEATHS

CANTY, Mrs. Leola Elizabeth — 301a Forin Street, Belleville on Tuesday, Jan. 28, 1969 in her 72nd year. Late of this city. Ministers Oppose Sunday Gambling

The Belleville Ministerial Association met on Tuesday, Jan. 28, and considered the notice of motion presented by Alderman Don Williams at the last meeting of city council, "that there will be no gambling, side shows, or betting allowed on Sunday in this city, and that the city solicitor prepare a by-law to this effect."

A thorough consideration took place. It was noted that the Conklin Shows are pressing agricultural societies to operate their fairs on Sunday. It was revealed the society at Renfrew rejected the proposal, so that the matter did not reach the town council.

The ministerial association unanimously approved the following motion: "Whereas the members of this association, assembled in special meeting are opposed to the principle of gambling, because we believe it to be disruptive of human society we, therefore, go on record as supporting Ald. Donald Williams' notice of motion."

Further action was decided to send a deputation to the next meeting of council on Feb. 3.

Several ministers reported that their churches were also sending deputations.

Women from different churches, meeting last Tuesday to lay plans for the observance of the World's Day of Prayer on Friday, March 7, expressed dismay at the decision of city council to permit the operation of the fair on Sunday. Groups from various churches are planning to attend the next council meeting

Tie-up Area to Be Studied

Residents of Amelissburg township are going to have to put up a little patience with rush hour traffic bottlenecks at the intersection of Dundas Street West and the new Bay Bridge Road railway overpass.

Yesterday, members of the city traffic committee decided that before even temporary installation of traffic lights could be approved a study of the area should be made.

Last week Amelissburg township reeve George Cunningham complained of traffic tie-ups in the new railway overpass as township residents attempted to get onto Dundas Street. Ald. Peterson's traffic committee meeting.

City engineer Wilbur Purcell said traffic lights would be installed on completion of the Dundas Street roadway project.

He said temporary traffic lights could be installed but suggested the componentsof any such installation should not be used as part of the final system.

He admitted rush hour tieups at the intersection were expected but asked that a study be made before any action was taken.

Behind the Glass

By C.D.T.

A CFB rink of George Peters, Vince Gallipeau, Earl Jesse with Bob McInnes as skip will represent Quinte in three in the Provincial playdowns for the Consols. In three thrilling matches played at the Kingston Curling Club on Tuesday, the CFB rink won the first game 7-5, lost the second by 8-6 and won the rubber game 9-8 from Bob Mann of Kingston.

The rink will move into London on February 5-7 to compete against three others in district winners and if successful in the double knockout draw will proceed to Oshawa on March 3-7 for the rink to represent Ontario in the Canadian finals. The CFB rink is strong from top to bottom, having played together for a long time and are most compatible. They will be tough to beat in any competition.

The Quinte Curling Club has a rink in the junior tankard series. On Saturday a rink of K. Montieth, R. Riley, Jim Lovett with Peter Reston as skip journeyed to Napanee to take on five other district rinks and they won their three games by a knockout draw to represent the district in the playdowns. The rink defeated rinks from Cobourg, Picton, and Trenton to gain the honors. The juniors curled exceptionally well and with a little more practice together could cause plenty of trouble to other rinks in the other districts.

Rabid Fox Killed

PICTON (Staff) — A Carrying Place man shot and killed a fox suspected of being rabid this morning after it bit his dog.

Ontario Provincial Police were called shortly after midnight to the home of S. Dawson, R. R. 1, Carrying Place after he reported seeing a fox around his buildings.

A search by police failed to turn up any trees of the fox. Mr. Dawson said the fox returned this morning and bit his dog.

A Belleville veterinarian, Dr. J. F. McCorquodale is running tests to determine whether or not the fox was rabid. The dog will be confined until it is known whether or not the fox was rabid.

OPP have warn that anybody who finds an animal thought to be rabid, whether alive or dead, should not touch it. Even contact with the fur can result in infection.

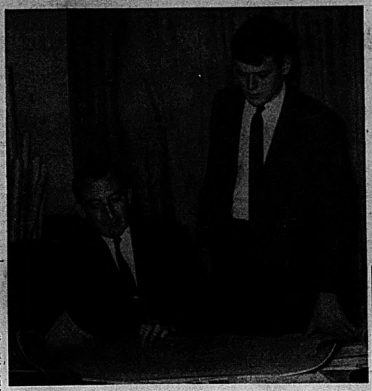
Mushroom Plant Possible for Picton

A leading Canadian food processing firm is considering the establishment of a mushroom growing facility in the Picton - Wellington area which would provide year round employment for approximately 200 persons.



The decision, however, to locate the plant would be dependent on the availability of labor and the Picton office of Canada Manpower will conduct a survey in Prince Edward county district to determine if there is sufficient labor to staff the plant.

Mr. Clifford McCalpin, manager of the Picton Canada Manpower Centre, 205 Main Street, said the proposed plant would employ about 100 unskilled persons. The staff would be about equally divided, male and female.

The food processing operation would be carried on at the one site with growing, processing and packing being done in the same building.

Mr. McCalpin said his office would be open Thursday and Friday at this week to interview possible job applicants.

The company will make its decision whether to locate in the Picton area following completion of the labor survey Feb. 7.

Trustee Afraid School Costs May Increase

Education minister William Davis has urged school trustees not to succumb to the temptations of extravagance inherent in the new county-wide school boards.

He sounded the warning at the annual luncheon of the Ontario School Trustees' Council in Toronto.

Macdonald Smith, Belleville, a trustee on the Hastings County board of education said the minister told the 200 trustees present from across Ontario that it was a matter of utmost urgency that budgets be kept under control. Mr. Smith represented the Hastings board at the sessions.

"I agree with the minister," Mr. Smith remarked today. "Costs don't seem to go up but I'm afraid they will.

"It's human nature for people to think that if the money comes from provincial grants it isn't coming out of our pocket. They seem to feel that if the pie is being sliced in Toronto they should grab the biggest piece for themselves."

One of the problems facing the new boards is the appointment of qualified administrative and professional staff and the minister warned against extravagance in this area too, according to Mr. Smith.

"I can see many areas where saving can be achieved," Mr. Smith commented. "Waste in any business can be avoided by efficiency in administration."

Student Lauds Rotary Program

Belleville's mayor of the week program, sponsored by the Rotary Club, seems to be going down well with the participants.

Rotary president Ken Worsnald has received a letter from Centennial student Debbie Thompson praising the program.

Miss Thompson wrote: "I would like to express my commendation and thanks to your club for introducing and managing the ingenious student mayor for a week project.

"Being one of the privileged students I find that I really benefit from this experience.

"Mayor Scott and his council were extremely helpful and kind.

"I recommend that this experiment be continued in future years so that Belleville's students can learn about our city, people and politics.

"It is good to know you have an interest in us."

Cossack Chorus Coming to Trenton

TRENTON — The public will have its first chance to actively support the new RCAF Air Memorial to be built here when a world famous entertainment group appears at CFB Trenton to raise funds for the memorial.

The Don Cossack Dancers and Chorus will be appearing in two shows on the evenings of March 16 and 17. The project is being handled by the Rotary Club of Trenton and it is hoped that two sellout nights will net $5,000 for the proposed memorial.

The group, consisting of 35 Cossacks, will perform a variety of acts in their two hour shows.

The dancers of the Cossack regiment, battle songs and folk songs, along with the Cossack knife dance are but a few of the dances which make up this world famous show.

The Cossacks are in their twenty-first world tour and during this time they have given 7,500 concerts while visiting 65 countries.

And not one of the six countries has been passed by in their travels.

Ian Darling, one of the Rotary members involved in the project, said today, "we hope the public will come out and support the show".

"We're pretty well set to go and everything is set-up — all we need now is a good response".

And that shouldn't be too much trouble for as Mr. Darling pointed out, "this group has been a sellout wherever they have performed."

The show will be staged in the recreation hall at CFB Trenton but admission prices have not yet been finalized.

"We are still working on the prices and expect to have them settled by next week", concluded Mr. Darling.

Toward A New Image

Just think . . . Canadian youth with a new image: the hippies gone from the streets, no longer lounging about the sidewalks looking like they have been shot from a cannon, and interfering with pedestrian traffic. Instead they have cleaned up and are well-groomed.

And again . . . those other students who usually crowd the restaurants after school, chatting and smoking, have got the jogging bug and they are all out in the open. There is fresh air in their lungs and their hearts are beating strongly and they are going to live longer and enjoy life more than most people around today.

Think further ahead to the summer and more young people (and adults too) could be swimming and playing tennis and golfing, and yes still jogging.

Well, it is something of a dream, perhaps, for it is common knowledge that the leisure time emphasis among young people today is not on promoting physical fitness. And it is not altogether their fault, for the schools demand much in the way of academic study and homework.

Nevertheless it is time the schools paid more than just lip service to sport and physical fitness. What there is covers only a fraction of the school population.

Health Minister John Munro presented some ideas on this theme when he addressed the Canadian Amateur Sports Federation in Ottawa recently. Here are some of his observations: "I am one of those who believes in the necessity of improving Canadian excellence in sports. We know that, compared with many of our national cultural efforts, it is fashionable to give sports a distinctly second-rate image . . . I see no reason why we should be satisfied with less than world-class calibre in sports anymore than in any other activity.

Or this: "I could cite many reasons why excellence in sports is a valid national objective. The most important is that excellence benefits national unity. . . . Sports, after all, represents a large part of leisure activity, a field in need of rapid growth if our society is not to collapse of its own inertia."

We can only hope Mr. Munro, too, is not just paying lip service to the goal of producing a more sports and fitness-oriented society. Is he going to do anything that might encourage this idea? Or will it just go down the drain like it did during the Diefenbaker years. Mr. Diefenbaker unveiled a plan to channel money into promoting a more athletically-minded society, but it was shelved with the onset of economic troubles.

Mr. Munro indicated a "task force" had been appointed "to look into some of the problems in the amateur sports field," but at the same time he urged the amateur sport bodies to help improve Canada's image in this sphere.

Reminding his audience of the ideal of having a sound mind in a sound body, Mr. Munro added: "The words of an old jingle, our men and women should look sharp, feel sharp, and be sharp."

And so they should.

It Keeps Them Young

Here is something on the above theme that is worth noting: research by Dr. Herbert Devries, professor of physical education at the University of Southern California, has shown that a three hours-a-week program of exercise makes 70-year-old men feel and function as if they were 30 years younger. Sixty-nine men aged from 50 to 87 went through a closely-supervised schedule of tests for a year. These included calisthenics, stretching, swimming and jogging. It has been known for some time of course that carefully-graded courses of exercise, tailored to the individual, have proved beneficial for the victims of heart attacks. Yet it bears repeating. One of the most significant results of the California survey was an improvement of six per cent in the blood pressure of those tested, and an increase in their oxygen consumption — regarded as the best single measure of fitness — of 9.3 per cent. Other favorable results included a decrease in body fat of 4.8 per cent, and 14 to 15 per cent less incidence of nervous tension. The latter malady causes probably more trouble for otherwise healthy people of all ages than such hardy annuals as colds and the flu. That exercise can relieve it is a fact that unfortunately has escaped many.

Other Nations Watch

Canada and Italy In Moves to Recognize Red China

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Several countries probably are keeping a close eye on Canadian and Italian efforts to recognize Communist China.

If these two North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies do find a way to recognize Peking it is certain that some other governments will at least consider whether to follow suit.

These countries have displayed some discomfort in recent years over the continued isolation of Red China from the United Nations. But they also have felt that the Nationalist regime on Formosa should be represented.

Belgium is another NATO country reported to feel strongly that Red China should not remain outside the mainstream of world affairs. Chile and Trinidad and Tobago—perhaps other Caribbean nations—are reported to feel the same way.

A report published in New York during the weekend said that Japanese spokesmen stated unofficially that their government is dismayed that two more NATO allies are seeking ties with Peking. They were reported to fear that Japan would be one of the last non-Communist countries to withhold recognition from the Communist Chinese. At present Japan has a flourishing trade with the Nationalists.

Another recent newspaper report widely read here was one that notes the coincidence of Italy's announcement that it will recognize Peking with the recent visit to Rome of Prime Minister Trudeau and External Affairs Minister Sharp. The question is asked whether there was discussion of the timing of their moves between Canadian and Italian officials.

There now are 47 countries that recognize Peking. They include Britain, France, Denmark, Norway, Sweden and The Netherlands, all members of the 15-country Atlantic alliance.

Trudeau said last week that Canada hopes it can continue relations with the Nationalists after recognizing the Peking regime. And in Taipei a National-ist official stopped short of saying that his country would withdraw recognition from Canada upon recognition of Peking.

But an informed source here said recently that there is little doubt that the Nationalists would withdraw their representatives from Ottawa if the Peking government opened an office there.

There is no country with relations with both Chinas, with the possible exception of Britain, which maintains a small consular office of long standing in Taipei. Possibly as a prelude for this, its top official in Peking never is higher than a charge d'affaires, rather than an ambassador.

The source here said Peking makes a condition of recognition the breaking of relations with the Nationalist government.

"Get lost, garcon — this is no concern of yours."

A U.S. View

The Decline of British Influence

The Commonwealth conference is over, but here is an American view of the meeting, written at the time. It is from the Clearwater (Florida) Sun and it reflects the paradox that representatives of 28 nations can meet for the "largest summit conference in history," and yet their deliberations go almost unnoticed in the United States, not to mention other countries outside the Commonwealth.

* * *

It is strange indeed that the largest summit conference in history should take place almost unnoticed. Yet this is the case, at least in the United States, with the gathering in London of the leaders of 28 nations.

They represent the member states of the British Commonwealth of Nations and the fact that a Commonwealth Prime Ministers' Conference should receive so little outside attention is an indication of how profoundly and rapidly the power relationships of our shrinking world have changed.

A world without Britain as a paramount power seemed unthinkable for generations to come. Her dominions covered a quarter of the world's territory and peoples. Britain Isles ruled the waves and the Pax Britannica was a fact of international life upon which other nations, including the United States, relied for maintenance of order.

Yet in little more than half a century — brief as empires go, the decline and fall of Britain took the better part of two centuries — it has all vanished. It is to the great credit of the British that when they recognized that the sun was at last setting on the day of empires, they moved to divest themselves of them with order and justice, hoping, however, that the commonwealth of independent nations that replaced it would remain a cohesive force in world affairs. Even that has not worked out exactly as planned.

The leaders gathered in London still represent a quarter of the world's people, but they are a far different breed from the captains and kings of Victoria's day. They are not there to pay homage, but as leaders of independent and in some cases antagonistic nations.

Yet they are there, and it is not for sentimental reasons. There are shared interests in political and economic problems and beyond that there is a common denominator that makes such a gathering possible at all.

It is what Britain left behind wherever she ruled. Not the statues of bygone viceroys in once-subject cities, but the very best of herself—the concept of free men in a free society governed by law.

The legacy survives, strongly or in diluted form, in such disparate lands as Canada and the Indian Ocean island of Mauritius. And in the United States.

It is no longer Rule Britannia. But for centuries yet to come, for the vision and example of a better society she has given all mankind, it will surely be Hail Britannia.

Rochdale College Experiment

Letter to the Brockville Recorder and Times

There have been several articles in your paper recently on the question of education and one article complained of too much money being spent on education.

I would like to draw the reader's attention to the Jan. 18 issue of "Weekend Magazine," page 2, Rochdale College, Bloor Street, Toronto, close by the University of Toronto, which houses 840 students.

The name Rochdale which is a town in Lancashire, England where the co-operative movement started and this name was chosen because the college claims to operate on a co-operative basis.

There are no rules at this college and the students choose their own subjects. According to the article — a Jesuit Ph.D. stated that the college provides the environment and lets the students get on with it. Here you get some idea of the environment. Drugs, nude sunbathers, notices around on apartment doors for all to see, that Fred, Mary, Harry and Sheila are finding bliss together inside. One sign intrigued the reader, "Take off your shoes 'first, and the rest will follow when you get inside."

The interviewer was invited into an apartment with the door wide open where he found a naked couple in a single bed. In the same room were three other fully dressed people chatting. The fully dressed girl who himself self-consciously on the edge of the bed and the unclad pair introduced themselves. When the couple was asked if they did not feel embarrassed, the fair blond answered, "we respect each other, so what is wrong with going to bed together."

I am writing this letter on the assumption that public opinion has not reached the point where it condones free love, which is only another form of prostitution, only a lower form than

com mercialized prostitution, particularly when the building was financed with money from a federal government controlled corporation. It is only a means of providing a legalized outlet for young people who wish to live this kind of life.

The officials of the Department of University Affairs have expressed keen and so far sympathetic interest. If this is allowed to continue without public protest, then if this experiment is a success as far as the officials of the Dept. of University Affairs are concerned, taxpayers money for educational purposes will soon be used for this type of so-called education.

THOMAS A. SAGAR.

At a meeting of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce the chairman, in the absence of President W. B. Parental Responsibility

Windsor Star

Provincial Judges in Windsor are determined parents will take an interest in children who may have gone astray.

When boys or girls appear for cases such as drinking under age or using illicit drugs, the jurists frequently adjourn the case with the proviso that the parents appear in court with the children.

This puts some responsibility on the shoulders of the fathers and mothers. They cannot say they are not aware of the plight of the youngsters. The court impresses them with the gravity of the offence.

In some cases the young person is given suspended sentence and placed in the care of the parents. That puts it up to the older folk to see that things do not go off the rails in future.

So many parents shirk their ordinary parental duties these days. If the courts can compel even a few fathers and mothers to act like true parents, then some gain can be recorded.

Passport Rules Are Changed

Montreal Gazette

Canadian passports are among the most respected in the world as anyone who has travelled extensively with one knows.

They are also among the easiest passports to obtain. The combination is a good one for criminals, spies and assorted others who have no right to a Canadian passport but used them with much success to dodge detection.

External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp announced last week that tighter controls were being put on issuance of Canadian passports.

The new rules include one which for the first time requires documentary evidence be produced to claim citizenship. Either a birth certificate or a certificate of proof of Canadian citizenship must be produced.

In addition, there will no longer be a second-five year renewal the fees will be upped to $10 and the issuance of passports will be decentralized.

Lost Art Of Letter Writing

Ottawa Journal

This flu has been enforcing leisure to read more, listen more, TV view more. And when these pall and the first returning energies begin to demand something more creative — to pick up a pen and begin an unaccustomed letter to a long-absent friend.

We are not a generation of friendly letter writers. We've not much of a generation for unmeasured friendly talk. We "do" things for each other for tangible results from our doing.

But letter-writing is not so totally a lost art. Some of us find during a few days when we're Forbidden to "do," we don't start reaching for paper and pen and for a friend we've been meaning to write and haven't.

It's to be deplored that it is hard to write a good letter. Any friendly letter, no matter how awkward and inadequate, is a good letter because it is so much better than none.

Hellyer Report Would Tax All Land Sale Profits as Income

Land Speculators Come Under Fire

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal housing inquiry struck hard at land speculators in its report Wednesday. It recommended that all profits from land sale be treated as taxable income and that a substantial part of land required for development be assessed by municipal governments.

The report spoke of massive profits by speculators and said the present system is heavily over-weighted in their favor.

Besides urging that all land-sale profits be treated as taxable income, it urged that consideration be given to a special tax where ownership is transferred without improvements.

And within recognized limits of market demand, it said, municipalities should ensure that property assessment procedures encourage rather than discourage use of land to its maximum planning potential.

Citing Saskatoon as a good example, it sketched a system under which municipalities or regional government would cut out speculators by buying up land, servicing it as needed and re-selling it to builders.

The federal government should make direct loans to municipalities to assist this assembly procedure, it said.

The report, prepared by a committee headed by Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, said the right to own and dispose of property and take a reasonable gain from labors is an integral part of the Canadian tradition.

"But the task force seriously questions whether such rights can be stretched to encompass situations where the owners of the land reap gigantic financial benefit not from improving or working it, but merely by allowing it to lie fallow or in admitted under-use while the efforts of the community around it make such land an ever increasingly valuable asset."

HON. PAUL HELLYER

Transport Minister Paul Hellyer presented the report of the task force on housing in parliament today.

Mortgage-lenders Would Be Canvassed

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal housing inquiry recommends that private mortgage-lenders be canvassed twice a year to see that they are putting sufficient money into housing.

If they fail to meet government-established targets, the inquiry's report says, the government should consider authorizing new mortgage-lending institutions which would draw on funds deposited by the general public.

The report of the inquiry, which was headed by Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, minister responsible for federal housing policy, was tabled Wednesday in the Commons.

It also recommended freeing the present National Housing Act mortgage rate from any ceiling, extending the 25-year term of NHA mortgages, and raising the ceiling on the $18,000 limit under present circumstances to $30,000.

The report said that a minimum of 1,000,000 new houses and apartments will be needed in the next five years to keep pace with new housing demand, catch up with the backlog, and provide sufficient surplus to make the housing market truly competitive.

This would mean generating new housing capital of about $20,000,000,000.

The report said private lending institutions — primarily the insurance companies, trust and loan companies, and the chartered banks — have provided 42 per cent of the housing capital in the past.

Another 40 per cent has been provided by individuals through down payments and other financing, and about 18 per cent has been put up by governments. The report said this is a generally satisfactory division of responsibility.

It suggests for the future that the federal government co-ordinate the efforts of the private lending institutions. The government should set annual targets and canvass the lenders twice a year to ensure that their investment intentions are adequate to meet the goals, on a national and regional basis.

Hellyer Report Recommendations

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal housing inquiry headed by Transport Minister Hellyer, in its report tabled Wednesday in the Commons, recommends that:

FINANCING

The federal government seek to encourage and co-ordinate the efforts of private lending institutions to meet the vast majority of Canada's residential mortgage requirements by setting annual targets, by canvassing these lenders twice annually to ensure that their investment intentions are adequate to meet these goals and by paying particular attention to the needs of the various regions of Canada.

A special effort be made to enlist the increasing participation of Canada's rapidly growing pension funds in the field of residential mortgage financing.

In the event existing lending institutions, including pension funds, fail to allocate sufficient residential mortgage funds to meet national housing goals, the federal government seriously consider enacting the necessary legislation to establish a system of savings and mortgage institutions designed specifically to serve the residential mortgage market on a regional basis.

Serious consideration be given to the establishment of a central mortgage bank to provide additional liquidity for existing lending operations and as a necessary prerequisite to the creation of new mortgage institutions.

The interest rate for insured loans under the National Housing Act be freed to find its own level in the financial marketplace.

Serious consideration be given to providing alternate forms of insured loans under the National Housing Act to provide greater flexibility for both lenders and borrowers.

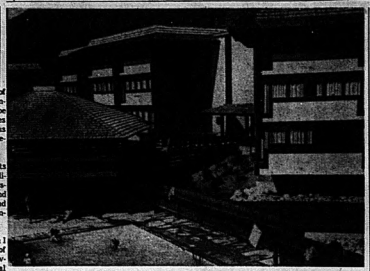
The maximum loan ceiling under the National Housing Act be substantially increased.

The amortization period of NHA loans be lengthened so that it might be of significant assistance to prospective borrowers.

Down payments be progressively reduced to the point where middle- and lower-income groups can obtain modest housing under a lease-purchase system without initial equity participation.

As a matter of principle, purchasers of existing homes be entitled to comparable mortgage conditions under the National Housing Act as apply to new houses.

Effort be made by those concerned to reduce insurance fees, legal charges, real estate commissions and other administrative costs.



Greater encouragement be given to the use of limited dividend, non-profit and co-operative projects as a means of providing adequate accommodation for lower-income groups.

All profits from the sale of land be treated as taxable income, and that consideration be given to a special tax in cases where ownership of land is transferred without improvements.

Within the recognized limits of market demand, municipalities ensure that property assessment procedures encourage and not discourage the use of land to its maximum planning potential.

Municipalities or regional governments, as a matter of continuing policy, acquire, service and sell all or a substantial portion of the land required for urban growth within their boundaries.

The federal government make direct loans to municipalities or regional governments to assist them in assembling and servicing land for urban growth.

Canadians Battle Soggy Conditions to Launch ISIS A

LOMPOC, Calif. (CP) — Canadian space scientists today were a bit soggy, but convinced their powder is dry enough for a good shot at a third space satellite venture.

The satellite is ISIS A, due to be launched from Vandenberg U.S. Air Force base near this coastal California community at about 10:30 p.m. PST, weather permitting.

And it looks as if the weather, which has clobbered this area with heavy flooding in the last week, will co-operate.

The only possibility for postponement of ISIS, a satellite designed as Canada's third contribution to studies of the mysterious ionosphere, appeared to be severe high-altitude winds.

Extreme upper-level winds could cause the U.S.-supplied Delta launch rocket to veer uncontrollably before it lofts ISIS A, put together by members of the government's defence research board and RCA Victor, into its planned orbit.

If pre-launch tests show the upper winds are severe, the firing will be delayed.

But winds aloft have been a prospect that Canadian scientists have been willing to leave until the final pre-flight decision.

They have had more mundane problems to deal with—like flood-waters swirling at desk top height through the building in which they have been working.

Cleanup crews have been working around the clock to clean out the building in time for today's operations. The Canadian team hauled out its essential working materials and is ready to go—either from assigned working quarters or a temporary headquarters.

ISIS—for International Satellite for Ionospheric Studies—follows Alouette I and II which were so successful that the least hitch with ISIS is bound to be considered a bit of backsliding.

Alouette I, the first satellite designed and built in Canada, went up in September, 1962, and is still sending back data about the ionosphere, the charged layer of the upper atmosphere that plays an important part in all types of radio communication, particularly in the north.

Alouette II went up in 1965 and also is still providing valuable data.

ISIS A is to go into an elliptical polar orbit 305 nautical miles from earth at its nearest point and 1,800 miles at the farthest. Each orbit will take 127 minutes.

Ulster Police Seize Paisley

BELFAST (AP) — Police seized two leading Protestant extremists and took them to jail today while Prime Minister Terence O'Neill prepared to face a vote of confidence.

Police arrested Rev. Ian Paisley in a hospital lobby and took him to begin a three-month sentence on charges of unlawful assembly. Paisley protested that the police broke an agreement to give him time to consider an appeal.

A number of Paisley's Free Presbyterian churchmen followed their leader to the prison gate. He rolled down a window of the police car and called out: "Just say that the police broke their word, that is all."

Paisley went to hospital for treatment of a hand cut Tuesday when he scuffled with police who tried to arrest him at his home.

Paisley's chief aide, Maj. Ronald Bunting, was arrested at dawn and taken to jail in his pyjamas after police broke down his front door. The police said Bunting wouldn't let them in.

Bunting had also received a three-month sentence Monday on charges resulting from a demonstration last November.

Both men can get out on bail if they decide within 14 days to appeal their sentences.

The government meanwhile proposed tougher laws to quell religious and political disorders as the prime minister tried to rally support for the confidence vote.

O'Neill went into the crucial parliamentary session after telling supporters of his moderate policies that he had no desire to cling to leadership of the country for his own sake.

"It is my clear duty, with a loyal and united cabinet behind me, to fight for the policies we all believe in," he said.

The vote will show the extent of opposition to O'Neill within his Unionist party, torn by the resignations of four cabinet ministers who want firmer measures to control civil rights demonstrations.

The government went part way toward meeting these demands with its proposed laws banning street sidesms and takeovers of public buildings. Carrying offensive weapons in public will be punishable by six months in jail or a fine of up to £500 ($1,200).

Thus O'Neill hopes to prevent further violence on the scale that has rocked Northern Ireland since October and left hundreds injured in clashes which often become direct battles between Roman Catholics and Protestants.

Ulster's Catholics, one in three of the population, claim that Protestant authorities discriminate against them in housing, jobs and voting rights.

O'Neill, who has been prime minister for the last six years, could be forced from office if the parliamentary vote goes against him, but political observers considered this unlikely.

The vote could come at any time in the late afternoon or evening but parliamentary sources said it was most likely around 9 p.m. (4 p.m. EST).

De Gaulle Said Good Publicist

OTTAWA (CP) — If President de Gaulle of France hadn't sounded off about French Canada, Monique Cristin probably would not be living in this country.

"The general is certainly a good publicist," the young Parisian said in an interview. "He sold Quebec to the rest of the world and made us aware of it."

Miss Cristin now is teaching sociology at the University of Ottawa to undergraduate and graduate students.

"I have one course in the sociology of education and another in urban and rural sociology, and all my teaching is done in French."

Miss Cristin, born in France during the Second World War, went to the Sorbonne in Paris where she majored in literature and psychology.

"I switched to sociology as I did not want to teach children. Sociology offered more professional possibilities. I concentrated on social communications, but did my MA degree thesis on a rural community."

Miss Cristin has a great sympathy for the student revolt at the Sorbonne. She blames it on students discontent there on extreme overcrowding and incompetent professors who can't be fired because they are civil servants.

"I was active in Sorbonne politics during the Algerian war and so were many of my friends. If active, you are fired — return later in your work. But don't call us activists. It is a bad word to the French."

Miss Cristin's first job was with the national centre of scientific research. She stayed there five years and got a good solid training.

"It was then time for new challenges and when General de Gaulle infuriated Canadians with his remarks in 1967, I decided I wanted to work here. I had friends at the University of Montreal so I made inquiries of possibilities from them."

Until the 1968 academic year began, Monique worked for the publications branch of Canada's National Gallery.

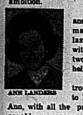
She finds French-Canadian students different from Parisian ones.

"They speak out and say what they think and ask inquisitive questions. When I asked them what they thought of my course they certainly told me.

"That would be unthinkable in France. Your young French are never snobs and never pretenders. But they are there to learn and not to learn to think.

"Of course the Quebec early education needs improving. They have not been well educated in those parochial schools."

Monique has no hobbies except going to films. "I like them all—even westerns and thrillers." She felt completely at home when she landed in New York because of America's can films she had seen.



Miss Cristin says marriage is most difficult for a professional woman and she has no plans for it yet.

"I have images of myself as a mother surrounded by children or a grandmother with grandchildren clustered around her knees. But that is as far as it goes—a dream."

Ann Landers

Inability to Hold Job Sign of Immaturity

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Four years ago I married a man my parents never liked. My dad always said Brian lacked ambition.

ANN LANDERS

Last night Brian came home and announced he had quit his job at the supermarket. (Conflict with the boss.) This job lasted six months — the longest he has stayed with anything since we married. We have two small children and I can't go to work to help pay the bills the way I used to.

Brian says the reason he has employment troubles is that he has never had a job equal to his brains and ability. I can't understand, Ann, with all the prosperity around, how it happens that a capable man never seems to get the opportunity. Can you explain this? — BRIAN'S WIFE.

DEAR WIFE: There's plenty of opportunity around. The reason some people don't recognize it is because it is disguised as hard work. Brian's inability to stick with a job is a sign of immaturity. He needs to plant some seeds of honest labor, water them generously with perspiration, and stick around long enough to see what comes up.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My girl and I are both in high school. We are very much in love. Last week Sarah learned she is pregnant. Yesterday we told our parents we want to get married.

My folks say it's all right with them. Sarah's parents say no. They want her to go to her aunt's in Wisconsin and have the baby, then put it up for adoption. (We live in a small town, Ann, and she couldn't face people unless she was married.

Sarah is a quiet person. She respects her parents a lot and now she feels she must do as they say. What is your opinion? — PARENT TROUBLE.

DEAR TROUBLE: How old are you? How old is Sarah? Would you quit high school? Can you support a wife and child?

My advice is to sit down with your clergyman. His knows you and your girl and both sets of parents. His judgment would be better than mine. (And better than yours, too.)

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have a 34-year-old problem. She is my mother. I am 11. My mother copies my piano teacher. A few days ago my piano teacher's little girl didn't want to eat her oatmeal so she threw it down the laundry chute. Her mother turned right around and made another bowl of oatmeal. What she didn't eat for breakfast she had to eat for lunch.

Now when I don't want to eat something, my mother says, "All right, you'll see it at the next meal." And sure enough, there it is.

What do you think about a mother who copies the piano teacher? — COPYCAT'S SON.

DEAR SON: I think your piano teacher has a wonderful idea and I hope lots of other mothers copy her. (P.S. I love oatmeal, and I eat it even when I don't have to!)

Club Activities

GAMMA MU CHAPTER BETA SIGMA PHI

The first meeting of the new year of the Gamma Mu Chapter of the Beta Sigma Phi was held at the home of Mrs. John Day.

The program was entitled the "Pleasures of Possession — the Collector". It was jointly arranged by Mrs. John Sherry and Mrs. S. Micklead. Mrs. Sherry introduced Rev. J. M. McLeod of Rednersville whose ardent interest in antiques prompted as unique display.

Several different types of glass were brought by Rev. McLeod, and a commentary given with each. After having concluded his own commentary, Mr. McLeod examined and commended on several other pieces which were brought by some of the members.

Following a most interesting and informative presentation, Rev. McLeod was thanked by Mrs. S. Muirhead on behalf of the group.

The evening was adjourned with refreshments served by the co-hostesses, Mrs. B Owen and Mrs. G. Deline.

SECOND MEETING

Mrs. John Sherry was hostess for the second meeting of the new year.

During the business segment of the meeting, it was decided that the Gamma Mu Chapter, together with the other Belleville Chapters make a donation to the Election Co-ordinating Committee to be used as an award for the upcoming Rotary Music Festival.

Also, a petition was received from the president of the White Cane Club outlining several amendments which they hope will eventually be included in the Blind Persons' Act.

In general, the amendments suggest that all blind Canadians from age 18, receive a Universal Allowance which would be tax exempt and considered as income from the Federal Government. This was given due consideration and full support of the Chapter.

The members were also reminded of the Beta Sigma Phi Area Convention on October 3, 4, and 5th, to be held in Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Following the business portion, Mrs. E. Belyea and Mrs. A. Fulton were in charge of the program entitled "the Connaisseur". Mrs. Fulton introduced guest speaker, Mrs. Dorothy MacKinnon, Home Economist with the Poultry Products Institute of Canada.

Mrs. MacKinnon suggested that all women were connoisseurs in cooking and preparation of food, although men tend to be more imaginative in the kitchen as they do not usually consider such things as pleasing the entire family, or the cost.

Women are the purchasing agents simply through experience and knowledge gained through routine and daily uses of various products.

Mrs. MacKinnon suggested various hints to keep in mind when buying fresh fruits and vegetables, canned goods and eggs. To conclude her most informative presentation, Mrs. MacKinnon demonstrated how to make a cheese and nut omlet.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. A. Robb and Mrs. J. Dolan, concluding another meeting.

Sexy Spring Collections

PARIS (AP) — Courreges presented a sensational sexy spring and summer collection Tuesday that puts the Follies Berger in the shade.

But the girls all wore bras under white knitted underwear jumpsuits with six-inch scalloped white felt frills around the hems. All 19 models were colored wigs in the new coconut line — red, blue, yellow, pink and orange.

As a prelude came girls dressed as Inca sun worshipers and Barbarella in metal bras and girdles.

Then they flew out through wood shutters in tailored coats, suits and dresses. Bright, clear colors were used in wool, along with pastels and some white.

In dresses, necklines are slashed to d'eep plunge with curved white sections outlining the V hemlines and small round turndown collars are also white.

Points for Parents
By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Jimmy is so cross with little Linda. He surely can't be jealous of her. He just doesn't seem to like her very well."

Father: "I don't know why he would be jealous. We always treat them exactly alike."

Mother: "I think Jimmy feels he has to compete with Linda now that she is talking and doing many of the things he does. I think we should let him stay up a little later at night so you can play with him alone. It will be one way of helping him feel he is a big boy."

Even though children are only a year or so apart, don't treat them both as babies of the same age. Give a 4-year-old some special privileges that a 2-year-old does not yet enjoy.

Young Business Man Lists Jobs Done

By DORIS CLARK

Carefully lettered out by an eight-year-old boy, the sign read:

"Odd jobs, errands and other kind of jobs can be done. Here a list of some things that can be done: walk dogs; run an errand; sweep porch; shovel walk; baby sit; wash car; clean house; serve refreshments at a party; decorate for a party, and cook food any sort of an occasion

"— and any other kind of jobs that you want done. This will be available until March 3, 1968. If needed call 238-1825 after 4 p.m." — Reprinted from "Money Management — Children's Spending".

Showed considerable ingenuity, didn't he? And willingness. Wonder what the refreshments would be? And he didn't mention prices.

Oh, well. The idea is good. How can a young fellow learn better that money doesn't grow on trees? How can he better practise money management?

Dear Doris: I sent for you leaflet on communicating with our young people, but what do you suggest if your husband won't talk? The boys do the talking and he listens. He's one of the most permissive fathers I know.

My husband says he wants to make this world a better place and the way he proposes to do it is to leave as much money as he can to our nine children. Four have already married and have better clothes and homes than we ever had.

I say if you raise your family to be honest, dependable and God-fearing, then you may make this world a better place. Who has the right idea, my husband or I? — Five To Go.

Dear Five: It beats me how a parent will slave and save to his grave, leaving an inheritance which ought to have been spent for his own and his wife's well-being. The young people seldom need it, and don't even want it.

Yet it gives the older man some sense of power to see that record of greenbacks in a little book.

The inheritance you prefer leaving has it all over the other one forty ways. Looks as if you'll have to continue to carry the whole burden of communicating!

Confidential to No Way At All: The questions you ask must be answered by a lawyer. From here I'd say an extra-marital alliance with another man would just be jumping from frying pan into fire.

If there were a question of custody of children, later, a judge might take a dim view of a common-law type arrangement, as being morally not good. Add the fact that neither you nor your youngsters would have any legal rights, and you have strong arguments for running your own show, as you are doing now.

Lattice Peach Pie

By MARY MOORE

Simply because a 28-oz. can of sliced peaches was 49 cents I bought it. With fruit prices as they are it was a good buy for it would make a good pie filling and would fill a deep 9" pie plate.

When I opened the can the slices were uniform and long and the color was a rich orange yellow. What not a lattice pie, letting their lovely color show?

This is an easy pie to make.

LATTICE PEACH PIE
(serves 6 or 7)

Pastry:
2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
two-thirds cup shortening
2 tablespoons butter
1 teaspoon salt
3 or 4 tablespoons cold water

Filling:
one 28-oz. can sliced peaches (drained — see below)
2 tablespoons minute tapioca
one-third cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon almond extract
½ teaspoon yellow food coloring

To make pastry cut the shortening and butter into the flour and salt until size of peas. Drizzle in cold water, tossing with a fork, until dough will pack into a ball between your palms. Cut in half. Roll each half out on floured board to fit deep 9" pie plate. Line pie plate with one half. Chill.

To make filling drain canned sliced peaches and measure syrup. I had one cup. If you do not, add water to make your syrup up to 1 cup.

In a saucepan combine this 1 cup syrup with tapioca, sugar, salt, and lemon juice and cook stirring until thick and about 2 minutes longer. Add extract and coloring and let cool while you cut remaining half of dough into ¼" wide strips (with a pastry wheel preferably). Arrange peach slices in overlapping circles evenly and attractively in chilled bottom crust. Pour filling over peaches and apply pastry strips, lattice fashion, about ¼" apart, over top, sealing at edges and trimming off any excess. Glaze pastry strips by brushing with 1 tablespoon each sugar and milk missed together. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. 15 minutes then reduce heat to 325 deg. Fahr. for 15 min. longer or until syrup bubbles. (Note: Remember that this peach filling is precooked and does not require the longer baking time that raw fruit does.)

We served ours with old Cheddar cheese but a la mode is nice too.

Basford Moves to Break Up Exclusive Club of Drug-makers

OTTAWA (CP) — The major drug manufacturers were labelled Tuesday night as an exclusive club with high profits and big tax-benefit promotion expenses who can afford to cut prices or face competition from cheaper imports.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford pinned the label to the members of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association of Canada, telling the Commons health committee "we are breaking up this exclusive club" to give small Canadian firms a chance to compete.

And, if the big firms prove balky, Mr. Basford poised a threat of direct government intervention in prescription drug production and distribution.

To a suggestion by Max Saltsman (NDP — Waterloo) that a crown company be set up to bring cheaper drugs to consumers, Mr. Basford said repeatedly he isn't closing off the possibility of acting on any suggestions.

He said he has told presidents of big drug firms that in their shoes "I'd want to make this bill work."

The bill in question is a government-sponsored change to lessen the Patent and Trade Marks Act protection against importation of patented drugs.

Mr. Basford said it is only one of several steps under way or planned to inject new competition in the drug industry and, in that way, bring about lower prices to the consumers.

A 12-per-cent sales tax on manufacturers' sales had already been removed. Scientific and price data on drugs would be made available by the government monthly to doctors, starting next October.

Loans would be available to smaller drug firms who wanted to expand their facilities. And, finally, discussions would be held with the provinces to find co-operative ways of ensuring that the consumer benefitted as the drug counter from the effects of greater competition among manufacturers.

The legislation implements part of the recommendations last year of a Commons committee which found industry profits about double those of most industries and drew attention to huge promotion budgets.

As the first day's hearings ended, Raymond Rock (L — Montreal Lachine), accused committee chairman Dr. Gaston Isabelle (L — Hull) of being "unfair and dictatorial" in not hearing arguments for extended examination of industry witnesses.

The steering committee is to decide this issue later this week. The only request for a hearing came from the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association of Canada which has fought the industry battle in three major inquiries by federal agencies in the last five years.

Two Opposition doctors, Dr. P. B. Rynard (PC — Simcoe North) and Dr. Gordon Ritchie (PC — Dauphin), also pressed for extended hearings covering the effects on the prescription-taking patient as well as to the economy as a whole.

Commons Takes Day off So Committees Can Get Some Work Done

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons had a day off Tuesday to give its committees free rein, a practice that could become common under the new procedural rules.

Eight of the 19 principal standing committees of the House took advantage of the one-day break to examine government legislation.

Informants suggest the break worked well enough to conclude that the Commons might take several days off each session to allow committees to get their work done.

Under new rules, put into effect Jan. 14, committees have prime responsibility for detailed study of legislation and government spending estimates.

One official view is that the days off might be batched at peak work periods for the committees, say in the fall when there is a collection of new bills to study and in late winter when annual spending estimates pile up.

Tuesday's suspension of the Commons sitting for committee work was the second in recent memory. There was another just before Christmas to clear up a backlog.

The day off permits MPs to give full time and attention to committees without worrying about showing up in the House. There's some feeling that the committees' higher status under the new rules merits better treatment.

Arrangements for changes in regular Commons sitting hours and the handling of business are worked out by all-party spokesmen at private meetings, although the government takes the initiative.

The Senate sat Tuesday and continued debate on a bill to broaden government power to ban or regulate consumer products. Only its committees were meeting today.

It's back to business today in the Commons when the opposition will have a chance to discuss anything it wishes.

Meanwhile, the public accounts committee decided to put government officials on the witness stand to find out the actual cost of a refit job on the aircraft carrier Bonaventure. Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson told the committee the full costs had never been revealed.

At the veterans affairs committee, R. W. Pawley, the chief administrator of the Veterans Land Act, warned that excessive privileges for veterans could turn public opinion against them.

In other committee activity, Justice Minister John Turner disclosed that the aim of a current review of the Canada Evidence Act will be the uniformity of federal and provincial rules of evidence.

Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford said the government intends to widen its activities in grading consumer goods. But it will expand to the point of selling approval seals commercially.

In the Senate, there was a warning from veteran Senator David Croll that unless some of his colleagues stopped "dogging it" they might find one of their numbers writing an expose.

Senator David Croll (L.— Ontario) was referring to the memoirs of Judy LaMarsh, former Liberal cabinet minister who has written an intimate portrayal of her years in Ottawa.

General View of New International Cooperage Plant

Belleville Made Capran Nylon Film

City's Latest Industries Add Variety

By ROY PEACOCK
and HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporters

Progress is any modern community's most important product.

And the more a community produces the greater its importance; an area grows with its industry.

In Belleville, as elsewhere, the process has been gradual, but change nonetheless is evident — even in the past year.

The change is spelled in the names of the new industries which have chosen the Quinte city as an operating centre.

In all, there have been five secondary and service industries added to the community's industrial catalogue during the past 12 months.

They represent investment capital of about $2,500,000, estimates city industrial commissioner Ray Brown.

It was a pattern of satisfactory growth considering inhibited money markets.

"It was a steady process — in view of the dollar scarcity and the inflationary spiral," says Mr. Brown.

Among the names signifying gradual community growth:

Allied Chemical — now entering production with the manufacture of nylon film food packaging. Highly automated, the plant now is almost up to required work force strength — between 25-30 people are on the job, say company officials. Production of the film is a first for Canada.

International Cooperage — manufacture of all types of bulk containers has been under way since last summer.

Chambers Food Club — a service industry in operation since late 1968. Supplies of foods under a home-club plan, its marketing area reaches from Cobourg to Napanee.

American Superior Electric — First industry to opt for the city's northend industrial park area; manufacturer of motor controls.

Other names are Hallman Silos, and Bailey Metalcraft.

They signify the community growth process is gaining impetus — with apperently nowhere to go but up.

The industrial commissioner is confident of the pattern for the next 12 months.

"I anticipate 1969 will be a record year for Belleville," says Mr. Brown. "It will affect all sectors of the city — in institutional industrial, commercial and residential growth."

Picton Business Grows and Grows

PICTON, Ont. (CP) — A small but fast-growing industry which supplies all the major biological houses in North America is operating in Prince Edward County on Lake Ontario's Bay of Quinte.

Prince Edward Biological Co. established Jan. 1, 1968, deals in osteological—skeleton and bone—preparations, and taxidermy specimens. In the space of a year it has outgrown its original basement workers.

The man behind the operation is David Allan Clark, who with the help of a partner who prefers anonymity at this time because of other business interests has made this company known across the continent as a supplier of top-quality specimens.

Mr. Clark had years of experience with a large biological house in Toronto and his partner holds a bachelor of science degree. A third man, Jake DeVries, owns the building where the operation now is housed and also handles the taxidermy part of the business. Taxidermy has long been a hobby of Mr. DeVries, well known around the district for his skill before he became associated with Prince Edward Biological.

The osteological specimens can be anything, Mr. Clark says, depending upon what is ordered. Trying to finish a large order of perch, frogs and turtles, he took the time to explain the intricate operation.

It is a 10-step hand operation from the live specimen to the finished skeleton, the most difficult step being the reconstruction and wiring of the bones into one of the many different poses that may be ordered.

Mr. Clark estimates that it takes about three hours to make up the skeleton of one perch, but the time may be cut to an hour and a half per specimen if they are done in batches. For this reason he gives a discount on orders of a dozen or over.

Some of the specimens are bred by Mr. Clark, others are ordered by him and many are brought in by local residents. In the warmer months of the year there is a steady stream of small boys offering him every conceivable thing that walks, creeps, crawls or flies. These he pays for at a set rate, so he generally has a fair supply of specimens.

Asked about the rumors that some biological companies steal pets for specimens, Mr. Clark just laughed. "We will not accept any domestic animal or pet unless proof of ownership can be shown," he said. "When this has been determined, the animal is legally put to sleep and all the owner gets is the saying of the fee he would have had to pay elsewhere."

The natives are restless these mornings in Ye Olde Typwriter Shoppe, as Stanley Cup scurry takes its latter-seasonal hold on pennant-flappers of the various NHL stables.

They lie in ambush around the composing room's first turn for "Joe" Pice on mornings after his Habitants lift the ice; they heap abuse on "Windy City" Wood when his Golden Hawk plays have ducky; and they razz "Punch" Cooney into wishing Maple Leaf Gardens was a vacant lot. (Which isn't such an unseemly suggestion, come to think of it.)

Fortunately for the hockey-wise among us, many of these galley-proof experts have a hinge on their wallets that is only matched by that on their tongues.

Some personal current favorite "book" from the second-storey second-guessers include:

— An even ten from Hialeah Hay that it's Montreal, not the Maple Leaf, forever;

— "Le Toque" Johnston lays a quid that some upstart Montreal right-shifter by the name of Ivan Cornwire will bulge more league nets this year than Philip Esposito;

(Ed. Note — It should be pointed out, in fairness to Le Toque, that said eager beaver is on record with the party of the first part as predicting the Canadian National team would get six points out of the touring Soviets.)

— A wager of any amount can be contracted with "Babe" Bourette, who flatly believes nothing short of Typhoon Lorahee will keep his Bruins from the Cup.

A propos of all this fiscal falderal we might note that we're fed up with these Forum five-dadders who are long — oh, so long — on lip, and so diminutive in the courage to finance their convictions.

They start off by saying that Les Habitants are a direct gift from Providence to the sporting world, then end up asking 4-1 odds that the Canadiens will make the playoffs.

They will deign to give Stanley Cup odds to you . . . if you happen to be a Pittsburgh, Minnesota, or Vancouver backer.

One Francophone hockey fanatic was barely tempted to open his billfold on an even money challenge that the entire Montreal roster wouldn't score as many goals as the Leafs' potent Walton-Pulford-Armstrong combination.

"Tell you what I'll do," one brave editorial room Bellveau-booster says to me, seconds after informing the whole world that his Habs are the best thing to hit hockey since skates: "I'll bet that Montreal gets a split with the Leafs in their next two games."

See what we have to put up with, — or according to your lexicon — up with what we have to put.

One thing about a good Leaf fan — he might not have much to bet on, but he loyally shouts the works on Smythe's Folly.

Dodging all the words and wallets in this neighborhood's version of a vitriolic hot stove league are "Minnesota" Ron and Hustling Hughie — content to take their chances with cue and rock, respectively.

Russians Win 6th

Hard-hitting Nats Stay Within Goal Of Soviet Machine

WINNIPEG (CP) — Determination and bone-jarring body checks weren't enough to tree the Russian bear Tuesday night, but the sport pleased coach Anatoly Tarasov.

The Russian national hockey team won 3-2 over Canada before 9,000 fans, their sixth straight conquest. But often the Russians found themselves undressed hard-hitting Canadian defencemen, especially ex-professional Ken Stephanson.

Russian coach Tarasov, in a post-game conference with reporters, had a few kind words for the 26-year-old, 195-pound Winnipeg native who wears No. 4 on his jersey.

"Hockey is a man's game and No. 4 played like a man . . . But in hitting both men get the bruises."

Stephenson's presence was felt early. He knocked Boris Mahailov over the boards in the first period and kept up the bruising pace through 60 minutes of play.

But the hitting wasn't enough to knock the Russians off stride as they skated to period leads of 1-0 and 2-1.

And Tarasov was happy with the officiating by Gordie Kerr and Lou Joyal, who could be accused of a little leniency.

"When refereeing is good", Tarasov said, "It is not noticed. The players are given a change to play the game. That is the way it was tonight".

Russia got goals from Valerie Kharlamov, his fifth in six games, Vladimir Petrov and Aleksandr Maltsev. Both of Canada's goals were scored by

Russia 3
Canada 2

Kevin O'Shea of the Ottawa-based nationals. Fran Huck assisted on both.

Jack McLeod, coach of the Canadian squad, was happy with his team's efforts in spite of the defeat.

"This is why we wanted this series with the Russians—to give our many rookies an opportunity to play their kind of game. It's a different game, believe me, and they're catching on. They're getting used to it now and we're getting closer."

There were eight penalties called in the fast-moving encounter with both teams taking four each. The third period, in which the Russian's superior conditioning showed, was penalty-free.

Goalie Wayne Stephenson played a standout game for Canada, turning away many difficult shots in making 35 saves. Victor Konovalenko stopped 27.

The Russians continue their tour against the Canadians in Ottawa Thursday, the last original stop, but the Soviets have three additional games lined up before returning home next week.

They will play Canada Friday night in London, Ont., and in Quebec City Sunday. They will play in Sherbrooke, Que., Monday, but the game will be against a team of Quebec Senior League all-stars.

'Staff and Dave' Suggested As National Team Organizers

TORONTO (CP) — Conn Smythe, who built Toronto Maple Leafs into a National Hockey League power, said Tuesday night Canada's national team should be disbanded.

Referring to the Canadian team's losing record against Russia in world amateur competition, Smythe said the job of building a contender should be turned over to professionals.

In a speech to the 18th annual sports celebrities dinner, sponsored by the Ontario Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association with proceeds to aid crippled children, Smythe said:

"Staff Smythe and Dave Molson should be given the job of raising a team to represent Canada."

Staff Smythe, Conn's son, took over the Leafs when his father retired. Molson operates Montreal Canadiens in the NHL.

He said "Staff and Dave" could build a team, possibly an all-star club, to return Canada to amateur hockey respectability.

"We have good young boys on our national team, but they're playing against men," Smythe said.

"In no sport can you send out boys to fight men. The Canadian team should be disbanded as it stands."

Kings Get 11 Shots Against Swarming Hornets

COLLINGWOOD, Ont. (CP) — Ron Hergott and Bill Hway each scored three goals Tuesday night as Oak Hornets bombed Collingwood Kings 13-0 in an Ontario Hockey Association senior series game.

The loss was the sixth straight for the Kings, who managed only 11 shots on goal during the game.

Real Caron, with two goals, John Beechy, Ron Smith, Howie Dietrich, Bob Ertel and Fern Belanger, with one each, also scored for the Kings who fired 49 shots on two Collingwood goalies.

Bespectacled Arbour Moves from Fringe To St. Louis Forefront

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Just two years ago Al Arbour was a minor league defenceman on the verge of retirement. Now, he's an all-star in the National Hockey League.

Arbour, like many others, owes his new lease on life to NHL expansion.

The 32-year-old announced his retirement after finishing the 1966-67 season with Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League. He was going into the construction business with some friends in Sudbury, Ont.

Then, St. Louis Blues selected him in the expansion draft June 5, 1967.

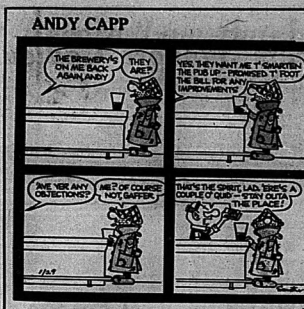
Numerous phone calls from St. Louis coach Scotty Bowman, general manager Lynn Patrick and owner Sid Salomon Jr. finally convinced Arbour to fly to St. Louis two weeks after the Blues had opened their 1967-68 training camp.

"I just went down to look things over," he said. "I wanted to see what kind of organization they had, what kind of city and so on. If I didn't like it I was going to go home."

Arbour liked what he saw and stayed. The decision paid off because just last week Arbour played in his first all-star game and helped the Western Division tie the Eastern Division team 3-3.

"It was the best move I ever made," Arbour said of his decision to join St. Louis. "The Salomons are the greatest people you could ever play for. So are the fans."

It is a happy note in a career that began with Detroit Red Wings during the 1953-54 season.



Arbour went from Detroit to Chicago Black Hawks and later Toronto Maple Leafs. His chief distinctions were that he played on Stanley Cup championships teams in all three cities and that he was the only player in the NHL to wear glasses on the ice.

But Arbour generally was regarded as a fine defenceman. I never got too many points. This certainly hurts when you sign your contract. They'd always ask you how many goals or points you got the previous season."

But the Blues don't care how many points Arbour collects. They just want him to play solid defensive hockey and continue to block shots like a second goaltender.

Arbour and his St. Louis team-mates hold a 17-point lead over runner-up Oakland Seals in the Western Division, meet Pittsburgh Penguins at Pittsburgh tonight.

In other games, Montreal Canadiens welcome Minnesota North Stars, Toronto visits Los Angeles Kings, New York Rangers play host to Detroit and Boston Bruins visit Oakland.

Sheehan Suspended While Scoring Leader

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bob Sheehan must be a frustrated hockey player.

Sheehan, of St. Catharines Black Hawks, leads the lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series scoring race Sunday and was suspended indefinitely by the club Tuesday.

Hawks' manager Brian Shaw said it was for disciplinary reasons.

Sheehan scored three goals Junior A series Tuesday night —the first time this season they have been able to catch St. Catharines Black Hawks.

The Canadiens grabbed their share of first place by downing Niagara Falls 5-2 before 2,000 Flyers' fans. The Habs have played four fewer games than the Hawks.

Two other games Tuesday night ended in ties. London Knights, trailing 5-1 at one stage in the first period, rallied to tie Peterborough Petes 8-8 while Kitchener Rangers scored two third-period goals to tie Oshawa Generals 3-3.

Montreal moved into a quick 3-0 lead in the first 13 minutes on goals by Jean-Pierre Bordeleau, Norm Gratton and Robert Lalonde before Phil Roberto scored for the Flyers. Bordeleau and Jean Guy Charron scored for Montreal in the second period while Flyers' other goal was scored by Russ Frieson in the third.

At London, Darryl Sittler scored three goals for the Knights and John Gould, Clyde Simon, Guy Delparte, Allan Young and Bob Roselle added one each. Roselle's goal, with less than three minutes remaining, gave London the tie.

Dale Power and linemate Dale MacLeish each scored two goals for Peterborough and Paul Perras, Dave Roy, Colin Loudon and Tony Featherstone added the others.

At Oshawa, Ted Scharf, Brian Glenwright and Henry Lehvonen scored for the Rangers while Gerry Welsh, Rick Kessel and Pete Vipond were the Generals marksmen.

At Niagara Falls Tuesday night —before 2,000 fans—Oshawa Generals defeated the Flyers 5-2 to take the lead with 78 points on 41 goals and 37 assists.

He leads Oshawa Generals Rick Kessel by three points. Kessel has 23 goals and 52 assists.

Close behind with 71 points on 24 goals and 47 assists is Phil Roberto of Niagara Falls.

Without Signature, 'O.J.' Little Use To Lowly Bills

NEW YORK (AP) — Buffalo Bills, looking to turn pro football's worst record into one of its best, looked ahead to signing O. J. Simpson while they and 25 other teams today completed the two-day draft of college players.

The Bills, whose 1-13-1 record earned them the right to draft first Tuesday, selected Simpson, and both parties said they anticipated no trouble in reaching an agreement.

After the Bills picked the Heisman Trophy running back from Southern California, the American and National leagues waded through seven rounds of their third common draft, selecting a total of 182 players in 12 hours, 11 minutes.

They had 10 more rounds today before turning their attention to contract negotiations. There were, of course, other college stars besides Simpson drafted.

For example, there were four other running backs picked in the first round—Leroy Keyes of Purdue by Philadelphia, Larry Smith of Florida by Los Angeles, Ron Johnson of Michigan by Cleveland and Calvin Hill of Yale by Dallas.

Hill also was one of three Los Angeles choices in the opening round, the others being split end Jim Seymour of Notre Dame and tight end Bob Klein of Southern California, while Hill was one of two Fry League players to be taken, the other being quarterback Marty Domres of Columbia, who now belongs to San Diego.

Quarterback Greg Cook of Cincinnati also was drafted in the first round, by Cincinnati Bengals, but all-America Terry Hanratty of Notre Dame was left until Pittsburgh grabbed him in the second round.

The Bills, of the AFL, intend to convince Simpson he's going with a good organization, too. O. J. had said repeatedly during the season he wanted to go with an NFL team.

Asked about that feeling following his selection, he said: "I prefer the NFL because I think it's a stronger league over-all. But the Super Bowl showed the AFL is not that far behind."

He also was asked about the $600,000 he has been reported to be asking to sign.

"I haven't heard of that particular figure, and I don't believe that is it," replied the man who smashed the major college rushing record last season by gaining 1,709 yards.

Ladies Invade Man's Domain

That rousing contact sport called ice hockey is, traditionally a man's sport, but not so any more, for now the girls are in on the act too.

Belleville has two ladies hockey teams who compete in the Picton and District Ladies' Hockey League and have formed their own local association, the Quinte Ladies' Hockey Association in only their second year of operation.

The girls abide by the men's rules and wear the same protective equipment, including pads, helmets, mouthguards and ankle protectors.

The girls on the two local teams, Mel Barriage Landscapers and the Legion Branch 99, buy their own equipment, pay their own insurance and pay for their own ice time, including game time and the weekly one hour practice fees.

Only six of the 30 girls on the two Belleville teams are married, and the team members range in age from 13 to 28 years.

Last year the two local teams started from scratch and the coaches, Bob Cook of Mel Barriage, and Ralph Bowman of Legion 99, taught the girls the rules of the game and showed them the fundamentals of hockey, ranging from how to hold a stick and shoot the puck, to positional play.

Most of the girls play other sports, particularly softball in the summer and last year they decided they wanted to try their hand at ice hockey. The girls' comments on ice hockey ranged from "It's fun", and "It's different" to "It's the best winter sport and it's good exercise."

Last year the Mel Barriage Landscapers displayed their prowess when they travelled to Toronto and captured the Class "C" championship at the Dominion Ladies' Hockey Tournament. They'll return again this year April 26th and 27th to defend their prestigious title.

Picton, a local hotbed of ladies hockey, will play host to the Ontario Championship Tournament on March 8th and 9th, and Belleville will be represented by at least one team. This tournament will give local sports fans a chance to see the best women's teams from across the province compete for the provincial title.

Trojan Juniors Share Top Spot

A 21 point second quarter outburst broke open the game and carried the undefeated Moira Junior Trojans to a 64-31 win over Napanee and a share of first place in Bay of Quinte Boys' Class "AA" Basketball League action last night at Moira Secondary School.

The Trojan bantams dumped Napanee 36-11 to claim a share of first spot, in the seven team league, along with Trenton and BCI.

In the night's other game Napanee Golden Hawks senior squad used a 14 point second quarter to overcome the Trojans 59-42 and move abreast of Picton in second spot in the senior division. Both teams have eight points, but Picton seniors have five games in hand over Napanee.

Moira juniors varied between an unusual 1-2-3-1 zone and a man-to-man defensive alignment as 6' 4" centre Paul Hayes dominated the defensive backboards for the Trojans.

Hayes hooped 19 points to top the Moira scorers while Martin Warmold netted ten points, Paul Nohile counted nine and Gerry Hyde added seven for the winners. Dave Pinsky was held from "It's fun", and "It's different" to "It's the best winter sport and it's good exercise."

Napanee seniors used a sagging 2-1-2 zone defence to advantage as Jack Dornekamp and Dave Cochetta each hooped 17 points for the winners and Jim Stewart and Bob Cook contributed 12 points each.

Bob Rolston threw in 20 points for Moira while Ed Cox and Dave Grant added six each.

Kinsmen Win 8-2 In Silver Stick Warmup

Belleville Kinsmen bantams, warming up for Friday's Silver Stick Hockey Tournament in Port Huron, Michigan, travelled to Napanee last night and scored an 8-2 win over Napanee for their twenty-first victory of the season.

Danny Luperetz fired two goals for the defending Ontario champions, while single goals went to Andy Bickerdike, Brian Cousins, John Mulvihill, Mark Yeates, Russ Harrington and Dave Smith.

Bruce Clark and Bob Moore shared the goaltending chores for the Kinsmen in their final warmup game before travelling to Port Huron for the North American bantam hockey championships.

In a minor hockey exhibition game played last night at the Belleville Arena the Penguins of the peewee house league defeated the novice "B" all-star team 6-2.

Local Bowlers Meet Sunday In Campbellford

Arrangement of a program and activities for the second half of this "first season" will be on the agenda when the executive and all league representatives of the Bay of Quinte Bowlers Association meet in Campbellford Sunday at 1.30 p.m. Sunday at 196 Centre Street.

The infant Bay of Quinte Bowlers Association got off to a good start last year with over 500 league bowlers joining and recruiting will be resumed later in the season for 1969-70 memberships.

Kieran's Stand Refuted

Government Papers Support Cadieux's Stay-in-NATO Role

OTTAWA (CP) — Just-released government papers buttressed the stay-in-NATO viewpoint Tuesday while politicians pondered the public cabinet conflict over Canada's role in defence alliances.

Papers prepared by the Canadian external affairs department say fundamental Soviet aims are to splinter the Atlantic alliance and penetrate the member countries.

They say most NATO members believe military strength and political solidarity in Western Europe is a requirement for the forseeable future to limit the possibility of Soviet aggression and other forms of pressure.

The government made the papers public Tuesday. They were presented to a closed international affairs seminar earlier to stimulate discussion.

Significantly, the documents tend to support Defence Minister Cadieux, who says Canada should retain its military role in NATO. Postmaster-General Kierans argues for a pullout from both NATO and NORAD, the North American defence alliance with the U.S.

Stanley Knowles, the New Democratic Party's expert on Parliamentary government, told reporters that such publicly-expressed differences between two cabinet ministers is unprecedented.

"For the prime minister to encourage them is altogether unique," he added.

The question arose in the Commons external affairs committee where David Lewis, the NDP Parliamentary leader, tried and failed to get the committee to summon Mr. Kierans to testify before it within two weeks on his defence positions.

Mr. Lewis said it may be a good thing for cabinet ministers to take any position they like before a policy decision is made, but it is confusing for the public.

One of the two ministers' positions will eventually be repudiated when the final decision is made by the cabinet, Mr. Knowles wondered what this does for public respect for the one who has to go along with the majority.

CALGARY (CP) — Postmaster-General Eric Kierans said Tuesday Canada could set a moral example for the world by dropping its NATO and NORAD military commitments and channelling the savings into social and economic advancement.

In a question-and-answer session at the University of Calgary, Mr. Kierans told about 100 students Canada could save two per cent of its gross national product this way.

"That means more money would be available for development of human resources in Canada or material resources."

Canada's Birth Rate at Record Low But Upswing Is Likely

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's birth rate dropped in 1968 to the lowest ever recorded, but the outlook could be an upswing as the marriage rate picked up last year.

Births for each 1,000 of population declined to an estimated 17.7, the 11th consecutive annual decline from the peak rate of 28.2 births per 1,000 in 1957. The 1967 rate of 18.2 was the previous low.

The marriage rate, on the other hand, increased for the fifth straight year to 8.2 weddings for each 1,000 of population from a rate of 8.1 in 1967 and a low point of 6.9 in 1963.

The death rate was 7.4, the same as the previous year.

The vital statistics, published Tuesday by Dominion Bureau of Statistics, are based on records filed in provincial registry offices.

Total births declined by just over one per cent to about 367,000 from 370,900 the year before. The annual total has been dropping steadily from the record of 479,200 in 1959.

Marriages numbered a record 176,000, up by just over 6.1 per cent from the previous high of 165,900 the year before.

Deaths in the year were estimated at 154,000, a 2.6-per-cent increase from 150,200 in 1967 although the rate per 1,000 of population remains the same as the population increased.

Births increased in six provinces and fell in four.

The biggest percentage increase—three per cent—was recorded in Newfoundland, where 1968 births numbered 13,779 against 13,376 the year before.

Increases of less than two per cent were listed for Prince Edward Island, with 2,116 births last year; Manitoba, with 17,824; Saskatchewan, 18,371; Alberta, 30,531, and British Columbia, 33,529.

The heaviest percentage decline, at more than eight per cent, was in New Brunswick, where births dropped to 11,750 from 12,786. Nova Scotia births declined by more than six per cent to 13,846 from 14,737.

Quebec births fell by 2.6 per cent, to 97,965 from 100,591, while Ontario's total slipped 1.2 per cent to 127,142 from 128,675.

Newfoundland also led the list in percentage increase in marriages, which advanced by almost 14 per cent last year to 4,470 from 3,923 in 1967.

All other provinces listed increases of at least four per cent except Prince Edward Island and New Brunswick. Island marriages declined by 8.3 per cent to 759 from 828 and there were 4.3-per-cent fewer weddings in New Brunswick, where the total fell to 5,333 from 5,567.

Ontario marriages increased by 7.4 per cent to 62,456 from 58,174 and Quebec's advanced by 6.7 per cent to 47,925 from 44,932.

Nova Scotia's marriage total held almost steady at 6,243, up 26 from 6,217 the year before.

Marriage figures for Western Canada: Manitoba 6,287, up 5.8 per cent from 7,872; Saskatchewan 7,577, up 4.1 per cent from 7,521; Alberta 13,613, up 6.9 per cent from 12,740, and British Columbia 16,695, up 5.6 per cent from 15,804.

Total deaths were up in all regions but the three Maritime provinces.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"Can't you say anything nicer than, 'It's roomy'?"

Battle on to Paint Stock Markets as Tamed

TORONTO (CP) — The campaign for greater investor protection and other improvements in the stock market will be using sharper and more selective weapons in Canada this year.

Authorities are trying to kill the image of a wild, boiling stock market and replace it with something more resembling the orderly security of a chartered bank.

Timely disclosure, the prompt publication of important company news, now is a standing order for public companies listed on the Toronto Stock Exchange, and tighter regulations are in the works.

Enforcing rules and raising standards has never been easy in Canada because there are different federal and provincial regulatory bodies.

On a national level, the 1969 program includes the establishment of a contingency fund to reimburse the clients of insolvent brokers, and the possible creation of a central depository for share certificates.

This is a scheme sponsored by banks and financial institutions to reduce the paper work involved in delivery shares when they are bought and sold. The banks and firms which participate will be able to store their shares under one roof and make share transfers by simple bookkeeping entries.

There is also a slim chance this year that a national securities commission similar to the United States Securities and Exchange Commission will be finally worked out.

However, Henry Langford, chairman of the Ontario Securities Commission, says the idea has not yet been fully accepted by the various provincial organizations. Sources in Ottawa say the details are still incomplete.

The Toronto Stock Exhange, which handles 70 per cent of the dollar volume of all stock market transactions, says a delisting policy for industrial stocks which fail to live up to minimum standards is one of the next items on the agenda.

John R. Kimber, president, says this has become essential, both together, and slipping wine in the Roman fashion, is just fine. He says it breaks down inhibitions and helps people know each other.

He also has indicated that the exchange is looking at other areas, including further penalties that can be urged against insiders who use unpublished corporate information to make a profit in the stock market before the news reaches the public.

In an article in the Canadian Chartered Accountant, Mr. Kimber asks whether insiders who abuse the market in this way should not be restricted in the public interest from trading on the exchange.

The TSE is also urging brokers to be more selective in choosing clients.

MEET IN TUB

VANCOUVER (CP) — Psychologist Dr. Lee Pulos says the idea of men and women taking baths together, and sipping wine in the Roman fashion, is just fine. He says it breaks down inhibitions and helps people know each other.

People Disregard Tar Content Of Popular Cigarette Brands

TORONTO (CP) — "People don't scare easily. If they want to smoke they're going to."

This comment from a Toronto tobacco wholesaler could sum up the reaction here to the federal government's recent warning about the health hazard of cigarettes.

Since the government tabled a report on the tar and nicotine content of 84 cigarette brands last November, a poll of Toronto stores and distributors indicates little apparent effect on sales.

Manufacturers refused to give figures on brand sales, but stores and distributors indicate that large-selling brands which were reported high in tar and nicotine are selling as well as ever.

There has been only a slight — if any — increase in the sales of low-tar brands.

Tabling the report last November, Health Minister John Munro said the government would like people to stop smoking altogether. Failing that, he said, they at least should know which brands are harmful to their health.

"People will never stop smoking Exports," said a Toronto tobacconist. "They say 'If I'm going to die of lung cancer, let me die.'"

Exports, made by Macdonald Tobacco Inc. of Montreal, had the highest tar and nicotine rating of any brand in the government report.

Another tobacco salesman said the report affected sales for about a week.

"But things are back to normal now. I still smoke Exports myself. People will smoke what they want to."

Richmond and Ransom, two brands using the Strickman filter—developed at Columbia University to screen out most tar and nicotine—have not noticeably increased their sales since the report, stores say.

"We sell lots of Richmond, but then we always did," said one tobacco salesman.

Richmans said last month that its Ransom had been given a lift by the report. Yet its kin size which the government report rated high in tar and nicotine, continues a top king-sized seller.

This week an industry spokesman forecast Canadians will smoke nearly 47,000,000,000 cigarettes this year—about 250,000,000 more than in 1968.

Trust Firms Buy Oil Lands

EDMONTON (CP) — Two Canadian trust companies paid a total of $4,482,228 in separate bids for oil and gas rights on 2,400 acres in a region of southwestern Alberta Tuesday night.

The bids, which represented an average of more than $110,000 an acre, were accepted during an Alberta government sale of petroleum and natural gas leases that netted the province $18,566,638.84.

Bids were rejected on 66 of the 208 parcels offered.

Montreal Trust Co. made two successful bids, the highest being $1,287,888 for 640 acres and the other $1,097,296 for 640 acres.

Guaranty Trust Co. of Canada bid $1,091,126 for 640 acres and $1,046,814 for 480 acres.

All four parcels of land are in the Strachan region about 50 miles west of Red Deer and buyers at the sale said they were not surprised by the size of the bids.

They are in the same region as 12,800 acres that Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., and Amerada Petroleum Corp., made a successful joint bid of $7,333,586 in a sale a week ago.

"It wasn't unexpected," said a buyer when the bids had been announced, more than eight hours after bidding ended at 2 p.m. MST. "There's a lot of natural gas as well as sulphur ... in that region."

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League
Eastern Ontario Club

Before the 1899's interest in the "motorcar" in America was lagging far behind that in Europe. There was some tinkering, here and there, of course, but the bicycle was still the craze among those Americans who wanted to get there faster than they could with a horse.

But as early as 1878, the Wisconsin legislature was offering a prize of $10,000 for the development of a "cheap and practical substitute for the horse." The prize was offered for the winner of a steam wagon race between Madison and Green Bay and return.

The distance was 200 miles. There were two entries. The winner made the exciting speed of something under 15 miles a day — it took him two weeks to make the trip between the two cities and back.

Bellamy Partridge, in this book, "Fill 'Er Up," commented: "The horses of Wisconsin must have had a good laugh."

QUESTION: Can a garage keep my car if I cannot pay for the repair bill in full.

ANSWER: Yes they can. They have to pay their mechanics' wages, but have no way of knowing whether you intend to sell your car the next day or not.

Studded tires can now be used in all 10 Canadian provinces. However, five provinces specify periods of the year when they are permitted as follows:

Ontario — Oct. 1 to March 31; B.C. and Manitoba — Oct. 1 to Apr. 30; Nova Scotia — Oct. 15 to Apr. 15; P.E.I. — Nov. 1 to Apr. 30.

In the U.S. 45 states and the District of Columbia allow studded tires, with 17 specifying the time of year for use as follows: Arizona, California, Illinois and Indiana — Oct. 1 to May 1; Kansas and New Jersey — Nov. 1 to Apr. 15; Iowa, Oklahoma and West Virginia — Oct. 1 to Apr. 16; Michigan — Nov. 1 to May 1; Minnesota — Oct. 15 to May 1; New York — Oct. 16 to Apr. 30; North Dakota and Wisconsin — Oct. 15 to Apr. 15; Oregon — Oct. 1 to May 31; Rhode Island — Oct. 31 to Apr. 1; Virginia — Oct. 15 to Apr. 15.

Quebec May Halt Aid to Marginal Farm Enterprises

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec minister of agriculture and colonization says the provincial government may discontinue "present efforts and assistance" to farmers "who hardly manage to eke out an existence."

Clement Vincent told delegates to the annual meeting of Canadian Federation of Agriculture Tuesday night that the government may instead help to modernize farms considered potentially profitable.

Help could include retraining farmers in other skills so they could leave economically non-viable farms for other jobs.

Compared to other sectors of the economy, agriculture was steadily losing ground, Mr. Vincent said.

Delegates to the three-day convention earlier Tuesday adopted a resolution asking the federal government to help obtain for Canadian farmers parity of income with other "specialized workers."

Another resolution asked the federal and provincial governments to provide legislation for the marketing of agricultural products.

The resolution urges the government to set up a Canadian egg marketing commission to "determine egg requirements of the Canadian market, and underline the responsibility of regulating the flow of interprovincial trade in eggs as well as the importing of eggs."

Marketing boards now operate only under provincial marketing legislation and eggs cross provincial borders freely.

Delegates from Manitoba—a province which exports more than other provinces—opposed the motion on the grounds it could force them to produce for local consumption only.

A third resolution urged the federal government to revise proposed changes to the gift and inheritance taxes on the transfer of family farm enterprises from one generation to another.

The changes proposed by government would impose "severely increased burden on the farm estate that would make it difficult and perhaps prevent successful passing on of the farm to a son as a viable family business."

In other business, James Bentley, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, warned that many western grain farmers are on the brink of financial disaster.

Mr. Bentley said that 217,000,000 bushels of wheat were stockpiled on western farms. The wheat was damp and risked spoiling.

"Unless greater drying facilities are provided along with financial assistance to operate them, many farmers could be in a serious financial predicament from which they might never recover."

U.S. Army Holds Biggest War Games in Years in West Germany

GRAFENWOEHR (AP) — The U.S. Army launched its biggest division-sized war games in West Germany in five years today with a simulated attack from the direction of Soviet-occupied Czechoslovakia.

About 7,000 men of the orange "aggressor" force crossed what the army called a "simulated political border where tension had been building up" for a thrust southeast to northwest.

The Czech frontier is only 25 miles from this U.S. training area and that proximity has caused repeated protests from East-bloc nations that the maneuvre, Carbide Ice, is a provocative act.

The airlifted soldiers, who form the blue, or friendly forces, went into defensive positions Tuesday to await the attack by the orange side.

An army briefing officer said the "aggressor" force, a brigade of infantry and a battalion of armored cavalry playing the role of a mechanized division "attacked across the simulated political border at 6:30 a.m. with the mission of seizing critical terrain."

Patrolling had gone on through the night. A forward blue force was trying "to delay, deceive and disorganize" the attacking force before it reached the main blue positions.

Carbide Ice runs through Feb. 4.

THE BETTER HALF

By Bob Barnes

"Sure $2.50 is a lot for a haircut, but my wife wants a new mink stole, my daughter insists on her own private phone, I promised my son a sports car and it costs dough to go down the Mexican coast for deep sea fishing."

Nuclear Blasts May Be Used To Make Harbor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Government announced Tuesday it is studying the feasibility of using nuclear explosives to blast out a new harbor in Australia.

The project would be handled as one means of deciding whether nuclear devices could be used to build a sea level replacement for the Panama Canal.

The word came from Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, who said he had been asked by President Nixon—and had agreed—to remain indefinitely in his post.

Australia's development minister, David Fairbairn, announced last Thursday a request for U.S. co-operation in blasting a harbor and channel in a lonely part of northwest Australia.

Seaborg said tentative plans call for a series of five nuclear explosions to be detonated several hundred feet below the Pacific shore at Kerauden Bay in Northwest Australia. The aim would be to create a new deep water port to be used by merchant vessels hauling out metals from the Australian interior.

The cost of the undertaking was estimated by Seaborg at roughly $10,000,000. He said the United States would pay for the explosives as well as expenses that would be associated with a similar underground test in the United States.

Mastitis Control In Offing

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — A Cornell University scientist said Tuesday a major breakthrough was near in the prevention of mastitis, a disease that costs dairymen more than $1,000,000,000 a year.

Mastitis, which sometimes results in death, causes swelling and soreness of a cow's udders and produces a high white cell count in its milk. It is considered the most serious disease among dairy herds.

Dr. Stephen J. Roberts said a simple and inexpensive control program would result in greater profits for dairyman and also reduce the cost of milk to consumers.

He based his remarks to the 61st annual conference of veterinarians on the results of the first 15 months of a three-year experimental program.

He said the control program involved soaking a cow's udders in a disinfectant to prevent the spread of infections and the use of antibiotic therapy to reduce existing infections.

Another speaker, William Hansel, outlined an experimental system of planned parenthood for cattle that, he said, could lead to reduced meat and milk prices.

Hansel, professor of animal physiology at Cornell, said methods were being developed to enable large numbers of farm animals to be bred artificially at a pre-determined time without the need for the usually long slow process of checking them for estrus.

Estrus is the period during which female animals usually breed.

'No Dispute at All' Exists Over French Deal--Cardinal

MONTREAL (CP) — Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal of Quebec said Tuesday there was "no dispute at all" about letters he signed in Paris on behalf of the Quebec government.

Mr. Cardinal was speaking at Montreal International Airport on his return with Industry Minister Jean-Paul Beaudry from a one-week visit to France and Britain.

Acting Premier Paul Dozois told reporters Friday night the cabinet had not authorized Mr. Cardinal to sign agreements on behalf of Quebec.

Mr. Dozois, finance minister acting as premier during the absence of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand, later said that Mr. Cardinal had not overstepped his authority.

Mr. Cardinal said Tuesday the reason Mr. Dozois made the statement Friday was that he was shown a Canadian Press report that used the word "treaty" in connection with a letter signed in Paris on the possibility of co-operation between France and Quebec on a communications satellite.

The education minister said there was no question of a "treaty." The document was a letter of intent on the subject of a joint study by France and Quebec on the building of such a satellite.

Mr. Beaudry was asked about a report quoting him as saying in London Monday that a British oil company might install a refinery in the Quebec region.

He said he had not made "any statement about a refinery in the Quebec region."

He said, however: "We have room for two additional refineries in Quebec."

Mr. Beaudry said he plans to return to London "in four or five weeks and once again in the spring."

Of the satellite on which a study by France and Quebec is to continue, Mr. Cardinal said Quebec would have to reach agreement with Ottawa before launching a project.

In reply to a reporter who said Quebecers expected an economic agreement with France as a result of the trip, Mr. Cardinal said:

"We never promised an economic agreement. We never promised anything."

He was to hold a news conference in Quebec City today.

Rope Fire Escapes No Longer Compulsory

TORONTO (CP) — Ropes such as those used by guests who escaped Sunday's fire at the Victoria Hotel in Dunnville, Ont., are not a mandatory fire safety precaution but "hotels have them if they're on the wise side," Chief Inspector O.H. Brown of the Liquor Licence Board of Ontario said Tuesday.

However, G. F. Coyne, director of the government's tourist industry development branch, described rope escapes as an "antiquated" method which its branch is working to eliminate.

Seven bodies have been recovered from the ruins of the 63-year-old hotel and 13 of the 43 guests still are unaccounted for.

Rope escapes, mandatory under previous legislation, have not been compulsory since passed in 1966. No Ontario hotels rely exclusively on ropes as a fire-escape method.

Impossible: Says History

Another Attempt to Adopt Faulkner to Screen

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The new Steve McQueen movie is dedicated to the proposition that a work of William Faulkner can be successfully converted to film.

History is against this thesis, since a Faulkner vehicle has rarely been successful on the screen. The efforts have been:

The Story of Temple Drake, (1933) from Sanctuary, Today We Live, (1933) from Turnabout. Intruder in the Dust, (1949), The Long Hot Summer, (1957), The Tarnished Angels, (1957) from Pylon, The Sound and the Fury, (1958) and Sanctuary, (1961).

The new effort is The Reivers, Faulkner's last novel, which won him a Pulitzer Prize in 1963. It is a picaresque tale involving an 11-year-old Southern boy who runs away with a young adventurer and a Negro and learns about life.

Directing the $5,000,000 film is young Mark Rydell, onetime jazz pianist and actor and now one of the hottest new directors in films. The reason for his success: The Fox, his first feature after escaping from the grind of directing Ben Casey, Gunsmoke and other TV series.

"We made The Fox for a little gross is $15,000,00," he says.

"No, I didn't have a percentage over $1,000,000, and the latest of the profits; I worked for a straight salary. But I'm not upset by that. The Fox gave me a career."

Rydell, 39, had recently returned from location filming in the Faulkner country near Carrollton, Miss., where he grew a beard out of boredom.

"The people there were waiting for us to be North negro, and we were expecting them to be Southern hicks," he said. "Both sides bent over backward to be nice. As a result, it was pretty dull."

Rydell was asked why the Faulkner magic has largely escaped capture on the screen.

"Maybe because his writing is so lexical," the director suggested. "His words are brilliant and rich; they look marvelous on the page."

"But films are not primarily a verbal medium. There have been a few that have made superb use of language—A Man for All Seasons, The Lion In Winter, Becket. But most good films are visual.

Rydell startled the film world with his love scene between Sandy Dennis and Anne Heywood in The Fox. Will The Reivers also treat sex so openly?

"I think the picture should be acceptable for general audiences," he said. "There is some rough language and the boy does get an education when Steve takes him to a whore house. But there is no nudity and no outright sex. It's all done in good taste."

A 5' 6" junior high jump by M. Barritt of Albert College was high for the day in any age class, and a 4.8 second 40 yard senior dash by B. Powell of Trenton High School was the fastest of the day and a full tenth of a second better than the time registered by teammate M. Surina.

The three one - mile relay events were all captured by Trenton, the midget relay in the time of 5:35.4, the junior event with a time of 5:21.3 and the senior relay in 5:14.5.

B. Baxter of Brighton won the bantam 40 yard dash with a time of 5.5 seconds, while L. Buchanan of Brighton earned the midget 40 yard dash title with a clocking of 5.4 seconds, and G. Milligan of Trenton covered the 40 yard distance in 5.3 seconds to win the junior event.

D. Bowman of Trenton jumped 5' 3½" to capture the midget high jump and record the second highest mark of the meet, while J. Sarvis of Trenton and A. Trew of Albert College shared top spot in the senior high jump with jumps of 5' 2".

D. Morrison of Trenton putted the shot 33' 3" to top the senior shot putters, while K. Dockrill of Picton outdistanced the midget field with a toss of 38' 10" and B. Bailey of Brighton won the junior shot put with a distance of 29' 8".

THE KNIGHTS NEEDED THEM !
If saddles hadn't been invented in France in the early Christian era, the bold knights of the Middle Ages would never have stayed on their horses, let alone fought battles! Today's saddles are used by nearly everyone who likes to ride horses.
Once your family may have enjoyed riding, too, but if their new pursuits have left still-good saddles and other equipment (perhaps a horse?) behind, sell them with an Intelligencer Want Ad. It's just good horse sense to dial 962-9171 now!

EARLY MAN USED THORNS — to fasten his clothing until the enterprising Romans invented the hinged pins. In the 14th and 15th centuries pins were so costly and scarce that their sale in England was limited to the first two days in January. The coins women used for pins were then referred to as "pin money".

Church Property Purchased

NAPANEE — Negotiations for the sale of the Free Methodist Church were completed last week. The property on Water St. has been purchased by the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, Argyll Lodge No. 212.

The lodge plans to renovate and furnish the church as a hall. The Free Methodist Church some months ago purchased Cross building on Richmond Township across from the County Hospital, and will fit them. The agreement permits worship in the church until August 1. The property consists of the lodge under the chairmanship of Ray Campbell, and the finance committee with Richard Beaubien as chairman, carried out the transaction with the board of stewards of the church, and the minister, Rev. Gordon Hamilton.

The lodge has met for many years on the third floor of the Bridge House building on Dundas St., purchased by the lodge in 1926 and sold to the New York Restaurant four years ago. The Napanee Civic Club, Rev's most market occupy stores on the ground floor, also. The Queen of Sheba Rebecca Lodge meets in the same hall, renting from the IOOF.

The Free Methodist Church was formerly a small Presbyterian Church, moved to its present location about 1942 when the membership was small. Of late years the church has grown and strengthened, and now is totally inadequate for both services, and especially for the Sunday School, which now has an enrolment of 115. Renovations were carried out a few years ago, but the church has outgrown the enlargement made then.

The new church will have a much larger auditorium and will also contain a separate Christian Education centre, also on the ground floor,

Credit Union Meeting

TWEED — Tweed and District Credit Union held their annual meeting, on Thursday evening, Jan. 23, 1969, at the Council Chambers at the Tweed Municipal Building with a good turnout both of members and non-members. Some of the non-members who were in attendance became members that evening.

The treasurer-manager for the Tweed Credit Union, Mrs. Joanne Rogers, and the president is Allen Allore.

There are seventeen other persons involved in the executive as directors, audit committee and the credit committee. This was the regular annual, and reports were given from all the officers, and from the committee members for the year 1968. The financial report was satisfactory, is so much that it was a successful year all through 1968 and 1969. Also we remember during the 12-month-period, bringing the local membership to 190, this territory runs in a ten-mile radius from Tweed Village. They are now paying 5 per cent dividend on shares, and 10 per cent rebate on loan interest, which is the same figure as in 1968.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Sleeping Pills Are Crutches Necessary in Some Cases

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Are sleeping pills bad? I suppose I'm being silly, but I refuse to take them. I consider them nothing but dope. And I sure don't want to become a dope addict. Don't you feel that people should learn to get along without them? — Mrs. A.

Comment: Sleeping pills are bad as alcohol is bad for the chronic alcoholic. As cars are threats to the driver with the heavy foot. As too much caffeine in coffee or tea are bad for nervous-ness.

I could go on and on. What I am getting at is evident: Do not put moderation and immoderation in the same category. You may take from three to four sleeping pills every night to get sleep — that's bad. But your neighbor may take a pill once or twice a week on the advice of her doctor. I consider that's good, not bad.

In the very pages of the paper you are now reading you may learn of a recent suicide who emptied a bottle of sleeping pills. Or, of a wreck in which an alcoholic driver killed himself and three other innocents.

That's what I mean by immoderation in the use of anything otherwise beneficial to the human race.

But I don't want all cars off the road because some chronic alcoholics endanger the rest of us. I hope, rather, for the cure of the alcoholic.) Neither do I suggest that all sleeping pills be prohibited.

Under the direction of your physician, Mrs. A., I consider you would not be taking dope or be in danger of becoming an addict. Sleeping pills, like crutches, are often essential for getting us over the rough spots in life. Never hesitate to take them if your doctor prescribes them. And never hesitate not to take them on your own.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Is it possible that hypoglycemia can cause extreme fatigue? I have been very tired lately. Shall I have blood sugar tests?
— Mrs. O.

Comment: Quite possible, especially if you have other symptoms which temporarily improve after eating — such as nervousness, shaking, dizziness and scores of others I could mention. If in doubt, better go through with blood sugar tolerance tests.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I recently suffered my second miscarriage. My first terminated after three months; my second in six months. I have never experienced anything so heartbreaking. My husband and I are 24, and married four and a half years. Is there any hope? — Mrs. U.

Comment: I have known women who have had more miscarriages than you have had, yet were able to raise large families. My advice is that you see a good obstetrician-gynecologist for a complete examination. He may come up with the welcome answer to your problem, after he studies the function of your endocrine glands, your uterus and general physical condition. Occasionally, a low-acting thyroid will be the easily remediable culprit.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am in my sixties and have postshingle pain. Do you have any suggestions? — Mrs. P.

Comment : Treatment is often hit-or-miss. Therefore, you must understand why I can't prescribe for you. No specific suggestions for this stubborn condition — except that you engage the services of a geriatrician and a neurologist.

For Mr. D.: The age of 52 is not too old for heart-valve surgery. Don't let that stand in the way of operation if your doctors have recommended it. One of my patients in her mid-sixties improved greatly after heart surgery.

Welfare Council Wants Aged To Share in Rising Standards

OTTAWA (CP) — Old age security payments should be geared to the nation's rising standard of living, the Canadian Welfare Council said Tuesday in the first of two statements on its two-year study of social policies for Canada.

The organization which claims more than 1,000 leading Canadians among its direct membership and indirectly involves thousands of others, bases its statement and 38 recommendations on the idea that social rights are distinct from civil and political rights. The second statement, on social planning, will be published in the spring.

The council says that the Old Age Security Act provides insufficient protection against increases in the price of consumer goods and services as measured by the consumer price index.

In the last three years price changes had been substantially higher than the maximum amount of protection provided under the act. Continued price increases at this order would mean many beneficiaries would suffer a permanent and progressive loss in purchasing power.

Retired beneficiaries also had the disadvantage of a fixed income while others shared in the rest of the country continued to rise.

The council also wants some form of guaranteed annual income for all Canadians and a substantial increase in family and youth allowances programs, with these programs expanded to include student allowances.

It recommends that unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation be extended to cover all members of the labor force. Social security measures were required to protect all those whose income was interrupted by sickness or temporary disability including childbirth.

The council states that although all people do not necessarily need social welfare services, there is a growing recognition of the importance of preventive programs. Many individualized social welfare services fell into this category.

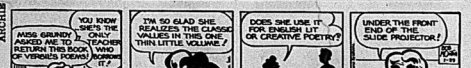
"The council therefore believes that, nationally and provincially in Canada, our objective should be to expand the basic network of social welfare services to make them available when needed to all people, whatever their circumstances."

Such a network was only possible if it were publicly provided or supported. Some services might, rely, however, on fee payments or premiums for service.

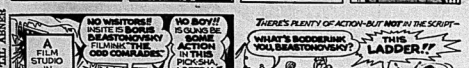
The network would include day care for children, homemaker services, specialized institutional and community services for the aged and help to offenders leaving prison.

Provincial governments had to take the initiative in developing standards and tests of quality for such services.

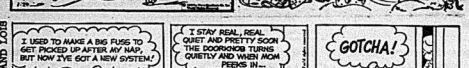
The council also says that social policies for Canada should apply as much to international commitments as to domestic programs.



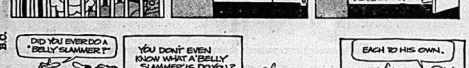
The council's recommendations include a suggestion that Canada should create a disaster services unit within the federal government which could respond swiftly to natural or man-made disasters abroad.



It points out that although non-government agencies in Canada such as the Red Cross and churches have responded well to emergencies in the past, much more could be done by the federal government "with its vastly greater financial, human, and logistical support services, such as Canadian forces aircraft."



The council strongly emphasized the need for housing.



"Access to adequate housing should be as much a right of people as access to health care, education or adequate income. Public action to ensure sufficient housing of a reasonable standard must be considered a normal social service."

Language Shapes Culture

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Although Marshall McLuhan's famous phrase, "The medium is the message" has been abused and perverted (by him as much as by others), there is a central and important truth in it — as long as we remember that language itself is a medium.

Indeed, language is so much a medium that we do not even think of it as such. Each language makes its own particular "environment" and reshapes reality to fit the grammar of the language.

Take the most familiar work in the English language — the King James Bible. We forget that the Old Testament was written in Hebrew, and the New Testament in Greek, and that both were translated for us by 17th Century Englishmen who changed the message as they changed the medium.

When we read the Beatitudes, for instance, we imagine that Jesus actually said, "The meek shall inherit the earth." And we don't care much for the idea, because "meekness" is a kind of timid, namby-pamby word to our ears.

But we read the French Douay Bible, however, we are informed that Jesus said the bedonair shall inherit the earth. What a difference — for "debonair" is good-natured, easy-going, likable!

While the Puritans who translated the New Testament saw in the Greek word a man who humbly bowed his head and suffered submission, the Frenchmen who translated the New Testament saw in the same Greek word a man who was merry, mild and courteous.

In the same way, the King James translators speak of Jehovah becoming "exceedingly wroth," which is a fearsome phrase; the same Hebrew, however, translated into French, says He became "irritee" — very annoyed! God on one side of the English Channel does not seem reasonable God on the other side.

Some philosophical anthropologists, in fact, have suggested that the Germans became so hung up on order and authority and domination because their language is structured that way — heavy and didactic, given to instructives and system-building. And it is true that the German philosophers, unlike the English and the French, have tried to tuck the universe neatly into their systems, rather than adjusting the systems to fit the untidy realities of life.

There is a continual feedback from language: It arises out of the culture, but then it influences and reshapes the culture to conform to its linguistic anlage. This is why American is not just a branch of English, but a way of life.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For January 30

Your birthday today: This is a good year to prove some ideas. If you do not have a cause to promote already, you're likely to get one rather soon. Just be sure what provokes you is really worth all the stir and upheaval that is set off when you go into the matter. Today's natives tend to be dedicated partisans who derive most of the real energy from causes which fit personal ideals.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): This is another low - pressure day. If you insist on making fresh starts, expect rough going. Gather some friends about you for a sociable evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Mental pursuits are favored today, particularly logical exercises like getting the family accounts to balance. Close relatives and friends are easier to deal with.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your main problem now is your tendency to spend money. Get a good grasp of how much your income actually is, then sit down and make up a budget.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Adjustment is necessary and is achieved only when the opportunity offers, not when you'd prefer. Travel, even very short journeys, can be complicated by other people.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Apologies early if you suspect you've done anything that hurt anybody's feelings. Then get on your toes in readiness of a crisis which may arrive in your profession.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Early zest for working fades rather soon. The temptation is to seek escapism with good reading in the library. The mature person will stay and bear on his regular working or playing grounds.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Be wary of undue claims on your money. All legitimate business should have formal documentation, our work takes a weird bounce, so that you ex -change duty with somebody new in the organization.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Unfortunate news from a distance saddens you with just enough impact to turn a balance. If you work at it ahead of time, this reaction need not spoil your business efforts. Legal affairs are tricky.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): What seems too heavy a burden of personal conflict is manifestly a purely temporary quality. Showing off to new acquaintances will bring you nothing more than a waste of money and some amused contempt.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): All you have to do is confuse already established lines of definite pedagogy, in which you teach other individuals how you wish the work done.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): This normal day holds no surprises. The major problem now is that you have no serious challenge for the time being.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Let well enough alone today. Once you go stirring everybody up you'll have to get everybody settled down again in new quarters.

Worst Yet to Come as Foul Weather Tangles Quinte Traffic

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The most menacing weather foulup of winter may be easing into the Quinte district.

With rural areas already partially paralyzed, continued rain and cold weather threaten to play havoc with traffic mobility in the next 24 hours.

In the Quinte townships school buses ground to a halt this morning, schools were closed and workers employed at urban jobs were delayed or immobilized by severe ice conditions.

The malicious mixture was part of a fog-bound, bad-weather belt across Southern Ontario that reduced visibility to near zero in spots and cancelled air flights at Toronto, Windsor and Sarnia.

Weather forecasts issued at Canadian Forces Base Trenton today called for continued intermittent rain with freezing temperatures tomorrow. With the mercury dropping the rain will turn to snow.

The combination could viciously compound road conditions already plaguing motorists.

Rain and warmer tempers turns are defeating roadways, causing ice to form beneath the water.

Rural areas have been the hardest hit — notably in Prince Edward County.

At Picton, Prince Edward Collegiate was closed for the day while a county school board official said the majority of rural public schools also were likely shutdown.

On the Quinte mainland, school bus runs in Tyendinaga township were cancelled today. The Marysville separate school was closed.

Two local commercial bus runs bringing rural dwellers to Tweed also were immobilized.

Main highways in the area were slush-covered with the mush concealing icy patches. Surface conditions, mixed with heavy fog, slowed the movement of traffic across the district.

Provincial police at Belleville reported the passing lane on the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway clogged with slush and ice. One truck driver complained it took seven hours to drive between Toronto and Tweed.

At CFB Trenton, a spokesman reported no flight diversions, although runways had to be sprayed with a de-icing chemical.

The fog reaches from the Quinte district to Windsor.

No serious mishaps were reported up to this morning in the area, although a country road collision near Whitby took two lives.

In Prince Edward County, three persons were taken to hospital at Picton after an automobile went off the road. Mrs. Mary Woodhead sniff Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Mills, all of Demorestville, were treated for minor injuries.

A school bus skidded off the road at Northport, but no injuries were caused.

Housing Plans Fail To Stir Enthusiasm

Lenders Called To Conference

OTTAWA — (CP) — First steps towards implementing some recommendations of the federal housing inquiry have already been taken, Transport Minister Paul Hellyer said after releasing the report Wednesday.

He has invited the banks, insurance and trust companies — the country's major mortgage lenders — to a conference to discuss the future of their investment plans.

Mr. Hellyer, who headed the inquiry and is the government's spokesman on housing policy, also told reporters he will make recommendations to the cabinet within a few weeks on other proposals.

If all 47 recommendations were carried out, housing costs could be brought down to within reach of a family on an income of $7,000 a year, paying a quarter of its income for shelter.

But many of the recommendations depend on provincial and municipal action. Those that are likely to see early federal action are:

—Removal of the 11-per-cent sales tax on building materials, at least insofar as they are used in low-cost housing.

—Raising to perhaps $35,000 the present limit of $18,000 that may be loaned on a National Housing Act mortgage.

—Continuing the present moratorium on federal spending on large new urban renewal or slum clearance projects, diverting the funds towards wider urban development planning.

Another key recommendation ran into strong criticism by the Opposition parties in Parliament. It is that the ceiling on NHA mortgage interest rates should be entirely lifted. The present limit is 9% per cent, and it is set every three months to reflect changes in long-term government bond interest rates.

All parties support removal of the sales tax on building materials, but Finance Minister E. J. Benson said Wednesday he would have to study the proposal again in light of the housing inquiry's report. He said last fall the tax had to be retained to help meet the treasury's tax revenue requirements.

Mr. Hellyer said the inquiry

Hellyer To Meet Randall

TORONTO (CP) — Transport Minister Hellyer will meet with Stanley Randall Ontario trade and development minister, Feb. 21 in Toronto to discuss recommendations made by a federal tax force on housing.

Mr. Randall told a news conference Wednesday the housing report contains recommendations more important to other provinces than to Ontario.

The federal study group, whose report was made public Wednesday, did not consult the Ontario government and the province volunteered no proposals, he said.

"I suppose there were more concerned with what they would like to see done than they were with what was already being done."

Most of the recommendations by necessity apply to the provinces rather than to the federal government, Mr. Randall said.

Most Provinces Cool to Report

By The Canadian Press

Provincial and municipal government spokesmen reacted coolly Wednesday to recommendations in the Hellyer housing inquiry report, but in Ottawa opposition members of Parliament — although critical of some aspects of the report — called for quick action on some key features.

The report, tabled in the Commons Wednesday by Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, recommended, among other things, lower down payments for homes, mortgages extended over longer periods, federal loans to municipalities to assemble land and higher limits on the amounts that may be obtained in insured mortgages under the National Housing Act.

In Ottawa, Robert McCleave, Conservative housing spokesman and MP for Halifax-East Hants, urged the government to implement recommended changes quickly.

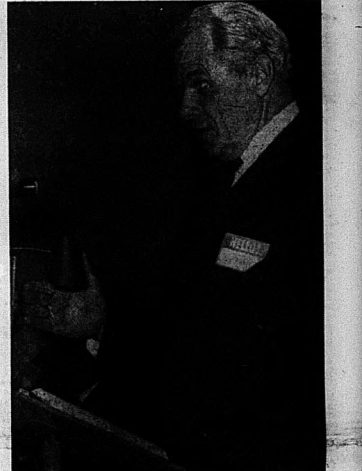
He supported recommendations for the abolition of the 11-per-cent federal sales tax on building materials, the municipal land assembly proposal and establishment of a federal housing department.

But he said that "under no circumstance" should the government remove the fixed ceiling on interest rates for government-insured mortgages until it can assure the country that rates will fall rather than speculate they may fall.

John Gilbert, NDP member of Parliament for Toronto Broadview and his party's housing critic, said any hope of lifting the sales tax on building materials before late this year appears to disappear because of Finance Minister Benson's reluctance to introduce another budget this spring.

He also said that the inquiry's recommendations that big new public housing projects be deferred appeared to be made on the basis of "a quick tour through some urban renewal projects."

But one Toronto city councillor appears to favor the recommendation. Said Ald. David Rotenberg:



"Let's face it, urban renewal has been a failure. It has just given us new for old buildings and is not provided any additional stock of housing."

Seven Axed

BUFFALO NARROWS, Sask. (CP) — Seven persons were killed early today in an axe-murder here, 230 miles northwest of Prince Albert. Police said three adults and four children were slain, another child is in hospital and a man is in custody.

Police said six of the dead were from one family and another was a house guest from Laloche, Sask.

The slayings were discovered early today in the family's home.

No names were released, but the dead included two men, aged 33 and 48, a 30-year-old woman, two boys aged six and five years, and two girls aged three and nine.

Another boy, 8 is in critical condition in hospital at nearby Ile la Crosse. One of the adults died in hospital.

Gunboats Harassed 'Banner'

CORONADO, Calif. (Reuters) — Cmdr. Richard Clark of the intelligence ship Banner told a navy court inquiring into the capture of the Pueblo by North Korean gunboats that he was harassed by Soviet, North Korean and Chinese vessels.

He said Wednesday the Banner had carried out 31 missions in the Sea of Japan and the East China Sea.

Clark said he "always felt very secure with the Russians," adding: "They operate their own surveillance ships and have too much to lose to cause trouble."

Baghdad Says Jets Stage Raid

From AP—Reuters

Bagdad radio said today that seven Israeli jet fighters attacked Iraqi troops stationed in Jordan, and claimed one plane was shot down. The Israelis quickly denied they had made such an attack.

An Iraqi Army communique, broadcast by Baghdad radio, said there were no Iraqi casualties.

Israel Wednesday denied charges from Iraq that it was massing troops for an attack on the Iraqi force in Jordan.

At the same time, Israel Defence Minister Moshe Dayan cautioned his country they must give the government of Iraq no excuse to do more harm to the estimated 8,000 Iraqi Jews.

U.S. Bombers Busy in Laos

SAIGON (AP) — From 15 to 30 American B-52 bombers have been attacking Communist supply routes through Laos each day, and some of them have been hitting north of the 17th parallel, U.S. military sources said today.

The disclosure came shortly after the U.S. command denied a charge by North Vietnam's foreign ministry that flights of jet bombers had attacked "heavily populated" areas Sunday in North Vietnam's Quang Binh province, which is just north of the 17th parallel separating Vietnam and just east of Laos.

The command said there had been no B-52 raids on North Vietnam or the demilitarized zone astride the 17th parallel since last Oct. 28.

Although the U.S. government refuses to admit any military operations in Laos, it is common knowledge that the end of the bombing of North Vietnam on Nov. 1 was followed by a sharp increase in U.S. bombing of North Vietnamese supply traffic down the Ho Chi Minh Trail through Laos.

Deadlock Suggested

PARIS (CP) — The Americans and South Vietnamese challenged Hanoi and the Viet Cong today to get down quickly to the serious business of finding a road to peace, and warned that continued propaganda speeches would prevent any progress at the Vietnam talks.

In a cold atmosphere suggesting long deadlock, the delegates of the United States, South Vietnam, North Vietnam and the National Liberation Front of the Viet Cong sat in silence around the huge round table at the International Conference Centre for their second full-scale session.

The South Vietnamese, speaking first, issued the warning against propaganda speeches and lashed out angrily at the other side's claims and accusations.

Trapped Driver Waves Away Rescuers Before Oil Explodes

RENFREW, Ont. (CP) — Donald Gordon Myers, 48, of Ottawa, was burned alive in the flaming wreckage of his overturned oil tanker near here Wednesday after telling a would-be rescuer: "Say goodbye to my wife and kid," two others also died.

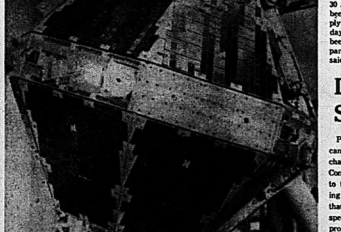
Mr. Myers was pinned in the cab of the truck after a collision with a car in which David H. Wilkinson, 25, a member of the armed forces, and his wife Jacqueline, 24, were killed.

The Wilkinsons had just returned from West Germany last weekend and were visiting Mrs. Wilkinson's parents in Pembroke, Ont., while awaiting posting to an armed forces base in Canada.

The accident happened on Highway 17 east of Renfrew, a town about 60 miles west of Ottawa.

A provincial police spokesman from Renfrew said another transport driver, Max Layman of North Bay, who arrived at the scene moments after the accident, found the injured driver hanging from the crushed cab with his legs pinned inside.

When Mr. Layman ran to the truck he was waved away by Mr. Myers, police said.



"Don't come near me. I'm going to explode. Say goodbye to my wife and kid," Mr. Myers shouted.

An unidentified Colonial Coach Lines bus driver was reported to have tried to "cut" Mr. Myers free using a pocket knife.

Some occupants of the bus then brought a hammer to assist in the efforts to free him but Mr. Myers told them to "stay away, it's going to blow," police said.

Moments later, as occupants of the bus looked on horrified, the truck's tank exploded, engulfing the vehicles in flames.

There were no further injuries. Police said Mr. Myers had asked Mr. Layman to keep all traffic away from the truck "until it's over."

Canadian Satellite

Canada's third space satellite soared into a near-perfect orbit Wednesday night from Vandenberg Air Force Base, California. The word from the tracking stations today was all good. The Isis satellite was reported parked in a proper polar orbit, its antennas extended to start sending more scientific knowledge about the ionosphere.

Y Will Teach Facts on City

"Our town is our business", say Belleville Family YMCA officials, and hope to invite others in the community to share their interest.

The Informal education committee of the Y has arranged three evening sessions to acquaint citizens of Belleville and district with how local government is organized, the identities of the people involved and what regional government is all about.

The committee says most people know and care about how they are governed at the national level, but are inclined to take local government for granted, perhaps because of lack of opportunities to hear about and discuss the details.

Belleville's city manager J. R. Reynolds will discuss the system of civic government Feb. 5 at 8 p.m. in the YMCA auditorium. He will outline how many tax dollars are involved and what happens to them.

The following week, P-h. 12, Reeve Barbara Allen of Tyrend will discuss the people's response to municipal government. She will examine the reasons for low turnouts for elections and why women's role in politics is often overlooked. Former city mayor Jack Ellis will moderate a discussion period.

Regional government will be subject Feb. 27 at 8 p.m. at Corby Public Library auditorium. Stewart Robertson will moderate a panel of Hastings County clerk Carl Bateman, city alderman Paul Russel, Douglas Boyle and Gerry Joyce. Opportunities for audience participation will be given at each session.

Farming Is the Topic

Several Quinte area farmers attended the annual meeting of the soil and crop improvement association in Toronto recently. Trenton Board Praised

TRENTON — The Trenton rural district real estate board came in for some high praise last night as the induction for the 1969 officers was held.

Frank Follwell, president of the Belleville real estate board, officially inducted the new officers but not before he praised the Trenton board for "its great record."

"I want you to know that we hear nothing but good about your board," said Mr. Follwell.

"We all have nothing but appreciation for the good name you bring to our business by the excellent way you conduct your profession."

And it will be up to the new slate of officers to keep business operating on these lines, which Mr. Follwell believes "will pose no problem."

James Day will be the 1969 president of the board with John Jordan as vice-president. Mrs. Eileen Forchuck takes up the post of secretary with Dorothy Paus filling the position of treasurer.

Directors include Mary Seeley, Mildred Hewson and John Radcliff. Hugh O'Neil becomes immediate past president.

A special presentation was made to Frank Barry in "appreciation for his outstanding service to the real estate business in the Quinte area."

Decision Expected

PICTON — A federal decision on Camp Picton is still awaited here, although one political source claims the issue may be resolved within days.

William Lane, town barrister and chairman of the Prince Edward-Hastings Liberal Association committee promoting a jetport for this area, says the camp's fate may be known in the next few days.

Mr. Lane, spoke with defence department authorities Tuesday in Ottawa during presentation of a brief on the airport project and says they spoke of a decision as a matter of days."

The future of the camp, the home of a Canadian Guards battalion until its relocation to Petawawa last fall, now will be decided between defence minister Cadieux and finance minister Benson, says Mr. Lane.

In Ottawa, however, local MP George Hees says the issue still has to come before the cabinet.

The camp's future hinges on an overall government study on consolidation of home and overseas service bases, points out Mr. Hees.

The study is now completed, says Mr. Hees, but cabinet must first decide on overall policy and then turn to specifics — among them Camp Picton.

Mr. Hees says he has kept Mr. Cadieux fully acquainted with the situation and the minister is sympathetic to the economic consequences of a shutdown of the camp.

New Invention

Apple Picking Now Automated

Harvesting apples by hand is a time-consuming job.

Scientists at the Canada department of agriculture's Summerland, B.C. research station have developed a machine that shakes limbs and catches fruit on vinyl-coated fabric.

The machine has been tested on cherry, crabapple, prune, clingstone peach, and apple trees. In most cases fruit damage was not too severe for the processing industry. In some trials the fruit was acceptable for the fresh market.

The main problem was that some fruit remained on the tree even after excessive shaking. In general, however, this fruit was immature or was growing on long willow limbs that didn't carry the shaker vibrations. These difficulties could be overcome by waiting for the fruit to mature and by pruning.

The equipment, mostly developed and built at the station comprises two catching frames, a conveyor system to carry the fruit into a bin, and a commercially-mounted tree shaker.

Vinyl coated nylon fabric is tied tightly across a 10-foot by 20 foot tubular framework to form a catching frame light enough to be carried by two men. Two such frames are required to compose sides of the tree to be harvested and form a V shaped trough sloping toward the tree. Along the bottom of this trough is a conveyor belt which carries the fruit to a bin filling unit.

The bin-filling unit is an arched elevating conveyor on the end of which is a horizontally rotating filling head that distributes the fruit uniformly, in the bin. The unit is designed so that the filling head rises as the level of fruit in the bin rises. Thus the filling head is always just above the fruit level, allowing the fruit to be placed in the bin with a minimum drop.

The shaker, which is mounted on a tractor-drawn frame, consists of a long arm with a hydraulically-operated claw on one end and a vibrator on the other end. The operator manoeuvres the shaker arm into the tree by means of hydraulic controls.

Once the arm is in position, the claw is tightened around a limb and the vibrator is turned on. Only a few seconds of shaking should bring the fruit down onto the catching frames.

The length and frequency of the shaker stroke also influence the separation of the fruit from the tree. For example, cherry trees require a short, rapid stroke and apples trees a longer slower stroke.

Peter Parchomchuk, who took part in the experiments, adds that some fruits just hang on tighter than others. In order to harvest such fruit, and fruit which must be harvested when still immature, Boron sprays were used to try to make separation easier.

The use of hormone sprays gave encouraging results and has prompted further work for next year.

Fair Board Outlines Stand

The Belleville Fair Board does not plan Sunday fairs as routine presentation in its yearly exhibitions.

The board merely wishes to have Sunday fairs legalized to offset any days lost to bad weather, board president Cameron Bunnett emphasized today.

Mr. Bunnett's statement came in the wake of yesterday's emphatic stand against Sabbath gambling and sideshows in the city by the Belleville Ministerial Association.

The issue, suddenly animated by the ministerial stand, is up for decision by city council Monday.

(The board is seeking permission to operate on Sunday — if necessary. The ministerial association is supporting a motion by Ald. Donald Williams forbidding gambling and sideshows.)

There's no intention to plan a fair for Sundays — the directors do not wish to plan a fair for Sundays," said Mr. Bunnett. "Quite apart from their feelings about the Sabbath, the (fair) directors are tired by the end of the fair and would be reluctant to hold another day."

Mr. Bunnett said Sundays have now "become available for similar operations."

Fair exhibitors involve lengthy travel for some competitors, he added. If a day's presentations were rained out the program fair directors should consider completing the schedule for the convenience of the exhibitors.

Conklin Shows, operator of the Belleville fair midway, have not been approached by the fair board, nor has Conklin been in touch with the board, stressed Mr. Bunnett.

"The intent of the fair board in this issue seems to have been overlooked," he added.

Syl Apps Names Various Reasons For Teen Drinking, Smoking Problems

BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Syl Apps, MPP for Kingston, expressed concern with the frequency of teenage smoking and drinking when he addressed the annual meeting of the United Community Services at the Sun Valley Motor Hotel last night.

Mr. Apps, who is chairman of the select committee on youth was speaking about teenage problems and recommendations offered by the committee in a report to the legislature.

About smoking he said, "we have laws which we don't enforce which refuse cigarettes to minors." He added that young people would probably find a way to obtain them.

He blamed television commercials for part of the teenage smoking and drinking problem. He said commercials associate smoking and drinking with having a good time.

"I don't think we set a very good example in this regard," he said.

Turning the emphasis on teenage drinking Mr. Apps said the committee recommended that the drinking age be retained at 21. "We couldn't go along with reduction of the age group."

He mentioned the high accident rate of young people when it comes to driving and said he associated this with teenage drinking.

Mr. Apps explained the committee was formed to investigate problems of youth and report possible solutions to the legislature.

The inquiry was basically restricted to the ages of 16 to 24, but Mr. Apps and his committee found that many problems began much before 24.

"As far as we're concerned most of the young people are very fine individuals."

He said that good teenagers were never published as much as the minority that gets into trouble. He accused the news media of painting a black picture of youth and said there was "too much emphasis" on the bad side of the young generation.

When it came to helping youth, Mr. Apps said adults shouldn't tell teenagers what to do, but rather suggest things. "You'll find they will listen very, very well."

He said there was a tremendous number of dedicated people working very hard for youth in many communities.

"They're doing a tremendous job. No government could hope to buy that type of service."

He did say, however, that in most communities that were problems when attempts to help youth were made. As an example he said there was quite often a lack of co-ordination.

He suggested a complete survey should be conducted to assess the facilities a community has available.

Mr. Apps said the committee visited a school which was open all day after the actual hours of school to enable young and old alike to use the facilities for recreation and study.

He said the tax-payers pay for schools and "there's no reason why they shouldn't be open all day to the tax-payers."

One of the recommendations of the committee was the institution of "group homes" which would give guidance, be responsible for and give discipline to young people from broken homes.

He said the issue of lowering the voting age was split half and half among the members of the committee. It was finally recommended the age be lowered to 19 because "the majority of young people between the ages of 18 and 21 are more capable of voting responsibly than some older persons."

Mr. Apps commented that teacher education came under the critical eye of the committee as well. He said that university students felt that many of their professors should know how to teach as well as what to teach."

He challenged his audience to give up some of their leisure time to work for the cause of assisting youth in the community. "We still don't have enough volunteer help."

He said that youth has "stresses and strains that we never had. Kids are coping with it and coping with it well."

"We should all take stock of ourselves," he said. "We should say 'I'll set aside this time and I'll be able to help the young people'".

The Belleville and district United Community Services organization has assessed its accomplishments for 1968.

The association placed more than 400 skilled volunteers in needed jobs. It conducted the second annual Christmas exchange and met all known needs of 450 area families.

According to the annual report, distributed to all members of the organization, more executive talent on boards of participating agencies is needed.

The organization launched more than a dozen study-action committees which will initiate and develop services to prevent breakdown in health and well - being of children and adults and promote more effective use of existing services.

It raised 22 per cent more funds by public subscription than the previous year for a record total of $122,000.

The Belleville family YMCA will receive the lion's share of the moneys paid to agencies in 1969. Out of a total of $122,000 the "Y" will receive $32,290.

The Canadian National Institute for the Blind will receive $13,709 and the Canadian Red Cross will get $18,945.

The United Community Services itself is next, with $12,205. Minor sports will receive $7,100. The Victorian Order of Nurses, St. John Ambulance, the Navy League and the Boy Scouts will receive $6,775, $4,000, $4,625, and $4,650 respectively.

Directors for the year 1969 have been appointed. They will be John Raymond Ellis, Mrs. Harry J. Fast, Paul Edwin Fleming, Mrs. L. G. Hamilton, Mrs. Robert Ively, Mrs. Roy Jeffrey and Kenneth Robert Leawens.

School Board Allocates Administrative Duties

Temporary appointments have been made to fill the business administration posts at the Hastings County board of education.

The recommended assignment of duties, made by the business administrators, was approved by the county board at a closed meeting Jan. 21. Board chairman James Clarke said the appointments would stand for two or three months until the new business administrator, expected to be hired by Feb. 3, makes permanent assignments.

C. R. Cotton, Tweed, will supervise transportation for the county. Mrs. Susan Hillis, Bancroft, and John Bancroft, Belleville, will serve as supervisors and assistants to Mr. Cotton.

Mr. Cotton was administrator with Hastings County school area No. 2 board while Mrs. Hillis served in the same capacity with the North Hastings board at Bancroft and Mr. Bancroft was an assistant administrator with Bay of Quinte District high school board.

Leigh Anderson, business administrator with the former Belleville public school board will be in charge of accounting procedures, including payroll personnel records and budget control. Miss Eva Baker, Trenton, business administrator with the former Trenton board, will be Mr. Anderson's advisor on these procedures.

Mr. Anderson will also be in charge of all correspondence with unions. Caretakers with the former Belleville public school board were the only non-teaching employees in the county with a union contract. They belong to the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

The minutes of the closed meeting referring to Mr. Anderson's assignment to union correspondence state, "he has had extensive experience in connection with this phase of administration".

The board also decided that Mrs. Hillis will remain in Bancroft as co-ordinator of all business administration in the northern area of the county.

Mr. Cotton will take over co-ordination of all debenture processing and assessment and Ontario Municipal Board information requirements.

R. O. Dulmage, business administrator with the Bay of Quinte board, is now serving as interim business administrator with the county board. He will continue to co-ordinate secretarial procedures until the new business administrator is hired.

Each board is existence in 1968 will present interim budgets to the county board administration office for final assembly by the permanent business administrator.

Expert May Assess UCS

Monsignor J. P. Sullivan, president of the Belleville and District United Community Services for 1968, announced at the annual meeting of the organization last night that an outside expert might be called in to assess the work of the local UCS organization.

Msgr. Sullivan said it would be recommended at the next directors' meeting that an expert be asked to asses the capabilities of the local organization as a welfare project composed of several agencies.

He questioned the success of the United Community Services and said that a great deal of work lies ahead.

"Until people understand more clearly the purpose of the United Community Services' Organization, they are going to judge its effectiveness in terms of the United Community Fund Campaign."

"Because of this, the verdict is in, and the year 1968 has been called successful. Definitely the campaign was a satisfying experience with a record $122,000 being raised for participating agencies."

Msgr. Sullivan also commented on the golf work of those involved in the United Community Services over the year 1968.

All in the Future

It is all in the future — if indeed it ever becomes a reality. That is, an international airport in Prince Edward County, and a new city stemming from it. Incredibly, there is also talk of a gambling casino that would cater to air passengers in transit.

The Prince Edward-Hastings Liberal Association's brief to the federal government setting forth the advantages of the Long Point area of South Marysburg township as the location of an airport is certainly an imaginative one.

It also has the merit of practicability. The association has presented cogent arguments favoring the Prince Edward project, along with the expectation of a planned community north of Highway 401, bordering the Trent River, to house staff, workers and a swiftly-increasing population.

Of course, we must realize right away that these things do not happen overnight. Look for instance at Belleville's downtown renewal plan, still very much in the planning stage. Consider even a project like Expo which had everything going for it. And yet doubts — not to mention strikes — plagued it at every turn — until finally it was unveiled to the world.

As revealed in this newspaper the other day it may be years before a decision is made. Toronto airport is regarded as adequate until 1983. Meanwhile a government decision on a new site (at least one other, in the Whitby area is in the running) is not expected until 1975 or 1976.

As for the casino idea, the prospect of such an enterprise — rivalling Las Vegas — seems almost preposterous. A spokesman of the Prince Edward-Hastings delegation that took the plan to Ottawa admitted there would be controversy over the idea in the county.

It is pointed out that the casino would have no direct influence on the surrounding population, being solely for the use of air passengers in transit. The area, according to the spokesman, Picton lawyer William Lane, "could be sealed off for air passengers in transit and U.S. citizens only."

Well, Las Vegas is Las Vegas — one-armed bandits, showgirls, nightclubs and all — but such an image scarcely fits Prince Edward County.

But an airport, with all available services, housing, hotel accommodation, perhaps a duty-free store . . . that sort of thing, yes. Remember that public access to airports is the norm the world over. Airports are popular places with members of the general public. They make for interesting family outings, the young people in particular delighting in watching the arrival and departure of the big jets and their passengers.

A large airport, with all the activity it would generate, should encourage the opening up of further tourist facilities in Prince Edward County. After al' , set are constantly on the looko . . . places to visit. The county could provide a restful stay either en route to or returning from Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto or whatever other places visitors might favor.

Relentless Schedule

Political life is taking its toll, even of comparatively young men. Energy, Mines and Resources Minister Joe Greene has suffered another heart attack . . . his second since November. Like the first attack, this one has been described as mild. Coming so soon, though, after resuming his duties does not augur well for the minister.

Then there is Quebec Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand, back at work after convalescing in the Florida sun. Mr. Bertrand also had been stricken by heart trouble. Before that, a heart attack took the life of his predecessor, Daniel Johnson, only 24 hours or so after returning from a lengthy convalescence from earlier heart trouble.

We hope both Mr. Greene and Mr. Bertrand will be restored to full health and strength. These health problems, however are a reminder of the relentless pressure of the life of a politician.

Ottawa Offbeat

'Happy Birthday Uncle Louie' from Your Fond Family

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Sometime this busy political week in these halls of Parliament, a few veterans caught up in today's turbulently onrushing events — especially the Liberals — may pause for a quiet moment and let memory drift warmly back to more tranquil times when another, and so very much different French-Canadian, Louis Stephen St. Laurent, was prime minister.

Dear old "Uncle Louie," as they affectionately remember him, turns 87 this Saturday, with his family gathered around him in his home on Quebec City's Grande Allee.

It was six years ago that he made, what in all likelihood, was his last pilgrimage to Parliament Hill.

He had come back to Ottawa for the opening of the Twenty Sixth Parliament, to see his Liberals return to power under Lester Pearson after six years in John Diefenbaker's wilderness.

And nothing so underlined the difference between the two political eras as the old man's appearance out of the past.

For except for its dying days, Uncle Louie's rule had been one of quiet calm control — so abruptly shattered by Diefenbaker and Pearson, and by the real prospect of repair yet by Pierre Trudeau.

A figure from another age, there he stood that day six years ago when the Capital saw him for the last time, out in front of the Peace Tower, surrounded by friends and admirers gathered in his honor and prime ministerial Ottawa years.

Not a mote of dust on his black cutaway, not a wrinkle in his snowwhite shirt.

He almost glistened as if his barber and valet had just turned him out — a glittering if supremely dignified fashionplate, but still to one and all in that warm circle of friendship, the well and fondly - remembered Uncle Louie.

The years had dulled the once-sharp edge of deeply bitter disappointment over that stunningly unexpected election defeat.

Now he was "well content" that it was over and he wasn't prime minister, any more.

Wouldn't want to be in the East Block these days." he had smiled. "The responsibility is so much heavier than in my days.

"Seems strange that the burden should become so much greater with every swiftly passing year.

"The problems, domestic and international, have become so much more complicated and difficult of solution . . . yes, and I am satisfied now not to have the power and the unrelenting compulsion that goes with having to face them."

The old prime minister had one regret that time had run out on him.

It was the pipeline, and even then, seven years after its political explosion that was to blow him from power, the memory was still hurtful.

He had wanted so much to have been in Parliament and seen himself vindicated.

Vindication had come. But too late.

"Of course everybody knows now how right we were in pushing through the pipeline legislation — but who in '58 would say so?" he recalled in regret.

Remembering, uncle Louie now as he marks his 87th year, you can't help thinking how lucky the Liberals have been in their former prime ministers in their post-parliamentary retirements.

How different it was for the Conservatives and their last retired prime minister, pompous, pious Richard Bedford Bennett.

(No, Diefenbaker's retired, but is still making the parliamentary scene with almost as much zestful impact as ever.)

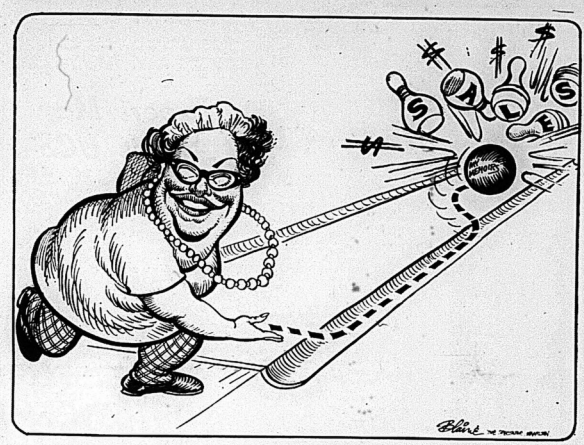
How different Bennett's last "home-coming" to the Capital.

It remains as difficult to forget as Uncle Louie's.

You were at Union Station that night 28 years ago when he descended from the Montreal train.

In his striped pants and cutaway, velvet-collared coat and tall hat — but most of all, his cold austere — he found himself forgotten.

Except for you, there was not a soul to meet him.



Here he was, the once high and mighty prime minister returning to the scene of his power and glory — and disaster, too — and all he could manage to mutter in his aloneness was a wistful "Nobody here."

It hurt, and that proud, unbending, ice-cold man melted enough that strange night of his last homecoming to admit it.

"I would have thought," he said as he followed the Redcap with his bags across the station concourse, "that somebody might have remembered and come down to say hello."

But they didn't, and he left again soon after, just as unloved and unremembered, never to return.

Happy birthday, Uncle Louie. We all remember. With affection.

Japs Keep Their Wives In Check

Vancouver Province

Premier Sato of Japan is, apparently, an enthusiastic supporter of the notion that marriages are the better for an occasional larruping. Delivered by the husband, of course.

It wouldn't matter too much if Mr. Sato were a nobody. The trouble is that as the influential leader of a major country his weight behind the wife - beating cause could tempt some Western husbands to try their hand, too.

That could be disastrous. The trouble with Western wives is that they not only resent this ancient and honorable method of maintaining marital balance (and getting a lick or two in for male superiority), but they are likely to hit back. They just don't know their place.

Maritime Transportation

Proposed Route Through Maine Would Benefit Canada and U.S.

Fredericton Daily Gleaner

A preliminary report on Atlantic transportation is expected to be in the hands of the four provincial governments within a few weeks. It is the result of a study initiated by the four premiers with the support of Transport Minister Hellyer.

Transportation is an issue that needs to be tackled. An Atlantic transportation policy is vital to the economic life of the region. First and foremost, the gain of the Maritime Freight Rates Act has to be maintained and brought up to date so that it can be effective in 1969. Freight rates within the region are excessively high, and rates outside do not take into account the geographic location of these provinces to the east. Adjustments are of paramount importance, and they should apply equally to rail and road transport.

The modernization and improvement of ports is an essential factor. Coupled with this is the need for the Chignecto Canal as an extension of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

One of the main factors in a true Atlantic transportation policy must be the building of the Corridor Road across Maine linking the Maritimes at the Sherbrooke, Quebec.

The Corridor Road would lop the distance between the Maritimes and the markets of Central Canada by 140 miles and many hours of travelling time. It would be a tremendous boon to shippers and to tourists. And it would cost us nothing except the roads leading to it. For it would be built by the United States and Maine. Tremendous interest has been generated across the border by the concept of this Corridor Road. It would be of both economic and strategic importance to the U.S.

The tragedy is that Ottawa has never negotiated with Washington to bring it about.

'Snap Courses' Popular On University Scene

Windsor Star

Because students are taught by faculty members, they are able to judge teaching ability, and should therefore have a say in hiring and firing faculty members.

This is one of the arguments for student power advanced by a student. It is also a convincing argument against giving too much power to some students, for it presupposes in students an objectivity and selflessness not granted to many other humans.

In every university there are a few of what are known as "snap courses", where the subject is not too boring, the work limited, and the chances of good marks excellent. Usually the guiding spirit of a snap course is a teacher who is lazy, philosophically indolent, or preoccupied with publishing something.

If students were as objective as students seem to feel they are, such professors would be banished and such courses eliminated. Yet snap courses continue to be as popular an academic institution as the campus pub or the co-educational mini-skirt.

Iraqi Action Threatens Chances of Peace in Middle East

WASHINGTON (CP) — The vicious circle of provocation and retribution in the Middle East has taken another violent turn just as a new thrust toward a possible settlement there seemed to be gaining momentum.

The execution in Iraq of 14 persons alleged to have been Israeli spies, and Israeli Premier Levi Eshkol's promise that "the Lord shall avenge their blood." given point to President Nixon's warning in his first White House press conference Monday.

The Middle East, he said, is "a powder keg" that needs to be defused because the next explosion there could involve a "confrontation between the nuclear powers."

But despite the tenseness that grows out of the possibility that Israel will, as in the past, react sharply to this latest Arab provocation, many Middle East experts see these developments as a flash-in-the-pan threat to negotiations more than a threat of renewed all-out war.

Their contention is that despite all the warnings in high places of imminent disaster, there is little evidence at the battleground level that a full-scale war is likely in the near future. That is not to suggest that they rule out such an outbreak in the years ahead, if no negotiated settlement is reached.

For the present, however, the Arab states are seen as no better prepared for such an adventure than they were in the six-day summer war of 1967, when Israel tripled her land mass by conquest.

As for the Israelis, political observers feel they have already drawn heavily on their fund of popular support and sympathy and that the world in general is growing weary of the Middle East threat.

From the point of view of diplomacy, the Iraqi incident came at the worst possible time — just as new initiatives to arrange a Middle East settlement seemed in the balance.

Swedish Ambassador Gunnar Jarring, Secretary-General U Thant's special envoy to the area, had just returned to United Nations headquarters in New York for consultations with the major powers most immediately concerned—the U.S., Britain, France and the Soviet Union.

In the background also, along with Nixon's promise of new U.S. leadership and initiative in seeking a settlement, were a somewhat unexpected thaw in Soviet stance and a French proposal for a four-power meeting to find a way out of the seemingly endless crisis.

Now all this seems threatened. There is always the possibility, however, that Israel—despite the enormous domestic pressure to retaliate—will decide not to.

And world indignation could moderate Iraqi repression of the Jews in Iraq.

Mackenzie King Praised By Noted British Historian

LONDON (CP) — A distinguished British historian, dissecting the Commonwealth fabric, finds the late Mackenzie King as the man who in time may become accepted "as one of those rare beings—a statesman masquerading as a politician."

"It is not as a perplexing personality but as a professional of outstanding quality in the art of politics that Mackenzie King will be remembered in Canada and in the Commonwealth," says Professor Nicholas Mansergh, fellow of both St. John's College, Cambridge, and Pembroke College, Oxford.

In his new book, The Commonwealth Experience, published today by Weidenfeld and Nicolson, Mansergh casts his eye over more than a century of change in which the British Empire was transformed into a new association of countries.

But if the Commonwealth, which Mansergh believes was rooted in Canadian confederation, now has become reduced in stature and dignity, it retains its own unquestioned place "in the longer perspective of time." It was the embodiment of an experience that affected the lives of millions, culminating in national freedom and association in partnership.

The durability of this experience contrasted with its birth—the "excruciating boredom" of British members of Parliament as they approved a measure for Canadian confederation—"the first step" on the Commonwealth road—and then with evident relief turned to a more interesting debate on whether to reduce the duty on dogs.

Wars and revolutions, the rise of populations and the growth of technology, all contributed to the destruction of the Empire. A whole gallery of world leaders stamped their personalities on the Commonwealth that followed. But of all of these, Mansergh concentrates on three who more than others embellished the Commonwealth: Mackenzie King, prime minister for 22 years; Field Marshal Jan Smuts, South Africa's wartime leader, and India's statesman and leader, Jawaharlal Nehru.

Mackenzie King—"the prime ministers' prime minister"—looked on the Commonwealth as a means of saving Canada and of blocking imperialists and their machinations. He had weaknesses, including a policy of appeasement towards Hitler which unfortunately for him remains part of Commonwealth history.

Mackenzie King was superficially ill-equipped to survive as leader during the Second World War. But he survived. With characteristic attention to detail and by a constant reiteration of his beliefs, he exercised "the decisive influence" on the Commonwealth of the later war and early post-war years— an "impressive tribute" when considering he had to deal with such men as Smuts and Winston Churchill.

Mansergh says Mackenzie King was perhaps something more than 'a calculating politician."

"He may even, in time, come to be accepted as one of those rare beings—a statesman masquerading as a politician."

Walkout in Italy May Halt Travel

ROME (Reuters) — A national walkout by 40,000 gas station attendants today threatened to halt road transportation in strike-torn Italy.

The service station work stoppage—the latest in the worst series of strikes in Italy in 20 years—was claimed to be 100-per-cent effective throughout the country. No time limit has been set for the walkout.

Since the strike began at midnight Tuesday night motorists frequently engaged in roadside brawls, exchangin punches over remaining asoline supplies.

In addition thousands of teachers began the second day of a three-day national walkout and large roups of workers announced their intention to stage two separate strikes.

Workers—in unionized industries plan a general strike Feb. 5 for higher pensions and three giant labor union federations declared a national one-day strike in private industry Feb. 5.

The strikes come against a background of student unrest throughout the country.

Little Enthusiasm

Provinces Cool to Housing Report

land to block land speculation and to buy existing housing to establish low-rental accommodation was described by Mayor Albert Campbell of the borough of Scarborough as "too late" for Metropolitan Toronto.

Other comments on the report:

William Rowe, minister in charge of housing in the Newfoundland cabinet, said the recommendation calling for lower interest rates and extended mortgages could mean "hundreds and perhaps thousands" more Newfoundlanders could own their own homes.

Robert Higgins, New Brunswick's economics growth minister:

"The thing I like best was that the government itself finally shattered some of the old myths about housing . . . such as the theory that everyone wants to own his home."

* * *

Stanley Randall, Ontario's trade and development minister:

"Little can be done on housing on a national basis—housing is not a similar problem in all provinces."

PAUL HELLYER

Mayor Ivor Dent of Edmonton said the report makes "some very positive and some very negative" recommendations but "it sure doesn't help us in the coming year."

Dan Campbell, municipal affairs minister of British Columbia, called the report a pot pourri of ideas which does not form a comprehensive housing policy for Canada.

Hugh Bird, deputy mayor of Vancouver, commenting on the extended mortgage proposal said: "A 40-year-old man getting a mortgage would be 80—if he lived that long—before he paid off the mortgage. Even at 20 or 25 a man would be retired before it was over."

H. W. Suters, managing director of the Ontario Housing Corp., said home ownership for families with a minimum income of $5,500—a goal mentioned by Mr. Hellyer's committee—has already been achieved by the corporation.

He said the corporation has offered for sale 70 single-family houses in Guelph to tenants earning as low as $3,464 and most of the tenants will take up the offer.

Mr. Suters said the corporation is prepared to implement the system across the province.

Edgar Gerhart, Alberta municipal affairs minister, said the task force "tried conscientiously to do its job, but it is unfortunate that when Edmonton is just considering public housing, the federal government puts a freeze on it."

He said Ottawa must get down to work on the country's housing problems because "the time for studies is over."

Mr. Gerhart said he was never enthusiastic about public housing because he felt it was one of the most expensive ways to solve the housing crisis.

Language Is No Excuse For Breaking the Law

TORONTO (CP) — Just as ignorance of the law is not an excuse for lawbreaking, a foreign language is not a deterrent in being arrested—or being assisted—by Toronto police.

Twenty years ago a policeman here could make an arrest in just about any reasonable dialect of English.

But today the force recruits linguists of such exotic tongues as Malayan, Croatian, Arabic and Gujarati. And to meet more-obvious demands, Greek, Polish, Portuguese and Ukrainian.

Most of the time the force's multilingual officers are called to help a citizen in distress such as a newly arrived Italian housewife who gets lost downtown or an elderly Greek who lands at Toronto International Airport and misses his waiting relatives.

Police often use people outside the department.

"The best interviewers of all," an inspector said, "are six- and seven-year-old kids."

At that age, the children usually are able to speak English as well as their parents' tongue.

On the force or connected with the department are 294 people of both sexes fluent in one or more non-English language.

If an officer on the beat is stymied by a language problem, help is only a telephone call away.

He calls the sergeant of detectives' office, an officer flips through a card file and gets in touch with a staff member who can help.

The problem usually can be solved over the telephone.

Lenders Will Meet

prompted his six associates and himself to change some of their earlier views on the housing problem.

The main concept has been to encourage families to build or buy new houses. As older houses sank into slum conditions, the government would step in, clear them away with bulldozers, and build low-rent public housing for the needy.

The new concept is to continue and increase encouragement to new house construction until there is a surplus supply, which will bring prices down.

But instead of letting older houses waste away, home-owners should be required by municipal law and inspection to keep them in good repair. When they become beyond redemption, the owner would be required to raze them and either replace them, or sell the lot to someone else for new construction.

If this plan were adopted, Mr. Hellyer said, there would be an end to the slums. He called it the philosophy of renewal, and said it is the first truly fresh approach to housing in more than a generation.

Croll to Head Poverty Probe

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate committee empowered to investigate all aspects of poverty in Canada will take its investigations to the poor and "be a forum for all Canadians who have views on poverty."

This was the word from 69-year-old Senator David A. Croll (L—Ontario), elected chairman of the committee at its organizational meeting Wednesday.

He said in an interview the 18-member committee now has an official name: The Senate committee on poverty.

"Since we're dealing with the poor people, we'll go to them," Senator Croll said. This meant holding hearings across the country.

Creation of the committee followed a recommendation by the Economic Council of Canada last year that said the Senate is the ideal body to undertake such an investigation.

Provinces Are Urged To Give Indians Due

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien said Wednesday that social integration of Canada's Indians cannot be achieved "without the provinces accepting their responsibilities."

Speaking to the annual dinner of the Cornwall Board of Trade he called for more equitable distribution of responsibility for Indians by all levels of government.

"The view that everything affecting Indians is a federal responsibility is more a sort of historical-political attitude than a legal fact.

Mrs. G. B. Griffiths, vice-president of the Quinte Unitarian Fellowship, composes a letter to the club's foster child, a little Korean girl named Chung Soon Ok. Sponsoring Chung Soon Ok is a club project, sponsored through the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

Unitarian Services Committee

Agency Sponsors Foster Parent Scheme

Editor's Note: This concludes a short series of articles on the Unitarian Services Committee and the work it is accomplishing throughout the world. The following item deals with one of the committee's foremost projects, the Foster Parent Scheme, particularly in this area.

By LINDA GELDART

Generosity can be directed many different ways today. Towards your next door neighbor, the community, or distant lands overseas. Where and how is the question that often faces the majority of givers.

In a world where everything is impersonal, people often look for special channels that they can go through to help others on a person-to-person basis.

The Unitarian Service Committee of Canada is that channel.

Of the countless projects sponsored by the agency, perhaps the best known is its Foster Parent Scheme. Through this plan, the Agency sponsored 26 children's institutions in Korea, Hong Kong, India and France.

The average cost of providing food, clothing and medical care plus a basic education comes to $120 per child per year. A child is sponsored in one of these homes by an individual or a group organization.

The adoption fee is usually paid in advance, either in full or in installments. After the entire amount is received, the child's case history and photograph are sent to the Canadian "parent."

Personal contact between the child, the foster parent and the USC is stressed. The Executive Director, Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova makes a yearly visit to most homes to interview the children and the foster parents receive her personal report on their child.

This one year adoption period begins the day the child's case history and photograph are forwarded to the foster parents.

When these USC sponsored children leave their home, they are fully equipped to face life through their education and training.

Parents may specify the age and nationality of the youngster they would like to adopt, and the USC does its best to find a child who fits their wishes.

The increasing popularity of the USC's Foster Parent Scheme occasionally results in a "full house." when no children are immediately available for assignment.

When this happens, prospective foster parents may have their names placed on the waiting list upon payment of the first year's fee.

In the Quinte area, there are many foster parents who are devoted to their overseas "children."

One Belleville couple have been supporting a foster child in Madras, India, for the past two years. Both speak fondly of their little girl, Papathy.

Papathy lives with 100 other girls at the Seva Sumajam Girls Home. Here, the girls are taught regular school subjects, as well as gardening, weaving and sewing.

Referring to the good these homes do, the couple agreed these children would have been lost without the care and attention provided there.

Papathy can be described as a quiet, well-behaved and unassuming child. Her letters often describe the visits made to the home by Dr. Hitschmanova. She also shows a genuine curiosity about Canada.

Writing letters to her is often difficult, for it is no easy task to bridge the tremendous cultural gap. Letters are written about once a month, and simplicity is the keynote.

The couple, who wish to remain anonymous, said that if Papathy shows the inclination to go to university, they will support her efforts.

Quite often clubs decide to adopt a foster child, lending financial and moral support for many years.

One good example is the Quinte Unitarian Fellowship, based in Belleville.

Vice-president, Mrs. G. B. Griffiths explained a little about the club, and about their Korean foster child Chung Soon Ok.

The world-wide Fellowship started in this area by an airman, and has been in existence for more than six years. It now boasts a membership of approximately 50. The aim of the group is to teach the various world religions to any interested adults or children.

The group has been supporting their foster child for the past two years. Mrs. Griffiths revealed that usually Dr. Hitschmanova sends a film to them after she returns from visiting overseas.

She said Dr. Hitschmanova describes the hunger situation as frightening, detailing graphically the overwhelming need of young and old alike.

Mrs. Griffiths writes to Chung Soon Ok, and being a mother herself, doesn't find it difficult. She tells her about the weather, and the various things that make up the life of Canadians.

"She seems such a dear little girl, and the money we pay to support her is well worth it", Mrs. Griffiths added.

She explained, "after the Korean war, more than 50,000 children were lost, and there is still a lot of distress. But the people are confident, self-possessed and dignified."

The vice-president also said, "I feel it is a real humanitarian principle, receiving letters from her, it's much more personal. We feel it is personal involvement."

These are two examples of the foster parents in the Belleville area. Whether acting as individuals or on behalf of a club, they all work toward giving some child overseas a brighter tomorrow.

Future Projects Planned by Liberal Group

An enthusiastic group of women attended the regular meeting of the Women's Liberal Association Monday, Jan. 27 at the Kiwanis centre.

The meeting was op-ned by the president, Mrs. Kay Olsen and current and future projects were discussed.

Mrs. Betty Hobbs, chairman of the "Ways and Means" committee suggested a "Talent Money" competition and consented to take charge of it.

Mrs. Ann Joss has been working hard on the membership drive and has had great success.

The letters sent to the three men's Liberal Associations were read.

[illegible] was decided that as a project the organization would sponsor a youth delegate to the Ontario conference on Children and Youth, planned in collaberation with the Canadian Youth and the Vanier Institute of the Family, to be held in Toronto, Feb. 12 to 15.

A professional floral arranger was present and designed a lovely centre piece, cup and saucer arrangement and corsage which all enjoyed.

These were drawn and won by Mrs. Barbara Drumm and Mrs. Clara Jury.

The meeting closed with a lunch provided by the social committee.

CHURCH GROUPS

MOUNT PLEASANT — RAWDON MESSENGERS

The Messenger group gathered at Mount Pleasant Rawdon Church Hall for their January meeting. The leader, Mrs. Raymond McConnell and her assistants, Mrs. Stanley Williams and Mrs. Garth Joslin were in charge.

Jill McAdam was pianist for the hymns, and Mrs. Williams gave the meditation. Those assisting with the devotional were: Susan Hubel, Donna Hubel, Greg Joslin, Dale Harry and Hilda Talima.

Surette Morgan read a story, while Mrs. McConnell was in charge of a film strip on China.

Help for Homebound Handicapped

OTTAWA (CP) — If Canadians are going to have a just society they must concern themselves with the country's handicapped people, Mrs. Alicita Marshall of Toronto told a recent meeting of members of Marina Creations of Ottawa.

Mrs. Marshall, who founded Marina Creations in 1954, said that "until her organization was formed there was no program for homebound handicapped.

Marina Creations has established 12 volunteer branches in Canada and one in the United States for the purpose of helping disabled persons to work in their own homes on hand - made boutique items.

"I can see it grow into a country-wide organization providing employment for hundreds of disabled men and women," Mrs. Marshall said. She is the widow of George A. Marshall, a vice-president of the Society for Crippled Civilians from which her organization evolved.

"Why should this country be importing some $32,000,000 worth of artificial flowers, souvenir-type gifts and boutique items when our own handicapped could find full-time employment?

"I think that it will some day make a multi-million-dollar industry."

Mrs. Marshall's dream is to initiate the building of lodges where the disabled can live in dignity and comfort, fully employed.

Retires as Medical Chief of Schools

OTTAWA (CP) — Dr. Anna Sharpe has been tilting at windmills, fighting for what she believes in and raising the hackles of some public officials for almost as long as she can remember.

"I enjoy a scrap but I'm mellowing," she said in an interview. "But Ottawa schools have the best medical services in Canada and there were often fights to get this."

Dr. Sharpe retired Jan. 1 from her job as medical chief of the Ottawa public school board, a post she had held for the last 10 years.

She's not retiring from the work world however. Dr. Sharpe intends to practise pediatric medicine, something she has been doing on a part-time basis since 1965.

"I don't really believe in full-time retirement if you want to work," she says.

The native of Innisfail, Alta., was the only female in a class of 17 when she went to medical school.

"The boys were always marvellous. I have never had trouble with male jealousy and was eventually elected by males as chief of pediatric staff at the Ottawa Civic Hospital."

She got the 1930 prize for surgery when she graduated from the University of Alberta and, after a stint at Edmonton University Hospital, headed for the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto.

"I love children. They are always so honest. They tell the truth."

At her next stop, Winnipeg, she met her late husband, Group Capt. N. E. Sharpe. They moved to Ottawa in 1949.

Church Groups

(St. Thomas Church) (Alisa)

The annual vestry meeting of St. Thomas church was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Tanner.

Following a potluck dinner at noon, Rev. Saunders opened the meeting. Mrs. Colish read the minutes of the last meeting and elected vestry clerk for 1969.

Mr. George Tanner gave the Rector's warden's report; after which John Cramer presented the people's warden's report, and the Cemetery report. Miss Edna Tanner presented the A.C.W. report. All obligations have been met and reports showed all were in good standing.

Rev. Saunders then, presented the parish statistics and thanked the wardens, organist clerk and everyone involved for their co-operation and encouragement in the services of the church.

John Courtney was then re-elected People's Warden as was George Tanner, who was appointed Rector's Warden. New business was discussed and a new budget presented and accepted.

A vote of thanks and appreciation was extended to Rev. and Mrs. Saunders, the organist, and wardens on behalf of the congregation. Phil Vance, as the oldest member spoke briefly. Rev. Saunders closed the meeting.

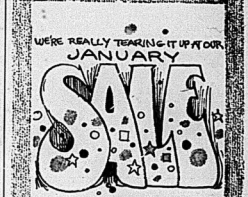
Supper Marks Bobbie Burns Day

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church held their annual supper to commemorate the birth anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns.

Messrs. Curt Linn and Donald McBride led the guest speaker George King of Rexdale and the head table guests where Tom Christie gave the address to the Haggis, which was carried to the table by Messrs. MacMillian and Murray Locke in appropriate highland costumes.

The tribute to the homeland was given by Thomas McConnell, B.A. In his address, Mr. Connell described the rough rugged life of Scotland, which has a bearing on the character of the Scottish people.

Miss Margaret Anderson of Campbellford introduced the guest speaker, George King, who spoke on the "immortal memory."



In his address, Mr. King used a number of Burn's poems to illustrate the unusual character of a man whose memory is revered after two centuries have passed.

Mr. King said he felt Burn's genius was his ability to articulate what others feel but could not express — with wit, perception and prophetic courage. He has kept the Scottish dialect enshrined forever.

Mr. King later provided entertainment. F. G. B. De-Carrol, B.A. provided the vocal part of the program.

Mrs. Gordon McCulloch expressed appreciation to Mr. King and all others who had contributed.

Rev. W. C. McBride pastor of St. Andrew's Church was chairman for the evening and added to the levity of the evening by appearing in Sutton Kilt of Ireland in contrast to the Scottish atmosphere of the evening.

Society Brings About Many Problems

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am still, after five years, amazed at the number of people who consider an introduction service a last resort. They can come to us, after they have developed all kinds of negative feelings about persons of the opposite sex, or themselves not realizing that it is the society we live in that brings about many of their problems.

People must first rid themselves of the romantic notion that as soon as they think they are in love with a person they must not question anything any more. So often young people will misread each other by agreeing, without thinking, to everything the loved one utters.

Often I feel somewhat at a loss as to how one could get people to go about this choice a bit more responsibly, knowing a bit more about themselves, and giving up the unreasonable notion that marriage in itself will solve all their problems.

I hang on to the hope that people can learn to accept professional help before they jump into a supposedly lifelong union in a drunken-type infatuated state which so often brings about a very rude awakening and a bad hangover. — Gertrude Nelger, Scientific Introduction Centre, Toronto, Canada.

Dear Gertrude: Couldn't agree more.

Dear Doris: Bravo for your column — so happy and helpful! May I have your leaflet, "Why Smoke?"

A few more techniques are in order. I haven't smoked for nearly four months following lung cancer operation and do not intend to smoke or gain weight — but must say I'm fed up with chewing gum!

And let no one be hoodwinked into expecting food to taste any better. That's definitely not true for everyone, a snare and a delusion! (Bad odors smell twice as bad, though.) —I Quit!

Dear I Quit!: I found the good odors smelled twice as good, too. Isn't that something? Not to mention being able to run upstairs with hardly a puff at the top. Chewing gum may be some help, but too much of that may just give you aching jaws.

The leaflet suggests some ways to interrupt smoking readines; assorted substitutes; some applied psychology.

When it comes to moral support the suggestion is to form a group and meet weekly to compare notes and to pat each other on the back. This sort of thing can make all the difference in a human being's will power.

Did you know that the death rate from lung cancer is 10 times higher for smokers than for non-smokers? Good luck to you!

Confidential to Hopefully: You ask for trouble when you ask for pregnancy after 18 months of ill-health, injury and gall bladder operation Better believe your doctor.

The symptom you mention would not be likely to stop you but you should be making positive sure that you are taking all precautions against carrying a baby which could bring serious illness to you or to the child itself.

Ann Landers

Psychiatric Help May Lessen Problem

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am a Lesbian. The word makes me sick but there is nothing I can do about it. All I know is I am 18 years old and I wish I was dead.

I keep asking myself how I got this way and why it had to happen to me. Whenever I see a boy and girl holding hands, laughing and talking on a street corner, I feel like throwing myself under the wheels of a truck. I wonder how many people ever thank the good Lord for just letting them be normal.

Don't suggest a psychiatrist. I couldn't afford one on my own and I'd rather die than tell my parents what is wrong with me. If they knew, it would kill them.

I don't know why I am writing you because you can't help me. I guess I had to talk to somebody and you are the only one there is. Thank you for listening, Ann. — NEITHER FISH NOR FOWL.

DEAR FRIEND: I can't help you, but you can help yourself. Tell your parents you are moody and fearful and you want psychiatric help. Therapy will probably not "cure" you, but it will enable you to verbalize your feelings without fear or shame. And it will do something else. It will help you stop hating yourself. Many people with your problem lead useful, productive lives. Self understanding and self acceptance are the goals. Good luck.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Dad lives with us, which is fine. My wife adores him and the children think he is wonderful. For 77 years he is amazingly alert. So what's the problem?

Dad's health is slowly failing and he refuses to discuss his insurance arrangements with me. I am not interested in cash. Dad can't have saved much after raising a family on a barber's pay. I do know, however, that he has some insurance policies, but I don't know the name of the company. What am I supposed to do, Ann? Run an ad in the paper when Dad dies?

A few months ago I told Dad I'd like to talk to him about his insurance. He said, "Don't worry, Son, everything is taken care of." What now? — UPPA GENSTIT.

DEAR UP: Tell Dad that all you want to know is the name of the insurance company that handles his policies, nothing more. Explain that unless he tells you, all the money he has paid out may go down the drain.

* * *

DEAR ANN: Torgel wants to marry me and I have said yes. Several months ago he "laid all his cards out on the table." He informed me that he is a diabetic.

While he was talking I felt guilty because I am keeping something from him. I wear an upper denture.

If you say I should confess this to him before we marry I will do so. — ST. LOUIS WOMAN.

* * *

DEAR WOMAN: Diabetes is an illness. Dentures do not fall into this category. Since you feel guilty, I suggest you tell Torgel in a lighthearted way that your uppers are store bought. And don't be surprised if it turns out that he has a full set.

Organization Will Continue

MARMORA — The future of Marmora's New Century Organization was discussed at Monday's meeting and it was the unanimous opinion that it had served a useful purpose in promoting women's activities in the Village and Township, with much greater interest created in all projects undertaken because of its representation by all organizations. It was, therefore, decided to continue the organization for another year and to hold meetings the last Monday of every month.

Mrs. Granville Meikle John will again serve as chairman of the organization, with Mrs. Stewart Hardy, vice-chairman, and Mrs. Breen O'Connor, secretary - treasurer.

It was agreed that the over-all committee consist of presidents of all organizations, plus representatives who may be named.

The St. John Ambulance course sponsored by the New Century Club began two weeks ago with an initial enrolment of twenty-three. Teacher is Mrs. Bruce Young, assisted by Mr. Ernest Harvey.

Main project being undertaken at present is the free craft classes on each of the next four Mondays. Demonstrations after Monday's meeting were in dress accessories by Mrs. James Park, smocked cushions by Mrs. Arthur Sheridan, and quilt blocks by Mrs. Percy Gordon, with many contributions from members.

Next Monday Mrs. Stewart Hardy will show how aluminum trays are made, and Mrs. Ed Killian and Mrs. Glen Mawer, the finishing of driftwood.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Recipe for Light Brown Bread

By MARY MOORE

Any excuse will set me to kneading bread. I really needed this to serve with the Bean Soup (given here on Tues. this week) at a guest meal. So there is my excuse—but why am I still-kept? It was a cheap gourmet meal that every cook in Canada can afford. And it helps use up Canada's wheat surplus.

LIGHT BROWN BREAD (2 loaves)

1 package granular yeast
2 teaspoons sugar
¼ cup lukewarm water
1 teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons sugar (second amount)
3 tablespoons shortening
1 two-thirds cups lukewarm water (second amount)
2 cups unsifted fresh wheat flour
4 cups sifted but unsifted white flour — Divided
1 egg

In large mixing bowl soak yeast with the 2 teaspoons sugar in the ½ cup lukewarm water 10 minutes. Then add salt and 3 tablespoons sugar and shortening blended with the 1 two-thirds cups lukewarm water. Add whole wheat flour and beat in, then beat in egg. Add 3 cups of the white flour and beat for 5 minutes. Scrape down sides of bowl and cover and let rise 2½ hours.

Sprinkle your kneading board with half of the remaining 1 cup flour and turn dough out on it. Sprinkle top of dough with remaining ¼ cup flour and knead all of this flour into dough. Even so dough will be soft and should be, but you will be able to manage it. Cut in half and shape into two loaves and place in buttered loaf pans and let rise 2 hours or until 1" above rims of pans. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 45 to 50 minutes. Tap to test for hollow sound which indicates that centre is baked.

NOTES: 1) Whole wheat bread dough should be softer than white flour bread. 2) Whole wheat bread requires longer rising time and longer and slower baking time so do not rush this bread. Bake until it has a deep gold crust.

Now you are a pro baker.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I don't see how the children stand these constant TV programs. They're either full of violence or they are terribly boring, but the youngsters hate to miss them."

Children won't "camp in front of the TV set" if you offer more interesting activities. It's up to parents to guide the young in selecting better programs.

Mother: "Let's take a walk to the Art Centre." "We'll be home by 4 and you can watch TV then when there is an interesting movie being shown."

Membership Tea Held By U.C.W.

Mrs. D. Kellar, Membership Convener for Holloway St. UCW, Belleville convened a successful membership tea in January at the church. She was assisted by the leaders of the three afternoon units, Mrs. L. Reid, Mrs. G. Coulter and Mrs. T. Poste.

The tables were attractively decorated by Mrs. L. Reid, to represent the months of the year. There was a large attendance and a period of fellowship was enjoyed around the tea tables.

A short program was presented after the president, Mrs. K. Parks extended a sincere welcome to all.

Readings were given by Mrs. T. F. Townsend and Mrs. B. Way.

Mrs. W. Lamb and Mrs. M. White each sang a solo with Mrs. E. M. Hubbs at the piano.

A contest was conducted by Miss C. Adams after which Mrs. J. Bush expressed the thanks of those present.

In the evening an informal sing-song was enjoyed. Readings were given by Mrs. I. Knight and Mrs. M. White. An orchestra composed of Steven Conley, Dale Jones, Terry Marrek and George Hymer contributed several numbers.

Assisting with the evening program were the unit leaders, Mrs. M. White, Mrs. A. McMillan and Mrs. T. Coulter.

New Home and School Association Formed

FRANKFORD — Parents and teachers of Frankford Public School assembled this week to discuss the formation of a Home and School Association.

Principal G. Donnell was chairman, and he later turned the meeting over to Mr. Welsh, Council President of the PTA of this district.

Several distinguished guests were present, including, Mrs. Ford of Belleville, membership chairman of the Ontario PTA Federation; Mrs. Spenson of Belleville, vice-president of Area CPTA; Mr. Thorne, who is an association member of Belleville; district vice-president, Mrs. Ferguson of Trenton, of the PTA Council.

The guests were able to answer all questions brought up at the meeting. This resulted in an unanimous vote in favor of the formation of a PTA in Frankford School.

Fortune in Heroin Seized at Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Canadian customs officers at Montreal International Airport Wednesday intercepted a shipment of heroin they valued at about $3,000,000.

A middle-aged man who arrived on a flight from France was arrested.

Twenty-four pounds of the drug were found in two suitcases.

An RCMP spokesman said the heroin hidden in secret compartments in the suitcase, could be "cut down" to produce 400,000 heroin capsules.

Nixon Urges Change

Ontario's Tax Rebates Are Called 'Monstrosity'

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's tax rebate system is an administrative monstrosity that could be changed to a cheap and efficient tax credit system, Robert Nixon, Ontario Liberal leader, said Wednesday.

In an address to a Toronto Liberal association, he said the administrative costs of the tax rebate system for its first year of operation can be conservatively estimated at $5,000,000. This included municipal officials' estimates of the cost of paper work, bank charges and postage in paying the rebates.

Under shelter grant legislation passed by the government, $150,000,000 was provided for payment to homeowners and to landlords who are supposed to pass on the rebates to their tenants.

The grants are intended to ease the burden of municipal taxation on property owners.

Mr. Nixon said this system should be replaced by granting tax credits equivalent to the basic shelter refund, which averages about $46. The credits could be handled through homeowners' or tenants' personal income tax returns.

8th Tyendinaga

8 LINE TYENDINAGA — Sympathy is extended to Wilbert Cross and daughter, Mrs. McMillan, in the passing of Mrs. Cross.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Lewis of Cooksville attended the funeral of Mrs. W. Cross, Mr. and Mrs. Garry Locke of Toronto also attended.

The Liberal leader said the government has had to overtax the people to pay the bill for the tax rebate program, which he called "wasteful and poorly planned."

He said $100,000,000 of the $150,000,000 for tax rebates had been raised through sales, gasoline and income taxes, and "then returned through the inefficient hands of provincial bureaucracy to the other pocket of the taxpayers."

Mr. Nixon also criticized "inequities" in the tax rebate scheme which he said permit American cottage owners to receive a rebate which "often amounts to as much as the total taxes on cottage property that they hold in Ontario.

The text of Mr. Nixon's speech was released in advance of delivery.

Rangers Win Fourth For Francis

By SCOTT BUTTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Who's the only undefeated coach in the National Hockey League this season? Emile Francis of the New York Rangers, that's who.

Francis, filling in for the ailing Bernie Geoffrion watched his Rangers blank Detroit Red Wings 2-0 Wednesday night to increase their undefeated streak to six games.

The Rangers started the unbeaten streak Jan. 17 by defeating Oakland Seals 3-1. Geoffrion, in his rookie season as New York coach, collapsed after that game and was ordered to take three weeks rest.

Francis then assumed control. The Rangers played to a 2-2 tie in Francis' debut and have gone on to win four straight since then.

It may be only a coincidence but New York goaltender Ed Giacomin has played sensational hockey under Francis, a former NHL goalie.

The shutout Wednesday night was the second in three games for Giacomin and his fourth of the season. The Red Wings, suffering only their second loss in 12 games, tested Giacomin with only 23 shots.

A New York turnout of 17,250 saw Vic Hadfield and Rod Gilbert score first-period goals. Hadfield glanced a 60-foot shot off Terry Sawchuk's pads at 2:26 and Gilbert connected at 12:04.

The victory gave New York undisputed possession of third place in the Eastern Division with 56 points, two more than Toronto and Detroit.

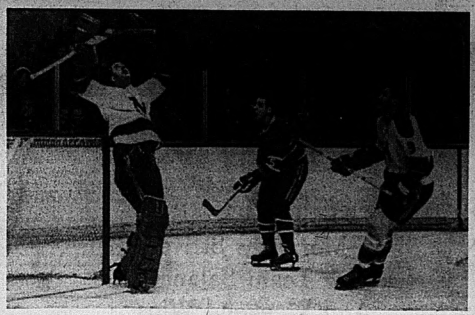
In other Wednesday games, Montreal Canadiens blanked Minnesota North Stars 4-0, Los Angeles Kings downed Toronto Maple Leafs 3-1, St. Louis Blues nipped Pittsburgh Penguins 2-1 and Oakland Seals held Boston Bruins to a 3-3 stalemate.

Veteran Gump Worsley turned in his second shutout of the season and left winger John Ferguson scored two goals as the Canadiens defeated Minnesota before 15,583 at Montreal.

Claude Provost and Jacques Lemaire picked up the other goals for the Canadiens, who now trail first-place Boston by six points in the Eastern Division.

Boston salvaged a tie before 6,079 at Oakland when Ed Westfall scored with 17 seconds left after Bruins' coach Harry Sinden had replaced goaltender Gerry Cheevers with an extra forward.

Ken Hodge and Johnny McKenzie had the other goals for Boston, undefeated in its last 15 games. Scoring for Oakland were Ted Hampson, Joe Szura and Gerry Ehman.



Westfall's goal came after a face-off in the Oakland zone. The puck went back to Bobby Orr at the point and he passed to Westfall who connected on a 30-foot slapshot.

Rookie goaltender Gerry Desjardins kicked 38 shots in leading Los Angeles to its victory, the third for the Kings in four meetings with Toronto this season.

The triumph also was the fourth in as many games here for Los Angeles against Toronto since NHL expansion last season.

Scoring for Los Angeles were Ed Joyal, who got the winner while Ron Ellis of Toronto was in the penalty box. Bob Wall and Ted Irvine. The Toronto goal went to Murray Oliver.

St. Louis, playing before only 3,185 at Pittsburgh, ran its unbeaten streak against Western Division teams to 19 games. St. Louis goals went to Bill McCreary and Ron Schock. Gene Ubriaco tallied for the Penguins.

Up and Away!

The puck is out of sight in NHL action between Montreal Canadiens and Minnesota North Stars Wednesday. Watching its flight are the Minnesota goalie Cesare Maniago and teammate Bob McCord; the Montreal player is Gilles Tremblay. Canadiens defeated Minnesota 4-0.

Tarasov Uses Cultural Approach To Goad NHL Team into Soviet Game

OTTAWA (CP) — Russian hockey coach Anatoly Tarasov said Wednesday night that a game between his club and Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League would be a great cultural moment—like a first-rate performance of a ballet company or a symphonic orchestra.

Tarasov led his Russian club into Ottawa for a cocktail party at the Russian embassy on the eve of their seventh game against Canada's national team in their current Canadian tour.

The Russians have won all six previous games.

Despite the fact that stormy weather forced the team to travel the 125 miles from Montreal to Ottawa by bus, the Russian coach was in a fine mood.

Would his team beat the Canadiens?

"I am not a journalist," said Tarasov in an interview. And besides, he added, the Russians didn't take that attitude into a game.

Tarasov said he was "too diplomatic" to explain what the Canadian National team would have to do to beat his club.

But what if he was the Canadian coach? What would he do if his club lost six in a row?

"It would be a good time to commit suicide," the coach said to laughter from a group of Russian embassy officials listening in to the interview.

Coach Red Bowmass of the Eastern Nationals, who attended the embassy party for the Russian team, said he wasn't disheartened by the string of losses.

Bowmass rejected a suggestion by Conn Smyth a one-time czar of Toronto Maple Leafs, that the national team be disbanded and that Canada's team for world competition be turned over to his son, Staff, and David Molson of Montreal Canadiens.

"Where would he get the players?" asked Bowmass.

ST. ANTON, Austria (AP) — France's Annie Famose, World Cup leader, today fractured her left leg and tore the Achilles tendon in a bad fall in training here. Dr. Otto Murr, who gave her first-aid treatment, said: "She is out for the rest of the season."

MELBOURNE (Reuters) — The Australian Lawn Tennis Association voted Wednesday to press for open tennis Cup competition in 1970. A recommendation adopted by the conference said "that in order to maintain the status of the Davis Cup it be opened to all players and that steps be taken to implement this immediately."

Helmet Designed For Varied Sport Use

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto man says he has designed a helmet, coated with a plastic protective material, which can be used in several sports.

Charlie Patterson, supervisor of technical administration at York University, has produced models of the helmets which he said can be used in skiing, snowmobiling, bobsledding, hockey, motorcycling, equestrian and harness racing.

Patterson said he developed the helmet at the request of Tom Gayford of Canada's Olympic equestrian team.

He said Gayford was wearing the new helmet a few weeks before he left for the Olympics at Mexico City last October and it might have saved his life when he took one serious spill.

Patterson said the helmets could be worn also by police officers.

After Flyers' Scalps

Mo-Hawks Seek to Extend Win Streak

STAFF — A dice shooter's prayer is "seven come eleven", but for local hockey fans the saying will be "three come four" Friday night when the Belleville Mo-Hawks put their three game unbeaten skein on the line in a nine o'clock game with the Barrie Flyers at the Belleville Arena.

The Mo-Hawks started their three game streak with a 3-3 tie in a game against the Flyers in Barrie almost two weeks ago, and last weekend they put together back-to-back wins over Woodstock and Oakville to move within two points of Kingston in the race for the sixth and last playoff spot in the eight team OHA Senior "A" hockey league.

Sunday the Mo-Hawks travel to Collingwood for an afternoon game with the slumping Kings who have lost six games in a row. The Mo-Hawks got their first win over the Kings by a score of 8-1 in a game here in Belleville, Sunday, Jan. 12.

Of the Mo-Hawks 21 points, 13 have been garnered in the club's last 13 games and playing - coach Davey Jones said "If we continue to play as we have there's no reason in the world why we can't beat Barrie Friday night. A win Friday would give us confidence for Sunday.

"I'll be content with two wins for the weekend and then we'll see how Kingston makes out."

Jones said that he hopes to have a full lineup available for Friday's game, but that the only set line he has at the moment is the Lorne O'Donnell, George Godson, Al Ferguson forward combination which has performed creditably in recent games, and scored two of Belleville's goals in Sunday's 4-2 road win over Oakville.

Tribute to Peewee Coach

STAFF — The Belleville Minor Sports Association has donated the Jerry Cochrane Memorial Trophy to be awarded by the peewee house league convenor to the peewee coach who best follows the tradition established by the late Jerry Cochrane.

The last three years that he coached his teams captured three consecutive peewee house league championships, and Mr. Cochrane also assisted the coach on two house league bantam championship teams

Mrs. Jerry Cochrane will present the trophy to the coach selected for this honor at the end of the peewee house league season.

Morrisons Strive For Team Balance And Weekend Wins

Weariness is the unrealized factor which hampers the few outstanding hockey players on the Belleville Morrisons Junior "B" team.

Coach Floyd Crawford's squad has lacked an effective third line all season, and Crawford's top operatives, such as right - wingers Ray Summers and Ron Fuller, must do double duty - taking extra shifts, killing penalties and serving on the power play.

The Morrisons get two chances to overcome this deficiency on the weekend, when they travel to Trenton Friday night to take on the Golden Hawks and Sunday when they play host to the Cobourg Cougars in an afternoon game at the Belleville Arena.

The extra work has reduced the effectiveness of some of the club's better players and Coach Crawford wants increased effectiveness from his third line, and a stronger defence for the weekend's games.

Belleville still has a mathematical chance to catch the fourth and last playoff spot in the six team Eastern Ontario Junior "B" League.

The Morrisons have nine point's to date and trail Kingston and Cobourg, who are tied for fourth place, by 11 points. The schedule smiles on Belleville in that the locals have one game in hand over Cobourg, and two over Kingston.

A pair of wins this weekend would brighten the picture for the Morrisons and give the players some confidence for a stretch run at the fourth and last playoff spot in the Junior "B" loop.

McCutcheon Miss Resting Lame Ankle

STAFF — Peggy McCutcheon has established a reputation as a top figure skater before crowds all over the continent.

But these days, she's playing solo performances to an empty house.

The 19-year-old skating sensation, who, along with older sister Jane, went from the Quinte Figure Skating Club to the internationally-renowned "Holiday On Ice" revue, is back in town nursing pulled ankle ligaments and tendons injured during a November performance.

"I was off for about six weeks, and when I went back to the show I re-injured my ankle New Years Day," the perky blond said during a pause in one of her light workouts at an empty Belleville arena.

The recuperation period also doubles as a rest from a hectic, 10-performance weekly schedule, in addition to two-hour daily practice stints.

A steady diet of public relations appearances is included in the whirlwind show business life of the two daughters of Dr. and Mrs. W. C. McCutcheon of Albert Street.

"In an average week, Jane and I do two televisions, three radio, and one newspaper interview," says Peggy

And it's going to be that hectic for a while, grins Peggy, at least until she decides to settle down to a possible nursing or fashion career.

With the mending of her ankle, Peggy will rejoin sister Jane and "Holiday On Ice," presently touring the southern United States.

For a fellow that didn't major in mathematics, O. J. Simpson finds his life a constant confrontation with numbers.

Southern Cal's sensational pigskin-toter rushed the better part of two miles during his college career and had the statisticians dogearing record books all over the place.

After his "not-so-surprising" selection Tuesday as Buffalo Bills' number one draft choice, there were only six digits interesting O. J. and they read: $600,000.

That's what the gifted Trojan running back wants as a signing-salary package to launch a career with the worst team in professional football.

It was by virtue of their dismal 1-12-1 season's record for 1968 — worst among the 26 AFL and NFL teams — that the Bills earned the right for first grabs at Simpson in this week's version of the annual scramble for the cream of the college grid crop.

Because of the "worst team picks first" format of the draft, one New York sports scribbler was prompted to dub O. J. the "booby prize of the year." It's a comparable fate to, say, Bobby Hull being exiled to the Pittsburgh Penguins.

For all they accomplished over the season, either Philadelphia Eagles or Atlanta Falcons with identical 7-12 records might better have dropped one game for the first crack at the nation's top draft choice.

The whole area of bonus babies does, of course, represent a great financial gamble for team bosses.

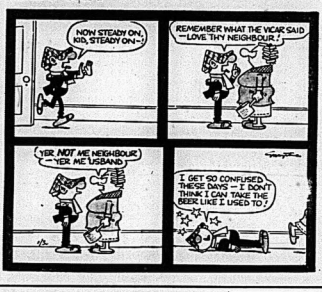
New York Jet management went into severe shock when Joe Namath's trick knee sidelined him before he even got a chance to earn any of his $400,000 signing prize.

And the aforementioned Mr. Hull caused comparable concern among Chicago Black Hawk shareholders when they thought a broken jaw would see the Golden Jet earning some of his reported 100-G salary from a sickbed.

But, barring a third world war or fallen arches O. J. Simpson's signature on a Buffalo contract should pay handsome dividends for the lowly Bills.

His presence in American Football League circles won't do the entire junior circuit any-harm gate-wise, a prestige mate for the AFL Super Bowl win — courtesy Joe Namath.

The sooner all the flesh-peddling is over the better, so our Canadian clubs can start sorting through the leftovers to bolster their Grey Cup hopes.



CFL clubs are probably just as well off scilling for lesser lights in the long run.

Montreal fans remember only too well when the Alouettes' U.S. pro loanee for the services of a certain All-America quarterback from University of Minnesota by the name of Sandy Stephens. The latter finaled into oblivion after a couple of not-too-illustrious seasons with the Als and Argos.

It's doubtful that O. J. Simpson will do much to disappoint his new bosses — his record is a trifle too consistent to place him in the ranks of the flash-in-the-pansers.

Put it this way: either he'll set the pro loop on fire, or he'll take his 600 G's and buy a nice little sports shop in Peoria.

Is 'Toe' Considering Comeback?

Retired Blake Reluctant to Talk About Next Year's Plans

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

A familiar figure, hat on the back of the head, paced like a hungry tiger behind the bench during the National Hockey League all-star game in Montreal. It was just as if he had never been away.

But Toe Blake has been away, and just possibly that figure isn't as familiar any more—more like a prowling porcupine than a caged tiger. In short, the Old Lamplighter is getting fat.

Blake has kept busy since ending the most incredible coaching career in hockey by winning his eighth Stanley Cup last year. He's still with Montreal Canadiens as assistant to vice-president Sam Pollock.

Blake travels with the team, works the training camps and keeps an eye on the irregulars Pollock has hiding in the bushes.

He handled the East team during the East-West all-star game in Montreal Forum, sending over the boards such players as Bobby Hull, Phil Esposito, Gordie Howe, Stan Mikita and Bobby Orr.

Would he like to be back behind the bench permanently?

His answer was intriguing —"I'm retired as far as this year is concerned."

"But don't ask me any more on that subject."

And when Blake closes a subject it stays closed until he wants to re-open it.

An example of that occurred when the NHL took selected sports writers on a tour of training camps the year before the league expanded to 12 teams.

Montreal was in Chicago for an exhibition game with the Black Hawks and news conferences had been set up with both clubs. Blake didn't want any part of it, but relented under league pressure.

A reporter for one of the new cities in the league sat down beside Blake and attempted to equate hockey with football. Blake closed off that conversation quickly—in two languages.

Some of the color went out of hockey when Blake moved upstairs. Claude Ruel, who moved up from director of player development to head coach, is a quiet man.

Blake never was. Except for one lapse—he won the Lady Byng trophy in the 1945-46 season as the NHL player best combining sportsmanship with ability—he has been a perpetual storm centre.

Eight years ago he was fined $2,000, largest levy in the league's history, for punctuating an argument with referee Dalton McArthur with a right cross.

In 1967 he was fined $200 for directing intemperate remarks at referee Vern Buffey, an incident which got him thrown out of a game for the only time in his NHL career.

As a player he scored 200 NHL goals and was one of the game's greats on a line with Elmer Lach and Rocket Richard. As a coach, his teams finished in first place nine times in 13 years and won eight Stanley Cups, five in succession.

Nearly every year during his long coaching career he ended the season with a trip to hospital for a complete checkup and a rest.

Blake was 55 when he stepped out as coach.

"I don't think I'll be back," he said then. "This was my longest season and one of the hardest . . .

"I'd like to coach Canadiens for a hundred years but the tension is too terrific. On the days of some games this year, I was almost not human."

Could he be lured back after a year's absence?

You ask him.

Harness Betting Soared to New Heights

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian harness racing fans last year wagered approximately 15 times as much as they did a decade ago, setting a national pari-mutuel record of $377,-274,980.

The total includes wagers at the 70 tracks administered by the federal department of agriculture and the seven Quebec tracks that are supervised by the provincial revenue department.

The federal department said wagering at its tracks has increased 1,447.3 per cent since the season ten years ago.

Total attendance at all Canada's harness tracks was 6,833,226.

Last week the agriculture department's figures showed attendance at thoroughbred tracks for the year at 3,570,185, with a betting total of $198,676,653.

Ontario and Quebec harness tracks easily outdistanced those in the other eight provinces. Ontario accounted for $167,345,886 of the wagering, and Quebec $148,244,221.

Wagering by provinces with 1967 figures following: Ontario $167,345,886 ($147,861,734); Quebec $148,244,221 ($131,423,350); Nova Scotia $6,050,050 ($5,-914,693); Alberta $5,094,326 ($4,377,075); Manitoba $2,980,381 ($2,060,075); New Brunswick $2,860,700 ($2,176,646); Prince Edward Island $1,611,620 ($1,-337,670); British Columbia $999,154 ($1,157,734); Saskatchewan $710,899 ($722,654); Newfoundland $167,744 ($92,294).

Derby Officials Passing Out Last Year's Purse

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Churchill Downs said Wednesday it will begin distributing some of the money from the controversial 1968 Kentucky Derby.

Not affected by the decision is the $122,600 winner's purse, which the Kentucky racing commission ruled recently should go to Forward Pass, the second-place finisher.

The commission ruled that Dancer's Image, the winner, was under the influence of phenylbutazone, an illegal medication, when he romped across the finish line May 4.

That decision has been appealed by the colt's owner, Peter Fuller of Boston. Lou Cavalaris of Toronto was the trainer of Dancer's Image.

The track said it will pay $25,000 to Calumet Farm, owner of Forward Pass; $12,500 to Sadie Rock Farm, owner of Francie's Hat, and $5,000 to Swamazon Farm, owner of TV Commercial.

Churchill Downs said these are the minimum amounts the owners will collect, regardless of the outcome of the dispute.

Gordie Howe's
HOCKEY

In a recent column we were discussing hockey sticks and the shortage of ash for the shafts. This time I would still like to stick to the subject of hockey equipment because to me it's fascinating.

Something that may interest people which I doubt is commonly known is that hockey pants melt. You didn't read it wrong - - - they melt.

I suppose it is because nylon is one of the basic materials in hockey pants. There are other synthetic materials used, too. However, because they want something that is light and durable and won't rip, nylon is always used.

I have a friend with a sports equipment firm and he was telling me that the pant the Detroit Red Wings are using this year is not supposed to melt - - - or burn."

"But we haven't completely licked the problem, which has been with us for a long time," he said. "The pants burn because of friction when a player is rubbed against the boards. It's like rubbing two rocks together. You get sparks. When the players are banged against the boards, the friction causes the material to melt."

I know from experience that hockey pants have long carried sear marks from rubbing against the boards. The marks look as though someone had taken a hot poker and rubbed it across the sides of the pants.

In our other column about equipment we mentioned the Wings use between 1,100 and 1,200 hockey sticks a year. This means that even with wholesale prices, the Detroit Hockey Club spends from $5,000 to $5,500 a year on sticks. That's a good sized sum.

I also find the Wings are not as tough on sticks as other teams in the National Hockey League.

A man from our equipment firm was telling us recently the Chicago Black Hawks must use 2,100 to 2,300 sticks a year and that Stan Mikita and Bobby Hull each go through 350 sticks a season.

Passing Up $100,000?

Big Cheque Lure Fails to Faze Amateur

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Although she possibly could earn from $40,000 to $100,000 in her first year, JoAnne Gunderson Carner is not planning to enter the world of professional golf.

But she is interested in locking horns with the women pros again.

Fresh from a victory over the top pros and amateurs in the $35,000 Burdine Invitational tournament at Miami, JoAnne again was asked if she had reconsidered joining the pros.

Prior to that she had repeatedly said: "No, the hectic life of the pro golfer is not for me."

Asked if she din't feel bad about having to pass up the Burdine's first prize of $5,200 because of her amateur status, she said:

"No, that didn't bother me. I play golf for fun and I had a lot of fun beating the pros at Miami."

How about playing the pros again?

"I have told the girls on the pro circuit that I would like to get their 10 best girl amateurs together to play the 10 top pros. The pros wouldn't listen to the offer but I am sure the amateurs would win such a match whether it be match or medal play.

"There are many amateurs turning in good scores repeatedly, but there are very few pros who can stay in the low range."

Mrs. Carner continued. "Right now I can think of only three pro golfers that I would rate top-notch—Mickey Wright, Carol Mann and Kathy Whitworth, and Mickey is past her peak."

The $40,000-$100,000 range is not the calculations of JoAnne. The figures were presented by promotion people who feel she could make that amount through purse winnings, endorsements and speaking engagements.

Cycle Citation To Yvon DuHamel

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Motorcycle Association Wednesday announced the presentation of its Award of Merit to Yvon du Hamel of Montreal and Eve White of Toronto.

Du Hamel placed first in the American Motorcycle Association national championship for lightweight machines and second in the large capacity class at Daytona, Fla., last year.

He also won the association's High Point Trophy for the fourth consecutive year. The trophy goes to the rider gaining the most points in sanctioned competition throughout Canada.

Mrs. White is editor of Canadian Motorcycling, the monthly magazine of the association, and has been active in the association for almost 20 years.

Since the formation of the association in 1945, only five merit awards have been made.

Good Hunting

Classic stance of this snarling puma or cougar in northern British Columbia typifies perhaps the end of the hunt for the sleek animal. The 250-pound cat provides some of the best and most dangerous hunting available in North America. Truitt Describes Visit

Hijackers 'May Wind Up Dead' in Cuba

MONTREAL (CP) — An American writer, wanted in the United States on charges of hijacking a chartered plane and going to Cuba, said Wednesday anybody who makes unauthorized trips to Cuba these days is "out of his mind—he may wind up dead."

Alben Truitt, 35, grandson of Alben Barkley, late vice-president of the United States, said he had no personal knowledge of hijackers or hijacking—claiming he was ignorant of the charge—but conversations in Cuba led him to regard it an extremely dangerous game.

He said he was guilty only of foolish conduct in hiring a chartered plane, ostensibly for a short southern Florida hop, then paying the pilot to take him to Cuba. The pilot claimed that Truitt forced him to fly to Havana by holding an explosive device to the back of his head.

In an interview, Truitt said:

"I can't speak from personal experience, but from what I heard I was led to believe the Cubans take a bloody dim view" of unauthorized journeys to the Communist island.

Truitt said that though he was not in the Hijacking category he was himself first held under house arrest in Havana after his arrival last Oct. 23. Then on Nov. 30 he went under solitary confinement in prison until his release late in January.

"I must confess I was terrified," said the brown-haired Truitt who despite his troubles seemed full of high spirits and confidence.

He said he went to Cuba in the hope of writing a book because, as a journalist, he was unhappy about the Cuban story being told to the American people. Instead, he was finally placed aboard a France-bound Cuban ship, which he left at Saint John, N.B. He made a brief swing into the United States, then re-entered Canada and was detained in Montreal Jan. 17.

Asked how Fidel Castro treats hijackers—earlier reports indicated he considered some of them, at least, a nuisance—Truitt replied:

"Since I'm not a hijacker it is difficult for me to say, but . . . I heard that hijackers were given very rough treatment indeed. Some, I was told by people of the department of state security, were imprisoned immediately.

"Others, I was told, were sent to work camps.

Truitt criticized the U.S. blockade of Cuba and praised the drive and spirit of the Cuban people. But he said he doesn't like communism because, for one thing, it merely substitutes one class system for another.

Why was he removed from house arrest to prison?

Apparently because the Cubans decided at that time to allow him to return to the United States to his family, "my strong desire," he said.

Truitt said there may be some "merit" in a suggestion that he was a special case in view of his family connections but he hasn't reached a "perspective" yet on whether his treatment was worse or better as a consequence.

He received no rough handling at any time and, in fact, his weight rose to 167 pounds from 160.

On his arrival in Cuba, the first questions he said he was asked by the authorities were: Do you believe in God? Did you rob a bank or kill somebody? Why do you make trouble for us?

On U.S. Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 28, after several hijacked planes had arrived in Havana from the United States, a Cuban police official told Truitt he was lucky he arrived before "our minister decided to take a tough note."

Asked whether the Cubans entertained unauthorized arrivals they regarded as bona fide political refugees, Truitt said:

"No. I was told by an immigration officer that people who ask for political asylum are special cases—that the law which prohibits crossing borders without proper papers is suspended until a proper judgment can be reached on each and every one.

"However, if you're a bloody criminal they'll throw you in jail.

"I understand they had started cracking down on unauthorized flights whether they used hijack methods or not. This is what I heard, but you know I did not live at the airport."

He described as "categorically untrue" a report that the Cuban government, in the view of one high placed aviation source, would like the world to assume that all hijackers are fleeing the United States because they are dissatisfied with the system.

"The Cuban government needs hijackers like it needs a hole in the head," said Truitt. "It means a hell of a lot of work for them. It wouldn't surprise me at all if they started getting tough."

Truitt said he met not high-echelon officials and considered "ridiculous" any idea that such a busy man as Castro might have taken a personal interest in his case.

Truitt Appeals Deportation Order

MONTREAL (CP) — Alben Truitt, wanted in the United States on charges of forcing a private plane to fly to Cuba, was ordered deported Wednesday by the Canadian immigration department.

A department spokesman said Truitt, 35, has entered an appeal against the decision.

The spokesman said Truitt has also entered an appeal against detention in Quebec City immigration quarters pending hearing of his deportation appeal.

The appeal against detention would be heard in Ottawa "in a few days." The deportation appeal hearing was to take place in Montreal in "two or three weeks."

Truitt was ordered deported on the grounds that he overstayed a short-leave pass issued Jan. 3 when he arrived in Saint John, N.B., on a freighter from Cuba.

The freighter was bound for an unknown French port.

Earlier this month, a U.S. commercial airliner — Key West, Fla., set bond at $100,000 for Truitt, accused of forcing a light plane to fly to Havana last October.

Government Studies Merger of Airlines

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is studying the possible merger of Air Canada and Canadian Pacific Airlines as part of an over-all review of Air Canada's corporate structure and financing, Transport Minister Paul Hellyer told the Commons Wednesday.

He said James Richardson, minister without portfolio with special responsibilities in transport, is looking at the whole topic and eventually will make recommendations to the government.

Wallace Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) raised the matter by asking about what he called the suggestion of the new chairman of Air Canada, Yves Pratte, that the two lines be merged. Air Canada is Crown-owned, CPA is a private corporation.

Mr. Hellyer said the Air Canada chairman was expressing his own views and was not flying a kite for the government.

A LEAKY MUFFLER CAN KILL!

The temperature's going down! Your chances of carbon monoxide poisoning are going up! Yes, winter weather means more driving with the windows up and this puts your exhaust system to the test. Your muffler need not be failing off to be faulty.... it may not even make a loud noise. Yet it can be deadlier than a loaded gun! Don't take a chance... be safe, it costs so little.

Agency Badgered Woman Into Paying Bill She Did Not Owe

TORONTO (CP) — V. J. Simone, responsible for licensing Ontario collection agencies, Wednesday told of one woman so harassed by an agency that she paid $36 on a debt she never owed to save her job.

Mr. Simone, registrar for the Collection Agencies Act, said he found the case "particularly disturbing," and that it illustrates the worst in debt-collection practices.

"The collection agency in my opinion often infringes upon the alleged debtor's legal, civil and human rights," he told a one-day conference sponsored by the consumer-protection division of the Ontario financial and commercial affairs department.

"The majority of complaints we receive against collection agencies come from debtors who allege that they have been harassed by telephone at home and, especially, at their place of employment."

The agency that used calls to the woman's place of employment to force her to pay a debt she didn't owe was "severely reprimanded and warned that a repetition could place its licence in jeopardy," he said.

In another speech to the conference, A. R. Walker, registrar of the consumer-protection division, said direct legislation is the only way to stop some dance studios from "involving "shy, introverted people". In contracts ranging from $2,000 to $8,000.

Mr. Walker told of a bachelor who, since May, has paid a studio $1,700 and enlisted a further contract for over $1,600.

Your Dollars

Keep Up Your Home

By KEN WEEKES

Maintaining your home is almost as important as buying the home itself. Not only will it make it a source of pride and comfort living, but it will protect your investment by keeping up the resale value of your home. A poor lawn, lack of paint and fence repair can decrease the value of your property by thousands of dollars.

Most housing experts recommend you spend about 2 percent of the value of your new home on maintenance each year. As the house grows older this should be increased to 3 and 4 percent. This guideline will not apply to every home, for each homeowner will have different circumstances. Perhaps you can do most of the work yourself, reducing t h e cost. Or maybe your house is badly in need of repairs forcing you to spend more than average.

Should you require major renovations or remodelling, low cost home improvement loans are available under the National Housing Act. These loans are available through your local bank or any approved agency such as mortgage companies.

The maximum size of loan available for single dwelling units is $4,000. For multi-dwelling units the maximum is $4,000 for the first unit and $1,500 for each additional unit. The loans, repayable in monthly installments, must be paid within 10 years. But don't begin remodelling until you are sure you can get the loan.

To save on maintenance costs, plan your repair requirements several months in advance. By planning ahead you can take advantage of sales on paint, lumber, garden tools and so on.

The home repair business seems to attract more deceptive firms than almost a n y other business. Be extremely cautious of salesmen who knock on your door offering to shingle your roof, fix your furnace or paint your house at extremely low cost.

One family had the experience of having their driveway paved by a salesman who said he had some materials l e f t over from a nearby job he had just completed. To prevent throwing it away he said he would pave their driveway at a low cost. But, to their dismay, most of the tar washed away in the first rain.

Check and double check both the firm and any contracts you sign before agreeing to have the work done by a firm with which you are not familiar.

Let us move on to selling a home. To determine a reasonable selling price, compare it with other homes selling in your neighborhood. And consult a professional appraiser. He will probably be most satisfactory for he should know the market in your location, and have the necessary experi-

Students Children Of Wealthy

GUELPH (CP) — Elimination of tuition fees would help overcome the over-abundance of middle and upper class students in Canadian universities, a student leader said Wednesday.

Donald Langford, president of the students union council at the University of Guelph, told a c mission investigating university government relations that the system of financing university education should be examined.

He said a 1966 study by the Canadian Union of Students showed that 48 per cent of students in Canadian universities were the children of businessmen and professional people who could afford to pay tuition fees.

The commission, set up as a joint project by the Association of Universities of Canada, the Canadian Association of University Teachers, the Canadian Union of Students and the Union of male dei etudiants du Quebec, is conducting joint hearings across Canada.

MPPs Want Pay Boost

TORONTO (CP) — Members of all three provincial political parties are anxious for a salary raise, Leonard Reilly, chief whip of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party, said Wednesday.

MPPs now make $8,000 in salary and get $3,000 to $4,000 tax exempt for expenses.

Austerity Chokes Drapeau's Montreal Dreams

MONTREAL (CP) — Mayor Jean Drapeau may quit because a climate of austerity is stifling his dreams for Canada's largest city.

In a statement Wednesday night to city council, he said:

"I will say without ambiguity that in the new climate, equivalent to a sort bf curfew or form of austerity which can become very severe, I find it very difficult to see myself continuing, even in part, to exercise the function I now occupy."

The council had been startled only minutes earlier by the announcement that one of Mayor Drapeau's more famous dreams, a permanent Man and His World summer exhibition, would not reopen this year.

For the 52-year-old mayor the disappointment was obvious. He had been a key figure in the success of Expo 67. And he had done everything possible to preserve the Expo theme Man and His World in an annual exhibition.

In his reign as mayor since 1962 the city has sprouted an array of skyscrapers, built a 15-mile subway and huge cultural centre, attracted a National League baseball franchise and won the right to bid for the 1976 summer Olympics.

Pressed by the financial situation that has in the last two months resulted in a 23 per-cent increase in property taxes and the closing of Man and His World, "one is perfectly justified in certain circles to wonder about my own personal role."

"In order to decide on staying in office I will have to convince myself of the utility of the role that I can still play. . . ."

Stanfield Wants Policy Stated

OTTAWA (CP) — Buttressing his own non-confidence motion, Conservative Leader Stanfield Wednesday demanded disclosure of government economic outlines as he led off a two-day Commons debate.

The Opposition leader said the government was not prepared to discuss economic policy in a coherent way until the spring of 1970—the time of the next budget.

Mr. Stanfield said there must be an end to uncertainty with full disclosure of "the main outlines" of government policy.

He wanted to know what government policies are to overcome regional disparity.

Instead of co-operating with the provincial governments on economic matters, the ruling Liberal party had declared financial war against them. This inhibited development of provincial programs and preventing them from playing a role in the country's development.

The government was guilty of "a complacent, almost indifferent" attitude towards its responsibility for economic progress. The government was to blame for rising unemployment, inflation, lack of economic growth and price increases double the tolerable limit.

He said he intended "during the coming weeks" to reflect on the question and thus avoid a hasty decision "some might say was taken too suddenly a nd under the spell of emotion."

The closing of Man and His World means about 10,000 persons employed at the site, including 3,000 college students, will have to find jobs elsewhere this summer.

The La Ronde amusement was at the same time. Hellen's Island will continue to operate this year but national and international pavilions on

Mr. Stanfield's non-confidence motion put before he launched his attack blamed the government for economic progress insufficient to maintain satisfactory employment levels.

Later, it was supplemented by a New Democratic Party amendment that accused the government of reducing the rate of public investment and pursuing policies designed to increase unemployment.

Both segments of the motion still be voted on today as the debate ends. The government, with its big House majority, is at little danger.

Mr. Stanfield also accused the government of following a deliberate policy of unemployment as it failed to deal with inflation by means other than those causing unemployment.

Labor Minister MacKasey, one of the government's toughest debaters, rejected the opposition claim. At no time had the government adopted fiscal policies which set out to increase unemployment.

The government was seeking measures to curb unemployment, not temporary ones that placed only a few dollars in the hands of the unemployed.

Expo 67 attracted a record 50,000,000 visits during its six months of operation, more than any other previous world's fair.

The city has asked for a reduction in its share of the Expo 67 deficit.

The federal government has a half interest in Expo 67, while the Quebec government is paying 37½ per cent of the cost and the city 12½.

The Expo deficit was said to be $223,388,537 and that the city's share of this exceeded $29,000,000. The federal government has said it will not agree to reduce Montreal's share.

London Mod Fashions Mediocre

EDITOR'S NOTE: Staff reporter Barry Grills has just returned from Britain, where he surveyed Mod trends in London. In the last of three articles he gives his impressions of British styles.

The first impression British fashion trends have on a foreign visitor is severe — miniskirts are more severely mini- and maxiskirts are more severely maxi.

At first glance nothing about the British youth and its attire seems half done. After all aren't mods supposed to be dedicated followers of fashion?

Miniskirts range from six to eight inches above the knee and this length is common. The midi and maxi skirts are well in style and the wearers' legs have once more fallen to speculation, rather than appreciation.

The shops on Carnaby Street offer the latest in fad attire, from the embroidered vests of Jimi Hendrix to the fur hat of Eric Clapton.

But a second glance at the youth and fashions of Britain brings an awareness of mediocrity.

After the awareness of mediocrity comes a feeling of disappointment for the English look: no different from North American teenagers as far as fashion is concerned.

As a matter of fact one is aware that North American young people are one step ahead of the British in that they at least have a rock culture appearance and identity.

Granted, the British seem to sample all fashion trends, but it is the variety they favor that ruins their identity. There is nothing distinctive about the present British fads and trends.

It was not always so.

British pop recording artists from the beginning were trend-setters in clothing, hairstyles and other forms of bodily adornment.

But the trend-setters have upped their activities since 1963 and the advent of the Beatles and British rock 'n' roll.

When the foursome first invaded North America to do the Ed Sullivan show, they were attired in suits and jackets that were soon named after them — Beatle jackets.

Blue Jeans had been around for years, especially in North America, but the Rolling Stones increased their popularity and probably helped to introduce them in the United Kingdom.

In fact there was even a British pop group named after the now common pant — The Swinging Blue Jeans.

Do you remember the Kinks? They popularized a Victorian "Charles Dickens" outfit" in Britain and North America.

Ordinary frames for glasses were replaced by old-fashioned wire rims, probably a result of the influence of "granny glasses" introduced by Jim (Now Roger) McGuinn of the Byrds.

The Lovin' Spoonful wore hats constantly when they first entered the rock scene. An explanation of the back of their first LP said the place where they practised was always dusty and that the hats kept their hair clean.

The psychedelic segment of the rock age was responsible for "wild" colors in clothing.

Singer Donovan Leitch was seen wearing elaborately colored and designed robes and was posed for pictures in a field of flowers, the influence of hippies and eastern meditation.

Late styles of clothing consist of North American Indian outfits with headbands, beads and fringed jackets. Elaborate vests are characteristic of groups like the Jimi Hendrix Experience.

Clothing styles worn by hippies were well advertised by the news media and hippy groups such as the Peanut Butter Conspiracy.

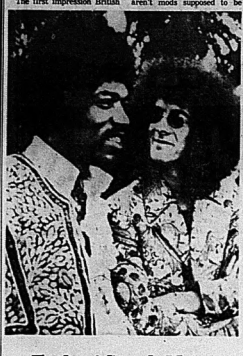
Hair styles also varied. When the Beatles were heard from in 1963 their long hair was actually short by today's standards. Negro rock artists, again like Jimi Hendrix, were forced, if they desired long hair, to grow a tangled pompadour of tight curls.

Hair on the fairer sex went from short to long to short.

Britain today is well aware of the Indian style, the hippy style and the Negro style hairdo. But it is still clinging to the styles of five or six years ago.

The result is a confusing conglomeration of trends and fads that leave adults, when describing the youth of today, with only one word — "weirdos".

In Britain the days are gone when hair was long when a beard was a beard; when sideburns were sideburns; and a dressing style was a particular dressing style.



Where is Britain's trend-setting leader? He appears to be sitting back and allowing the mod capital of the world to become the mediocre capital of the world.

To be specific British youths are generally cleaner, their hair is generally shorter and their clothes usually tamer.

Beards are not as common as they are in North America. Mexican moustaches and sideburns still in the 17th and 18th centuries.

Miss Driscoll, 21, has been voted Britain's best woman singer and the attention this brings may give the English young people and their styles a peculiarity again.

If not, it appears the British fashion scene as far as the contemporary rock era is concerned, will become an island of mediocrity unto itself.

Embroidered Vests

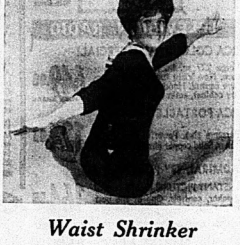
Jimi Hendrix and Noel Redding exemplify the trend towards wild vests and equally unorthodox hairstyles.

Jools - - - New Media Madonna

Julie Driscoll, 21, is the new trend-setter in Britain, but she may fade out of existence —old-fashioned—clothing and all — if her styles don't catch on.

clothes ranging from the roaring 20s to the outfits of our ancestors still in the 17th and 18th centuries.

Teams Seek Championships



By JOHN McNAIR

The past week at Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School has seen the BCI basketball teams win all their league games in the quest for the league championships.

In other years BCI hoopsters have scored thousands of points and collected many championships. Because of the lack of outdoor sports facilities at the school, indoor sport such as basketball have always been stressed.

The grade 13 honor system at the school is now under review by a panel of students and teachers. Some students have taken advantage of the system and their marks have suffered, but the majority are using the system to good advantage.

Plans are going ahead for this year's Winter Wonderland. Last year's sell - out, a hootenanny, will be included again this year.

Waist Shrinker

Actress Eileen Wesson demonstrates the formula for stretching into a streamlined shape.

Exercises Reduce Spill-over Waists

By Reba and Bonnie Churchill

These tapeline exercises are formulated to reduce inches. The target areas are a "spill-over" waistline, flappy thighs and flabby upper arms. When practiced consistently, they activate muscles, firm flesh, and, in turn, streamline measurements. Universal actress Eileen Wesson demonstrates, sit on floor, legs straight and feet 20 to 25 inches apart. Extend arms to shoulder - level, then twist torso as far to the right as possible. Do not move legs; make the waist the pivoal point as you continue this side-to-side swinger. Practice Pointer: Keep abdomen contracted, shoulders erect. Rehearse 15 times.

If hips, thighs and limbs are "trouble spots," try this updated version of the bicycle exercise, called the pedal pusher. Recline on floor, stick legs at right angle to the body. If limber, use hands to elevate hips from carpet, so legs are free to begin pedal movement. Pace action from slow to swift to slow. Increase size of rotations. At first, they are small so feet, ankles and calves do most of the work. As motion expands, thighs and hips come into play. Practice pointer: Repeat 10 times. Rest, then perform an additional 10.

Lateral stretches are another effective way to trim inches. This get-moving workout is called the torso tilt. Eileen, seen in the universal film Winning, describes exercises as getting down to the nitty-gritty pull of waist-whittling. Stand tall, then lunge to the right, bracing right hand on knee. As you arch left arm overhead, continue bending it to the right. Practice pointer: Keep right arm straight, so there is a resistive action to the left side's stretch-reach movement. Ten sessions, alternating sides, are adequate.

Student Studies Civic Government

By JUDY SCHRIEDER

As the result of a program sponsored by the Belleville Rotary Club, I had the privilege last week of representing Nicholson Catholic College at City Hall.

As Mayor Russell Scott's protegee, I had the opportunity to attend a session of city council, as well as various other functions to which the mayor was invited. Aside from business directly related to city government, the mayor's presence was also sought at a variety of luncheons and dinners. The schedule was a busy one.

When my afternoons were free I took advantage of the chance to wander through the various departments at City Hall in an effort to discover what makes Belleville tick. Not only did I get a view of municipal affairs, but I also attended a county council meeting where I met the reeves and newly-elected wardens.

As mayor - of - the - week I think I learned more about municipal government than newspapers or books could ever tell me. The management of an entire city certainly depends on more than just an observance of rules and regulations. A responsible community owes its gratitude to the men and women who give of their time and talents to develop the potential of the locality. Belleville is such a city.

The Nicholson Drama Club is presenting the production Arsenic and Old Lace at 8 p.m. Jan. 31 and Feb. 1 in St. Michael's auditorium. Admission is 50 cents for students, and $1 for adults.

Centennial's Library Lacking

By BARB BRUCE and ALEX DUNN

Ontario department of education policy sets the minimum number of books in a school library at 10 for each student. At Centennial the ratio is about four books for each student. Many teachers feel the ratio should be much higher.

What can be done to bring the library up to minimum standards?

An investigation proves there is no easy answer, but steps have been taken to improve the library.

The school has engaged the services of a qualified librarian. Cheaper, paper-back books are being purchased to cut down on the time from receipt of the books to their placement on the shelves. Clerical help has been obtained to speed up the process of catalouging the books which are not pre-catalogued.

are purchased to increase the number which can be bought with the allotted funds. When Stirling students came to Centennial, steps were taken to obtain their library.

The Board of Education has assigned a fixed amount of $6 for each student as a library grant.

But when books are made available, the students should do their best to keep the books in circulation. At present there are about 100 books over-due.

The book problem is slowly being solved with continued financial assistance from the Hastings County Board of Education.

Exams Scheduled At Madoc

By BETH PRICE

Last week marked the beginning of second term examinations, at Centre Hastings scheduled to run through this week also. For review a number of history films have been shown on various phases of ancient history.

Orders were taken this week for school sweaters, sponsored by the Girls' Athletic Association.

Discussion and preparations for this year's formal have begun. The theme will be "the end of the rainbow" and everyone is looking forward to see what the decorating committee will come up with.

Minister Says Insurance Exploits Seniors

TORONTO (CP) — A prominent clergyman called Wednesday for a full public investigation of insurance company annuity plans which he claims exploit senior citizens, Rev. Edgar Bailey, national president of the Baptist Federation of Canada, told a conference of the Ontario department of financial and commercial affairs that he will present documents and letters proving his charge to federal officials in Ottawa.

Mr. Bailey referred to a policy issued by Standard Life Assurance Co. which provides $100 a month at age 70 after 10 years of premium payments. Premiums at maturity come to $11,401.38 and the investment value is $21,000.

If the 70-year-old cashes the policy, he will receive $12,940, leaving a profit for the company of $8,500, the minister said.

If the holder collects his monthly payments of $100, he will receive $1,200 a year, but the investment value of his annuity—$21,500 at seven per cent —gathers $1,505 in interest.

"The company is making $305 annually."

Mr. Bailey said that in fact, the interest on the senior citizen's annuity is paying him his monthly $100 and providing the company a lucrative income without eroding the annuity savings.

"Profit to the company after the death of the holder is $21,500, plus the yearly investment profits," Mr. Bailey said.

"Admittedly there is an initial commission and a service fee, how does the company justify from its services the enormous profit? How are the customer's interests protected? How does the company justify the policy at all?"

Norma Carrier, vice-president of the Ontario Consumers' Association of Canada urged the government to set up consumer clinics where shoppers can voice complaints.

Two-time Deserter Rebuilds Life in Canada

TORONTO (CP) — Christopher Youngs, 24, a deserter from the United States Marine Corps, is trying to pick up the pieces of his life since he came to Canada and became a landed immigrant last May.

Youngs, originally from Watertown, Conn., believes he is succeeding.

He came here about a year ago, married a Canadian girl and is now studying to become a teacher. He is also taking night classes at York University to complete a degree program in English literature.

training at Camp Pendleton, Calif.

"We were marching five or six miles with our packs and two guys who weren't strong enough keep falling out," he said. "Our platoon would circle around and the guys would start marching with us again.

"The third or fourth time this happened, the drill instructor ordered us to run over the top of the two guys as they lay there on the ground."

Youngs, who described his upbringing as middle-class, said it was only one of the incidents that finally made him desert.

Boot camp, he said, was a traumatic experience, especially bayonet practice.

"The drill instructor would stand up on a platform with loudspeakers and say we should imagine that slant-eyed gooks were coming up over the hill," Youngs said. "We had to thrust our bayonets in the air and scream: 'Kill!'"

Youngs said he was later transferred to Camp Lejeune, N.C., and faced the prospect of seeing service in Vietnam.

"I was scared."

Youngs said he finally deserted because he believed the Vietnam war is immoral and his officers "were not the sort of people I would want to follow anywhere."

At first, he said he went to see friends in San Francisco, but was arrested by FBI agents and returned to Camp Lejeune and given 30 days in the stockade.

But as soon as he had served the sentence, he deserted again, went to New York and Boston and worked at various odd jobs. He went to Buffalo and stayed there for a while, then entered Canada as a visitor to find out about immigration procedures.

Through a girl, Molly now his wife, he met William Spira, a former American and now a Canadian businessman who is helping deserters settle in Canada. Youngs said Spira told him how to become a landed immigrant and he returned to the U.S., then re-entered Canada and applied for landed immigrant status.

Spira, 47,, said Wednesday that Canadian immigration officials are making it tougher for deserters to come to this country.

He is in charge of a group which has helped about 800 deserters since 1966.

Mr. Spira said the Canadian immigration department instructed officials last July to apply tougher admission procedures for persons entering Canada, aimed basically to prevent deserters from crossing the border.

Said Mr. Spira: "Virtually nobody has been landed for five or six weeks. The immigration officials tell them (deserters) they can't apply at the border or that the so-called quota is full."

James Cross, an official with the immigration department, admitted tougher admission procedures have been instituted, but denied that desertion from the U.S. forces alone prevented a person from settling in Canada.

Mr. Spira said some deserters are still entering Canada by pretending they are visitors.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
P	P	2 D	4 S

This hand was played recently at the Belleville Duplicate Bridge Club's Tuesday evening session at the Armory.

All the North-South players in the room except one arrived at the par four spade contract. Of the seven pairs playing four spades, four pairs were down one, two pairs made it exactly, and one managed to make an overtrick. The eighth pair defended against five diamonds doubled, after West bid five diamonds in the above bidding sequence, and managed to set it two tricks.

The defence against four spades is not easy, although four pairs managed it. After West leads the Ace of Diamonds and continues a diamond to East's King, East knows that all three bands are out of diamonds, and that a third round will give South a ruff and sluff.

Nevertheless, without the third diamond play, the Ace of Spades picks up the singleton King, the Queen takes the Jack, and the only other trick lost is the Ace of Clubs.

With a third round of diamonds, however, South is sunk. A Club stuff by South allows West to make the Spade Jack and Ace of Clubs, while a ruff with one of the high trumps promotes a trump trick for the defence.

The unfortunate East-West pair who allowed an overtrick also heard two rounds of diamonds, but shifted to a Heart. South won the Ace, played Ace and Queen of trumps, and a low Club to the Queen, followed by West, allowed South to pitch the King of Clubs on the Heart King. When West complained, East pointed out that he had, after all, avoided giving an extra trick with a ruff and a sluff

THEM !

If saddles hadn't been invented in France in the early Charlitan era, the bold knights of the Middle Ages could never have stayed on their horses, let alone fought battles! Today saddles are used by nearly everyone who rides horses.

Once your family may have enjoyed riding, too, but if their other pursuits have left good saddles and other equipment (perhaps a horse?), sell them with an Intelligencer Want Ad. It's just common sense to dial 962-9171 now!

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

One must often walk the tightrope between being a scaremonger and one who dispenses caution. For example, consider sore throats. Ordinarily, they pose no great problem. But the exceptions can be serious threats to health and life.

Recently there was a letter from a woman who said all you need to do is give a child some aspirin and stop fussing around. Here are two letters which indicate that it is dangerous to play Russian roulette with your child's sore throat:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: After reading the letter from the mother who signed herself Mrs. Z., I just had to write and tell you what happened in our family because a sore throat in a child went unattended.

Too many mothers put too much faith in aspirin. Because a daughter-in-law of ours felt the same way as Mrs. Z., we have a tiny grave in our family plot. Since the loss of this child we have had a divorce in the family, not to mention the heartache that we, as grandparents, are still finding unbearable after eight years.

Our little granddaughter, only 4 at the time, complained of sore throat. All he was given was aspirin. The doctor was not called. He died within the week of streptococcus sore throat.

So, Dr. Steincrohn, please keep on telling mothers how important it is to take their children to the doctor when their youngsters complain. — Mrs. S.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: In answer to the lady, Mrs. Z., who thinks we exaggerate the importance of taking care of a sore throat, I'd like her to know what I've gone through because of a sore throat.

When we were children mother couldn't take us to the doctor so she did the best she could, bless her heart.

I got a severe sore throat one day and about a week later my legs and joints hurt a lot. All everyone would say was I had growing pains. But later on, when my heart went bad, we all knew I had had rheumatic fever.

Then one — I am 40 now — I've had two heart operations to repair my valves. I've been unable to work in many years.

I had rheumatic fever again in 1963 and was in bed a 11 summer. I'm telling all this so Mrs. Z. and everybody will know what a sore throat can cause if it's a strep throat. — Mrs. D.

Comment: I could offer many more similar examples, but why depress you more? It makes good sense not to pass but to know, what kind of sore throat your youngster has. To refurbish an old adage, "It's better to be safe than sorry."

For Mrs. T.: Raynaud's disease affects women more than men. It is a condition in which there is a chronic constriction and spasm of the blood vessels in the fingers, toes, tip of the nose, etc. As some women describe it, "when my hands get cold my fingers go dead white."

In addition to trying to protect patients from the cold, we prescribe drugs with the hope of relaxing the constricting blood vessels to promote better circulation. Some cases come to operation when medicines bring little improvement.

• • •

For Mrs. M.: If you have any doubts about your fasting blood sugar seems to treat more grownups than children, ask him to refer you to a pediatrician to take care of your infant daughter.

Peace Missions Ease Strife Between Bitter Congo Nations

KINSHASA, The Congo (AP) — A French-speaking African summit sent two presidents Wednesday on peace missions that cooled bitter central African antagonisms which had been worsened by mercenaries.

As a result The Congo and the neighboring Congo Republic agreed to re-establish all relations short of diplomatic. An exchange of diplomats was expected later.

The Central African Republic decided to normalize relations with The Congo to the south and with Chad to the north. That ended a crushing economic blockade of landlocked Chad.

President Hamani Diori of Niger, president of the Afro Malagasy Common Organization (OCAM) made the announcement at the end of a three-day OCAM summit.

Upper Volta's President Sangoule Lamizana flew early Wednesday to meet President Jean Bedel Bokassa of the Central African Republic in Bangui, the capital.

President Etienne Eyadema of Togo made a similar visit to Brazzaville, capital of the Congo Republic. He met with the head of state, Marien Ngouabi.

Bokassa and Ngouabi boycotted the summit, the only two OCAM chiefs of state absent.

Brazzaville broke relations with The Congo last October after Pierre Mulele, a rebel leader from The Congo, was executed on returning from Brazzaville.

The Central African Republic suspended diplomatic relations with The Congo on the eve of the summit. The break eliminated a dispute that had grown since mid-November when Bokassa mysteriously pulled away from his once-close friend, General Joseph Mobutu, the Congolese president.

Conference sources said the chiefs of state decided to send two of their number to the Nigerian capital of Lagos later and another two to Dahis, rebel Biafra's administrative centre, to seek a settlement of the 19-month civil war.

Dates Changed

Maoris in New Zealand in 750 AD

AUCKLAND (CP) — Archeologists in New Zealand are upsetting long-accepted dates of Polynesian migrations in the South Pacific.

When the Dutch navigator Abel Tasman discovered New Zealand in 1642 he found it already inhabited by Maoris, brown-skinned Polynesians closely related to other Pacific peoples in islands to the north.

They had no written language, but later visitors found that they meticulously preserved genealogical records handed down by word of mouth.

From a study of the generations, historians concluded that the main migration of Maoris to New Zealand arrived about 1350. In primitive open canoes, and without knowledge of the compass, these intrepid navigators, with their wives, families, dogs, food plants, and necessities of life, made ocean voyages of hundreds of miles.

Many legends tell of still earlier navigators who had visited New Zealand and returned to an unidentified island "somewhere" to the north. It must have been at least a thousand miles away as there is no suitable island group nearer to New Zealand.

However, the start of real habitation of New Zealand has generally been considered until recent years to have been early in the 14th century.

When carbon-dating techniques were established, these ideas had to be revised and the date of systematic settlement was placed several hundred years earlier—artefacts have been found which are thought to date back to 750 or 800 AD.

Now an archeologist has made finds which suggest that Polynesians reached New Zealand much earlier still. Digging on the east side of the North Island, T. R. Price has found primitive artefacts, burnt bones of extinct birds and remains of open hearth fires which could be 2,000 years old.

The finds occur below a hard ash layer which is reliably believed to have originated in a major eruption in 135 AD.

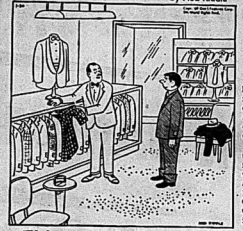
Naturalists See Slides

The Grand Canyon of the Colorado, with its wonders of geology was the object of study by Quinte field naturalists at their June 4 meeting. Miss Susan Payne, teenage club member showed a fine selection of slides which demonstrated the awesome and colorful character of the gorge.



Of particular beauty were some sunrise pictures in which the hues of rocks caught the rosy rays of dawn while the lower parts of the canyon, still in darkness, showed a deep purple color.

The speaker also took the club on side trips to Yellow-stone Park; and the Painted Desert.

Lawyers and Realtors Urged To Cut Fees in House Sales

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal housing inquiry urges lawyers, real estate firms and the government's mortgage insurance authority to reduce their fees in connection with house purchases.

"In the case of legal fees, the task force cannot escape the feeling that in most cases the work involved is being done by a competent legal secretary on pre-drawn forms provided by Central Mortgage and Housing Corp.," the inquiry team says in its report published Wednesday.

It calls on provincial bar associations to review their fee schedules, "taking into account the routine nature of much of this work, particularly in cases where a single lawyer or firm writes a large number of similar mortgages for a subdivision development."

Likewise, it says, real estate boards could probably afford to reduce commissions, especially when handling volume marketing for entire housing developments.

The present insurance fee on NHA mortgages—now two per cent of the money loaned, or $300 on a $15,000 mortgage—should also be reduced, possibly to one per cent, because the insurance fund now is a healthy $200,000,000.

Voters Less Able to Judge

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

Our favorite phrase is "People must be . . ." and supplying whatever predicate we want to prescribe people to become—"educated" or "less selfish" or "more law-abiding"; but "people" are simply yourself and one other, so that all such injunctions have to begin with one's attitude toward oneself and one's treatment of the other.

The U.S. is so proud of its "progressivism," but the fact is that it was the last Western nation to begin national health insurance, is in 15th place in infant mortality, and in 19th place in deaths under five.

A truth we have not fully recognized in our drivers' tests was enunciated 20 years ago by Burkminster Fuller, when he observed: "The traffic manners and ethics of people while driving reveal their character as a whole far more readily than would their cultivated mannerisms and behavior while walking or talking."

• • •

How can we have any kind of participatory democracy when increasingly the important decisions to be made by government are in the military - scientific field, where specialized (and usually classified) knowledge is required—and the voters are less and less able to judge for themselves the wisdom or virtue of such decisions?

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For January 31

Your birthday today: This year brings probable intermittent success in romantic interests, an improvement in living conditions. Many actions taken more for the comfort of others than for conviction turn out to be valid expressions of the self. Any organized study of human nature promises exceptionally good results. Today's natives include many highly intuitive political leaders others with inpatient aspirations for similar success.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Wind up the week and the month as neatly as you know how, then pursue your hobby. Your home could stand further attention. Romance is favored tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Every problem brings with it the key to its own solution. The right question forces the answer, but the individual may be so used to the problem that he will not give it up, "a sure worry of this sort" Romance is fairly close this evening.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your results probably turn out satisfactorily despite some delays in communications. Indulge in sentiment a bit within your own set of warm friends.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Money is hard to obtain today, so make deals which will earn your share of it. Sports are featured; you may not be accustomed to a steady round of it, so do not overdo. Social events include an odd incident.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Somebody you care about is coming closer to you in spirit. You have a sudden chance of profitably buying and selling. Finish your home-repair project before it gets too far along in incomplete form.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Partnership and marital affairs go well. Push work projects for all they are worth, then turn completely to those of them and play in full earnest for a complete breathing spell.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Settle the month end by implying something of the consistent and effective work you're doing, while not quite offering a boast. Just a devise to prevent being taken for granted. Start a dietary course, if necessary.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Force your pace to get all the tag ends accomplished for the end of the month. Don't make financial moves after the very first hour of the working day. Set up a trip over the weekend if this like.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Use your muscles a bit today, limber up and get into better, more springy condition. You may rediscover that you really are a member of a rather talented team perhaps not organized as such.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your family offers some concern. Your friends are with you as usual, particularly those younger. Follow romantic inclinations in the evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Relatives and their claims play havoc through minor crises. Money — management matters are potentially profitable. Romance can be pleasantly pursued late in the day.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): A positive, cheerful attitude makes all the difference in how people react to you. Warmth and comfort are important. Help for any need you may experience is near at hand—reach for it!

New Estates Tax Revised by Benson

$50,000 Exemption To Stay Unchanged

OTTAWA (CP) —Finance Minister Edgar Benson plans to introduce a new estates tax bill formally today, giving everyone exactly six months in which to consider and complete changes in their wills.

Mr. Benson, back-pedalling from his Oct. 22 budget speech in which he initially announced changes in current death duties, told the Commons Thursday he proposes to make five main changes.

—The old rule that taxes will not be applied to estates of $50,000 or less will be continued.

—Executors of large estates tied up in property or business will have five years to make death-duty payments, thus easing the burden on family-owned businesses or farms.

—The higher exemptions for children spelled out in the budget three months ago will be continued, but estate-tax payers will be able to use the old exemptions until next July 31 if they benefit from them.

—Gifts of up to $3,000 a year made to trusts for minor children will be tax-exempt.

—The revised estate tax plan will not come into effect fully until next July 31, instead of being made retroactive to the last budget, Oct. 22.

Mr. Benson told reporters after introducing the new plan in the Commons that he hadn't retreated. But later he said the changes from his original plan had been brought about by pressure on him by the Liberal caucus, and by individuals outside the Commons.

Features of the October plan being retained in the new estate tax law are that there will still be a complete exemption of all moneys left by an individual to his widow, and higher exemptions from taxation for children. Where the new tax will hit hard will be bequests left to strangers or far-distant cousins.

Mr. Benson thus proposes to write into tax law by next July 31 what are widely considered the best features of both the existing tax law and the proposals he made in October.

He said there will be "no tremendous loss of revenue." While he initially planned to cut the basic tax exemption to $30,000 from $50,000, he said the administrative cost of processing estates between $20,000 and $30,000 didn't well outweigh to revenues to be received.

He said the reduction of the exemption level to $20,000 might have meant the revenue department would have to assess, process, and collect taxes on an additional 3,000 estates a year. It is estimated that with the $50,000 level, about 6,000 estates a year are taxed.

Under the new tax plan, besides the basic tax exemption, there would be an exemption of $10,000 for each adult child and much higher exemptions for children under the age of 21. The exemption for minor children remains for bigger sums.

Mr. Benson said that if a man died and left his estate equally divided between his widow and four children, aged 1, 2, 3, and 4 years, the entire amount left to his widow would be tax exempt, and up to $154,000 would be tax-free for the children.

Hydro Annoys Union

TORONTO (CP) — The union bargaining for 9,700 Ontario Hydro workers charged today that the publicly-owned provincial power commission has distributed a letter containing misleading statements designed to cause public anxiety.

Local 1,000, Canadian Union of Public Employees, said Hydro Vice-Chairman Robert J. Boyer distributed the letter to members of the legislature.

The letter disagreed with an earlier union claim that power would not be interrupted if rotating strikes by the workers started on schedule Monday.

Conciliation talks aimed at averting the walkout resumed in a Toronto hotel today under the direction of W. H. Dickie, the province's chief conciliation officer. They began Tuesday.

The union statement today said it has offered Hydro management a staff notification list to make certain that emergency crews are available in case power service is interrupted by bad weather.

It said that although an overtime ban and a work-to-rule order were imposed a few days before Jan. 1, union members in southwestern Ontario had worked day and night to restore power after an ice storm.

"She no doubt was responsible for the saving of many lives."

Nursing Sister Cashin To Get MBE for Heroism

By ROBERT AVERY
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — On Tuesday, Feb. 4, Captain (Nursing Sister) Joan Cashin of Station Trenton will receive the coveted MBE at Government House in Ottawa. The presentation will be made by Governor-General Roland Michener.

On Sept. 5 of last year, in the early morning, (Nursing Sister) Cashin rushed over swampland to the scene of a Czechoslovakian airliner crash at Gander, Newfoundland.

Lightly clad and wearing only summer sandels she spent five hours in a burning area answering cries for help, searching for injured and giving aid to survivors, with only the light of the burning wreckage to guide her.

For this she was made a member of the Order of the British Empire.

The citation states: "Under the most adverse confused conditions, Nursing Sister Cashin worked fearlessly and tirelessly, displaying bravery, initiative, resourcefulness and selfless devotion to duty without thought or regard for her own safety and well being."

Young Behind U.S. Violence

WASHINGTON (AP) — The national commission on violence has reported that the volcanic eruptions of disorders in America seem to be generated in large part by youth—white and black, poor and well-to-do.

In a progress report, the investigating body headed by Dr. Milton Eisenhower said "better control of illegitimate violence in our democratic society" can and must be achieved.

But the solution to rising street crime, city riots and campus disorders will demand a national effort, it said, embracing "the active engagement and commitment of every citizen."

The interim report was sent to the White House Jan. 9 but went unpublished until Thursday. In it, Eisenhower and his colleagues said they would withhold recommendations until a final report is ready in the spring.

But meantime some "themes of challenge" for the commission and the country have emerged, the report said.

"The key to much of the violence in our society seems to lie with the young.

"Our youth account for an ever-increasing percentage of crime, greater than their increasing percentage of the population. The thrust of much of the group protest and collective violence—on the campus, in the ghettos, in the streets—is provided by our young people."

Ottawa Should Have Been Consulted by Quebec---Sharp

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said today Quebec should have consulted Ottawa before disclosing its communications satellite plans to France.

He said in the Commons that the federal government has exclusive responsibility for telecommunications and that participation of Ottawa will be required in any satellite scheme.

"It would have been preferable for the Quebec government to be willing to take into its confidence the government of the country and to disclose its intentions before making them known and including them in letters of intent to the government of another country," Mr. Sharp said.

"This is all the more true since the plans concerning the visit to Paris and the satellite arrangements were apparently approved by the Quebec government months ago."

Leaking Ocean Oil Well Threatens California's Coast

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Beaches, wildlife and fish were threatened today as oil bubbled forth from a leaking ocean-floor well at a rate of 21,000 gallons a day.

The black slick covered 200 square miles of Pacific as pilots prepared chemical air drops to disperse the oil and underwater crews worked to seal the leak.

A team of experts was dispatched from Washington, D.C., by Interior Secretary Walter J. Hickel, and Gov. Ronald Reagan told of the threat of "major pollution to our coast."

"It is imperative that everything be done that can be done," said Hickel. He is considering tighter regulations on offshore drilling, he said.

The undersea well being drilled 5½ miles offshore by Union Oil Co. of California blew out Tuesday.

Separatism Endorsed

MONTREAL (CP) — The executive council of the Union Generale des Etudiants du Quebec has decided to advocate separatism and will launch an "information campaign" among students next week, it was learned Thursday.

Liberal Senator Hits NATO Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Daniel Lang (L—Ontario) told the Senate Thursday a national debate on NATO may be an attempt to bypass Parliament and rally support for Canada's withdrawal from the 15-member alliance.

Reporting on the recent NATO ministerial meeting at Brussels, Senator Lang said that allowing Postmaster General Eric Kierans, a proponent of withdrawal, to express views opposite to those of the ministers responsible "makes a mockery of cabinet solidarity."

A national debate on NATO would be "misinformative and useless." Senators knew enough about publicity and propaganda to realize the debate "can very easily be slanted by those who control the news media."

Prairies Still Shivering

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The weather in British Columbia and much of Eastern Canada began to improve today, but the Prairie provinces continued to suffer temperatures as low as 50 below zero.

Edmonton endured its 25th day of below-zero weather.

Thursday's temperature in Edmonton was 39 below, while at the city's international airport, 17 miles south, the mercury hovered around 50 below.

In Grande Prairie, 250 miles northwest of Edmonton, gargantuan said temperatures will have to rise 10 degrees before hydraulic units on trucks will work. Grande Prairie Thursday had a temperature of 47 below.

Freezing rain and fog in the Montreal and Toronto areas hampered airline schedules and Toronto International Airport was closed for nearly two days.

Defence Department Would Delay Service Pensions Until 60

OTTAWA (CP) — The Defence Department has proposed to Cabinet that retiring members of the Canadian armed forces not receive service pensions before they reach the age of 60, the Commons public accounts committee was told yesterday.

Auditor - General Maxwell Henderson for a number of years has brought to the committee's attention cases of young men leaving the forces and receiving immediate pension.

He said yesterday that 1,407 men under the age of 40 have retired from the forces in the last three years. The annual cost of their pensions was $2,018,000.

He cited the cases of a 33-year-old getting $2,620 annually, a 34-year-old getting $3,178 and a 25-year-old getting $1,080.

These benefits should be paid to them only when they become 60, the auditor-general said. This applied to public servants and others in civilian life.

Mr. Henderson said integration of the forces has worsened the problem, but it existed before that.

MPs agreed to question officials of the Defence Department on its submission to Cabinet wiping out early pensions.

"Maybe they should bring along a recruiting officer," said J. Patrick Nowlan (PC, Annapolis Valley).

Chief Retires Today

Ted Poste donned his uniform for the last time today.

This evening he signs out as Belleville fire chief — retiring at 61 after 30 years of service on the fire lines.

He joins a select company. With his retirement Belleville becomes one of the few communities that can count three former fire chiefs still surviving among its citizenry.

Last night, to mark the occasion, Chief Poste got together with his colleagues in retirement.

Dean of the trio is William Lynch who, at 91, still is an avid cigar-smoker. A grand old veteran of Canadian fire eaters he first joined the department in 1916 and was chief from 1930 to 1943.

His successor, also present last night, was Gerald Vance, who saw 44 years service — 17 as chief — before retiring in 1965, and handing over to Chief Poste.

All three men have seen vast changes in their years of firefighting.

Gerald Vance recalls he was first pressed into service because of his ability with horse teams. The department wasn't fully mechanized until 1926, he said.

The changes continue. Chief Poste notes he leaves a department, that now marshals a 55-man force. Next summer another 10 will be recruited as the department changes to a 48-hour work week.

And that was one of the biggest changes that came up for discussion among the veteran trio.

There was a time, recalled Chief Poste, when Belleville firemen worked 72 hours a week.

"And if you wanted to leave town on Sunday you had to ask the chief," he added.

He's on the Ball--He Gets the Job!

Life isn't all a game of pool for 12-year-old Stephen, even though he was playing at family table when mother told him of new job. With high academic averages he qualified for Ontario Legislature pageboy. City Youth Is Pageboy

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

New experiences announce themselves in the most unexpected places.

Take 12-year-old Stephen Pape.

The other day his mother walked in to tell him he had just been appointed pageboy at the Ontario Legislature.

Stephen was in the family recreation room — playing pool.

The announcement took him by surprise.

"He knew nothing about it," said Mrs. William Pape, whose husband is owner-operator of Pape's Steak House.

Now, however, Stephen is taking the whole business in his stride.

Yesterday he was up in Queen's Park, receiving instructions at the Speaker's office and being fitted for his pageboy uniform.

Last night he was home comfortably settled and regaling his five brothers and one sister with accounts of his trip.

His appointment came about through Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP Quinte. As a member of the Legislature Dr. Potter has the opportunity to post a young candidate from his riding for selection as one of the assembly's 22 pageboys.

But Stephen was chosen for his own qualities.

Regulations demand that any appointee have high academic standing.

As a grade eight student at Queen Alexandra public school he has an 83 per cent average — enough to qualify him for selection as an assembly messenger.

He also has varied personal interests — including music, art, reading, assembling plastic models.

Among his other accomplishments is a talent for playing the horn. He is a chorister at St. Thomas' Anglican Church. Recently he marched 30 miles in a charity walkathon.

His appointment extends for a session, which normally runs eight to 10 weeks. Between times he will take five hours private tutoring each week with fellow pages to keep his education current.

Stephen is looking forward to his Toronto stay — he'll board with relatives — among other things it means he'll be close to the Royal Ontario Museum.

There are other dividends — notably the five-dollar-a-day stipend given assembly pages.

With the money, he says, he's going to pay off the final installments on his band horn. Then he plans to put the balance into construction-building, science-fiction and dragster-car assembly kits.

IN MEMORIAM

CODLING — In loving memory of my dear beloved wife Gertrude Codling who passed away Jan. 31, 1968.
Peacefully sleeping, resting at last,
The world's weary troubles are all passed.
In silence she suffered, in patience she bore,
Till God called her home to suffer no more.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by her friend, Ernest Frost.

TUGNETTE — In loving memory of a dear son, Duke, who died away on Saturday January 31st, 1959.
We little knew when we woke that morn,
The sorrow the day would bring;
For the call would come, the death
To part with one loved so dear.
—Always remembered by his mother and dad, sisters and brother Bruce, Belleville.

CODLING — In loving memory of our dear beloved sister and aunt Gertrude Codling who passed away Jan. 31, 1968.
Though her smile is gone forever,
And her hand we cannot touch,
Still we have so many memories,
Of the one we loved so much.
Her memory is our keepsake,
With which we will never part,
God has her in His keeping,
We have her in our hearts.
What we gave to clasp her hand,
Her tender sweet face to see,
What we gave her voice, to see her smile,
Thank God we still have memories.
—Sadly missed by her friend Ernest Frost.
That loved you most sincere,
Always remembered by mother and dad, sisters and brother Bruce, Belleville.

CODLING — In loving memory of our dearly beloved aunt Gertrude Codling who passed away Jan. 31, 1968.
Memories we think of you,
With hearts and eyes that cry,
Though we smile to hide our pain,

A never ending sorrow and ever aching heart.
The day we lost you dear aunt
God knows best.
Our family torn apart,
God, put your arms around her,
Keep her in Your care.
Make up for all she suffered,
In all that was unfair.
We have only a cluster of memories,
And a broken heart.

Big Economic Boost

Tenders for UIC Office Opened in Toronto

TORONTO — Belleville's biggest economic boost in two decades today may be a step closer to reality.

Yesterday tenders on a construction project to house the Ontario Regional Unemployment Insurance Commission offices were opened in Toronto.

Today, the official reaction from civil service sources is that of guarded satisfaction.

Indications are that the quotations submitted by contractors are fairly close to the cost margins originally estimated by federal authorities.

But it may be up to two weeks before an official decision is taken on any of the seven tenders opened by federal works department experts here.

"We're pleased with the interest shown (by the contractors) and the bids received," said John Charron, works department area accommodations manager here.

However, specifications submitted must now be studied in depth before works officials make any recommendations.

"We haven't studied these works thought they should be" in initial estimating, he said.

"They don't look too far off," added Mr. Desroche.

No statistics on the bids were revealed by official sources.

Locally, Bellevillians have grown accustomed to a wait-and-see role since news first leaked out last fall of the contemplated UIC move.

With a work force of 300 — most of them moving from Toronto —the UIC establishment would enrich the city's economy almost overnight. The stakes are laden — particularly for property owners, since the population boost would stimulate housing demands — so the suspense is worthwhile.

The waiting period is no more exhausting than that involved in location of any new industry. This time, however, the vigil is public knowledge, complicated by the nature of the move itself.

The relocation of such a major work force calls for immediate housing availability. Therefore public knowledge of the project — unlike other industrial or business locations — was imperative.

UIC employees affected by the move already have tour-ed the city enmasse.

At present, top officials of the commission are resident in the community combing its environs for suitable accommodation.

Tweed Man Passes 100 Mark

A resident of the Lodgeroom area west of Tweed for the first 90 years of his life, Mr. Peter Casey recently celebrated his 100th milestone in Kingston.

For the past 10 years, the Tweed area centenarian has resided at the House of Providence in Kingston.

Four of his children, Sister Mary Gertrude and Patrick, both of Kingston, Cecil of Oshawa, and Gerald of Rochester, N.Y., were among the 100 guests attending the anniversary.

The son of Irish parents, Mr. Casey was born on the Lodgeroom homestead. In 1906 he married Mary Murphy, a clerk in a Tweed general store.

The Casey family has had long association with the Tweed area where Mr. Casey's parents settled following the 1812-14 war with the United States.

Singing old time songs to the accompaniment of guitar played by his daughter, Sister Mary Gertrude, and watching baseball and hockey are Mr. Casey's favorite pastimes. He was catcher for Tweed's first baseball team.

Still active, Mr. Casey has only once required the services of a doctor. This was three years ago when he fell and broke his hip. he has made a complete recovery.

Asked how it feels to be 100, Mr. Casey replied "the same as 99."

Nursing Sister to Get MBE

The truth of these words is shown by the story of that cold September night.

Nursing Sister Cashin was first on the scene. On her way she met several dazed survivors to whom she gave aid and then issued instructions for the dispatch of victims to hospital.

After questioning some of the survivors in German, she was able to determine the extent of the tragedy and discover the whereabout of other victims.

After the last survivor was found, she went to James Paton Memorial Hospital to give further treatment.

Nursing Sister Cashin joined the Canadian Army in 1941. She is a native of Stradhally, Waterford, Eire, and has been working as a nurse in Egland.

Now stationed at CFB Trenton she is instructing the air evacuation nurses' course. At the time of the crash she was serving with 226 Aircraft Control and Warning Squadron, Gander.

Belleville Heart Campaign Planned

The Belleville Chapter of the Ontario Heart Foundation will stage a campaign in February to raise $6,000 in Belleville and the immediate area. The campaign under the chairmanship of Mrs. Stuart W. Howell is scheduled to commence Feb. 23.

Mrs. Howell said the area to be canvassed on a house to house basis will include Belleville, Rosanove, Redeersville and Carrying Place. The campaign has been approved by the Belleville financial appeals review board.

The local appeals board agreed the affairs of the heart foundation were in good order and noted that administrative, educational and campaigning expenses were only 16 per cent of the $1.3 million disbursed in 1968. The foundation has a national policy of non-affiliation with united funds but the appeals board suggests this policy might be more flexible.

More than 2½ million Canadians have some form of heart disease with 50,000 of these being children.

In the past the people of Belleville and district have been generous in their support of the heart foundation with contributions on a population basis being three times the national average.

SALES HIGH

An estimated $320,000,000 worth of candies are sold annually in the United States during the Christmas holiday period.

APPOINTMENT

ALBERT VAN REEWYK

Gerald Joyce, President, Gerald Joyce Realty Limited, Realtor, is pleased to announce the appointment of Mr. Albert Van Reewyk to their real estate department. Mr. Van Reewyk is a native of Holland and prior to coming to Canada graduated from Agricultural College in Holland. On arriving in this country, he farmed in Eastern Canada, then spent some five years in the construction industry. For the past 11 years, Mr. Van Reewyk has been active in the General Insurance business in the Belleville and Trenton area. It's All Power Now

Exhibition Planned For Deseronto

DESERONTO — The Deseronto Recreation Committee is hoping that the Jan. thaw will be at an end by Feb. 8, and that the weatherman will postpone whatever big snow storms he is planning until the following day, at least.

Deseronto is to have an Ice carnival Feb. 8, with music, all sorts of prizes for costumed skaters and races, and a broomball game. The gala event will take place on the rink at the old high school grounds, in use since the Christmas holidays. Tickets are being sold on a admission radio to help pay expenses, and the committee is welcoming donations, large or small, from all who are interested in giving the young people something definite to do.

Firemen have flooded the rink several times, but the thaws have put an end to the fun temporarily. Given the co-operation of the weatherman Feb. 8, however, it should be a big night for Deseronto.

The committee is also planning to revive "Teen-Town", which has been dormant this winter for lack of an interested adult to act as counsellor.

Although committee members were not named until the town council met Jan. 6, there have already been three meetings. The first meeting was not successful, as a night was chosen when few members were free. Sunday was found to be the only suitable evening, and all were out Jan. 20, and elected Wayne Brant as chairman and began planning events. The third meeting, Jan. 27, saw plans furthered and Joseph Reynolds, clerk-treasurer of the town was appointed as secretary-treasurer.

Other members are: Earl Murphy and Darell Weaver, besides chairman Wayne Brant, three interested citizens: Councillors Jack Layfield and Clayton Brooks, and the two women representing the White Elephant Store committee.

Brighton Ice Harvest Is Annual Family Chore

By ELMER BONTER
Staff Correspondent

BRIGHTON — The annual harvest of natural ice for commercial use commenced on Brighton Bay in the village of Gosport this week.

When the last cake of the 2,000 ton pack is buried under sawdust time may have finally run out on the century old industry, says businessman Grant Quick, supervisor of the cutting and storage operation.

Manufactured ice at 98 a ton is about the same as it costs me from the bay Mr. Quick explained. Anything I save is lost through shrinkage of the pack in storage in ice hot weather.

Mr. Quick noted that Brighton Bay is the last place in Quinte area the once thriving winter enterprise is actively practised.

He became involved as a youngster when men were paid at the rate of three cents a cake to cut ice with a saw by hand. A man who could turn out 50 cakes in a day was considered a good worker then.

Today power driven saws hew out giant cakes weighing as much as 400 pounds. Mr. Quick requires large numbers of them in the operation of a summer hotel and a boarding and shipping fresh fish to various Canadian and American cities the year round.

Until the electric refrigerator replaced the old fashioned ice box as a householding necessity the annual harvest of natural ice provided employment for hundreds of men in the Quinte area during the winter months.

Activity was more noticeable on the waterways of the Great Lakes system. Families of men who had families connected with the industry in the early days were Bywater of Trenton and Smith and Caliahan of Belleville.

By the middle 1930's ice was still being delivered from house to house by retailers in the urban centres. The routine of filling icehouses was considered entertainment by those who appreciated a winter scene with true Canadian flavor.

Previously much of the harvest would go to private storage places maintained by well-to-do residents, farmers for cooling milk and storekeepers dealing in perishable goods.

In the late 1900's a summer heat wave at Rochester depleted that city's reserves of natural ice. The following winter Americans served even more interest in the annual ice harvest from Brighton Bay.

More gangs of men than before were put to work. They piled 30-inch cakes 18 tiers high on an acre of land near the Gosport shoreline. Although the bay was still frozen over sailing ships invited trouble and possible striking in moving the mountain of ice to the U.S. side before mild weather set in.

Throughout the harvest a boom atmosphere prevailed. Gosport's only hotel with a liquor bar was a popular meeting place after working hours and attracted colorful characters usually only seen in western movies, according to Mr. Quick.

In making reference to the inevitable phasing of the operation he said he'd realized some years ago it was just a matter of time until technology changed living and working habits.

He classes himself fortunate, however, in having retained so many wonderful memories of bygone days. "The vivid recollections I have of that exciting period in Quinte's history are worth a great deal to me," he explained.

Housing Plan

One of the encouraging aspects of Transport Minister Hellyer's plan for an overhaul of Canada's housing laws is the alacrity with which the report has been made.

It seems little time has elapsed since the minister and his advisers were flying hither and yon about the country surveying the housing situation at first hand.

Canada has no minister of housing as such, and as minister of transport Mr. Hellyer shows himself as good as his title, a man who moves and gets things done. But then he had proved himself before, in the way he remodelled the country's defence forces. What a fuss there was over that — integration, unification and all — but the minister of defence, as he then was, prevailed.

The burden of Mr. Hellyer's report on housing is that, as a matter of principle, "every Canadian should be entitled to clean, warm shelter as a matter of basic human right."

No one can deny that. Will the proposals — from improvements in the terms and conditions of mortgages, and no need for down payments in some instances, to direct federal loans to municipalities to assemble and develop land for housing — have the desired effect? Or will the morass of problems surrounding housing, including high costs, continue to plague the Canadian public?

Only time will tell, but the report and the plans it encompasses is a start at least toward easing the difficulties now being encountered. Most significant perhaps among the proposals are the suggestions for removal of sales tax on building materials for residential construction, and the establishment of a federal department of housing and urban affairs, and provincial formation of regional governments with effective powers over housing and development.,

The latter would fulfill the urgings of Opposition spokesmen over a long period — that housing should be made a full-time commitment of a cabinet minister. Tied in as it is with urban development generally, this proposal could be the biggest single contribution toward an overall improvement in the housing situation.

The Library Scene

Vancouver could be the most "bookish" city in Canada, to judge from some rather startling news from the west coast city. There has been a rash of thefts from the city's public library, forcing officials to establish controlled traffic lanes for patrons leaving the building. Members of the Corps of Commissionaires keep an eye on those entering and leaving.

Book losses plague most libraries, and keeping up with people who are tardy about returning books or leave town without returning them is a time-consuming task for library staffs.

Speaking of libraries, it is interesting to note that the firm which hopes to build a shopping plaza on North Front Street is considering the provision of space for a west end branch library.

There has been a request to the city for such a branch library from area residents. But they will have to be patient, for the plaza project itself is currently bogged down by objections from other business interests. On February 4, the Ontario Municipal Board is scheduled to hear an application for a zoning change to permit its construction. Some, as we are so frequently reminded, was not built in a day.

The Last Post

Perhaps it was too good to last. Man and His World in Montreal last year undoubtedly lacked the sparkle and inspiration of the one-and-only Expo 67. The location was the same. So too were the buildings. The interiors had changed, although similarities remained, and there was even repetition of the best that went before — like the Czech presentation of Laterna Magika at La Ronde. But it was not quite the same; it had to do more with nostalgia than with the substance of the original thing. Now the word from Montreal is that Man and His World will not be presented this year. Plagued all along by financial troubles, the whole Expo — Man and His World concept is no more. Montreal itself has other financial difficulties too, and there is talk of Mayor Drapeau, whose inspiration the big show was, resigning. Still, Expo will be something to remember.

No Immediate Policy Change

U.S. and Red China Will Resume Talks in Warsaw Feb. 20

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canadian officials seem to believe that President Nixon was less negative than he may have appeared Monday in saying that, until some changes occur on Red China's part, "I see no immediate prospect of any change in our policy."

The new Republican president in fact left his options open. It is believed here, by noting that Red China and the U.S. will resume their long-postponed periodic meetings Feb. 20 at Warsaw.

As Nixon put it, after acknowledging American political pressure for warming up relations with Red China and an "interest" in other countries to establish relations:

"We look forward to that meeting. We will be interested to see what the Chinese Communist representatives have to say at that meeting, whether new changes of attitude on their part on major substantive issues may have occurred."

The New York Times found this the most disappointing section" of Nixon's first press conference. It said the sentiments "must disappoint all who realize that normalization of Washington-Peking relations is a prerequisite to a lasting and durable peace."

The Washington Post agreed that this "embraces of the status quo is sure to disappoint the many Americans looking for . . . flexibility in Washington's China policy." But it says the Russians may have been prevailed" and Nixon was non-committal about recent moves by other Western countries to approve China's admission to the United Nations.

Italy's government has said it intends to recognize Red China.

Canada has said it is ready to open discussions on Red China's about recognition—or try to—at a capital and date yet to be determined.

Belgium has also indicated it may take the plunge soon. Japan, regarded as the real present and future Asian powerhouse, always has the subject under consideration for trade and other reasons.

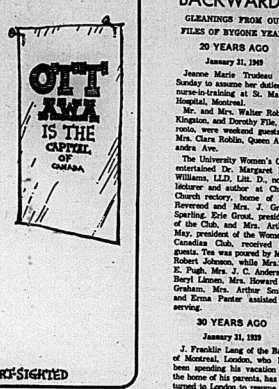
Canadian sources say the subject of Red China is discussed with American counterparts routinely and that the state department is under no illusions of the Canadian intent.

"But what really is involved now is what happens to Taiwan," says an official. When France recognized Red China a few years ago, the problem of the off-shore island Nationalist regime of Chiang Kai-shek was solved when Taipei—Mayor Formosa—broke off relations with Paris.

Formosa has indicated it will do the same with Canada and Italy if they recognize Red China and, as the official said, "nobody wants that to happen."

Nixon said Monday that Red China continues to call for exploiting the Nationalist Chinese from the United States and that the Nationalists have "as I think most know, been a member of the international community and have met their responsibilities without any question over these past few years."

But the issue of Formosa has poisoned Red China-U.S. relations, and been the chief barricade in Red China's international isolation, since the mid-1950s.



Evidence that Nixon has a more open mind on Red China than indicated comes from other sources.

Some politicians argue that it makes sense to negotiate with communists by isolating Red China with the Soviet Union as the third major power—one that it vastly suspicious of what the Russians do.

Japan is another factor. Premier Sato said that, when added urgings from leading newspapers to avoid becoming isolated with the U.S. in refusing to recognize Peking, that his government "will keep the various doors for contact open . . . in the expectation of a change in Communist China's attitude."

That parallels the Nixon pledge on taking office to seek an "open world . . . in which no people, great or small, will live in angry isolation."

Legal Confusion

Degrees of Murder

Windsor Star

There is some confusion about the way murder cases are being conducted under the new rules of capital and non-capital murder. Then, manslaughter follows in order of precedence.

Capital murder involves the killing of such persons as police officers, prison guards and so on.

Non - capital murder involves the slaying of some ordinary citizen.

Manslaughter includes the killing of someone in a fracas or in some other incident that starts with a row or argument and ends up in a death.

There has been some distress because persons considered killers have been given such light sentences they are deemed little more than a hard spank. However, if the Crown has a case that is not too strong, and the accused is willing to plead guilty to manslaughter, that plea is frequently accepted. There is always the chance that a jury might bring an acquittal on a murder charge. Then, the accused would be scot-free.

There are usually good reasons for the acceptance of a guilty plea on a lesser charge. Even though the Crown might be sure the accused is guilty, the evidence may not be enough to convict of murder.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Four spans of the 2,000-foot Duplessis Bridge across the St. Maurice River at Trois-Rivieres on the main Montreal-Quebec highway collapsed 18 years ago today —in 1951. Four men in automobiles plunged to their deaths.

1907 — Timothy Eaton, founder of the T. Eaton Company, died in Toronto.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today—in 1944—the United States Navy announced the sinking of 14 Japanese ships in the Pacific in recent submarine operations. Allied infantry and tanks broke through German defences north of Cassino. Italy's Chinese troops reported they had eliminated a Japanese regiment in North Burma.

France Woos Quebec

Kingston Whig - Standard

Deliberate and calculated insults to the Canadian Government are now a normal aspect of Franco relations with France. The trouble started when President de Gaulle began treating ministers of the provincial government of Quebec as if they were representing a sovereign state. Special invitations to these provincial members to attend international conventions under French auspices, in the process deliberately ignoring the Dominion Government were followed by an insolent speech which de Gaulle delivered on Canadian soil calling for "freedom" for Quebec.

The most recent of these incidents is an agreement concerning a joint Franco-Quebec telecommunications satellite project. Quebec Minister of Education, Jean-Guy Cardinal, went to Paris to sign this agreement. While there he was given even higher precedence than the genuine head of the government of a foreign country, Keith Holyoake, Prime Minister of New Zealand, who was paying an official visit to Paris at the same time.

Letters to the Editor

Rural Schoolchildren Lack Opportunities Even Under County System

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Regional government has partially arrived in the form of newly created area boards of education, a change which most people have accepted with mixed feelings of relief and anxiety. The results of this change in the organizational structure of education has yet to be felt.

My main interest at this time is the educational opportunities available to our children who live in rural areas. At this time I feel that they have been and still are discriminated against. They do not have the facilities, or staffs with specialized training as do our city or urban schools. Nor do they have the cultural advantages, and furthermore they do not have kindergartens to introduce them to the school setting or to break the home ties. We are told time and again by educators of some repute that the influences of life felt by our children up to the age of six do much to shape their destiny, and that if they are given no educational or cultural training up to that age favorable damage occurs and unrecoverable time is lost.

I am also told by informed sources that the present system of setting Grade 1 in our country schools and from lower-income homes leaves nothing of how to hold a pencil, cut out or color a picture or to open a book properly. Those who begin Grade 1 in our town and city schools, however, have had proper instructional opportunities long before, i.e. nursery schools, kindergarten, etc.

The Hon. Wm. Davis, Minister of Education, in his report to the Legislative Assembly said, and I quote from his annual statement: New Directions in Education. "I cannot stress too strongly that the m's purpose behind the proposed reorganization is to establish educational jurisdictions capable of extending to every child opportunity to all boys and girls of this province." Only time will tell how true this statement is, meanwhile can it be true that country children are a forgotten class, that in this time of crying for civil rights they are being discriminated against?

Money is the first excuse offered for the vast differences between country and other educational opportunities — Nonsense, what does a child know of money. Education is a provincial matter and as the minister said, there should be "... equal educational opportunity', this surely means regardless of whether our children are in city, urban or rural schools.

Is there a shortage of teachers? Then why can't learned yet "unqualified" teachers be used to fill the gap for now? Why are our country children treated as second-class citizens in fair-minded Ontario?

MRS. R. INGLEBY,
Coe Hill.

'Majority Favor Plaza Project—Why the Delay,' Asks Belleville Citizen

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Two points of the IGA protest on the new shopping plaza leave the people of the city of Belleville completely bewildered.

One is the fact that this plaza has been approved in writing by the planning board, the Mayor and council, the community associations of Parkdale and Hillcrest and the labor council. At least 98 per cent of the people of Belleville say they want this new development for the jobs, taxes and prosperity it will bring to this city.

Development No. 1 is "How can the will of the majority of a city be expressed by its Mayor and council be defied by a company which does not even pay taxes to the city which supplies its water and the bulk of its trade?"

In recent years several large service firms have moved in to Belleville in several fields without protest or objection from local small businesses.

Development No. 2 is "If small business has neither the right nor the power to stifle competition or restrain trade, why should this privilege be extended to a powerful and influential company?"

If the will and desires of the people of this city are defied and trampled I believe an aroused public will express itself loud and clear in the next provincial election.

Eastview Re-named Vanier

Hamilton Spectator

The Ottawa suburb of Eastview has been renamed Vanier in honor of the late Governor-General Georges P. Vanier.

Place- names should mean something. They should have historic roots or, at the very least, be descriptive or so unusual as to be appealing (as in the case of Medicine Hat). Eastview meant nothing.

More Canadian communities should be renamed. Few of our political leaders, for example have their names on our nation's map. The same with governors-general. Other than a few parks, schools, streets, mountains, ships, and a couple of towns, nothing of consequence reminds Canadians of pre-Confederation stalwarts.

It's about time a few places with such trite names as Eastview were given names of Canadiana consequence.

More Iraqi Hangings Possible

BAGHDAD (Reuters) — More Iraqis will go on trial accused of spying for Israel and more public hangings could result, a government minister warned Thursday night.

Iraqi Information Minister Abdullah Salloum a l - Samarrai said trials will start when an investigation is completed toreports that spies are planning more acts of sabotage. He did not say how many men are involved in the new investigation.

A government which hanged 14 men is capable of hanging more, he told a news conference.

If Israel continues to supply arms and funds to its men in Iraq, "we will punish without mercy those who tamper with the country's security, irrespective of their religious beliefs," he said.

The semi-official Cairo newspaper Al Ahram said today that a message had been received by President Nasser of Egypt from Vlad Communist party General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev. The message concerned a meeting the Kremlin leaders held earlier this week on the Middle East. The contents of the message were not revealed.

Alexander Shelepin, a member of the Soviet party politburo currently in Cairo with a trade mission, delivered the message to Nasser and discussed its contents with him, the paper said. The editor of Al Ahram, anticipating the meeting of the U.S. National Security Council on the Middle East in Washington Saturday, urged President Nixon not to pursue the policies of former president Johnson in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Toronto Stock Market

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market edged up in heavy mid-morning trading today. All four major indexes were higher.

In industrials, Peel-Elder gained 2¼ to 34½, Domtar 1¼ to 16, Lambton Loan 1 to 9¾, MacMillan Bloedel ⅛ to 35 and Revenue Properties ⅛ to 12¼.

Several of the heaviest traders advanced after reporting higher annual earnings. Stelco Steel was up ¼ to 17¾, Trans-Canada Pipe Lines ¾ to 40¼ and Dofasco ⅜ to 25¼.

Falconbridge dropped 7⅛ to 119 after the company said it expects to report an 11 per cent decline in profits for 1968. The stock had been climbing in anticipation of a substantial increase in profits.

Trading in Great-West Life's issue has been suspended by the Ontario and Quebec securities commissions at the company's request until after its annual meeting to be held Feb. 4.

The stock last traded Thursday at 136½, up 19 on the day. The suspension follows a takeover bid for Great-West Life announced Wednesday by Great West Saddlery.

Trading continued in Great West Saddlery, which fell 1¼ to 20¼.

In the base metal section, Aetna Investments rose 50 cents to $5.00, Rio Algom ¼ to 29½ and Patino ⅜ to 32¾.

Among western oils, Canadian Superior was up ⅛ to 62 and Asamera ⅜ to 30¾.

Small oil companies with interests in the Wollaston Lake uranium area of northeast Saskatchewan traded actively. Mill City jumped 25 cents to $4.25, Dynamic 15 cents to $3.65 and Permo 14 cents to $1.80.

On index, industrials gained .39 to 191.76, gols .32 to 238.42, base metals 1.07 to 120.00 and western oils 1.49 to 253.85. Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,515,000 shares compared with 1,863,000 at the same time Thursday.

The exchanges posted moderate losses in heavy trading Thursday after advancing to record levels during the previous six trading sessions.

THE . . . Free $-$786

The industrial index fell .60 to 191.371. Volume, the largest since Jan. 3, was 7,111,000 shares compared with 4,948,000 Wednesday.

Heavy turnover in the mining section, which declined with the rest of the market, boosted the total share volume.

Brokers said they were not surprised at the general weakness, and thought the market was pausing for breath.

Heavy speculation in seasoned industrials and mining and oil stocks has been boosting prices generally. It has also led to erratic movements in the market which, according to analysts, makes the immediate outlook hard to predict.

Investors Overseas Services Management, first listed Wednesday, dropped 3¾ to 110¾. Life Investors 1¼ to 11¾, Canadian Imperial Bank ¾ to 21¾ and Chemcell ¾ to 11¾.

Among the most active industrials, Revenue Properties gained ⅝ to 12 and Hardee Farms 25 cents to $2.00.

Trading resumed in Great-West Life, which leaped 19 to 136½, and also in Great West Saddlery which declined 2¼ to 21½.

Trading in both stocks was halted for a day and a half pending the announcement and clarification of Great West Saddlery's takeover bid for Great-West Life.

In a bid worth more than $170,000,000, Great West Saddlery said it will offer Canadian shareholders in Great-West Life $20 in cash plus six shares in Great West Saddlery for each share held.

Fog Hits the Quinte Area

Township Roads Still Slippery

Township roads remained in an extremely slippery condition and a number of school buses in the Quinte area were again cancelled today following two days of freezing rain and rain.

And even main travelled highways were treacherous in spots as a result of icy patches caused by water seepage turned to ice by last night's colder temperatures.

Provincial police at Belleville said that even Highway 2 both east and west of the city was treacherous in spots with several accidents of a minor nature reported.

On Highway 7 west of Marmora, a large transport slithered into the ditch as it went out of control on a slippery section of roadway near the Deloro turnoff.

Until road conditions improve, police warned motorists to stay off township roads unless driving was absolutely necessary.

Because of the still slippery condition of these roads many school buses were forced to cancel their regular runs although routes using the main highways were completed.

In the past two days a total of 1.28 inches of rain or freezing rain has fallen over the Quinte district, causing roadside ditches to fill and creeks to run full. The rain has also served to increase the volume of water coursing down the Moira.

In the city public works crews have been busy unplugging storm drains to allow the water to get away. Also a few flooded basements were reported.

Adding to the overall driving hazard, fog late yesterday afternoon descended over the Quinte district, drastically reducing visibility.

It was the same fog conditions that had closed the Montreal and Toronto airports for two days.

Locally the fog condition remained until about eight p.m. when suddenly the rain ceased and the fog lifted.

But it seems better weather is in the offing for the Quinte area.

The forecast is for clearing weather and colder temperatures.

Rebekah Lodge 254 Marks 45th Birthday

NAPANEE — The Queen of Sheba Rebekah Lodge, No. 254, held its 45th birthday party on Monday.

Of the 38 members present at its birth, five of the younger members were at the 45th birthday: Mrs. Beatrice Thompson—Miss Jean and Miss Myrtle Holden, and Mr. and Mrs Percy Vine. Mrs. Kathleen Huffman and Mrs. Beatrice VanDusen who met well enough to climb the two flights of stairs to the Argyll Lodge rooms, I.O.O.F. where meetings are held.

Miss Myrtle Russell, one of the charter members, takes pride in the records of the Queen of Sheba Lodge, No. 254, which she has kept over the years, and has furnished the details of that eventful Monday afternoon, Dec. 28, 1924, when the president of the Rebekah Lodge of Canada, the late Mrs. Sadie Easterbrook of Toronto, instituted the Napanee lodge. That evening Louise Rebekah Lodge, No. 10, Kingston, conferred the Degree, and officers of Queen of Sheba Rebekah Lodge were installed by the District Deputy President, Mrs. Clark of Kingston.

The first elected officers were: Noble Grand, Miss Inez Chapman; Vice Grand, the late Mrs. Helen Douglas; recording secretary, Miss Kathleen Greer (Mrs. Ray Huffman); financial secretary, the late Mrs. Annie Cowing; and treasurer, the late Miss Laura Garrett. The late Mr. M. M. Wilson, P.G.P., was installed as Junior Past Noble of the Lodge; Queen of Sheba Rebekah Lodge, No. 254, is one of seven lodges making up Kingston District No. 3, one of the districts into which the Rebekah Assembly of Ontario is divided. Each year in turn, a Past Noble Grand is recommended to serve the district as District Deputy President, and the Napanee Lodge has had the honor of having seven of its Noble Grands hold this high office: Mrs. Kathleen Huffman, Mrs. Edna McGregor, Mrs. Gladys Reid, Mrs. Beatrice Thompson, Mrs. Edith Tanner, Miss Myrtle Russell, and Mrs. Mary McGaw. Also, the district is proud to have two past presidents of the Rebekah Assembly of Ontario: Mrs. Edith Hall of Napanee, and Mrs. Pauline Taylor of Kingston.

A history of the Lodge was given after which Noble Grand Mrs. Irene Baker conducted the regular meeting, and then called on the five charter members who were present and presented each with a corsage. She also named the two surviving members who were absent. She then introduced the Past Noble Grands who were present and this year's officers, Mrs. Mable Clark, Friendship Club president, was given the honor of cutting the huge, beautifully decorated birthday cake.

A much appreciated program followed, consisting of an accordion solo by Donny Hart; a humorous monologue by Mrs. Marjorie Denison, two songs from "The Sound of Music," with Gale Rogers as soloist, and Mrs. Shirley Sexsmith as accompanist; a piano solo by Mrs. Sexsmith; a vocal solo by Mrs. Kay Sexsmith, accompanied by Mrs. Marjorie Baird; and a funny skit by some members of the Maple Leaf branch of the Women's Institute.

A buffet lunch followed.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

QUINTE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The January meeting of the Quinte Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. K. Vivian, Shannonville with 31 members and two visitors present. The president, Mrs. Clifford Reid opened the meeting and welcomed everyone. She also thanked the hostess for opening her home for the meeting.

Included in the business was recommendation of donation of $5 for the 75th anniversary fund to be sent to head office. Also a card of thanks from Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Vivian for the plant sent to them on the occasion of their 60th wedding anniversary. Mrs. Vivian has been an active member of this Institute for many years.

Mrs. A. Greatrix and Mrs. K. Vivian conveners for Citizenship and Education were in charge of the meeting. Mrs Greatrix chaired the meeting and called on Mrs. R. Atkins to give the Motto "a wise mind grows like a savings account, put a little in at every day." To us the word wisdom demands great respect. The dictionary defines it as knowledge and good judgment based on experience.

This was followed by a sing-song and Mrs. K. Vivian gave a reading.

Mrs. E. Fleming gave an interesting talk on "Citizenship". She told of the many things an immigrant has to do to become a Canadian Citizen, especially having to be able to speak the English Language in order to swear their allegiance to their new country and renounce all allegiance to any other country.

She told of the first white man to come to Canada in the year 1000, he was Lief Ericson who came from the Scandinavian Countries. Then Cartier in 1492. Jacques Cartier founded Hoshaiaga, now Montreal, and in 1774 the Quebec Act was made. In 1867 the British North America Act came into effect.

Mrs. A. Greatrix passed along six New Years' resolutions "Just for today" for six members to read. These resolutions were for each member to live up to."

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Father: "I warned you about running around with that gang of boys. I knew you would get into trouble — but it is, no, you couldn't listen! Now see if you can get yourself out of this mess. It's not my problem."

Father: "I know you realize what your gang did was wrong and someone has to pay for the damage. I'll help you find a way to earn your share of the payments, but it means you will have to work after school and on Saturdays."

If a parent won't help a teen-ager in trouble, who will? A boy should face the consequences of his misdeeds, but his parents should stand beside him if they hope to have his conduct or his character improve.

Institute for Secretarial Development Is Formed

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of women from the capital area, far from basking in their jobs as executive secretaries, decided last fall that other members of their occupation might like some expert hints on how to reach the top.

They put their heads together and came up with the idea for an institute for secretarial development.

The institute was held last fall with the co-operation of the local high school board's adult education division.

Topics ranged from a talk by Robert Wake, assistant professor of psychology at Carleton University, on human relations in business to the doe and don'ts of office fashion by Mrs. Mary Holmes, division secretary for the Industrial Accident Prevention Association.

The course was so successful it was repeated.

But that was right in keeping with what could be expected from this well-organized group of women—a branch of the Association of Administrative Assistants or Private Secretaries.

It's the sort of thing that could, in fact, be expected from any one of the association's 10 branches located in cities in Ontario, Quebec, Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia.

The reason is that one of the association's two main purposes is to promote and conduct such courses through accredited educational institutions.

The other is to establish a national standard of qualification as "administrative assistant" for senior secretarial workers capable of administrative assistance to management.

By administrative assistant, the association means a person whose responsibility, in addition to routine secretarial duties, is concerned with helping management execute policy.

In addition to wide general knowledge, an administrative assistance, in its view, should have an appreciation of the niceties of social conduct, of the broader sense of business and facility in language.

The association, formed in 1951 and incorporated under the province of Ontario, is non-profit, non-sectarian, non-political and is owned and controlled by its members.

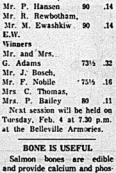
Aside from holding various seminars and workshops on occasion, the association conducts a three-year administrative correspondence course through the University of Toronto.

Marmora IODE Chapter Holds Monthly Meeting

MARMORA — Members of Marmora Chapter, IODE, visited patients at the Robinson Nursing Home in Deloro on Tuesday, Jan. 28, before attending the monthly meeting of the Chapter at the home of Mrs. W. M. Regan. The regent, Mrs. Eugene Brady, presided.

Reports of various conveners showed that gifts of toys and $235.00 had been donated to the Legion Fund at Christmas time, that several needy persons had been assisted with clothing and groceries, and $25.00 had been donated to the Deloro Community Centre.

Mrs. G. J. Meiklejohn and Mrs. Regan are to head a committee to investigate educational projects, to replace the former program of prizes now out-dated.



Volunteers to assist in the annual March of Dimes canvass are Mrs. Regan, Mrs. Meiklejohn and Mrs. Alice Stark.

The membership convener, Mrs. Stark presented one new member, Mrs. Leonard Bicknell, and she was formally inducted into the Chapter.

Plans were tentatively made to hold a bridge and euchre party when the weather improves, with Mrs. Howard Bleecker, Mrs. Mel Borland, and Mrs. A. M. Jones, in charge.

A nominating committee composed of Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Borland and Mrs. Regan were asked to bring in a slate of officers for 1969 to the Feb. meeting.

A donation was voted to the National IODE Travel and Exchange fund, which is a government-supported fund sponsored by the IODE to continue the practice, begun in celebration of Centennial Year, of sending grade eleven students to provincial and federal seats of government for "in depth" study.

Home and School Association News

P.T.A. — MARMORA

MARMORA — The new format of the federation of the C.P.T.A. taking place this year was explained by Rev. Sister Heleoa Pickett, diocesan president of the association, to members in Marmora on Monday.

In her talk on Catholic education, she stressed the mutual obligations of parents, teachers and children. "The purpose of PTA is to bring together in perfect harmony the church, the home and the school with Christ the ultimate goal," she said.

With 42 years of teaching experience and at present Prefect of Discipline in an Ottawa high school, Sister Pickett was well qualified to speak on the training required through the different stages of a child's life, from infancy (period of formation), childhood, (period when they try to establish their own individuality), through the teen-age years (period of storm and stress).

The doctrine of love must be instilled by parents and teachers, and children should be taught that love must be focused on other than oneself," she said.

The speaker was introduced by program convener, Mrs. Michael Maloney, and thanked by spiritual director, Father T. G. Scanlan, and PTA president, Mrs. Bill Meehan, Jr.

During the business meeting, Mrs. Breen O'Connor gave a resume of the meetings she had attended as trustee of the new Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board. A report of its accomplishments will be given at each meeting in an effort to bring parents and teachers in close contact with the board.

Fund-raising project of the local PTA unit will be a pork luncheon on Feb. 14 and one the following month.

SOCIAL And PERSONAL

Previous to the marriage of Mrs. Brian McFaul (nee Donna-Rae Row) she was honored at a miscellaneous shower given by Joyce Wood and Sylvia Brooks at a crystal shower given at the home of Mrs. H. Connor, Carrying Place with Miss Vetha Connor as hostess and Miss Sandy Dempsey as co-hostess.

Everett Fitzgibbon, Lewis Street is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital following leg surgery.

Widow Needs Social Guidance

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I am 34 and have recently been widowed. We were married for 10 years. We have no family.

Please give me some direction as to how to guide myself socially. I am having difficulty in regaining my equilibrium. — At A Loss.

Dear Loss: It's not the simplest thing in the world to accept single status after several years of marriage. The couples who have enjoyed you together aren't quite the same when it comes to enjoying you separately!

Without meaning to, they may show their own floundering attempts to classify you. Some will end up by just not including you in their social evenings from now on. I'm sorry to say. You don't fit.

When you have recovered from the first rude shock of loss, it's just as well to take some action of your own toward a new order of things. An older woman, with the means, took a lengthy cruise. Ooh not so wealthy may nevertheless discover a stimulating new group of friends by enrolling in an extension course at the local college or vocational school.

Is there a current affairs group at your "Y" or community centre? Go on, try something. Then let's hear from you again.

Dear Doris: We are being married in May. Both my fiance's family and my family live in small centres and a long way from the city where we work and where we met each other.

The wedding is being held back in my home town, but Bob and I have made a lot of friends in the city, not known to either of our families, and we want them to come.

My understanding is that the bride's parents are supposed to divide the list in half giving one half to the groom's family and inviting the others from among relatives and close friends of the bride's family.

Does this leave our new-found circle of friends our own age out in the cold, as it were? — Puzzled.

Dear Puzzled: By no means. Weddings are family occasions, and the list is traditionally divided down the middle, but your desires and your groom's are always consulted.

A recent trend is to divide the list into three parts (not necessarily equal), one for the bride's family, one for the groom's family, and one for the bride and groom.

These contemporaries of yours will prize their invitations and some will become lifelong friends. Might well turn up again at your Silver Wedding, with some happy memories to share.

Ann Landers

Date Has Habit Of 'Picking Up' Things

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been dating Joyce for six weeks. She's attractive, not educated, but she really knows how to make a guy feel important.

ANN LANDERS

On our third date Joyce told me she had been in a detention home for picking up items in a department store. Last week we visited my brother in the hospital. The next day the nurse called to ask if I had taken Hal's watch "for safekeeping." It was on the night table and now they can't find it.

Last night when I got home from a date with Joyce, my wallet was missing. I'm not concerned about the $40. It's the credit cards and driver's licence I need.

I could fall in love with Joyce if I let myself go. So far we've just exchanged a few kisses. I hate to think what I'm thinking. Any advice? — NO I.D.

DEAR NO: If you've been exchanging kisses with that girl I suggest you count your teeth. Joyce is either a kleptomaniac or a thief, probably the latter, since kleptomaniacs steal items they have no use for. Before you propose, I hope you will consider what life would be like for the kiddies when their mother is in the klink.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 15 and already 38-34-38. My aunt gives me her nice clothes when she gets tired of them. In the last batch was a beautiful cocktail sweater. I took off the beads and it looks great. The only thing is, Ann, the sweater is cut sort of low. It's not too tight and I am careful not to bend over, but like I said, it has a low neckline.

I wore the sweater to school last week and two of my best friends said it looked "cheap." I don't know if they are jealous or if they said it for my own good. It's a very expensive sweater and I'd like to keep wearing it, but I don't want to wreck my reputation. Can you advise me? — JACKPOT JANE.

DEAR JACKPOT: Wear a white blouse under the sweater and you'll even be able to bend over if you want to. Cocktail necklines are not appropriate for school.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a girl, 16, not beautiful but better than average looking. Everyone says I have a nice personality. The trouble is I don't get asked out because I live in the dump. This neighborhood is so crummy you can't believe it.

Several guys at school seem to like me but the minute I give them my address they disappear forever. Mom and Dad are divorced and we have trouble paying the rent, so please don't tell me we should move. I know we should but we can't afford to. Just tell me what a girl is supposed to do when she can't get dates because she lives in a slum. — CHICKEN POX.

DEAR CHICKEN: Many a gal who lives in a swanky suburb has given her address to a boy and never heard from him again. Boys are interested in good company and they'll go any place to date a girl who is appealing. The problem is you, Toots, not your address. Take inventory and find out what's missing.

Fish Fillet for Dinner

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Every week I buy a package of fish fillets and am always hunting for different ways to prepare them. I have your recipes for Chicken Florentine and Tuna Florentine and am wondering if I could adapt them to Fish Fillets. — Mamie C.

ANSWER: Of course you can.

FISH FILLETS FLORENTINE (serves 3 or 4)

1 pound fish fillets — fresh or frozen two 10 - oz. fresh or frozen packages spinach (or 12-oz. packages mixed vegetables or frenched beans)
½ cup water
½ teaspoon celery salt or celery
¼ cup chopped onion (or bottled flakes)
1 whole clove
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup 10 percent cream
1 tablespoon pickle vinegar or lemon juice
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
paprika for topping
grated cheese (optional)

Cook spinach until barely tender in water which clings to leaves (or cook fresh frozen mixed vegetables in ½ cup boiling water). Drain but reserve ½ cup liquid. Spread spinach (or vegetables) over bottom of shallow casserole.

Measure into large frying pan the ½ cup water, celery salt, onion and clove, bring to boil and add fish fillets cut into serving size pieces. Cover and poach (simmer) 2 or 3 minutes. Transfer fillets and remaining contents of frying pan and arrange over vegetables. In a saucepan blend butter and flour and stir in cream and reserved ½ cup vegetable liquid until thick. Stir in vinegar or lemon juice, nutmeg, salt and pepper. Pour top with paprika and grated cheese — about ½ cup — if desired. Bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 10 minutes.

'Further Period of Strong Expansion' Is Forecast by Benson

OTTAWA (CP) — A "further period of strong expansion" is in prospect for Canada this year, Finance Minister Edgar Benson predicted confidently Thursday night.

But at the same time he warned Canadians against trying to take too much from the economy.

Since the Liberals took office in 1963, he told the Commons, there has been such a "tremendous expansion" of the economy and "such a wonderful feeling of optimism" that Canadians have come to feel there is no limit to what they can eat of the economy.

They must realize they cannot take out more than they put in through increased productivity, or prices will be sure to increase, he said.

Mr. Benson's review of the economy climaxed a two-day debate, the first of the new "opposition days," pegged to Conservative, and NDP motions of non-confidence in government handling of the economy.

Both challenges were easily beaten by the majority Liberal government.

Although the two-day debate marked the first test under new procedure rules of the opposition-days system, by which the opposition picks the topic for debate, interest flagged toward the end.

At one point Thursday only eight of the 107 opposition members were in the chamber.

But a fair showing turned up in the evening to heckle or applaud Mr. Benson.

The finance minister responded with a scathing criticism of the critics, and suggested the "relative lack of interest in the debate indicated most members are satisfied with the governments economic performance."

He said Opposition Leader Stanfield had offered only platitudes, the Creditistes "the routine folklore of the economic bogeyman and the NDP the "familiar economic superstition . . . that we spend our way out of inflation.

In his own economic review, Mr. Benson was a picture of optimism.

Since a temporary easing of expansion in 1967, he said, the economy has re-established a "strong forward momentum" which is expected to continue.

It appeared that the gross national product for 1968 would surpass the predicted eight-per-cent rise and reach a record level of $87,000,000,000.

Latest monthly unemployment figures had fallen below five per cent, helping to confirm a declining trend.

Productivity had risen significantly and ability to compete in main foreign markets had also improved. A remarkable upsurge in 1968 exports had produced a highly favorable trade balance.

This, coupled with the continued inflow of investment capital, had reinforced the basic strength of the dollar.

Furthermore, said Mr. Benson, all indications pointed to strong and better balanced growth in 1969.

A "vigorous upturn in business capital of about eight or nine per cent was expected, with related impact on employment."

Other elements of demand in the economy remained strong, underlining the need to restrain demand and combat continued inflation.

Farmers' Federation Will Seek Lower Seaway Tolls

QUEBEC (CP) — Canadian farmers plan to seek a lowering of St. Lawrence Seaway shipping tolls and amendments to newly-legislated postal rate increases after adopting resolutions on the issues at the annual meeting of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture.

The resolutions were unanimously approved by representatives from farmers' associations across the country at the close of a three-day convention Thursday night.

The resolution dealing with the St. Lawrence Seaway says the waterway is of "immense importance" to the movement of Prairie farm produce to overseas markets. Prairie farmers would be severely affected by proposed toll increases.

It adds that the president of the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority "announced in a recent appearance before a committee of the House of Commons that the seaway intends to seek increases in tolls in 1970."

The resolution authorizes the CFA to oppose any increase in tolls and to "urge the federal government to work toward an actual reduction in charges" for use of the waterway.

The resolution on postal rates asks the government not to implement "as presently worded" Bill C-116 raising postal rates for newspapers and periodicals.

The impact of the bill on farm publications would result in increased mailing cost ranging between 230 per cent to 2,000 per cent, it says.

The farm press was a vital tool in farm production and management since it kept farmers informed of technological innovations.

No Need to Start War With Ottawa--Cardinal

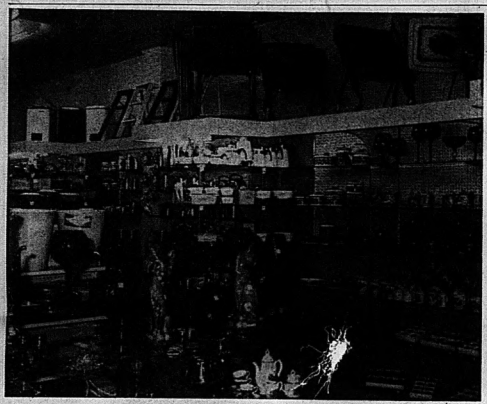
QUEBEC (CP)—Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal said Thursday that "a war with Ottawa should not be started" over letters he signed in Paris during a five-day visit to France last week.

Mr. Cardinal told a news conference that the letters, which had been forwarded to Ottawa, did not involve "international treaties or agreements."

They were merely "letters of entente or intent."

Mr. Cardinal said the "substance" of the three letters was:

—Confirmation of a French offer to send researchers and professors to help organize the University of Quebec.



—Agreement by the French and Quebec governments to set up a commission to spur French investment in Quebec.

—Provision in the field of satellite communications for an exchange of technicians and continuation of studies on the possibility of a France-Quebec satellite.

The education minister could not disclose the contents of the letters because, he said, this was "not done" in diplomacy.

Mr. Cardinal said Quebec was prepared to discuss the letter on satellites with Ottawa. A federal-provincial conference scheduled for Feb. 10-12 in Ottawa might provide the opportunity for such consultation.

But he said "the other two letters are under the exclusive jurisdiction of Quebec."

Fur Business Still Alive And Booming in Quinte Area

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

TWEED — Once upon a time Canada was just a business in the wilderness: The fur business.

That was 300 years ago. Now the country is a nation, its latest product a sophisticated space satellite.

But the fur trade is still alive and thriving with the Quinte district still busily subscribing a share to the ancient commerce.

In fact, 1969 happens to be one of happier years on recent record say those in the know — the trappers and buyers.

Twice a month during the biazy weeks of winter they rendezvous at the department of lands and forests ranger station here in a scene that shapes up like an instant replay of history.

On the block are the pelts that first drew the white man to Canada. The beaver is still in the dominant supply that made it a national symbol.

"There's been a good supply of beaver this season — and prices are even better," says Vernie Davis, the Roblin trader who is one of the district's biggest buyers.

Prices this year for a good beaver pelt can range anywhere up to $40 — depending on size and quality, he says. That's $7.68 better than 1968 — a bumper year in the business.

Mixed with the beaver are slighter offerings of mink, otter and muskrat.

A good mink pelt can bring up to $25, an otter $40 while the prices for the common muskrat start at around a dollar.

Trading is in cash — a far cry from the simple, if cagey, hyter of the earliest days of the trade.

However, fur is still tied to a basic historic and fluctuating fact — fashion.

As a fashion it's thriving, says Vernie Davis.

"It's a prestige thing — these days it's even back in fashion for men."

(Recall Prime Minister Trudeau's Grey Cup outfit?)

For all that, it still is one of the least-known basic industries in the Quinte district where thinking more and more is oriented to industrialization.

Yet, it is one of the few highly-urbanized regions which still can count the fur-trade as an economic reality — albeit a minor one.

Last year alone, Vernie Davis estimates, beaver pelts taken in the area brought in more than $300,000 to local trappers.

In the immediate Tweed area, lands and forests officials report, there are about 125 licenced trappers.

For many, in the district's northern reaches, fur trade is a necessary part of their annual income and they've been trapping all their lives.

It's a hard-won existence still closely tied to the land, following traditional formulas. In summer, there's lumbering and small farming.

In the gaunt winter bush of the northern townships they turn to trapping.

Eventually, they join the steady trickle that moves in here every second Wednesday, engaging in a business activity so old it is almost ritual.

Besides Vernie Davis, who sells his pelt purchases to Montreal buyers for eventual international distribution, there is still the oldest institution of them all on hand to bargain — The Hudson's Bay Company.

Next year will be the 300th anniversary of its charter, but its presence is as alive as ever — even at such a smaller trading post as this.

The company buyer now awaits in a truck that acts-ually is a mobile office, small lettering identifying it simply as The Bay.

The pelts are measured for girth, scrutinized for quality, inside the ranger station they are stamped with the official seal of the department of lands and forests.

The season now is passing its peak and will end in March.

Its annual span is brief — about three months.

It is still a major industry and its survival, with most of its business ritual still intact, is spectacular by itself.

EMO Presents Brief

TRENTON — The location of airfields along with the history of river flooding in Belleville indicates to the Emergency Measures Organization the necessity for Quinte area residents to plan for natural disasters.

In a six page brief which the organization presented to Trenton council recently, proper procedures for residents of Belleville, Trenton and area in case of disaster are outlined.

Communication to the public is the most important item as far as the organization is concerned. Telephones at crucial points will be backed up by two-way radios with a control station and two mobile units at headquarters in Belleville.

"The principal means of informing the public is through the local radio station," states the brief.

Responsible for the control of emergency operations will be elected officials of the municipality. Those involved in emergency operations in some sort of directoral capacity will be identified by a white handkerchief fastened to the shoulder or headgear.

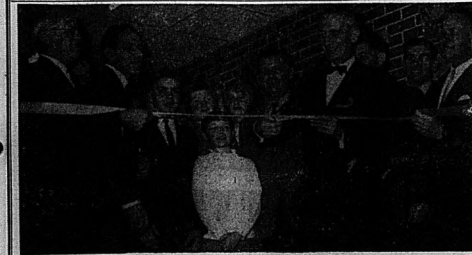
But once disaster strikes, what can the ordinary citizen do to aid in better handling of the situation?

The organization believes that are certain procedures that should be carried out by each citizen.

Perhaps the most important is to stay away from the disaster zone and not to call the department or services involved as phone lines should be kept open.

These departents that are apt to be involved in an emergency should have additional telephone circuits.

And for those that are searching for operation headquarters, it is identified by a white flag in the day and a flashing amber light by night.



Canadian Forces Base Trenton has its own emergency service for downed planes and this will automatically be put into effect to aid civil authorities.

More Ice Sought

STAFF — The hunt for more ice facilities for Belleville continued last night at a Recreation Centre meeting attended by 75 minor sports and city representatives invited to discuss the issue.

The net result was the formation of a seven-member committee which will investigate the cost, location, and other factors involved in establishing a second indoor arena for the city.

The committee members, who will report to a meeting open to the general public at a later date, are: Dick Hurst, organizer of last night's meeting; minor hockey representatives Dave Coates, Bill O'Sullivan, Tom Cavanagh, and Mrs. Doreen Meagher, Loyalist College student Fred Robinson, and King George Public School student Richard Sharp.

Citizens Build Four Room School Addition in Trenton

By ROBERT AVERY
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — "Maybe you will appreciate this building more than those who get their schools for nothing."

With these words Russell Rowe, MLA for Northumberland, summed up the feeling that dominated the opening of the four room addition to the Trenton Christian School last night.

In an address to those at the opening, Mr. Rowe said it was a great accomplishment when citizens can build such an addition to a school.

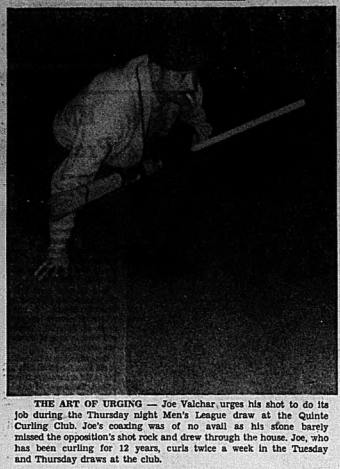
"Because of the effort and feeling put into the construction of schools such as these," he said, "I feel the students that graduate from here have something that don't come out of our public schools."

In the spring of last year construction began with a $60,000 budget. On completion the board had done the job for $53,300.

But there were many obstacles to overcome. First a $12,000 loan was procured. Next $6,700 was raised in a fund drive and then came a walkathon which netted $4,300.

A $35,000 mortgage and more donations completed the fund and there was enough money to go ahead. Volunteer labor helped keep the expense figure well below the budget limit.

But it was the spirit of the people that did the job that impressed both Mr. Rowe and Trenton Mayor James MacDonald.



"It was a lucky day for Trenton when you people came to this area," said Mayor MacDonald.

"We have a lot to learn from you — you wanted a larger school and you literally built the addition yourself."

The need for an addition, however, was immediate as last year classes were being held in the basement of the school. Now school officials believe this addition should hold them for some time.

The school began in 1956 with 65 pupils. Now it has 204 pupils who take advantage of the newly expanded eight room unit.

"It's something all of you can be proud," concluded the mayor.

THE ART OF URGING — Joe Valchar urges his shot to do its job during the Thursday night Men's League draw at the Quinte Curling Club. Joe's coaxing was of no avail as his stone barely missed the opposition's shot rock and drew through the house. Joe, who has been curling for 12 years, curls twice a week in the Tuesday and Thursday draws at the club.

Think It's Hard to Hit a Golf Ball?

NEW YORK (AP) —As if the golf ball isn't hard enough to hit now, the powers of the game may make it smaller.

However, you should be able to hit it farther and it ought to be more fun to play, says Keith Mackenzie, secretary of the Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews—but he can't guarantee it.

Mackenzie Thursday talked with officials of the U.S. Golf Association about the golf ball.

"Our aim I to arrive at a ball that is more pleasurable for the average golfer to play," Mackenzie said. "We are not concerned about the Arnold Palmers and Bill Caspers. We are concerned about the millions of golfers—70 per cent of all of them, in fact—who have handicaps of 17 and above.

"Our purpose is not to improve the score—the players must do that themselves. It. is to improve the enjoyment of the game.

The British and Americans play a different size ball. The American specify that a ball cannot be less than 1.68 inches in diameter. The R and A code holds that the minimum diameter shall be 1.62 inches.

The weight of the balls is the same—1.62 ounces.

Now the countries are trying to arrive at a uniform ball, the only area in which their rules do not agree. The British have come up with a ball 1.65 inches in diameter.

"I sincerely hope that we arrive at a compromise ball," Mackenzie said. "Not for our own sakes, but for the sake of the rest of the world. There is a golf explosion, and other countries must be confined."

In international matches, Americans, competing in the British Open and Ryder Cup matches, always use the smaller British ball because they say they hit it 20 to 30 yards farther off the tee. In matches in this country, the British prefer the American ball. They contend they can finesse and put it better.

Hawks Hit Year's Highest Goal Total

By SCOTT BUTTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Coach Keith Allen of Philadelphia Flyers probably wanted to go home after the first four minutes of Thursday night's National Hockey League game against Chicago Black Hawks.

Stan Mikita and Chico Maki scored for Chicago within the first four minutes with the Black Hawks playing shorthanded.

No doubt Allen and 13,005 fans at the Spectrum in Philadelphia realized the Flyers were in for a rough evening. And their fears were justified as the Black Hawks went on to win 12-0, the most one-sided defeat ever handed an expansion team.

Mikita opened the scoring against goaltender Doug Favell at 2:05 with Dennis Hull in the penalty box. Maki connected at 3:07 with Matt Ravlich serving a penalty.

The Black Hawks, who scored nine goals in their last outing, scored four more times in the first period against Favell. Bernie Parent replaced Favell and allowed three goals in each of the second and third periods.

Parent and Favell combined to make 37 saves while Dennis DeJordy of Chicago also made 37 to pick up the shutout.

The Western Divsion's most one-sided loss previously had been Minnesota's 10-3 defeat by Boston. The 12 goals were the most scored by one team in a game this season.

Jim Pappin led Chicago with three goals while Dennis Hull, Doug Mohns and Eric Nesterenko scored two each. Single goals went to Pit Martin, who also had four assists, Mikita and Maki.

Bobby Hull was held to three assists and is nine points back of Phil Esposito of Boston in the individual scoring race.

In other games Thursday night, Boston Bruins moved eight points ahead of the runner-up Montreal Canadiens in the Eastern Division by outscoring Los Angeles Kings 7-3 and New York Rangers 4-3.

Esposito scored one goal and assisted on another to help Boston stretch its unbeaten string to 16 games. But the key performer for Boston was Derek Sanderson, with three goals.

The Bruins scored six consecutive goals—Sanderson's three and single tallies by Dallas Smith, Glen Sather and Johnny Bucyk. Ed Joyal scored twice for Los Angeles while Bill Flett, Lowell MacDonald and Gordon Labossiere scored once.

New York's victory before 14,736 at St. Louis allowed Emile Francois to remain the only undefeated coach in the NHL. The Rangers, who started their undefeated streak under the ailing Bernie Geoffrion, have five wins and a tie under general manager Francis.

Walt Tkaczuk, Bob Nevin, Vic Hadfield and Rod Gilbert shared the Ranger scoring. Gary Sabourin scored twice for St. Louis and Red Berenson once.

In activity off the ice, Pittsburgh Penguins and Oakland completed a six-player trade. Centre Earl Ingarfield, left winger Gene Ubriaco and defenceman Dick Mattioni went to Oakland while forward-defenceman Bryan Watson, right winger George Swarbrick and defenceman Tracy Pratt went to Pittsburgh.

Nats Falter To Soviets After Leading

OTTAWA (CP) — The Russians clobbered the Canadians 10-4 in a hockey game Thursday night, but it might have been an arm-wrestling contest.

The Russians did it on muscle, as they have on the rest of their undefeated spree in Canada.

The Ottawa-based Eastern National team sneaked off to a 3-1 lead in the first period, but the Russian Nats pounced in the second, outscoring their hosts 8-1.

They added two more without retaliation in the third.

Although both teams did their share of bouncing in a game that featured 24 penalties, the Russians appeared stronger in relentless arm-and-shoulder pressure.

Because there was usually someone close enough to outmuscle them for the puck, the Canadians often found themselves in good position but they couldn't do much about it.

Ted Hargreaves and Jean Cusson scored in the first three minutes for Canada, and despite a 16-6 Russian edge in shots the Canadians were playing even hockey.

By the second period they were wore down, and it was no longer a contest.

Valeraj Kharmamov, Boris Mikhailov, and Yuri Moiseev scored two goals each for Russia, Vladimir Vikulov, Vladimir Petrov, Alexsandr Ragulin, and Boris Mayorov each counted once.

Terry O'Malley and Terry Caffrey scored the Canadians' other goals.

Denis Dupere and Evgeni Melahakov got minors, majors and match penalties for a fight in the second period. Two other fights, between Paul Cadieux and Evgeni Meishakov in the first period, and John Ferguson and Valeri Kharmamov in the third, netted a high-sticking major for Melahakov and minors for the others.

Russia picked up 13 of the penalties, and outshot the Canadians 50-32 before shoot 4,000 fans.

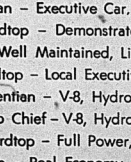
Jack's Chance For Revenge

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Jack Nicklaus didn't win a major golf championship in 1968, but the Ohio golfer hopes to rectify the situation in 1969.

He leads going into the second round of the $150,000 San Diego Open today, with an initial four-under par 68.

Last Monday, in his first tournament of the year, he finished four strokes back of the winner, George Archer, in the Bing Crosby.

His 68 Thursday left him one stroke ahead of Dow Finsterwald.



Billy Casper, biggest money winner in golf last year, was in the heavily-populated 72 bracket as only eight players broke par 36-36—72 on the 6,844-yard Torrey Pines Municipal course.

The other par breakers were Larry Ziegler, Dave Eichelberger and Gene Littler at 70, and Jim Colbert, Hugh Royer and Jerry Abbott at 71.

Top Canadian was George Knudson of Toronto with a 73. Bob Cox Jr. of Vancouver had a 79 and Bob Panasiuk of Windsor, Ont., an 80.

Ask Sandy What's in A Name

TORONTO (CP) — Sandra Post, the precocious blonde from Oakville, is making a name for herself in golf—but the name, at least for commercial purposes, isn't hers.

The mini-skirted miss, chosen Rookie of the Year on the United States women's golf tour last year, was astounded to receive a letter from the U.S. patent office that the name Sandra Post "does not represent any particular living individual."

Sandra is beginning to cash in on her success in professional sport by endorsing sportswear, golf equipment and other products.

Sandra told reporters Wednesday that she learned that almost seven months before she was born in 1948 someone in Florida began using the name Sandra Post for a brand of women's wear and accessories.

The name was registered in 1963, a year before she won her first Canadian junior championship.

Now a Miami law firm has advised a shirt company Sandra is connected with that any attempt to "utilize her name on any products for sale in the United States of America" will cause it to do all that is necessary to protect the client.

Sandra has six commercial contracts and there is one in the works promoting a new line of cars.

Petes, Montreal Close Behind

Junior Hawks Grab Back First Place

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For a 17-year-old rookie from Drummondville, Que., Marcel Dionne of St. Catharines Black Hawks is playing like a veteran in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

The slick centre scored his 25th goal of the season early in the third period Thursday night to give the Black Hawks a 4-3 win over Hamilton Red Wings and move St. Catharines into sole possession of first place in the 10-team series.

Peterborough Petes stayed in contention with a 2-1 victory over Toronto Marlboros and climbed into a second-place tie with idle Montreal Junior Canadiens. Each team has 33 points, two fewer than St. Catharines, but Montreal has five games in hand on the Black Hawks and four over the Petes.

In Hamilton, Dionne's unassisted power-play goal at 3:36 was all the Hawks needed to put them on top.

The five-foot, eight-inch playmaker took the faceoff in the Red Wings zone, stepped around two Hamilton players and flipped a quick shot past goaltender Jim Rutherford.

Dionne also picked up assists on goals by Brian McKenzie and Skeeter Teal to bring his point total to 68 in 34 games. Al McDonough scored the other St. Catharines goal.

Cal Russell, Gord Brooks and Gary Coalter scored for the Red Wings who held a 3-2 lead going into the third period.

The loss left Hamilton in fourth place with 44 points, two more than Niagara Falls Flyers.

Meanwhile, the Petes got solid goaltending from Bruce Landon and a goal by Tony Featherstone at 19:59 of the second period to get by the Marlboros.

Dave Roy, a former Marlboro, scored the other Peterborough goal. Defenceman Steve Durbano had given Toronto a 1-0 lead early in the second period.

Landon, who stopped 21 shots in the game, blocked 15 in the scoreless third period as the Marlboros held a 32-26 edge in shots on goal.

The Marlboros, fighting for a playoff spot, are eighth with 33 points, three more than Ottawa 67s who have a game in hand.

Quinte League Topsy-turvy, Top Teams Beaten

STAFF — Things were topsy-turvy last night in the Quinte Hockey League as the two bottom teams in the four team league upset the two top teams.

Lesgue - leading Aluminum Stars suffered their third loss of the season, a 4-0 drubbing by the cellar-dwelling Belvedere Hotelmen, while third place Central Taxi defeated second-place Stinson's Construction 4-1.

The Hotelmen's fourth win of the season was their second 4-0 whitewashing of the league leading Aluminum Stars. Bob Green shut out the Stars while Larry Marshall fired a pair of goals for the winners. Errol Johnston added a goal and two assists and Larry Stewart added a single goal for Hotelmen.

Doug Bolte with two goals, Ron Meegan with a goal and two assists, and Terry Casselman with a goal and an assist paced the Taximen to their victory.

Bill Genereaux was the only Stinson player to beat Central Taxi netminder Ken Genereaux, who played a strong game between the pipes for the winners.

Mo-Hawk Goalie Faces Acid Test

STAFF — For somebody who should be shell-shocked, Larry Holmes has a remarkably sound record in the 32 OHA Senior "A" games in which he has played in goal for the Belleville Mo-Hawks.

Holmes gets a chance to improve his record tonight when he and his mates seek to continue their playoff hunt in a nine o'clock game with the second place Barrie Flyers at the Belleville Arena.

Holmes has faced an average of more than 36 shots per game, and a grand total of 1,165 shots in his 32 full games to date.

The eye-opener is his 4.3 goals against average which is fifth in the league, and third best for goaltenders who have played more than 20 games.

The Wellington native is the league "iron man," having played more games than any other netminder on the eight-team circuit.

During the Mo-Hawks' current three-game unbeaten streak he has allowed only six goals while the Mo-Hawks have bulged opposition nets 15 times.

The Mo-Hawks have moved into playoff contention with their current streak, and are only two points behind the Kingston Aces in the race for the sixth and last playoff spot in the Senior "A" league.

Mulroney's Win Ensures Top Spot

The undefeated Mulroney's Sunoco team of the Gas House League combined Marysville's 5-4 win over the second place Mustangs and their own 5-1 win over the Wings to clinch first place in the league's 15 game regular schedule.

Mulroney's eleventh consecutive win left them 11 points ahead of the second place Mustangs with only four games remaining in the league's regular schedule.

Bennett and Ford scored a pair of goals each to pace the winners while Smith added a single goal. Babcock replied for the Wings.

Marysville's win moved the club past the Wings into third place in the four team league.

Court in Recess

Pueblo's Dual Command Clouds Ship's Security Efficiency

CORONADO, Calif. (AP) — The question of how much authority Cmdr. Lloyd M. Bucher really had over intelligence operations on his ship seems to be getting a thorough airing before the court of inquiry into the capture of the Pueblo.

The question came into focus as Lieut. Stephen R. Harris, in charge of the Pueblo's intelligence gathering mission, spent two hours in closed-door testimony Thursday and was ordered to return Monday.

The court went into a three-day recess for the weekend at a navy doctor's recommendation to give Bucher a chance to rest.

He testified nearly all of last week and has attended every session, open or closed. In addition, the court of five admirals said it wanted to catch up with administrative chores.

Harris was regarded as a key witness because Bucher testified early in his story of the capture that he had told the 30-year-old lieutenant to destroy material, which fell into the hands of the North Koreans.

The Navy declined to tell about Harris's testimony, saying it was classified in the interest of national defence. But a spokesman said it concerned the "operation and mission" of the Pueblo that Harris was questioned by counsel for the court and Bucher, and that Harris was not warned he was under any suspicion of breaking any navy regulations. Such a warning has been given to Bucher.

Part of how Bucher operated the Pueblo was determined by a division of authority between himself and Harris. While Bucher had complete military command and ultimate responsibility of the ship, he has told the court that the commander-in-chief of the Pacific Fleet "designated that the operational and management control of the research spaces working areas for intelligence be under the command and jurisdiction of Lieut. Harris. . . .

"He did not directly report to me."

Bucher said his limited authority meant:

—"I had to rely on the research department to take care of all my crypto (code) requirements."

—"I was not cleared for some of the materials they (the intelligence working areas) carried."

—"He was never able to observe how Harris conducted drill in destroying secret material in case of capture.

Yet Bucher said he was ultimately responsible for the security of all the classified material on board the Pueblo "because that material was on board my ship."

So when North Koreans opened fire on the Pueblo, Bucher said, "my primary concern was . . . to actually destroy the classified materials."

When he began to feel "that I was not getting a sufficient number of reports to keep me apprised of the situation," he decided to inspect the destruction of classified documents in Harris's intelligence compartments himself.

"There was a steel door located in the research space," Bucher said. "This door was provided with a triple locking system and was necessary because of the security in the spaces."

"I knocked on the door and it was opened to me, I came in, and I noticed on the deck . . . at least three large sea bags . . . dress covers which apparently were full of documents . . . and I presumed they were all classified. . . .

"I was to say the least quite surprised to see the volume of material that was on the deck in this compartment. . . ."

I spoke to Lieut. Harris and I said words to the effect, 'Let's get rid of this material right now.' And he replied that he was getting—that the material was being destroyed and being thrown over the side, and further indicated that crypto materials had been destroyed."

Bucher said he left for a few moments to send messages to his headquarters in Japan, then returned to Harris's compartment and repeated his destruction order.

When he returned to the bridge, Bucher said, he got a telephone call from Harris asking permission to message headquarters that he was not able to complete destruction of all the publications.

Man and His World

Business Leaders Say Decision Too Hasty

MONTREAL (CP)—The closing down of Man and His World is expected to have far-reaching effects on the Montreal business community.

Business leaders agreed Thursday the city's decision to cancel the fair removes immediately one of the causes—though only a small one—of Montreal's increasing financial difficulties.

However, they said, the decision announced Wednesday night will create expansions such as a decrease in tourist and convention dollars, fewer jobs in the Montreal area and larger welfare payments.

They also felt the city was too hasty in deciding to chop the fair after its first season. They said the fair was being operated as any other business and no business is expected to show profits in so short a time. A three-year period would have been more indicative of its performance.

Montreal faced a deficit of nearly $27,000,000 late last year. It increased property taxes by 23 per cent in an effort to remedy this problem.

Man and His World—initially billed as a permanent successor to Expo 67—accumulated a so-called deficit of $5,228,691 during its five-month run in 1968. But much of this amount was put into capital improvements, and now will become a loss.

Rather than risk the possibility of losing another $5,000,000 in 1969 and placing an additional burden on taxpayers, the city sought financial help from Quebec City and Ottawa to keep the fair going.

Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the city's executive committee, said positive advantages were to be derived from the operation of Man and His World for the province of Quebec as well as for Canada as a whole.

But since nothing came of these requests, the Montreal executive committee decided the financial risk of running the fair alone appeared to be too great.

Although La Ronde, the fair's amusement area, will be operated, hotel and tourist officials felt it will not have the drawing power of the full-scale exhibition.

Besides a loss in tourist trade, the fair had about 4,000 employees on its payroll last season, but altogether it provided a livelihood for more than 10,000 persons whose jobs were directly connected with the operation of the exhibition.

Among those provided summer employment were about 3,000 students, whose total payroll amounted to an estimated $3,000,000, and these students will have to seek employment elsewhere.

Donald M. Mumford, president of Hilton of Canada Ltd. and managing director of the huge Queen Elizabeth Hotel, described the cancellation of Man and His World as "a real blow to the hotel and convention industry."

"We counted on the fair to offset losses in tourist and convention business as a result of the 6 per cent provincial sales tax and tax on hotel rooms."

Mr. Mumford said "it is almost inevitable that many hotels, motels and restaurants will suffer and probably have financial difficulties."

Rudy Berger, president of the Montreal Hotel Association and general manager of the Seaway Motor Inn, said the city decision is a "sad blow to Montreal and to the province of Quebec."

He said the step will not only affect the accommodation industry but it will also affect all types of business, such as retail stores, restaurants, transportation and theatres.

"The deficit of some $5,228,691 is misleading when we take into account the tremendous amount of tourist dollars spent in the city and in the province, and revenue derived in the form of sales taxes and increased income taxes."

Samuel Gagne, president of the La Chambre de Commerce du District de Montreal, said, however, the effects would be dampened by the city's already-established position as a tourist centre.

Drapeau Urged to Stay

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal is mourning the loss of Man and His World, but in a massive outpouring of civic emotion residents have pleased with Mayor Jean Drapeau not to resign his office.

Business leaders Thursday agreed the city's decision to cancel the fair this summer removes immediately a minor cause of Montreal's financial difficulties.

Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the city's executive committee, stunned city council Wednesday night with the announcement that Man and His World—successor to Expo 67—will not reopen for its second season. He said no definite decision had yet been made on the 1970 fair.

They Mayor Drapeau said he is reviewing his position as mayor because a climate of austerity that is expected to dominate municipal policies for the next few years is dispossessing him of the instruments he needs to do his job.

Within hours the general public, through radio stations and newspapers, made clear it wanted Mr. Drapeau to remain as mayor of Canada's largest city. City hall was besieged with messages of support and admiration.

In a front-page editorial today, The Gazette says: "Montreal needs Jean Drapeau."

"He has become the mayor of Montrealers in all their infinite varieties. He has led Montreal into its cosmopolitan vocation. He has given the sophistication of the larger view."

One radio station received more than 200 telephone calls, the majority expressing support for the 52-year-old mayor.

While business leaders felt the closure of Man and His World got rid of a financial woe, they agreed there would be repercussions such as lost tourist and convention dollars and fewer jobs in Montreal.

Man and His World accumulated a deficit of $5,228,691 during its five-month run in 1968. But much of this amount was put into capital improvements and now will become a loss.

Rallier than risk the possibility of losing another $5,000,000 in 1969 and placing an additional burden on taxpayers, the city sought—unsuccessfully, as it turned out—sufficient help from Quebec City and Ottawa.

Nixon Orders Battle Plan for War on Washington Crime

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon, following up on his campaign pledge to declare war on crime in this city oppressed by "marauders and criminals," has ordered his attorney-general to draft a battle plan before this week ends.

Rumors are that the anti-crime program may carry a $1,000,000 initial price tag and call for an additional 1,000 to 2,000 policemen for the city that already has more policemen per capita than any other major U.S. city.

Although the escalation of crime is a national problem of increasing concern, the spotlight has been on Washington in particular since the presidential election campaign when a number of Republicans, even more volatile than Nixon, termed it the "crime capital of the world."

But if Nixon and the justice department team hope to make Washington a model of law and order, it will be an uphill grind.

Bank robberies alone ran at the rate of more than one a day in the first 20 days of this year. Over-all, major crime reported for the year ending last November was up 27.9 per cent over the previous year.

Robberies in the month of November were up a staggering 107.3 per cent over the total for November, 1967.

The city population of about 800,000 is almost 70 per cent Negro and their lack of confidence in Nixon was reflected in the scant 18.2 per cent of the presidential vote given him last November.

THE KNIGHTS NEEDED THEM !

If saddles hadn't been invented in France in the early Christian era, the bold knights of the Middle Ages could never have stayed on their horses long enough to charge into battle! Today saddles are used by cowboys and others who likes to ride horses.

Once your family may have enjoyed riding too, but if their new pursuits have left still-good saddles and other equipment (perhaps a horse?) behind, sell them with an Intelligencer Want Ad. It's just good horse sense to dial 962-9171 now!

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life".

Regular Habits Great Help In Avoidance of Constipation

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am healthy except for being constipated. I don't suppose that makes me a sick person, yet I am tired of taking laxatives or enemas every day. I am only 22 and hate to look forward to many years of worrying about my bowel movements. It began about two years ago after I got a job 30 miles from my home. It necessitated getting up early and rushing out after breakfast without taking time like I used to, in responding to the urge to move my bowels. What do you advise? — Mr. Y.

Comment: Finding time, somehow, to restore old habits might be the answer. It could be as simple as that. For one of the most common causes of chronic constipation is (as in your case) the refusal to comply with the bowels' signal that it is ready to be emptied. "rushing against time" is the factor most involved. One gets too busy and soon one gets constipated.

Retraining your bowels is essential, Mr. Y. If you still have the out-of-town job, you will have to plan earlier rising. This will allow you to establish the habit of bowel movement after breakfast when peristaltic bowel movements become active.

It may require weeks for success, but determination to overcome the lazy bowel in this way is certainly better than having to take laxatives and enemas day after day. Select a time after breakfast and try the same time daily, until your former regime is established.

Have you reviewed your dietary intake? Do you get enough roughage? Bowel tone is enhanced by including vegetables, fruits, prunes, figs. Do you get enough ordinary exercise?

Try these simple suggestions for a month. If constipation remains stubborn, better ask your doctor for advice. Meanwhile discontinue all laxatives, suppositories and enemas.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What is the best way to sterilize a thermometer? — Mrs. G.

Comment: Wash with soap and water. Then let it stand in a solution of 70 per cent alcohol for at least 10 minutes. Rubbing alcohol will do, if you are sure to rinse it off with water before using the thermometer.

For Mrs. H.: As I have said numerous times — and it bears constant repitition — there is no scientific evidence that the use of aluminum dish-es causes cancer. Next time you hear it, try to trace down the source. Chances are you will be unable to find where the rumor started or who was its originator.

For Mrs. U.: There have been some reports of mild hair-loss in women who were taking "the pill." After they discontinued its use, hair regrew within a few months.

• • •

For Mr. B.: The majority of doctors believe that a gall bladder filled with stones should be removed (even if there are no symptoms) to prevent complications that might come on later; such as severe jaundice or infection in the bile ducts and liver.

Robert Nixon Urges Robarts To Call Conference on Lakes

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Ontario Liberal Leader Robert Nixon Thursday urged Premier John Robarts to convene a conference of governors and premiers of states and provinces bordering on the Great Lakes.

He said the conference is necessary because federal attempts to control water pollution may be hampered by the appointment of Walter J. Hickel as United States secretary of the interior.

In a speech at the University of Windsor, Mr. Nixon said that "thoughtful people are apprehensive" about the appointment of Mr. Hickel, a former governor of Alaska, because of his record on management of natural resources.

North America's lake basin is a "disaster area" resulting from years of neglect and inaction at all government levels, the Liberal leader said.

Eighteen years after joint action to control lake pollution was planned in 1951 "so little has been done to correct the situation and so much has been done to make it worse that the International Joint Commission was here last week to see why the 1951 recommendations had not been implemented."

Ontario has failed to do its part because of a "jungle of bureaucracy" at the provincial government level, he said.

Proposals made by the Ontario Water Resources Commission for pollution control are sometimes blocked by the Ontario Municipal Board for financial reasons.

OTTAWA (CP) — It will take another three years before an international study produces criteria and improved plans for regulating Great Lakes water levels, an interim report of the International Joint Commission said.

The report, made public Thursday by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, said the last four years of study have assembled much of the data on which trial tests of Great Lakes regulation can be made.

The second phase involves applying data on shore property, navigation and power and trial regulation plans in establishing water levels regulation criteria and to developing improved regulation plans.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For February 1

Your birthday today: Planning is the keyword for the year. You must make many fresh starts, some of them in directions you haven't thought about yet. Your personal theories of reality are certain to be severely tested in challenging. Today's natives usually have an answer ready for almost anything. Mustard talent is rather common among these people, too.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your concerns today are for your pleasures and your dependents. A better perspective may come in the course of the day. Certain matters come to an abrupt settlement.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Settle a business or financial arrangement now. Your planning skills are near a peak. Take note as to what inquiries uncover for later reference. Tonight, the current scheming.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): It's like a holiday in symbolic terms; some relationships which have been weights on your spirits no longer are. Listen up on your shopping, neighborhood news.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Find some time, whatever else you do, to catch up on accounting. You are most certain to discover an important detail which escaped your attention before — and you may have to do something drastic about it.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Hold your temper, so as not to risk losing or spoiling a relationship. You have a good chance to settle some longstanding dispute. Session at home with a few clear statements; but be sure of your facts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Be patient with your friends, neighbors and family. Just watch and listen while restraining your responses for the moment. After you have slept and meditated over what you learned, you'll know what steps to take.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Adjustments or compromising is the order of the day. Competition has to be fair, near and far. Be of good heart, make a fair try. Social activity should be kept within the realm of moderation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 22—Nov. 21): There is more to today's confusion than meets the eye, so take it easy. Conflicts are better left alone for the moment while you wait for more insight. If making the rounds tonight, do so quietly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): A fresh understanding comes to you concerning your contacts with kin. Before you act on impulse, think over where you are in this life journey.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your ambitions come through clearly today, to others as well as yourself, so be a bit more calm in your approach to business or friendly matters. Try making some compromise rather than upsetting your partners.

Sunday School Lesson

Not Swords, But Seeds

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

The bulldozer has become a symbol of our day. Nature in nature has been years in growing are pushed over in minutes Top soil that nature has been centuries building up is pushed back in a day. What was a field or a tree-covered area yesterday becomes a shopping centre today.

Speed is the thing. We want to fly faster than sound; reach the moon this year. We have instant communication, drink instant tea, and want instant progress. There is even a gruesome joke about a man who packaged babies at a creamery and sold them to cannibals as instant people.

But some things can't be hurried. They take time. It takes time to grow a tree. It takes time to educate a child. It takes time to build bridges of understanding. It takes time to create a real fellowship.

There were those who wanted Jesus to bulldoze His way into history. If He had come as God's Messiah, they wanted Him to show His power by leading Rome out of Palestine, and setting up His own kingdom in Israel.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for February 2: "Teachings About The Kingdom." Mark. 4:1,34.

They expected Him to become a king. After all, He was a descendant of David. This explains the story of the wise men. The gifts presented to the child of Bethlehem were gifts meant for a future king (Matthew 2:11)

At the height of His popularity, many tried to force His hand, and make Him declare Himself as king (John 6:15). The charge against Him at His trial was that He claimed to be a king (Luke 22:2). When Pilate asked Him point blank if He considered Himself a king, Jesus gave a surprising answer. His kingdom, He declared, was not of this world. If it were, He said, His followers would fight to rescue Him (John 18:36).

In other words, He repudiated a kingdom established by force. Jesus further astounded Pilate by declaring His kingdom would be established on truth (John 18:37)

What kind of a kingdom is that? Obviously, it is not a political empire. Political rulers often use violence, and even deceit, to gain power. Pilate could understand that. He had the threat of violence in dealing with Jesus (John 19:10) But Jesus repudiated violence and deceit as methods of the devil (John 8:44) He believed in the power of truth to prevail after brute force has done its worst.

Again and again, Jesus used the concept of a seed in describing His kingdom (Mark 4:3-9, 26-29, 30-32; John 12:24). Not a bulldozer, but a plow would be His symbol (Luke 9:62). A seed may seem like a strange weapon with which to conquer the world. But all life is dependent on the mysterious power that seeds seeds to grow. If seeds do not sprout, food will not grow. And if food does not grow, life cannot be sustained on this planet. Without seeds, man with all his vaunted wisdom would come to a tragic end. In their quiet, unhurried way, seeds make it possible for all life to exist on this planet.

Moreover, a seed can send forth roots that can break rocks into particles of fertile soil in the ground, and it remains a pebble for all eternity. But a seed into the ground, and it becomes a plant, perhaps even a tree in which birds build their nests (Mark 4:32)

If Jesus had set out to establish a political kingdom, His life work would probably have ended 40 years later when Ptolemy marched in to destroy the city of Jerusalem. Because He set out to establish a kingdom based on faith and brotherhood, the movement He started took root in history, and is still sending its branches out into almost every nation on earth today.

Ours is an impatient age. Many want to right the injustices of 300 years overnight. It is easy to understand their impatience. Those in power have ignored their feet too long. But people who have rights must also be educated to assume responsibilities. And that takes time. The question is, will men have the patience to achieve their goals by peaceful means, or will they resort to violence, believing that to bulldoze the system is the only method that will work.

The issue is critical, for violence threatens to envelope our world. If ever the way of Jesus needed to be tried, it does now. Not swords, but seeds. Not bombs, but bridges of understanding. This is our need.

Metis Youth, 19, Faces Seven Charges of Murder With Axe

BUFFALO NARROWS, Sask. (CP) — Seven persons were slain with an axe in this community Thursday and a 19-year-old Metis laborer is scheduled to appear in magistrate's court in Prince Albert today to face seven charges of non-capital murder.

Frederick Moses McCallum of Buffalo Narrows, 310 miles north of Saskatoon, was arrested shortly after the bodies of six members of the Thomas Pederson family and a house guest, all Metis, were discovered in their two-room house early Thursday. He was held here overnight.

Those killed were Mr. Pederson, 32, his wife Bernadette, 30, their children, Grace, 9, Robert, 6, Richard, 5, and Rhoda, 3, and John Baptiste Herman, 49, of La Loche, Sask., the house guest.

All but Mr. Herman were slain in bed. His body was found on the living room floor.

Donald Pederson, 8, was in serious condition in a Saskatoon hospital with a skull fracture and possible brain damage. Police said the boy was struck on the back of the head.

Two daughters, Connie, 16, and Cynthia, 10, were staying overnight at a friend's home when the incident occurred.

RCMP Sgt. William Preston of Prince Albert, heading the investigation, said Thursday night the murder weapon was a single-bladed fire axe.

Sgt. Preston said police were called to the Pederson home by Rev. J. Darche, a Roman Catholic priest who said he had been telephoned by a resident of Buffalo Narrows. The caller was not identified.

Sgt. Preston said all victims bore axe-wounds, but he would not describe them. The bodies will be flown to Prince Albert for autopsies, but acting Coroner RCMP Cpl. William Semens said there will be no inquest.

Buffalo Narrows, a community of about 1,200 predominantly Metis people, is supported by hunting and fishing, as well as two fish-packing plants that serve a small fishing industry on Churchill and Peter Pond lakes which flank the community.

The multiple-slaying was the second in 17 months in Saskatchewan.

At Shell Lake, 200 miles south of Buffalo Narrows, nine members of one family were shot to death in August, 1967.

Victor Ernest Hoffman, 21, a farm laborer from Leask, Sask., was arrested Aug. 21, 1967, after an intensive manhunt. He was later committed to a mental institution after being found not guilty of the murders by reason of insanity.

The bodies of Mr. and Mrs. James Peterson and seven of their children were found in their farm home, about 60 miles west of Prince Albert.

Science Adviser To Nixon Praised

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It was personally gratifying to read last month that my old confrere from early Aspen days, Dr. Lee Du Bridge has been named by President Nixon as his chief science adviser. Dr. Du Bridge, the retiring president of Caltech, is a good man by any standards.

What pleased me most, however, is that he has long been an opponent of "putting a man on the Moon" at the sacrifice of more important and comprehensive scientific objectives.

Most qualified scientists — such as the Space Science Board of the National Academy of Sciences — have been in favor of unmanned space exploration, which they recommend should be organized not in terms of a single goal, but rather "in terms of the contribution that a particular piece of exploration can make to a broad range of scientific disciplines."

But NASA, our National Aeronautics and Space Administration has thought otherwise. For political and diplomatic (and no doubt military) reasons, it has made the Man on the Moon its prime goal, even though this would cost the nation many times more than an unmanned landing, and is of dubious scientific value for the price.

We now have a developing technology of fully automated systems that should give us all the pertinent information we will need about the Moon and our surrounding planets. It might be in the "national interest" to land a man on the Moon, however, — which means, one supposes, planting the Stars and Stripes there before the Russians plant the Hammer and Sickle.

Obviously this has nothing to do with science or knowledge, but simply extends the boundaries of man's internecine war to the solar system. Our barbarism is already threatening to make our own planet uninhabitable; using the Moon as another base for military action is just an act of moral consolation, not a step forward for the human race.

Even when Congress last year cut back federal funds for science by $362 million, NASA merely reduced the scope of its other operations and blithely focused on its Man-on-the-Moon program. As the British journal, New Scientist, caustically puts it in an editorial on "the rocket rat race," we have decided that this single feat is more pressing than an organized scientific exploration of the solar system.

"Buck Rogers wins again," it said. But that was before Lee Du Bridge.
